The CIO News

82

January 2, 1950

1949 VOTING RECORD

HOW CONGRESS VOTED DURING FIRST SESSION

THIS IS a report on a Congress which should have been better. The record of Congress isn't better because a Republican-Dixiecrat coalition had control in many key votes.

The first session of the 81st Congress was a vast improvement over the "awful 80th." It passed a long-sought housing program. It lifted minimum wages from 40c an hour to 75c. It extended rent control—though not nearly in strong enough form.

On foreign affairs, Congress worked effectively. It extended the European Recovery Program with sufficient funds to carry on our works of economic recovery.

It endorsed the Atlantic Pact to strengthen the democratic nations, and approved a military aid program to help the democracies protect themselves against aggression. It extended and improved the reciprocal trade act, to help promote international commerce and stability.

The 81st Congress made a start on many other elements of the Fair Deal program. The House passed a vastly improved social security bill, an anti-trust measure, a liberalized bill for displaced persons. The Senate endorsed a workable aid-to-education bill and approved a plan for home rule for the nation's capital.

Taft-Hartley Remains

BUT—and it's a big BUT—the 81st Congress fell down on the job on many issues.

First and foremost, it failed to repeal the anti-labor Taft-Hartley Act—although T-H repeal had been a basic plank in the winning Democratic platform of 1948. Repeal of Taft-Hartley remains a prime goal of organized labor.

PHILIP MURRAY

"We must have a Congress responsive to the will of the majority of the people—a Congress that will work earnestly for better conditions for all our people."

The first session of the 81st Congress shied away from action on the President's Civil Rights program. That stalling and delay were in large part due to potent pressure from conservative southern Democrats and their allies in the leadership of the Republican party.

Hope of clearing the log-jam of civil rights legislation quickly and effectively lay in proposals for changing the Senate rules—for those rules have favored the filibuster, and the filibuster has been the weapon of defeat for every civil rights bill.

Help For Filibuster

The southern polltaxers filibustered against liberalizing the Senate rules, and most Republicans—despite fine campaign promises—aided and abetted that filibuster. The Dixie-gop coalition won the round, a victory which makes more difficult the closing of debate in the upper branch of Congress.

Republican aid in that fight was appreciated by the Dixiecrats, and throughout the session they paid back—in terms of opposition to many of the Fair Deal measures proposed by President Truman and supported by labor.

The coalition worked to pare down improvements in the wage-hour law, to provide serious weakness in the rent control act, to hamstring action on such projects as the Columbia Valley Authority and to snarl up an anti-monopoly campaign designed to break up soak-the-consumer agreements among big corporations.

1950 Is Crucial

The second session of the 81st Congress has a golden opportunity to improve its record and to enact a substantial portion of the program for which the people voted in 1948.

The eyes of union members and of the public will be focused on Congress during the months ahead—and the record will be remembered in the crucial elections of 1950.

Now, about this 1949 Voting Record.

It is designed to help you understand how your Senators and Congressmen have voted on a series of key tests in both the Senate and the House of Representatives.

But the Voting Record tells only part of the story. It does not show how your Congressman or Senator acted in Committee or behind the scenes. It does not show whether he was energetic or lazy; whether he voted "right" from conviction or for the record.

Your Decisions

Despite what newspapers or columnists say, this is neither a "black list" nor a "white list" nor a series of "endorsements" for re-election.

Endorsements are made by CIO unions and their Political Action Committees in each state and Congressional district. Those decisions are in the hands of the folks back home.

Part of that decision will be based on the voting record of the 96 Senators and 435 members of the House.

And it's easy to predict that labor's approval is more apt to go to the 14 Senators and 111 Representatives who cast no "wrong" votes, than to the three Senators and the 28 Representatives who cast no "right" votes.

Study this record of your Congressman and Senators; give your dollar to PAC; make sure you're registered to vote. And in the 1950 elections you can help insure continued legislative action for progressive government—government that will be alert to your problem.

Joint Effort

Material for this 1949 CIO News Voting Record was prepared by the CIO Legislative Department, the CIO Publicity Department and the CIO Political Action Committee.

A 1950 Voting Record will be issued next summer, after Congress adjourns. It will contain the final record of the 81st Congress, and will be available in time for the 1950 campaign.

THE CIO NEWS 1949 VOTING RECORD

This special 8-page supplement is being printed as a separate CIO publication, for distribution among union members throughout the country.

Prices for the 1949 Voting Record:

5c a copy; 50 for $2.00; 100 for $3.50

500 for $14; 1,000 for $20

Send your orders for the 1949 Voting Record (CIO Publication No. 179), together with check or money order, to:

Publications Department
Congress of Industrial Organizations
718 Jackson Place N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

SENATE'S 1949 RECORD

Here's a short description of each of the 16 votes on the opposite page. Read these descriptions of the issues—then see how your Senator voted.

1. T-H REPEAL—LUCAS AMENDMENT (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: This was an Administration effort to knock anti-union injunction provisions out of Sen. Taft's new T-H bill on so-called national emergencies. Sen. Lucas' amendment met united labor's demands for an end to injunctions against unions. It was defeated.

VOTE: To pass the Lucas amendment ..... 44 (R)
To defeat the Lucas amendment ..... 46 (W)

DATE: June 28, 1949.

RESULT: Republican-Dixicrat coalition, encouraged by victory, went on to pass other Taft white-wash "amendments" to Taft-Hartley, and to scuttle repeal of Taft-Hartley.

2. T-H—TAFT INJUNCTION PLAN (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Taft's new language covering so-called national emergency injunctions left this phase of Taft-Hartley Act virtually unchanged in terms of anti-labor intent. It gave new Congressional endorsement to injunctions against unions. Taft bill permitted U. S. seizure of struck plants—but no seizure of profits. Taft bill passed.

VOTE: To pass the Taft injunction amendment ..... 50 (W)
To defeat the Taft injunction amendment..... 40 (R)

DATE: June 28, 1949.

RESULT: Drastic anti-labor national emergency injunction of Taft-Hartley was kept in Senate-passed bill.

3. T-H—TAFT 'PACKAGE' (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: This amendment, with few minor changes in language, re-endorsed all of Taft-Hartley Act. Its passage spelled end of hope of repealing T-H during first session of 81st Congress.

VOTE: To pass the Taft "package" amendment ..... 49 (W)
To defeat the Taft "package" amendment ..... 44 (R)

DATE: June 30, 1949.

RESULT: Passage of this amendment, confirming Taft-Hartley Act, ended fight for repeal of anti-labor law in first session of 81st Congress.

4. MINIMUM WAGE—ELLENDER AMDT. (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: This was key Senate test in labor's fight to lift U. S. minimum wages from 40 to 75c an hour. Sen. Ellender (D.La.) proposed only a 65c minimum, which would rise and fall with changes in cost of living. Proposal under-cut whole idea of steady floor under wages. Defeated.

VOTE: To pass Ellender "flexible-65c" minimum..... 26 (W)
To defeat Ellender amendment ..... 51 (R)

DATE: August 31, 1949.

RESULT: Defeat of this and other hobbling amendments paved way for final passage of improved 75c minimum wage law.

5. PUBLIC POWER FUNDS (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Friends of private utilities lobby tried to cut Dept. of Interior Appropriation—in order to eliminate funds for building of power transmission lines from government-owned dams in various sections of the country. It would have set back government's program for cheap power. Amendment was defeated.

VOTE: To keep appropriation for public power lines.... 45 (R)
To eliminate funds for public power lines..... 38 (W)

DATE: August 23, 1949.

RESULT: Government's powerline program was continued, over objections of one of Washington's most potent lobbies.

6. CONFIRMATION OF LELAND OLDS (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Leland Olds, member of the Federal Power Commission for 10 years, was reappointed for another five-year term by Pres. Truman. But private power lobby, objecting to Olds' effort to regulate oil and natural gas rates in interest of public, fought hard with red herrings and smear stories. Olds lost Senate confirmation.

VOTE: To confirm Leland Olds to Federal Power Commission.... 15 (R)
To refuse confirmation of Leland Olds..... 53 (W)

DATE: October 12, 1949.

RESULT: Private business interests won fight for less militant Federal Power Commission regulation of natural gas rates, etc.

7. RENT CONTROL—FULBRIGHT AMDT. (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: This amendment—sponsored by Sen. Fulbright (D.Ark.)—was heartily supported by real estate lobby as method of weakening rent control. It permitted local authorities to abolish rent control in any area with approval of state governor. At issue was principle of continued strong national rent control. Amendment passed.

VOTE: To approve Fulbright amendment ..... 45 (W)
To defeat Fulbright amendment ..... 35 (R)

DATE: March 22, 1949.

RESULT: Passage of amendment contributed heavily to weakening of rent control structure, and helped trend toward widespread lifting of needed controls on rents.

8. PUBLIC HOUSING—BRICKER AMDT. (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Foes of slum clearance and good low-rent housing tried to gut the public housing bill before it was finally passed by Congress. One of the strongest amendments was proposed by Sen. Bricker (R.O.); it would have removed all provisions for low-rent public housing and for rural housing programs. Amendment was defeated.

VOTE: For the Bricker amendment to kill public housing .... 19 (W)
Against the Bricker amendment ..... 58 (R)

DATE: April 21, 1949.

RESULT: Public housing bill, generally in form proposed by Administration and supported by labor, became law—after several years' debate.

9. HOUSING—TAFT AMENDMENT (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Sen. Taft's amendment to housing bill would have cut out most benefits to farmers, by forbidding loans under the bill to farmers for minor farm improvements. Amendment was defeated.

VOTE: For the Taft hobbling amendment ..... 30 (W)
Against the amendment ..... 41 (R)

DATE: April 21, 1949.

RESULT: Defeat of Taft amendment paved way for final passage of bill in form supported by Administration, labor and other groups.

10. 10% BUDGET CUT (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Sen. McClellan (D.Ark.) proposed suspension of Senate rules in order to offer amendment to appropriation bill. His plan—to order the President to cut federal spending appropriations by 5% to 10%. Move was design to "put the President on the spot" and would have hurt administration of vital government services. Defeated.

VOTE: For the McClellan motion to suspend Senate rules.... 49 (W)
Against McClellan motion ..... 28 (R)

DATE: August 29, 1949.

RESULT: Motion—supported by southern Democrats and many Republicans—failed to carry; it lacked the two-thirds majority necessary for suspension of rules.

11. ANTI-FILIBUSTER RULING (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Southern Democrats, abetted by many Republicans, launched filibuster against Administration efforts to modernize Senate debating rules. Vice Pres. Barkley ruled that petition of 33 Senators, seeking to halt that filibuster, was valid. Test came on filibusterers' appeal from Barkley's highly important ruling.

VOTE: To uphold Barkley, curb filibusters ..... 41 (R)
To over-rule Barkley, retain filibuster power.... 46 (W)

DATE: March 11, 1949.

RESULT: Major effort to win lasting reform in Senate rules and prevent filibusters, was defeated.

12. SENATE RULES—WHERRY PLAN (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Following conservatives' victory on filibuster issue, Sen. Wherry (R.Nebr.) offered weak changes to Senate rules in behalf of southern Democrat-GOP coalition. It extended cloture (ending of debate) to subjects not previously covered—but permits endless debate on future proposed rules changes, and permits cloture only on approval of 64 Senators. Wherry proposal was passed.

VOTE: For the Wherry rules proposal ..... 63 (W)
Against the Wherry rules proposal ..... 23 (R)

DATE: March 17, 1949.

RESULT: Power of filibuster bloc was increased by Wherry proposals—and future limitation of filibuster power was made more difficult.

13. TRADE PACTS—MILLIKIN AMDT. (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Amendment of Sen. Millikin (R.Colo.) was most serious of several efforts to weaken government's effort to spur international trade. It would have cut extension of power to negotiate trade agreements from three to two years, and through "peril point" formula sought to cripple trade past program. Amendment was defeated.

VOTE: To adopt Millikin's weakening amendment ..... 38 (W)
To defeat Millikin's amendment ..... 43 (R)

DATE: September 15, 1949.

RESULT: With Millikin amendment defeated, Congress went on to extend Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act along lines sought by CIO.

14. ECA—TAFT-RUSSELL AMENDMENT (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Isolationists and anti-Fair Dealers joined in support of this amendment, which would have trimmed second year fund authorization for Economic Cooperation Administration by flat 10%. Cut would have seriously weakened ERP. Amendment was defeated.

VOTE: For Taft-Russell "10% cut" amendment ..... 23 (W)
Against Taft-Russell amendment ..... 54 (R)

DATE: April 1, 1949.

RESULT: Congress went on to pass generally acceptable appropriation for second year of European Recovery Program.

15. MILITARY AID PROGRAM (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Armaments aid program was proposed to back up North Atlantic Pact, and to give western European democracies help in building defenses against possible aggression. Program was adopted.

VOTE: For military aid program ..... 55 (R)
Against military aid program ..... 24 (W)

DATE: Sept. 22, 1949.

RESULT: With passage of arms aid program, U. S. moved forward to implement western European defenses outlined by North Atlantic Pact.

16. DISPLACED PERSONS—DELAY (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Bill—supported by CIO—to liberalize immigration of European displaced persons, and to remove discriminatory features in 1948 act, was held up for months. Finally reported out, Senators Cain (R., Wash.) and Eastland (D., Miss.) offered amendment returning bill to committee for "further study." Amendment was passed.

VOTE: For the Cain-Eastland delay amendment ..... 36 (W)
Against the Cain-Eastland amendment .... 30 (R)

DATE: October 15, 1949.

RESULT: Action to liberalize DP law was stalled at least until Jan., 1950.

It Was Christmas—But Their Daddy Wasn't There

By AL ZACK

This is a time table of death—sudden death.

This is why two little youngsters in Steubenville, Ohio, had a bewildering Christmas—a Christmas without their father.

This is a story of a big steel corporation that repeatedly ignored pleas of the union to eliminate a dangerous working condition.

This is the story from the official records.

Early 1949—Steelworkers Local Union 1190, through its members on the labor-management safety committee of Wheeling Steel Corp., entered a protest against flue dust pouring from the huge blast furnaces at the Mingo Junction plant which was creating a dangerous situation. Unbelievably heavy, the flue dust, composed of 60% iron ore, was settling on the roofs of the plants. It was particularly dangerous at the South Division, the union charged.

Spring of 1949—The union continued to protest. The pile of flue dust was more than eight inches high on the South Division plant—a structural steel building with a brick curtain wall and steel span roof, built in 1899 and expanded in 1905.

THE FOLLOWING QUOTES are from photostatic copies of the minutes of the labor-management meeting:

April 11, 1949—"The safety representative was asked to report to the general safety committee meeting the danger existing because of the great amount of flue dust lying upon some of the roofs at South Division."

April 13, 1949—"The situation of large amounts of flue dust on roofs was to be reported to general safety meeting, but due to the fact our representative did not attend last meeting of the committee, this item was referred to the next meeting."

May 16, 1949—"Reported that accumulation of flue dust on roofs is very bad."

May 26, 1949—"It was reported that flue dust on roofs of buildings continues to accumulate, and is now higher since reported at last meeting."

June 8, 1949—"Reported that situation of flue dust on roofs remains the same with the exception that more has accumulated."

(Throughout the summer and fall, the union continued to protest. The flue dust continued to accumulate. By early December, the flue dust on South Division roof measured 14 inches.)

December 11, 1949—At about 6:30 p.m., 160 square feet of roof at the South Division plant broke loose and tumbled to the floor 45 feet below, with a terrific roar.

RESCUE SQUADS, guided by a flashlight that continued to burn under the tons of debris, found Ralph DeBacco, a 40-year-old motor inspector, and rushed him to the hospital. DeBacco sustained a fractured leg and internal injuries. But he will live, the doctor said.

The rescue squads continued their work. Four hours later they found the body of John Stoddard, 45, a blowing-room engineer.

Stoddard had died of suffocation.

Two other employes, working near the entrance to the blowing room, escaped uninjured.

December 19, 1949—Union members of the Safety Committee found that the flue dust on the roof of an adjoining building was 13 inches deep.

"I don't know the legal difference between unpremeditated death and murder," said Frank Smith, Chairman of Steel Local 1190's Safety Committee.

"But I do know that this was a needless and wanton waste of human life.

"The Wheeling Steel Corporation, by disregarding our repeated pleas to guard the safety of their employes, has shown utter disregard for life and safety.

"Only the fact that it was Sunday saved many other Steelworkers from serious injury or possible death.

"Our Safety Committee, which includes Earl Rogers, David Dines, John Cifardone and Nello Amedi, has been instructed by the Local to push this investigation to a rapid satisfactory conclusion.

"We are demanding the state take appropriate action. Already, a state safety inspector has ordered the roofs of all the buildings cleaned to prevent another tragedy.

"The Wheeling Steel Corp. had better mark this warning. We will never again permit them to so flagrantly disregard safety warnings from the labor-management committee.

"The union, unlike the company, has a respect for the value of human life. We are determined that Wheeling Steel shall learn this humane philosophy.

"There will never again be another death like this at Mingo Junction."

Labor Dept. Reports

Unemployment Heavy In 12 Areas, Improvement Noted In 20 Others

SOME improvement in the job situation in about half of the nation's 32 areas of heavy unemployment between September and October was noted by the U. S. Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Employment Security.

Bureau Dir. Robert C. Goodwin reported the total number of jobless dropped in some 20 of the heavy unemployment areas, while increases in total unemployment were found in 12 sections.

Four of these areas showed an increase amounting to more than 10%. These were Johnstown, Pa., Mount Vernon, and Crab Orchard, Ill., and Vincennes, Ind.

Goodwin reported slight to moderate gains in 13 New England communities and one area in Pennsylvania. Cairo, Ill., was the only city taken out of the "E" listing, the symbol used to designate areas of very substantial labor surplus. None were added to the "E" list.

Reports from some areas not on the Dept. of Labor's "E" list, however, indicate that the unemployment problem is reaching a critical stage.

FOR example, unemployment figures in the big industrial state of New York are reported to be running abnormally high. Preliminary estimates made public last week by the State Labor Dept.'s Division of Placement and Unemployment Insurance show that insurance payments to jobless workers in that state were almost 2½ times as large this year as last.

Furthermore, more than 48,000 workers have already drawn all the benefits they are entitled to receive for the "benefit year" that began last June.

(As reported in the CIO News last week, the unemployed in several states have exhausted their unemployment benefits.)

Michigan State and Washtenaw county officials, and representatives of labor, management, church, and social agencies, last week unanimously agreed at a meeting at Ypsilanti that thousands of destitute families are in need of immediate assistance.

Secy.-Treas. Emil Mazey of the CIO Auto Workers said:

"The UAW-CIO pledges its full support to a three-fold plan of action for Washtenaw County: declaring Washtenaw an emergency area to permit allocation of federal contracts to restore full employment; ending evictions from homes of all unemployed; and mobilizing full state and county resources to meet current welfare needs."

THE areas where the Labor Dept.'s Employment Security Bureau found jobs to be very scarce as of Nov. 30, 1949, were:

Alabama, Jasper; Connecticut, Ansonia, Bridgeport, Bristol, Danielson, Meriden, New Britain, New London-Groton and Waterbury; Illinois, Crab Orchard and Mt. Vernon; Indiana, Terre Haute and Vincennes.

Maine, Biddeford - Sanford; Maryland, Cumberland; Massachusetts, Fall River, Fitchburg, Lawrence, Lowell, New Bedford and Worcester; Michigan, Muskegon; New York, Utica-Rome; Pennsylvania, Altoona, Greensburg, Johnstown, Pottsville, Scranton and Wilkes-Barre.

Rhode Island, Providence; Tennessee, Knoxville; Hawaii, Honolulu.

DOESN'T "SCARE EASY": That was the comment of Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union (above), who is looking at the threat that was painted on the door of his garage at Franklin Square, N. Y.

UAW Issues Plan To Catch Plotters

WITH Detroit police apparently unable to uncover any worthwhile clues in the attempted dynamiting of CIO Auto Workers headquarters two weeks ago, Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey issued a "secret witness" plan for persons who have important information but wish to conceal their identity.

Mazey said UAW reward money, which now totals $225,000, would be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the attempted assassination of UAW Pres. Walter P. Reuther, his brother, Victor, the union's educational director, and the effort to blow up the UAW building. Mazey said:

"Any person who has information he believes will contribute to the solution of any or all of the three crimes; and who, for any reason does not wish to be known, should type or print his information on a plain white paper. He should state all the known facts—names, places and times—as accurately as possible.

"On the last page he should print or type a number, chosen at random, of not less than six figures, such as 748593. A corner should be torn from that page in a jagged line and the same number written on this piece."

The information should then be mailed in a plain envelope, to UAW-CIO, Post Office Box 1714, Detroit, Mich.

Mazey said that if any such information received makes the informant eligible for the reward, UAM will make public through the press and radio the number associated with the letter of information.

FOUND "YULE" BOMB: Frank Krajnik (l.), and George Thomas, maintenance man and night watchman, respectively, at the CIO Auto Workers headquarters in Detroit, found the Christmas wrapped dynamite bomb outside the UAW offices.

The Two Eyes Of Our Congress

One Of Them Will Be Closely Focused On Legislative Proposals And The Other On The 1950 Elections

By ALLAN L. SWIM

BEING POLITICIANS, members of the Congress which goes back into session this week will have one eye on the legislative agenda and the other on the 1950 elections.

This is as it should be. Senators and Congressmen are supposed to be subject to the will of the people as expressed at the polls.

Yes, they're supposed to be. The fact that a number of them aren't means that PAC and other labor political organizations have a big job cut out for them this year.

And as the votes are cast on Capitol Hill our lawmakers will be conscious of the fact that labor plans to turn out a big vote late in 1950.

ALTHOUGH "pre-election fever" may cause some Congressmen and Senators to ease up a bit in their opposition to Fair Deal measures it would be a mistake to expect any miracles.

Labor abhors the Taft-Hartley Act as much as ever. There is every indication that President Truman still adheres to his strong anti-T-H stand.

But there's nothing to indicate that a Taft-Hartley repealer can be pushed through Congress this year.

Those who should know say that the votes just aren't there.

They say, too, that labor has a better chance to change lawmakers than to get current lawmakers to change their votes.

This means T-H is likely to be a major campaign issue.

And it's an issue around which all of labor can rally.

THERE ARE many indications that the explosive Truman civil rights program will be tossed into the hopper early in the session.

This should be done despite the fireworks that would result.

It should be done because civil rights legislation is long overdue—because our nation has assumed a position of leadership which requires us to set outstanding examples in democracy.

Suppose the Dixiecrats stage a filibuster. There have been filibusters before.

Suppose FEPC, poll tax and anti-lynch proposals make some of the Congressmen and Senators squirm. They've squirmed over uncomfortable issues before.

And suppose the Administration fails to push its program through. It has failed to obtain other things it sought.

The groups which suffer from discrimination because of race, creed or color deserve to see their friends make a good fight.

And those who oppose strengthened civil rights deserve to be put on record.

CONGRESS COULD well afford to dive right into the middle of the controversy over federal health insurance.

Few issues in recent years have been so distorted. The insurance plan has been falsely called "socialized medicine," "government medicine" and "bureaucratic medicine."

In an attempt to prevent compulsory health insurance, the American Medical Association has flooded the country with disgustingly phony propaganda.

A few smart, straight-thinking lawmakers could do much to clear up the misconceptions, to counteract the AMA propaganda and at least give the public an opportunity to make up its mind on the basis of facts.

This in itself would be a worthwhile contribution—even if insurance legislation should be defeated.

IT WOULD be foolish at this point to predict that a major portion of the Fair Deal program will have been enacted into law by the time the fall elections arrive.

It would be equally foolish to predict that the Fair Deal is stymied and that progress won't be made.

Despite predictions — anybody's predictions—about what Congress may do, one thing is certain:

Labor has a big political job on its hands this year—and it's an important job that can't be shirked.

Some CIO Political Action Committees already have made their plans for '50. Others are getting ready to square away for the battle.

Both money and "elbow grease" will be needed. And there's no better time than now to give a buck to PAC and to begin limbering up those door-bell pushing fingers.

Labor's Monopoly

The sloganeers of organized industry are at it again and this time their pet phrase is "Organized labor is a monopoly."

It's a neat phrase—one that slips off the tongue easily at Rotary and Kiwanis Club meetings. It looks good in print, too, to those who don't want to play fair with the unions.

The fact that it's phony doesn't seem to bother those who use it.

But it irks those who know and believe in the labor movement. Among the irked is the Cleveland Union Leader, which goes a bit further than merely saying "phooey!"

"Labor too long has had a monopoly over many things, but surely never a monopoly on members' jobs," says the Union Leader.

"Labor still has a monopoly on all of the ramshackle houses in the slums of our great cities . . . Labor has a monopoly on the wards of too many unkempt charity hospitals."

Labor, the Union Leader declares, has a monopoly or near-monopoly on inadequate medical treatment, on fear of unemployment, and on "a million 'tin lizzies' that will be paid for in three years if not attached because a few installments cannot be met."

Organized labor, the paper concludes, "is not now, never has been nor ever will be monopolistic."

All of which leads us to conclude:

Labor would be most happy for somebody to break the monopolies it has on the bad things our society produces.

And it would be equally happy if somebody would crack down on the business monopolies which stifle competition.

Are Physicians Losing People's Respect?

The fear that the Hippocratic oath of the medical profession may become "a curse on the lips of those who can't afford to keep well" is expressed in this editorial from Kenosha (Wis.) Labor:

IT IS A FAR cry from the Hippocratic oath under which doctors swear they will do everything in their power and knowledge to help the sick, to the American Medical Association's rejection of and opposition to all federal programs for medical care.

Not satisfied with going on record against the Truman health plan and the Douglas compromise for catastrophic medical aid, the AMA House of Delegates has voted a $25 compulsory assessment on each and every American doctor in an effort to raise $3 million for its propaganda and lobbying campaign against federal programs.

THESE federal programs include not only attempts to bring adequate medical care to the needy but also aids to medical education, grants for building medical school facilities and voluntary consumer organized health plans. To all of these programs the AMA has turned thumbs down and has attempted to smear the projects with "socialism."

If one adds to their opposition their attitude of preventing DP (displaced persons) doctors from practicing here, the ordinary layman gets the uncomfortable feeling that the American doctor, as a group, is far more interested in retaining his comfortable status quo than in expanding medical facilities.

This view is badly expressed by the New York State Journal of Medicine which says "We readily admit that under (the present system) a certain number of cases of early tuberculosis and cancer, for example, may go undetected. Is it not better that a few should perish than that the majority of the population should be encouraged on every occasion to run sniveling to the doctor?"

On the matter of the $25 compulsory assessment, it doesn't take much to imagine how the commercial press would view an assessment if the AMA were a labor union or how long it would be before the Taft-Hartley Act would be flung at the offenders.

Certainly this act by the AMA should spotlight the inequity of the T-H shackles on Labor's campaign efforts against anti-labor congressmen.

The AMA has made its position clear: Medical care must remain a tight monopoly, without regard to the needs of public health and safety—even at the heavy cost of reducing this once-honorable professional body to a mere political pressure group.

The oath of Hippocrates might well become a curse on the lips of those who can't afford to keep well.

Polio Fund Dwindling

AN APPEAL to CIO members to give unstinted support to the forthcoming March of Dimes drive (Jan. 16-31) has been issued by Pres. Philip Murray.

Murray made his appeal in a letter to the various CIO affiliates in which he pointed out that the CIO has always rallied wholeheartedly behind the annual campaigns of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Noting that many members of the CIO had learned about the scourge of polio through bitter personal experience, Murray said he is sure that members of the CIO will respond as generously in this March of Dimes drive as they have done in the past.

Because the nation was hit in 1949 by the worst polio epidemic in its history, with more than 41,000 stricken, the National Foundation said it is asking everyone to give more than ever to the March of Dimes—to replenish the nearly depleted resources.

Labor unions and affiliated organizations have been requested by James J. Herkenham, Jr., the National Foundation's Director of Labor Services, to make their contributions directly to the local National Foundation chapter in their vicinity.

Egg Price Support Cut

The Agriculture Dept. has announced it will support farm prices of eggs in 1950 at an average of 37c a dozen, 8c below this year. Officials said that should bring retail prices down 8 to 10c, and hopes consumers will use any such saving in buying more eggs. Otherwise Uncle Sam will have to buy up more, and he already has on hand 2,500,000,000.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer
Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher
Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss
Business Manager: Richard E. Bauer

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII January 2, 1950 No. 1

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00 A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 2, 1950 No. 1

IT WAS A BIG year for labor in America—and there was something doing almost every day in the realm of union affairs.

1949 was the year of big pension victories—and the year that Taft-Hartley didn't get repealed. It was the year that resistance to Communist infiltration in unions mounted toward a dramatic climax—and that economic recession sent unemployment to post-war highs.

JANUARY 1949 was a month of bustle, wonder and hope. The new 81st Congress came to Washington; there was talk of "100 days" of legislation like the New Deal of FDR in 1933. President Truman spelled out his Fair Deal in a fighting State-of-the-Union speech—a speech heartily approved by labor. But the Dixiegop coalition on Capitol Hill settled down for a long, hard fight—and Congress moved slowly.

In Paris, CIO's Secy.-Treas. Jim Carey, with other democratic union leaders, walked out of the World Federation of Trade Unions. They charged it was completely Communist-dominated—and began to rally strength for a new international body controlled by labor unions alone.

FEBRUARY found the battle for Taft-Hartley repeal in full swing, with unions supporting Thomas - Lesinski Bill. By month's end, labor was worried by legislative delays on T-H repeal and other Fair Deal issues.

Several big CIO unions started drafting contract demands—and talked increasingly of need for pensions.

MARCH was the month of questionnaires—from Uncle Sam's income tax collectors and from corporation propaganda agencies. Millions of citizens were asked to tell how they felt about labor laws—in questions that could be answered only in favor of Taft-Hartley. But Dr. William Leiserson, labor relations expert, gave Senators a better answer. He testified at Senate hearings: "I just think T-H is no good."

Congress passed a Swiss-cheese rent control law—and CIO economists began to warn that growing unemployment was a real danger signal.

Senators and Congressmen went home for Easter vacations during APRIL — and heard plenty of complaints about lack of progress from folks back home. Rep. Wood of Georgia came up with his new labor bill—promptly called a chip off the T-H block.

In MAY, Congressmen passed the anti-labor Wood Bill, 217-203—then, in next-day reversal, recommitted it to a deep-freeze, 212-209. But T-H repeal in House was dead for the session.

CIO Board moved sharply against left-wingers. It censured Mine Mill & Smelter Workers for smear campaign against CIO and Pres. Murray; ordered Farm Equipment Workers to merge with auto union; and called for resignation from the Board of members "unwilling" to follow CIO policy.

A big union — Communications Workers of America—was both willing and able to affiliate with CIO. It did so after a referendum among more than quarter-million members showed huge majority favoring CIO.

And in New York, unions gave strong support to a fellow running for Congress, Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.

JUNE saw the steel union reminding U. S. Steel that the big, profitable corporation was "morally, legally, contractually" obliged to bargain over pensions. CIO warned its members of a series of sugar-coated "amendments" designed to "improve" Taft-Hartley; the "amendments" were sponsored by —of all people—Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio. Their "one purpose: to maintain all the essential features of the infamous T-H Act."

In JULY the Dixiegop coalition passed the Taft T-H "amendments." But anti-T-H votes had about doubled in two years. Steel union-management dispute over pensions, welfare and wages went to a Presidential Fact-Finding Board, while companies screamed "statism."

Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, father of the Wagner Act and a great liberal, resigned from office after two years of serious illness. And Van A. Bittner, a founding father of the CIO and head of southern organizing drive, died after long period of poor health.

AUGUST was hot. And in an air-conditioned room where steel fact-finding hearings were in session, arguments flew hot and heavy as union pressed for acceptance of demands. Employment increased — but many areas remained hard hit. CIO in Michigan asked for aid for many distressed areas.

Labor Day, in SEPTEMBER, found CIO Pres. Murray charging that recession was delivered "f.o.b. Wall Street." Month ended when steel workers, angered by corporations' turn-down of fact-finding recommendations for welfare and pension plans, walked out on strike—550,000 of them. Henry Ford II, however, bowed to United Auto Workers' $100-a-month pension demand, and Goodrich agreed to rubber union's pension plea.

Congress finally adjourned in OCTOBER, after months of Dixiegop obstructionism. But the housing bill had become law, minimum wages had been raised from 40 to 75c an hour, and progress was made toward better social security. On Oct. 31, a momentous CIO convention opened—and Bethlehem Steel agreed to "free" pensions for workers of at least $100 a month.

CIO's 11th convention, in session during first week in NOVEMBER, took major steps against Communist-led groups. "Old UE" was expelled, and new, democratic IUE-CIO was chartered. Farm Equipment union, its leaders having merged with UE, was also expelled. And CIO set up machinery to oust other unions whose leadership follows Communist Party line rather than democratic labor principles. IUE-CIO, at end-of-month convention, reported membership of 230,000—and still growing.

DECEMBER found the pension-for-workers trend growing. IUE won them at Philco; and clothing workers, who have had pensions for past few years, got increase to $100 a month.

In London, CIO joined with scores of other non-Communist union groups —including AFL — in forming new Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

And throughout America, with Congress preparing to return for an all-important session, unions mobilized to follow through on Fair Deal program.

IUE Wins Court Battle For Phila. Local's Funds

PRE-HEARING HUDDLE: Local presidents of IUE-CIO locals at the General Motors electrical division get together with IUE counsel to plan their attack at the NLRB hearing in Dayton, Ohio. The IUE wants an early election to determine the bargaining agent, but UE is seeking to delay the poll. L. to r., Robert Eisner, Local 801, Dayton; Frank Murray, Local 509, Rochester, N. Y.; Sid Sayers, Local 717, Warren, Ohio; Jim Kraft, Local 755, Dayton; Harold Merell, Local 416, New Brunswick, N. J., and Ben Sigal, IUE-CIO attorney.

WHILE NLRB hearings were under way in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York on the right-left wing fight for representation of the electrical workers, Judge Gerald F. Flood in Philadelphia Common Pleas Court dismissed an injunction to prevent IUE-CIO from obtaining the funds of Local 119.

In dismissing the injunction he pointed out that if IUE could sustain the charges made in the Cleveland convention that UE was Communist dominated, "the UE plaintiff would be prevented from receiving the relief of the courts."

Seven members of UE, claiming to represent the workers at the Philadelphia works of the General Electric Co., filed the petition after IUE contended it represented the membership.

JUDGE FLOOD also found that in his opinion UE was not acting in accordance with the local constitution when seven members called a meeting Nov. 27 and ousted officers who had affiliated with IUE. Judge Flood said the seven members failed to serve 24 hours' notice and notify the executive board in writing of the meeting.

He further ruled out UE's contention that under the constitution UE members could not secede, dissolve, or disaffiliate. Judge Flood said the local constitution states that "the organization shall be based upon majority rule at all times."

THE NLRB hearing in Dayton, Ohio, followed the same general pattern of delaying action instigated by UE in similar hearings. In an effort to speed the discussion, NLRB Trial Examiner David Sacks ordered early in the hearings that attorneys could object to his rulings but "could not give their reason for objecting unless given leave by the hearing officer."

The decision brought a storm of protests from UE attorney Martin Kurasch, who described the action as "undemocratic" and "depriving us of our rights." Later the decision was reversed.

Ben Sigal, IUE attorney, called repeatedly for action on the part of the hearing officer to bar "dilatory tactics" of the UE attorneys.

Jan. 11, 1950, has been set for filing briefs.

The Sperry Gyroscope hearing at Lake Success, N. Y., entered its second week. Lateral issues that strayed from the main topic marked this fight of the right-left wing battle for representation of the electrical workers in the area.

General Electric announced late last week that it would terminate its contract with UE upon the expiration of the pact April 1. Under the contract the extension of the contract after the exipration date is automatic unless either the union on the company notifies the other of cancellation at least 90 days in advance.

Feb. 14 Tentative Date Of CIO Board Meeting

Date of the next meeting of the CIO Executive Board has tentatively been set for Tuesday, February 14, by Pres. Philip Murray.

The meeting will be held in the Board Room at CIO headquarters in Washington.

Coming before the meeting will be reports from committees which are in process of conducting hearings on charges of Communist domination, filed against the leadership of 10 unions.

Hearings probably will have been held by Feb. 14 in the case of four unions. United Office & Professional Workers was given a hearing Dec. 19. Hearings are scheduled on Mine Mill & Smelter Workers Jan. 4 and on Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers on Jan. 6. Hearings have not yet been scheduled on United Public Workers, but are likely to be held during January.

Under constitutional changes made at the Cleveland convention, Communist-dominated unions can be expelled from the CIO by the Executive Board, and nominees to the Board found to consistently follow Communist policies can be refused their seats.

Klan Probe Asked In Flint, Michigan

Larry Huber, chairman of the Flint, Mich., PAC, has wired to Gov. Williams urging an immediate investigation on the extent to which the KKK has infiltrated among county and state employes. Huber acted after reports that many such employes are Klan members.

CWA Accepts, Southwest Bell Hedges On Peace Formula

THE CIO Communications Workers Division 20 has agreed to accept the recommendations of a committee composed of the Governors of six states in an effort to avoid a strike against Southwestern Bell Telephone.

The governors on Dec. 29 met first with the union and later with the company.

Afterwards the two groups were called together and offered the following proposals:

1. Representatives of Division 20 and the company would resume bargaining for a 15-day period in an attempt to reach agreement on the disputed issues.

2. At the end of the 15-day period, all unsettled items would be submitted to an impartial board of arbitrators.

The union immediately accepted the proposals. The company accepted the first part but refused to state whether or not it would arbitrate the unsettled items.

"We may strike midnight, Dec. 31, unless the company accepts the entire proposal," a union spokesman said.

"We've done everything we could to avoid a strike," he added. "The Governors and the U. S. Concilation Service have done all they could. Everyone has tried to settle the matter except the company. Now it's up to them."

Fifty thousand members of CWA's huge southwestern Division 20 from Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Illinois had previously voted 4 to 1 for a strike against the company.

The strike vote was taken, according to a union spokesman, when negotiations, which began two months ago, broke down Dec. 23.

The union agreed at a meeting called Dec. 23 by Gov. Smith to delay the strike 10 days. The state's chief executive had threatened to invoke the King-Thompson Act if the workers did not agree to the postponement.

The law, enacted in 1947 after a national 41-day strike, makes it illegal to support a utility strike in Missouri or refuse to work for a state agency taking over a strike-bound utility.

A UNION CALLING a utility strike or a utility bringing on a work stoppage by conducting a lockout, would forfeit $10,000 a day for each day of the stoppage, the money to be recovered by civil suit and paid to the public school fund of the state.

Any union officer calling or participating in a strike would forfeit $1000. Strikers would lose their seniority and could be reemployed only as new workers.

Smith's action in calling the state heads together followed a pattern set in the Missouri Pacific railroad dispute last October, when the governors of the affected states succeeded in working out a formula which ended that 46-day strike. The Missouri governor spearheaded that effort.

The union had accused Southwestern Bell of following the union-busting pattern fostered by the parent company—the AT&T—in pre-strike vote bargaining sessions.

It said the company had finally, after much stalling, completely turned down a union wage demand and that its attitude conforms with Bell policy throughout the country.

"The only offer Southwestern Bell has made," a union source said, "has been to renew the contract without a wage reopener. It has refused to negotiate pension changes on the grounds that its unilateral change should be satisfactory. It has refused to move on working conditions."

The union has made no specific wage demands but has indicated it wants an increase of 15c an hour.

ON ANOTHER front, CWA negotiators were also running into typical AT&T opposition.

Division Six, comprising 11,000 Western Electric installers throughout the nation, also has met blunt refusal on all proposed contract terms. The company flatly stated that it will grant no wage increases. It has refused to eliminate the merit range to which Western Electric installers are subjected and which prevents the great majority from ever achieving top wages.

Transfer and subsistence allowances are of the "utmost importance" to Western Electric installation workers who live away from home. Because of low wages and insufficient allotments from the company, these workers are forced to live under sub-standard conditions, the union says. Western Electric has refused upward revision of these allowances.

(Some 250 CWA installers recently ended a two-week walkout against Western Electric in St. Louis when the company agreed to submit a subsistence allowance provision to arbitration. The men were demanding $4.25 daily allowance and the company had offered $8 a week for 10 weeks and $4 weekly thereafter.)

DISTRICT SIX negotiators also report several "unusual" company offers in regard to pensions.

One proposal, promptly rejected by the union, would give the company the right to make changes in the pension program at will.

The company then offered a separate pension agreement which would prevent degrading of pensions during the contract. This contract would also prevent the company from making other changes without giving the union 30 days' notice. If, however, the division and the company could not reach agreement during this period, the company would still have the right to change the pension provisions at will. This "offer" also was rejected.

Division 18 negotiators, bargaining for 6,000 Western Electric sales dept. workers have been unable to get even a concrete "no" from the company. Negotiations conducted under a wage reopener are completely stalemated, according to union officials.

On the West Coast, Division 61 has succeeded in eliminating segregated seniority lists which discriminated against Negro building service workers in the Southern California area of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.

The Los Angeles CIO Council assisted the division in convincing the company that this discriminatory practice should stop.

WHILE THE Communications Workers battled for decent wages and working conditions, AT&T announced last week that $200 million more in capital will be raised to continue the Bell System's huge expansion program.

Daniel Tobin Lauds Victory Of Steel Union

Pres. Daniel J. Tobin of the AFL Teamsters, warmly congratulated the CIO Steelworkers for their steel strike victory, in an interview at Pittsburgh. Said Tobin:

"We congratulate the Steelworkers on their wonderful, brainy, diplomatic, strategic position that they took during their strike. With patience, endurance and the highest kind of intelligence, based on experience, they were successful in winning for their many thousands of steel workers, one of the finest conditions for protection in sickness, distress or in old age or death that was ever obtained for a labor union in this or any other country.

"Again the International Brotherhood of Teamsters desires to compliment them and congratulate them on what I consider one of the outstanding achievements of organized labor in recent years."

Newspaper Official Pays Fine For Employe He Prosecutes

In Wilkes-Barre, Pa., it sometimes costs money to have a CIO Newspaper Guildsman arrested.

No-one should know this better than Vice Pres. A. Dewitt Smith of the Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader Evening News.

He had police arrest Merle Edwards, circulation supervisor and ANG member, for parking his car in an alley alongside the news plant, which had been declared a no-parking area by management of the paper.

When Edwards came to work the next day he was given a summons. At the hearing before an alderman Smith was the prosecutor.

The alderman's decision was: "$3.50 or three days in jail."

"I don't have the $3.50, so I'll have to go to jail," Edwards replied.

Smith, confronted with the possibility of a circulation territory uncovered for three days while Edwards languished in a cell, dug into his pocket and brought out three $1 bills. Edwards supplied the 50 cents.

	1. Taft-Hartley—Lucas Amdt.	2. Taft-Hartley—Injunction Amdt.	3. Taft-Hartley—'Package' Amdt.	4. Minimum Wage—Ellender Amdt.	5. Public Power Funds.	6. Leland Olds Confirmation.	7. Rent Control—Fulbright Amdt.	8. Housing—Bricker Amdt.	9. Housing—Taft Farm Amdt.	10. 10% Budget Cut—McClellan Amdt.	11. Filibusters—Barkley Ruling.	12. Senate Rules—Wherry Amdt.	13. Trade Pacts—Millikin Amdt.	14. ECA—Taft-Russell Amdt.	15. Military Aid Program.	16. DP's—Cain-Eastland Amdt.
ALABAMA
Hill (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R	R
Sparkman (D)	R	R	R	W	R	A	R	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R	A
ARIZONA
Hayden (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	A	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	W
McFarland (D)	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	W
ARKANSAS
Fulbright (D)	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	A	R	W	W	X	R	R	R	W
McClellan (D)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	X	X	R	W	W	X
CALIFORNIA
Downey (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	A	A	R	R	R	R	R	W
Knowland (R)	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	R	R	R
COLORADO
Johnson (D)	R	R	R	A	W	W	W	W	A	X	R	W	W	W	W	W
Millikin (R)	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W
CONNECTICUT
Baldwin (R)	W	W	W	A	W	W	A	R	W	X	R	W	A	Z	A	R
McMahon (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R
DELAWARE
Frear, Jr. (D)	R	W	R	W	W	A	R	R	R	W	R	W	R	Z	W	A
Williams (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	W	W	W
FLORIDA
Holland (D)	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	W	R	W
Pepper (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z
GEORGIA
George (D)	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	R	A	W	W	W	R	W	W	W
Russell (D)	W	W	W	X	R	W	W	R	R	X	W	W	R	W	W	W
IDAHO
Dworshak (R) Sworn in 10/15/49)	*	*	*	*	*	*	*	*	*	*	*	*	*	*	*	W
Taylor (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	X	X	A
ILLINOIS
Douglas (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	Z	R	R	R
Lucas (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
INDIANA
Capehart (R)	W	R	W	R	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	X	W
Jenner (R)	W	W	W	A	W	W	W	A	R	A	W	W	W	W	W	W
IOWA
Gillette (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	W	R	A	W	X	R	R	W	W	A
Hickenlooper (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	A	W
KANSAS
Reed (R)	(Deceased.)
Schoeppel (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W
KENTUCKY
Chapman (D)	W	W	W	W	Z	W	W	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	W
Withers (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	W	R	R	W	Z	R	R	A
LOUISIANA
Ellender (D)	X	X	X	W	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	W	R	W	W	W
Long (D)	R	R	R	W	Z	W	W	R	R	R	W	W	R	X	W	R
MAINE
Brewster (R)	W	W	W	R	A	W	W	A	W	W	R	W	A	W	A	W
Smith (R)	W	W	R	R	R	W	R	R	A	W	R	W	W	R	R	R
MARYLAND
O'Conor (D)	R	W	W	A	A	W	R	W	A	W	R	X	R	R	R	R
Tydings (D)	R	W	W	R	W	A	W	W	A	W	R	W	R	R	Z	A
MASSACHUSETTS
Lodge, Jr (R)	R	W	R	A	A	W	R	R	W	A	R	R	A	Z	Z	R
Saltonstall (R)	W	W	W	R	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	W	W	R	R	R
MICHIGAN
Ferguson (R)	W	W	W	A	W	W	W	R	W	X	R	R	W	R	R	R
Vandenberg (R)	W	W	W	R	W	A	W	R	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	A
MINNESOTA
Humphrey (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
Thye (R)	R	R	W	R	Z	W	R	R	W	A	W	W	W	R	R	A
MISSISSIPPI
Eastland (D)	W	W	W	W	W	X	A	A	A	W	W	W	R	Z	A	W
Stennis (D)	W	W	W	W	R	X	A	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R	X
MISSOURI
Donnell (R)	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	R	W	R	W	W	W	R	R	W
Kem (R)	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	A	A	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
MONTANA
Ecton (R)	A	A	R	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
Murray (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	Z	Z	R	R	R	Z

	1. Taft-Hartley—Lucas Amdt.	2. Taft-Hartley—Injunction Amdt.	3. Taft-Hartley—'Package' Amdt.	4. Minimum Wage—Ellender Amdt.	5. Public Power Funds.	6. Leland Olds Confirmation.	7. Rent Control—Fulbright Amdt.	8. Housing—Bricker Amdt.	9. Housing—Taft Farm Amdt.	10. 10% Budget Cut—McClellan Amdt.	11. Filibusters—Barkley Ruling.	12. Senate Rules—Wherry Amdt.	13. Trade Pacts—Millikin Amdt.	14. ECA—Taft-Russell Amdt.	15. Military Aid Program.	16. DP's—Cain-Eastland Amdt.
NEBRASKA
Butler (R)	W	W	W	W	A	X	W	W	A	W	W	W	W	X	X	X
Wherry (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
NEVADA
Malone (R)	Z	Z	Z	R	R	W	A	R	R	W	W	R	W	X	W	W
McCarran (D)	R	R	R	A	X	A	W	A	A	X	W	W	X	R	A	X
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Bridges (R)	A	A	W	R	W	W	W	R	W	X	W	W	W	A	R	A
Tobey (R)	A	A	R	R	R	X	R	R	W	A	Z	R	W	X	R	Z
NEW JERSEY
Hendrickson (R)	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	R	R	R
Smith (R)	W	W	W	R	W	X	R	R	W	W	R	W	X	A	Z	A
NEW MEXICO
Anderson (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R
Chavez (D)	R	R	R	A	W	Z	R	R	A	R	R	A	Z	A	R	Z
NEW YORK
Ives (R)	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	W	R	R	R
Dulles (R) (Sworn in 7/8/49)				A	W	W	*	*	*	W	*	*	X	*	R	R
NORTH CAROLINA
Graham (D) (Sworn in 3/29/49.)	R	R	R	R	R	R	*	A	A	*	*	*	R	R	R	R
Hoey (D)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	R	R	R	W
NORTH DAKOTA
Langer (R)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	W	W	W	W
Young (R)	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	W	W	X	W
OHIO
Bricker (R)	W	W	W	A	W	X	W	W	W	A	W	W	W	W	W	A
Taft (R)	W	W	W	R	X	X	W	R	W	W	R	W	X	W	W	R
OKLAHOMA
Kerr (D)	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	A	R	W	W	R	Z	R	W
Thomas (D)	R	R	R	Z	W	W	R	R	R	W	R	A	W	Z	R	W
OREGON
Cordon (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W
Morse (R)	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	A	R	R	R
PENNSYLVANIA
Martin (R)	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	W	W	A
Myers (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	Z	R	R
RHODE ISLAND
Green (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
Leahy (D) (Sworn in 8/24/49)				R	*	W	*	*	*	R	*	*	R	*	R	R
SOUTH CAROLINA
Johnston (D)	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	W	W	W
Maybank (D)	W	W	W	A	R	W	R	R	R	A	W	W	R	X	R	X
SOUTH DAKOTA
Gurney (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W
Mundt (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	W	R	A	A
TENNESSEE
Kefauver (D)	R	R	R	A	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	W	Z	R	A	Z
McKellar (D)	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R	W
TEXAS
Connally (D)	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	R	A	R	W	W	R	R	R	X
Johnson (D)	W	W	W	W	R	W	A	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
UTAH
Thomas (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A
Watkins (R)	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
VERMONT
Aiken (R)	R	W	R	R	A	Z	R	R	A	R	R	R	W	R	Z	R
Flanders (R)	W	W	W	R	W	X	R	R	W	W	R	W	W	A	R	A
VIRGINIA
Byrd (D)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	W	W	W	R	W	W	W
Robertson (D)	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	W	A	W	W	W	R	R	R	A
WASHINGTON
Cain (R)	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	W	W	W	W
Magnuson (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	R
WEST VIRGINIA
Kilgore (D)	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
Neely (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
WISCONSIN
McCarthy (R)	W	W	W	A	R	W	W	R	W	A	R	W	W	R	R	R
Wiley (R)	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	A	A	W	R	W	A	R	R	R
WYOMING
Hunt (D)	R	R	R	A	R	X	R	R	R	A	R	W	X	R	A	A
O'Mahoney (D)	R	R	R	A	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	Z	W	R	A	Z

READING THE SENATE RECORD

Symbol R means a Right vote, from viewpoint of CIO.

Symbol W means a Wrong vote.

Symbol A means Senator was Absent and not paired.

Symbol Z means Senator was paired Right.

Symbol X means Senator was paired Wrong.

Symbol * means Senator was not in office at the time of vote.

HOUSE VOTING RECORD

Here's a short description of each of the 13 key votes in the House of Representatives which are recorded on the next three pages. Read the description of these issues—then see how your Congressman voted on them.

1. TAFT-HARTLEY—WOOD BILL (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Rep. Wood (D. Ga.) proposed substitute bill in place of Taft-Hartley repeal bill. The Wood Bill was just as bad, if not worse, than T-H itself. Wood's substitute bill was passed.

VOTE: For the Wood Bill ..... 217 (W)
Against the Wood Bill ..... 203 (R)

DATE: May 3, 1949.

RESULT: Bill stymied efforts in House to repeal T-H during first session of 81st Congress.

2. T-H—RECOMMITTAL OF WOOD BILL (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Day after Wood Bill had been passed, foes of Taft-Hartley moved to recommit it—that is, bury it back in committee and nullify House passage of the Wood anti-union measure. Recommittal was voted.

VOTE: To recommit the Wood Bill ..... 212 (R)
Against recommittal ..... 209 (W)

DATE: May 4, 1949.

RESULT: Action nullified passage of Wood Bill, which contained many provisions more anti-union than T-H itself.

3. MINIMUM WAGE—LUCAS BILL (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Rep. Lucas (D. Tex.) offered bill as substitute to Administration proposal to improve wage-hour law. Lucas Bill provided for mass exemptions of workers from protection of wage-hour law, and weakened enforcement. Lucas was defeated in effort to install 65c base pay, rising and falling with cost of living. But main elements of his weakening bill were approved.

VOTE: For the Lucas Bill ..... 225 (W)
Against the Lucas Bill ..... 181 (R)

DATE: August 10, 1949.

RESULT: Some of worst elements of Lucas bill were removed in Senate-House conference committee—but effect of coalition-supported Lucas Bill was to weaken the 75c minimum pay bill that finally was passed by Congress.

4. RENT CONTROL—WILLIAMS AMDT. (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Rep. Williams (D. Miss.) offered amendment to rent control act to permit local government units—cities, counties, states—to order lifting of rent controls. Proposal had strong backing of real estate lobby, which saw it as means of weakening national rent control program. Amendment passed, was later watered down a bit.

VOTE: For the Williams decontrol amendment ..... 227 (W)
Against the Williams decontrol amendment 188 (R)

DATE: March 15, 1949.

RESULT: Williams amendment, and others, weakened whole fabric of national rent control—and led to widespread decontrols and spiralling rent costs for tenants in many big areas.

5. HOUSING—REES AMENDMENT (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Amendment to Administration housing bill was offered by Rep. Rees (R. Kans.), to strike out entire section providing for low-rent public housing for lowest-income families. It would have crippled government slum clearance program. Amendment was defeated.

VOTE: For Rees amendment ..... 204 (W)
Against Rees amendment ..... 209 (R)

DATE: June 29, 1949.

RESULT: Housing bill became law—with effective slum-clearance and low-rent housing provisions.

6. SOCIAL SECURITY—RECOMMITTAL (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Ways & Means Committee reported out social security bill containing many of improvements long advocated by labor. Republicans sought to send the bill back to committee with instructions to report out another, much weaker GOP bill. Recommital motion was defeated.

VOTE: For motion to recommit social security bill 112 (W)
Against recommital motion ..... 232 (R)

DATE: October 5, 1949.

RESULT: House went on to pass, almost unanimously, the social security bill—increasing benefits and improving coverage.

7. ANTI-MONOPOLY—CELLER BILL (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Bill introduced by Rep. Celler (D. N. Y.) was designed to close old loopholes in Clayton Anti-Trust law. Celler bill prevents mergers in restraint of trade by forbidding one corporation from buying out assets of another. Bill was passed.

VOTE: For the Celler anti-trust bill ..... 223 (R)
Against the Celler anti-trust bill ..... 92 (W)

DATE: August 15, 1949.

RESULT: Long needed reform in anti-trust legislation moved step nearer to final passage.

8. WEAKENING NATURAL GAS ACT (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Bill, strongly supported by oil and gas corporation lobbies, would have banned future control by Federal Power Commission of natural gas sales to interstate pipeline companies. Effect would be to raise consumer price levels for natural gas by scores of millions of dollars a year. Bill passed.

VOTE: For weakening the Natural Gas Act ..... 183 (W)
Against weakening the Natural Gas Act ..... 131 (R)

DATE: August 5, 1949.

RESULT: Passage of bill by House was severe blow to gas consumers—but Senate has not yet acted upon it.

9. ANTI-POLLTAX BILL (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Bill outlaws payments of polltaxes as requirement for voting in federal primaries and elections. Polltaxes, still imposed in seven southern states, keeps millions of lower-income families from voting—and help keep many Congressional reactionaries in office. Bill passed House—for fifth time in recent years.

VOTE: For the anti-polltax bill ..... 273 (R)
Against the anti-polltax bill ..... 116 (W)

DATE: July 26, 1949.

RESULT: Bill is cleared for action in Senate—where southern polltax block has threatened filibuster if it comes up for vote.

10. RULES COMMITTEE CHANGES (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Proposal was designed to limit pigeon-hole powers of House Rules Committee—where southern Democrats and Republicans have held up many liberal bills. Proposal permitted committee chairmen to bring bills directly to House floor 21 days after Rules Committee had considered them. Proposal was approved.

VOTE: To liberalize House rules ..... 275 (R)
Against liberalizing House rules ..... 143 (W)

DATE: January 3, 1949.

RESULT: Changed rules and procedures have helped stop powerful House Rules Committee from "vetoing" many important bills.

11. TRADE PACTS—RECOMMITTAL (Opposed by CIO)

ISSUE: Rep. Simpson (R. Pa.) offered motion to recommit to committee the Administration's bill to extend and liberalize government's power to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements, as spur to international commerce. Recommittal motion was defeated.

VOTE: For Simpson recommittal motion ..... 151 (W)
Against Simpson recommittal motion ..... 241 (R)

DATE: February 9, 1949.

RESULT: House approved reciprocal trade agreements power for three years—and Senate concurred later in session. Passage of bill corrected limitations imposed by GOP-controlled 80th Congress.

12. ECA—ADDITIONAL FUNDS (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Vote was to provide $150 million additional funds for Economic Cooperation Administration, as approved by Senate amendment to ECA appropriation bill. Additional funds were needed to bolster effectiveness of European Recovery Program. Amendment was approved.

VOTE: For the additional ECA funds ..... 177 (R)
Against the additional ECA funds ..... 124 (W)

DATE: September 29, 1949.

RESULT: Vote helped provide sufficient funds to carry on second year of European Recovery Program.

13. MILITARY AID PROGRAM (Supported by CIO)

ISSUE: Vote was on the Senate-House conference report to provide funds for military assistance to western European nations which signed North Atlantic Pact as defense against aggression. The bill passed.

VOTE: For the Conference Report ..... 224 (R)
Against the Conference Report ..... 109 (W)

DATE: September 28, 1949.

RESULT: Through military aid program, U. S. implemented North Atlantic Pact to help insure democratic nations power to withstand aggression.

36 SENATORS, ALL OF HOUSE FACE '50 CONTESTS

AT LEAST 36 Senators and all members of the House of Representatives are up for re-election this November. With so many seats at stake, the outcome of the 1950 election is sure to determine the control of both Houses for the next two years.

Most of these Senators and Representatives already have made substantial records—one way or the other—by their votes on key issues that came up in 1949. A few who were named to fill vacancies will come before the voters chiefly upon the records they make in the coming session of Congress.

Senators up for re-election are:

Hill (D, Ala); Hayden (D, Ariz); Fulbright (D, Ark); Downey (D, Calif); Millikin (R, Colo); McMahon (D, Conn); Benton (D, Conn); Pepper (D, Fla); George (D, Ga); Taylor (D, Idaho); Dworshak (R, Idaho); Lucas (D, Ill); Capehart (R, Ind); Hickenlooper (R, Iowa); Darby (R, Kas); Withers (D, Ky); Long (D, La); Tydings (D, Md); Donnell (R, Mo); McCarran (D, Nev); Tobey (R, NH); Lehman (D, NY); Hoey (D, NC); Graham (D, NC); Young (R, ND); Taft (R, Ohio); Thomas (D, Okla); Morse (R, Ore); Myers (D, Pa); Leahy (D, RI); Johnston (D, SC); Gurney (R, SD); Thomas (D, Utah); Aiken (R, Vt); Magnuson (D, Wash); Wiley (R, Wis).

LINE-UP ON 13 MAJOR ISSUES

	1. Taft-Hartley—Wood Bill.	2. T-H—Wood Bill Recommittal.	3. Minimum Wage—Lucas Amdt.	4. Rent Control—Williams Amdt.	5. Public Housing—Rees Amdt.	6. Social Security—Recommittal.	7. Anti-Trust—Celler Bill.	8. Natural Gas Bill.	9. Anti-Poll Tax Bill.	10. Rules Committee—Changes.	11. Trade Pacts—Recommittal.	12. ECA Funds—Conference Report.	13. Military Aid Program.
ALABAMA
3 Andrews (D)	W	W	R	R	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R
9 Battle (D)	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	W	Z	R	R
1 Boykin (D)	W	W	W	W	A	R	A	W	W	W	R	R	R
6 deGraffenried (D)	A	A	W	R	R	R	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
7 Elliott (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	A	R	R
2 Grant (D)	W	W	W	R	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
4 Hobbs (D)	X	X	W	R	W	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R
8 Jones (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
5 Rains (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	A	A
ARIZONA
1 Murdock (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	R
2 Patten (D)	R	R	R	W	W	A	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
ARKANSAS
1 Gathings (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R
7 Harris (D)	W	R	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
5 Hays (D)	W	R	W	R	R	R	R	W	X	R	R	R	R
2 Mills (D)	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
6 Norrell (D)	W	R	W	W	W	A	R	W	W	W	R	W	R
4 Tackett (D)	W	R	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	W	W
3 Trimble (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
CALIFORNIA
7 Allen (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	W	W	W	W
8 Anderson (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	R	A
11 Bramblett (R)	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	R	W	W	A	A
14 Douglas (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	Z
18 Doyle (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
2 Engle (D)	R	R	W	W	R	A	R	W	R	R	R	A	X
4 Havenner (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
20 Hinshaw (R)	W	W	X	W	W	W	A	X	R	W	W	W	R
19 Holifield (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
16 Jackson (R)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	R	A	W	W	W
3 Johnson (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	W	R	R
17 King (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
15 McDonough (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	W
23 McKinnon (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	Z	R	R	R	R	R
6 Miller (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
12 Nixon (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	W	W	R	R
22 Phillips (R)	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	W	R	W	W	A	A
13 Poulson (R)	W	W	X	A	W	W	R	W	R	A	Z	W	W
1 Scudder (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	W	W	W	R
21 Sheppard (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	Z	A	R
10 Werdel (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
9 White (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W
COLORADO
4 Aspinall (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
1 Carroll (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
2 Hill (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
3 Marsalis (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
CONNECTICUT
4 Lodge (R)	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	W	R	R	W	A	R
3 McGuire (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A
5 Patterson (R)	R	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	W	W	R
1 Ribicoff (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	Z	Z	R	R	A	R
AL Sadlak (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	Z	R	R	W	W	R
2 Woodhouse (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	A	Z	R	R	R	A	A
DELAWARE
AL Boggs (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W

READING THE HOUSE RECORD

Symbol R means a Right vote, from viewpoint of the CIO.

Symbol W means a Wrong vote.

Symbol X means Representative was paired Wrong.

Symbol Z means Representative was paired Right.

Symbol A means Representative was Absent and not paired.

Symbol * means Representative was not in office at time of vote.

	1. Taft-Hartley—Wood Bill.	2. T-H—Wood Bill Recommittal.	3. Minimum Wage—Lucas Amdt.	4. Rent Control—Williams Amdt.	5. Public Housing—Rees Amdt.	6. Social Security—Recommittal.	7. Anti-Trust—Celler Bill.	8. Natural Gas Bill.	9. Anti-Poll Tax Bill.	10. Rules Committee—Changes.	11. Trade Pacts—Recommittal.	12. ECA Funds—Conference Report.	13. Military Aid Program.
FLORIDA
2 Bennett (D)	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	Z	W	R
5 Herlong (D)	W	R	W	W	W	A	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
1 Peterson (D)	W	R	W	W	A	R	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
6 Rogers (D)	W	W	W	W	W	Z	W	W	W	R	R	R	R
3 Sikes (D)	R	R	W	W	W	R	A	X	X	R	R	W	R
4 Smathers (D)	R	R	W	R	W	R	R	R	X	R	R	R	R
GEORGIA
10 Brown (D)	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
4 Camp (D)	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
2 Cox (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	R	R	R
5 Davis (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	R	R	R
7 Lanham (D)	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	A	W	R	R	R	R
3 Pace (D)	W	W	W	R	R	R	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
1 Preston (D)	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
6 Vinson (D)	W	W	W	R	R	R	Z	X	W	R	R	Z	Z
8 Wheeler (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	W
9 Wood (D)	W	W	W	A	W	R	A	X	W	W	R	A	W
IDAHO
2 Sanborn (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	A
1 White (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	A	W
ILLINOIS
16 Allen (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	X	A	W	W	X	X
17 Arends (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
26 Bishop (R)	R	R	R	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	W
4 Buckley (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
11 Chesney (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	R
19 Chiperfield (R)	W	W	W	X	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
13 Church (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
1 Dawson (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
8 Gordon (D)	R	R	Z	R	R	R	Z	Z	R	R	R	R	R
10 Hoffman (R)	W	W	W	A	W	R	W	Z	A	W	W	X	R
23 Jenison (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	R	A	W	W	W
12 Jonas (R)	W	W	A	W	W	R	W	Z	R	W	W	W	A
3 Linehan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
21 Mack (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	A	A
15 Mason (R)	W	W	X	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	W	W	W
22 McMillen (R)	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	W	R	W	W	A	A
6 O'Brien (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
2 O'Hara (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W
25 Price (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
14 Reed (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	X	W	R	W	X	X	X
7 Sabath (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	A	A
20 Simpson (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W
18 Velde (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	W
24 Vursell (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	X	A	W	W	W	W
9 Yates (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
INDIANA
3 Crook (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
8 Denton (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	R
2 Halleck (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	X	R	W	X	W	W
6 Harden (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	A	A
10 Harvey (R)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	R	W	W	A	X
11 Jacobs (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	W
4 Kruse (D)	R	R	R	W	W	R	A	X	R	R	R	R	R
1 Madden (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
7 Noland (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	X	R	R	R	R	R
5 Walsh (D)	A	A	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R
9 Wilson (R)	W	W	W	W	W	R	A	W	R	W	W	W	W
IOWA
5 Cunningham (R)	W	R	W	W	W	X	W	R	R	W	W	W	R
6 Dolliver (R)	W	W	X	W	W	W	A	X	R	W	X	W	W
3 Gross (R)	R	R	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	W
8 Hoeven (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	W	W	W	W
7 Jensen (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
4 LeCompte (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R
1 Martin (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	A	A
2 Talle (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
KANSAS
1 Cole (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
5 Hope (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	W	W	R	R
3 Meyer (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	X	W	W
4 Rees (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	R	W	W	W	W
2 Scrivner (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
6 Smith (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W

HOUSE VOTING RECORD

(Continued from Page 5)

	1. Taft-Hartley—Wood Bill.	2. T-H—Wood Bill Recommittal.	3. Minimum Wage—Lucas Amdt.	4. Rent Control—Williams Amdt.	5. Public Housing—Rees Amdt.	6. Social Security—Recommittal.	7. Anti-Trust—Celler Bill.	8. Natural Gas Bill.	9. Anti-Poll Tax Bill.	10. Rules Committee—Changes.	11. Trade Pacts—Recommittal.	12. ECA Funds—Conference Report.	13. Military Aid Program.
KENTUCKY
8 Bates (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	X	R	W	R	R	R
4 Chelf (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	R
1 Gregory (D)	W	W	A	R	R	A	A	X	W	W	R	A	A
9 Golden (R)	R	R	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	R	Z	W	R
3 Morton (R)	W	W	W	W	Z	A	A	A	R	R	W	W	W
7 Perkins (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R
5 Spence (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
6 Underwood (D)	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	R
2 Whitaker (D)	A	R	R	R	A	R	A	X	X	R	Z	A	A
LOUISIANA
8 Allen (D)	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	A	A
2 Boggs (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	Z	A
4 Brooks (D)	W	W	R	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	A	A
1 Hebert (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	W	W	R	R	A	X
7 Larcade (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	X	W	W	R	W	W
6 Morrison (D)	R	R	R	R	A	A	A	X	W	R	R	Z	Z
5 Passman (D)	W	W	R	W	W	R	W	X	W	R	R	W	W
3 Willis (D)	W	W	R	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	A	X
MAINE
3 Fellows (R)	W	W	A	W	W	X	A	W	W	W	W	A	A
1 Hale (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	W	W	R	R
2 Nelson (R)	W	W	R	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	W
MARYLAND
6 Beall (R)	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	Z	R	W	W	A	W
2 Bolton (D)	W	R	W	R	W	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	W
4 Fallon (D)	W	R	W	R	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	R	W
3 Garmatz (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	Z	Z
1 Miller (R)	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	R	W	W	W	R
5 Sasscer (D)	R	R	W	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
MASSACHUSETTS
6 Bates (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R
4 Donohue (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	W	A	A
2 Furcolo (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R
8 Goodwin (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	A	W
10 Herter (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	R	W	W	R	R
1 Heselton (R)	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
11 Kennedy (D)	R	R	Z	R	R	R	A	Z	R	R	W	A	R
7 Lane (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	A	R
14 Martin (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	R	W	W	W	R
12 McCormack (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	W	R	R	R	R	R
9 Nicholson (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	W	W	W
8 Philbin (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	A	W
5 Rogers (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	A	A
13 Wigglesworth (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R
MICHIGAN
12 Bennett (R)	R	R	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	R	W	W	W
6 Blackney (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	W	W	R
8 Crawford (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	A	A
15 Dingell (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	Z	A	Z
17 Dondero (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	X	W	W
9 Engel (R)	R	R	W	W	R	R	W	R	R	R	W	W	R
5 Ford (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	X	R	R	W	W	R
4 Hoffman (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W
16 Lesinski (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	R
2 Michener (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	R	R
13 O'Brien (D)	A	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
11 Potter (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	X	Z	R	W	W	W
14 Rabaut (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R
1 Sadowski (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	A	X
3 Shafer (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	A	W	A	W	X	W	W
7 Wolcott (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	A	A
10 Woodruff (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	W
MINNESOTA
7 Andersen (R)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	W
1 Andresen (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	X	W	W	W	W
8 Blatnik (D)	R	R	R	Z	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	A	X
9 Hagen (R)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	W
5 Judd (D)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	W	Z	R	R
6 Marshall (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W
4 McCarthy (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
2 O'Hara (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W
3 Wier (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W
MISSISSIPPI
4 Abernethy (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	W	W
6 Colmer (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	R	W	W
1 Rankin (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	W	W	R	W	W
2 Whitten (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	W	W	R	R	R
3 Whittington (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	A	R
7 Williams (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	A	W	W
5 Winstead (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	A	W	W	W	R	R	R

	1. Taft-Hartley—Wood Bill.	2. T-H—Wood Bill Recommittal.	3. Minimum Wage—Lucas Amdt.	4. Rent Control—Williams Amdt.	5. Public Housing—Rees Amdt.	6. Social Security—Recommittal.	7. Anti-Trust—Celler Bill.	8. Natural Gas Bill.	9. Anti-Poll Tax Bill.	10. Rules Committee—Changes.	11. Trade Pacts—Recommittal.	12. ECA Funds—Conference Report.	13. Military Aid Program.
MISSOURI
5 Bolling (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	A	R
9 Cannon (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
8 Carnahan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R
6 Christopher (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
4 Irving (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	A	R	R	R	R	A	A
10 Jones (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	R
12 Karst (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
13 Karsten (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
1 Magee (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	W	R	R	R	R
2 Moulder (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	R
7 Short (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	X	A	A
11 Sullivan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
3 Welch (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	R
MONTANA
2 D'Ewart (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
1 Mansfield (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	Z	Z
NEBRASKA
1 Curtis (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	A
4 Miller (R)	W	W	W	W	W	R	A	W	R	W	W	W	W
2 O'Sullivan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
3 Stefan (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	W	W
NEVADA
AL Baring (D)	R	R	Z	R	R	A	A	Z	R	R	R	A	A
NEW HAMPSHIRE
2 Colton (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	R
1 Merrow (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	R	R	R	R	R
NEW JERSEY
11 Addonizio (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
3 Auchincloss (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	R	W	W	W	R
8 Canfield (R)	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	W	R	R
6 Case (R)	R	R	W	W	R	R	A	R	A	R	R	R	R
5 Eaton (R)	W	W	X	W	W	W	A	A	R	W	A	A	R
2 Hand (R)	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	Z	R	R	W	X	W
14 Hart (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	R
4 Howell (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R
12 Kean (R)	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	Z	R	R	W	R	A
13 Norton (D)	R	R	Z	R	R	A	A	Z	R	R	Z	A	A
10 Rodino (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
7 Thomas (R)	A	X	A	A	X	A	A	A	A	W	A	A	A
9 Towe (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	A	A	R	R	X	W	W
1 Wolverton (R)	W	W	W	W	R	R	A	R	R	R	W	A	R
NEW MEXICO
AL Fernandez (D)	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	R
AL Miles (D)	R	R	W	W	R	R	A	W	R	R	A	R	R
NEW YORK
25 Buckley (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	A	A	R	R	R	A	A
32 Byrne (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	Z	A
15 Celler (D)	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	A	A
4 Clemente (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R
39 Cole (R)	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	W	A	A	W	A	A
17 Coudert (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	A	W	Z	A	W
35 Davies (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	W	R	R	R	X
6 Delaney (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
24 Dollinger (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
28 Gamble (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	R	W	W	W	R
44 Gorski (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R
27 Gwinn (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	A	W	W	W	R
37 Hall, E. A. (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	R	R	W	W	R
2 Hall, L. W. (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	Z	W	W	A	R
11 Heffernan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	A	Z	R	R	R	A	R
7 Heller (D) (Sworn in 2/15/49)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	Z	R	*	*	A	R
21 Javits (R)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	A	R
31 Kearney (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	Z	R	W	W	R
40 Keating (R)	W	W	W	W	R	A	R	R	R	W	W	R	Z
9 Keogh (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	A	Z
34 Kilburn (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	A	W	X	W	W	W	R
19 Klein (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	A	Z
3 Latham (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	A	A
30 LeFevre (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	R
23 Lynch (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	A	R
1 Macy (R)	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	X	R	W	W	A	A
18 Marcantonio (AL)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	X	W
26 McGrath (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R
14 Multer (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	A	A
16 Murphy (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	Z	Z	R	R	A	A
13 O'Toole (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
8 Pfeifer, J. L. (D)	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	Z	R	R	R	A	Z
42 Pfeifer, W. L. (R)	W	W	W	W	R	W	A	A	R	W	W	A	R
22 Powell (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	Z	Z	R	Z	W	W
5 Quinn (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R
45 Reed (R)	W	W	W	X	W	X	A	W	W	W	W	A	A
36 Riehlman (R)	W	W	W	W	R	X	A	A	R	R	W	A	A
20 Roosevelt (D-L) (Sworn in 6/14/49)	*	*	*	*	R	Z	R	Z	R	*	*	A	R
12 Rooney (D)	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
29 St. George (R)	W	W	A	W	A	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	W
38 Taber (R)	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
43 Tauriello (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	A	R	A	A
33 Taylor (R)	W	W	W	W	R	W	A	W	R	R	W	A	Z
41 Wadsworth (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	X	W	W	W	R

	1. Taft-Hartley—Wood Bill.	2. T-H—Wood Bill Recommittal.	3. Minimum Wage—Lucas Amdt.	4. Rent Control—Williams Amdt.	5. Public Housing—Rees Amdt.	6. Social Security—Recommittal.	7. Anti-Trust—Celler Bill.	8. Natural Gas Bill.	9. Anti-Poll Tax Bill.	10. Rules Committee—Changes.	11. Trade Pacts—Recommittal.	12. ECA Funds—Conference Report.	13. Military Aid Program.
NORTH CAROLINA
3 Barden (D)	W	W	W	A	W	R	A	X	X	R	R	W	W
1 Bonner (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	X	W	R	R	A	A
11 Bulwinkle (D)	X	W	A	A	A	A	A	X	A	A	A	A	A
7 Carlyle (D)	W	W	W	W	R	A	R	W	W	R	R	A	R
5 Chatham (D)	W	W	W	W	A	A	A	A	A	R	R	A	A
4 Cooley (D)	Z	R	W	W	R	Z	R	W	W	R	R	R	A
8 Deane (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	X	R	R	R	A	A
9 Doughton (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
6 Durham (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	A	W	A	R	R	R	R
10 Jones (D)	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	W	A	R	R	R	R
2 Kerr (D)	W	W	W	R	R	R	A	X	W	R	R	R	R
12 Redden (D)	W	W	W	W	R	R	A	W	Z	R	R	W	R
NORTH DAKOTA
AL Burdick (R)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	W
AL Lemke (R)	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	W
OHIO
2 Bolton (R)	W	W	A	W	R	A	A	A	R	W	W	Z	Z
3 Breen (D)	R	R	Z	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	A
1 Brehm (R)	R	Z	W	W	W	A	R	W	R	R	W	W	W
7 Brown (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	R	W	W	W	W
9 Burke (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	A	R	R	R
5 Clevenger (R)	A	X	A	W	W	W	A	A	A	W	W	W	W
1 Crosser (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	A	A
1 Elston (R)	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	A	A	W	X	A	X
20 Feighan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	A	R	R	R	R	Z	A
18 Hays (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	Z	R	R	R	A	A
14 Huber (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R	A	A
10 Jenkins (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
19 Kirwan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R
4 McCulloch (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	R	R	W	W	W
17 McGregor (R)	W	W	A	W	W	W	A	X	Z	R	W	W	W
16 McSweeney (D)	R	R	R	Z	R	A	Z	W	R	R	R	A	A
6 Polk (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
15 Secrest (D)	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	A	R	R	A	W	W
8 Smith (R)	A	X	Z	A	W	A	A	A	X	A	A	X	X
12 Vorys (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	R	R
2 Wagner (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
13 Weichel (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	R	W	W	W	W
AL Young (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
OKLAHOMA
3 Albert (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
1 Gilmer (D)	Z	Z	Z	A	Z	R	A	X	X	R	R	A	A
5 Monroney (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	Z	R	R
6 Morris (D)	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	W	X
4 Steed (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	A	R
2 Stigler (D)	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	X	R	R	R	R	R
7 Wickersham (D)	R	R	R	W	W	R	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
8 Wilson (D)	R	R	R	W	R	R	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
OREGON
3 Angell (R)	R	R	R	W	R	R	R	A	R	R	W	W	W
4 Ellsworth (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	X	A	R	X	W	W
1 Norblad (R)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	R	A	W	A	A
2 Stockman (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W
PENNSYLVANIA
1 Barrett (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	A	R
3 Buchanan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R
3 Cavalcante (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R
4 Chudoff (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	A	A	R
0 Corbett (R)	R	Z	R	W	W	R	W	R	R	R	W	A	R
9 Dague (R)	W	W	X	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	X	W
9 Davenport (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
32 Eberharter (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	A	A
12 Fenton (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
11 Flood (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	A	A
31 Fulton (R)	R	W	R	W	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R
19 Gavin (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
14 Gillette (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
5 Graham (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
2 Granahan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R
5 Green (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	A	A
7 James (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
8 Kearns (R)	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	X	R	W	W	W	W
27 Kelley (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R
18 Kunkel (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	W	W	R	W	W	A	A
8 Lichtenwalter (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	R	W	X	X	W
21 Lind (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
16 McConnell (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W
24 Morgan (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	R	R	R	R
10 O'Neill (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	R
13 Rhodes (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
15 Rich (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
26 Saylor (D) (Sworn in 9/28/49)	*	*	*	*	*	W	*	*	*	*	*	W	W
3 Scott, Hardie (R)	W	W	W	W	R	W	A	A	R	W	W	A	W
6 Scott, Hugh (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	A	W	Z	W	A	A	A
17 Simpson (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	W	W	W	W	W	W
22 Van Zandt (R)	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	R	R	W	W	W
20 Walter (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	Z	R	R	A	A
RHODE ISLAND
2 Fogarty (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	Z	R	R	R	R	R
1 Forand (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R

	1. Taft-Hartley—Wood Bill.	2. T-H—Wood Bill Recommittal.	3. Minimum Wage—Lucas Amdt.	4. Rent Control—Williams Amdt.	5. Public Housing—Rees Amdt.	6. Social Security—Recommittal.	7. Anti-Trust—Celler Bill.	8. Natural Gas Bill.	9. Anti-Poll Tax Bill.	10. Rules Committee—Changes.	11. Trade Pacts—Recommittal.	12. ECA Funds—Conference Report.	13. Military Aid Program.
SOUTH CAROLINA
4 Bryson (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	W	R
3 Hare (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	X	R
6 McMillan (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	W	W	R	A	A
5 Richards (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	W	W	R	A	A
1 Rivers (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	X	X	W	A	W	W
2 Sims (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	W	R	R	R	R
SOUTH DAKOTA
2 Case (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	A	W	W	W	R
1 Lovre (R)	W	W	W	W	W	X	A	W	W	W	W	A	A
TENNESSEE
9 Cooper (D)	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
10 Davis (D)	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	A	A
5 Evins (D)	W	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	Z	R
3 Frazier (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	X	W	R	R	R	R
4 Gore (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	X	R	R	R	A	A
2 Jennings (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	A	A	A	W	W	R
8 Murray (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R
1 Phillips (R)	R	R	W	W	R	R	A	X	R	A	W	W	R
6 Priest (D)	R	R	R	R	R	Z	R	W	R	R	R	R	R
7 Sutton (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	X	R	R	R	R	W
TEXAS
3 Beckwith (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
15 Bentsen (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	X	R	R	R	A	R
17 Burleson (D)	R	R	X	R	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
2 Combs (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
21 Fisher (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	W	R	R
13 Gossett (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R
20 Kilday (D)	W	W	W	W	X	R	R	W	W	R	W	R	R
12 Lucas (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R
14 Lyle (D)	R	R	W	R	R	R	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
19 Mahon (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
1 Patman (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	X	W	R	R	R	R
7 Pickett (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	X	W	W	R	R	R
11 Poage (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	W	W	R	A	A
4 Rayburn (D)	(Speaker.)
16 Regan (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	W	R	R	R
6 Teague (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	W
8 Thomas (D)	R	R	R	R	W	R	R	W	R	R	R	R	R
9 Thompson (D)	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
10 Thornberry (D)	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
5 Wilson (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
18 Worley (D)	R	R	W	R	W	A	A	W	W	R	R	A	A
UTAH
2 Bosone (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	Z	A	A
1 Granger (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
VERMONT
AL Plumley (R)	W	W	X	A	X	W	A	A	R	W	X	A	R
VIRGINIA
4 Abbitt (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	A	X	W	R	A	A	R
1 Bland (D)	W	W	A	R	R	A	A	X	W	R	R	A	A
6 Burton (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
9 Fugate (D)	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
3 Gary (D)	W	W	W	W	W	A	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
2 Hardy (D)	W	R	W	R	R	R	A	W	W	R	R	R	R
7 Harrison (D)	W	W	W	W	W	Z	R	W	W	R	R	R	R
8 Smith (D)	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W	A	R	R
5 Stanley (D)	W	W	W	W	W	Z	A	X	X	R	R	R	R
WASHINGTON
4 Holmes (R)	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	R	R	R	W	R	R
5 Horan (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	R	R	W	A	A
2 Jackson (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
3 Mack (R)	R	Z	W	W	W	R	R	Z	R	W	W	W	R
1 Mitchell (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
6 Tollefson (R)	R	R	R	W	R	R	A	R	R	A	W	R	R
WEST VIRGINIA
3 Bailey (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	X	R	A
4 Burnside (D)	R	R	R	R	R	A	A	Z	R	R	R	A	A
6 Hedrick (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R
5 Kee (D)	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R
1 Ramsay (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	A
2 Staggers (D)	R	R	R	R	Z	R	A	Z	Z	R	R	A	R
WISCONSIN
5 Biemiller (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
8 Byrnes (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
2 Davis (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	W	W	W	W
9 Hull (R)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	A	R	R	W	W	W
6 Keefe (R)	W	W	W	W	W	R	A	R	R	R	W	W	A
7 Murray (R)	W	W	W	W	W	R	R	R	R	R	W	W	W
10 O'Konski (R)	R	R	R	X	W	R	R	R	R	R	W	A	A
1 Smith (R)	W	W	W	X	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W
3 Withrow (R)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	Z	Z	R	W	A	W
4 Zablocki (D)	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R	R
WYOMING
AL Barrett (R)	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	W	R	W	W	W	W

Kroll Predicts

1950 NO 'OFF YEAR' FOR LABOR VOTERS

By JACK KROLL
Director, CIO Political Action Committee

THE POLITICAL action of the CIO in 1950 enters upon the greatest year of its history. In this critical year we confront a great opportunity and a terrible threat.

It is in 1950 that our principles of liberal government are going to achieve a stable and permanent victory, or suffer a crushing reversal, such as happened in 1946. The program of human welfare for which the CIO works and fights can be firmly established in our economy, or it can be halted and even beaten back.

This year is an "off year" according to American political tradition, just as 1946 was an "off year." In the 1946 election, only 34 million Americans turned out to vote, and 55 million more stayed home.

The 1946 "off year" gave us the 80th Congress, dominated by reactionary Republicans. They and their allies, the reactionary Southern Democrats, junked price control, hamstrung rent control, reduced the taxes of the wealthy, smashed the world trade program and gave us the Taft-Hartley Act.

The record of the 80th Congress demonstrated once more that all we may win on the picket line can be lost in the halls of government. We learned once more from the 1946 "off year" that economic advances must be protected and carried forward by political action.

1950 No 'Off Year'

Now in another "off year" we of the CIO must write a new political tradition. It is up to us to make sure that the tradition of the low vote is put aside, and that there is a full and representative vote in November, 1950.

We know that when the majority of our fellow citizens go to the polls, the mandate of a smashing majority is given for progressive government. We know that when the people do not vote they—and we of the CIO—are punished by the evils of minority government.

If we allow 1950 to be another "off year" we are likely to find ourselves under the control of the reactionaries. That is the hard lesson of history.

Get Out The Vote

We can head off this disaster with a simple program—to get out the vote.

But programs will not do the job by themselves. They are not automatic. Blueprints never elected a single friend of the public or stopped a single reactionary.

To win we must turn plans and talk into action and work.

Every member of the CIO can help get our 1950 job done, by making sure he gives his dollar for political action. Every member can start the big task by making sure his own vote, and that of his wife, and every adult member of his family, is protected—by registration—and that every vote is cast in the November election.

That is what 1950 requires of us. This can not be delegated to committees. It is something every member must do himself, if the principles of liberal government are to survive the election of 1950.

We in the CIO must start the 1950 job of political action now, for the time of decision is here.

DANGER! 1950 AHEAD!

TAKE A LOOK AT THE NATION'S VOTING RECORD!

"OFF YEAR" 1938

• This low vote resulted in the defeat of 71 liberal congressmen. It elected the 76th Congress which refused to fortify Guam • preserved our armed forces by only one vote • killed WPA • refused FDR's request for a public works program • started the Republican-Dixiecrat coalition • gave the New Deal its first setback

"OFF YEAR" 1942

• This low vote resulted in the defeat of 51 liberal congressmen. It elected the 78th Congress which • turned OPA over to industry • refused to help the farmers • removed curbs on war-time salaries • passed the "relief for the greedy" tax bill over FDR's veto • passed the anti-labor Smith-Connally act over FDR's veto

"OFF YEAR" 1946

• This low vote resulted in the defeat of 49 liberal congressmen and elected the 80th Congress which gutted the wage-hour act • destroyed farm price supports • weakened the Department of Labor and the Federal Security Agency • slashed taxes for the wealthy • refused action on housing, education, high prices, civil rights, excess profits • PASSED TAFT-HARTLEY ACT

1950

It's up to you!

YOU DON'T COUNT UNLESS YOU CAN BE COUNTED * * * REGISTER AND VOTE

'We Want A Better U.S.A. For Everyone'

LONG-RANGE action to restore and maintain a truly democratic government in our country is a major part of the CIO-PAC program for 1950.

The long-range program takes its place in the CIO's 1950 campaign among the urgent current issues, such as national health insurance, civil rights and repeal Taft-Hartley.

By the mandate of the Cleveland Convention, the political action committees of State and local Councils and of International unions now have the task of working for long-term goals which are not to be achieved in any one election, but will require continuous effort in every campaign.

Current programs are concerned mostly with results, in terms of the public welfare. The long-term program is concerned with the means by which political results are accomplished, and the aim of the CIO is to bring about reforms and improvements which are long overdue in our country.

Five CIO Proposals

Five of the proposals of the CIO are aimed to remove barriers that have grown up between the popular will and the functioning of their Government. These proposals, as stated in the Cleveland Convention resolution are:

1. "Revise our registration laws to eliminate cumbersome requirements designed to prevent the expression of the popular will and provide only so much regulation as is necessary to prevent fraud.

2. "Pay state legislators and state officials enough so that able men and women and young men and women, anxious to make their contribution to the political life of their community, may be attracted to the service of the people.

3. "Provide for direct and open primaries in which all the people can choose the candidates for public office and in which all persons desiring to become candidates can file without undue restrictions.

4. "Remove from our political life the disgraceful practice of juggling election districts—both state and national—whereby voters in one community exercise more influence than voters in another, and where representatives of a few hundred thousand people can outvote millions.

5. "Eliminate the outmoded electoral college and provide for direct election of President and Vice-President so that there will be no danger that a minority candidate can gain office by a technicality."

Better Procedures

Two other CIO proposals are aimed at removing undemocratic procedures in Congress. As declared by the Convention they are:

"Abolish the seniority system in Congress by which wisdom is stifled and age takes precedence over ability.

"Abolish the Senate filibuster."

All State and local organizations and International unions have been urged to incorporate the CIO long-term political program in their plans for presentation to the State legislatures in 1950.

Candidates will be asked where they stand on the long-term program and their position will be one of the factors upon which indorsement is based.

Are You A Good CIO Member?

Every good CIO member will carry a receipt for his PAC dollar in 1950. The receipt books will go out to the international union treasurers in the near future.

When your shop steward asks you to help fight the 1950 political action battle don't let your union down. Give a buck to PAC.

Non-union members can send their dollar directly to CIO-PAC, 1346 Connecticut Ave. N. W., Washington, D. C.

He Just Had To Have Books To Read

THE MEN who worked with him often called him "The Professor," and there was some justification for the nickname.

When he wasn't busy organizing he was reading.

"We organizers used to get together in the evening for a friendly poker game or a few hands of rummy," one of his former associates said. "We'd invite The Professor but he'd never join us. He always had his nose in a book."

One of the first places The Professor went when he landed in a town was the public library.

He was kidded quite a bit about his studiousness—but he once got the "last laugh" on those who tossed jibes at him.

THE PROFESSOR was sent to a small town to do a bit of "missionary work" for the CIO and report on the possibility of organizing the local mill.

He soon started hunting for the public library. There wasn't any.

He then learned there was a small college in town, so he headed for the college library.

There he met temporary failure. He wasn't a student and, consequently, wasn't entitled to borrow books.

Being a determined man, The Professor called on a college instructor to see if he couldn't obtain special permission to use the library.

The instructor not only took care of this matter but introduced him to other instructors.

THE PROFESSOR, whose formal education had been somewhat limited, was invited a short time later to speak to the college's political science class.

He did a good job and gained new acquaintances among other members of the faculty.

Through these associations he became acquainted with some of the ministers of the town and in a short time he was active in one of the local churches.

Before long he had gained the friendship of a number of community leaders and was "accepted" by the so-called "upper crust" of the town.

IN ADDITION to being a scholar, The Professor was a handy man with tools and he was a fluent talker.

He spoke the language of the mill because he'd spent much of his life in industrial plants.

As he moved about the town he'd discuss politics and philosophy with the professors, religion with the ministers and pay and working conditions with the mill's employes.

And it was nothing unusual for him to hang a door or do a bit of sawing or planing for a worker who had a repair job on his hands.

And at every opportunity he put in a good word for the CIO.

THE TOWN, long known as anti-union, treated The Professor well—not like a carpetbagger.

Mill workers soon forgot their suspicion of him and began signing union application cards.

Finally the NLRB conducted an election and the workers selected a CIO group as its collective bargaining agent.

This surprised The Professor's superiors but not The Professor.

When he learned about the election victory, one of The Prof's organizer-friends declared:

"After handing out a million leaflets at plant gates I find out that I don't know nothin' about organizing. So long, guys, I'm going down to the library and poke my snoot in some musty old books. I got a tough campaign comin' up!" A. L. S.

HAPPY NEW YEAR?

Truman Economic Advisers:

Nation 'Can Afford' More Social Security

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has been advised by his Council of Economic Advisers that the nation "can afford a considerably expanded social security program without impairing our economic stability or weakening our growth potential."

The report, made public by the White House, was apparently designed to answer Republican charges that the "welfare proposals" advanced by the Fair Deal Administration would bankrupt the country.

The discussion of the cost of social security expansion was included in the council's fourth annual report to the President, which was devoted to a discussion of the relationship between government and business and was couched in terms obviously designed to placate business leaders.

THROUGHOUT THE report the Council placed more emphasis on the objective of stable expansion of the economy than on the more controversial theory of using government expenditures to compensate for private spending. It sounded as if the members of the Council—Leon Keyserling and John D. Clark—were trying to reassure business that they did not place too much faith in "compensatory spending," a theory which some business spokesmen have attacked.

Their report said, for instance, that "compensatory" public action "can help to iron out minor fluctuations of the business cycle and must indeed be used if big ones develop" but added that "complete recovery from a substantial downswing depends primarily upon the revival of private investment."

In line with this de-emphasis on "compensatory" spending, the council proposed to put more of the government programs "on a somewhat more stable and longer-range basis."

Thus, it suggests that public works should be considered not as a means of taking up slack in unemployment but from the standpoint of providing the things the nation needs.

"Similarly," it said, "a decision to expand our educational facilities should be related closely to the priority value which we place upon education, rather than to the usefulness of social construction in taking up a business slack."

IN LINE WITH this theory of promoting stable economic growth, and building our plans accordingly, the Council found an expansion of social security desirable and sound.

Social security is justified on two grounds, it said. First is the ground that the cost of caring for the old, the unemployed and the sick cannot be escaped and can be handled most efficiently through a systematic plan rather than depending on charity or improvisation.

The second justification for social security, the Council said, is that "as an enlightened nation" we are willing to divert some of our output away from those who are producing it to care for those "who are unable to produce through no fault of their own."

On the question of how much we can afford for social security, the council said we should base our judgment on the assumption of a growing economy and how much of an expanded output will be available in the future.

On the broader subject of the relationship between government and business, the council found a better understanding of the problems of government among business leaders. But it said the business system "needs to embrace even more fully—as its enlightened leadership has already done—the goal of continuous maximum production and employment."—(LPA.)

Anti-Eraser?

If CIO Guildsmen are as good as Eugene Farrell, assistant to the publisher of the Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot-News, thinks they should be, no errors will be made in the editorial offices.

He summoned the grievance committee of the Harrisburg Newspaper Guild to tell it that he will dismiss any Guildsman who makes a mistake if he considers it part of a "pattern."

Farrell charged that the editor of the Home Star, weekly publication, has been receiving help from the Guild in his campaign to point out publicly errors in the Patriot-News. The Guild said the charge is ridiculous.

The reason that Farrell summoned the Guild committee was that two make-up errors appeared in Evening News.

Biography of Broun Reviewed

A Newspaper Column Gave Birth To A Union

HEYWOOD BROUN once quoted "a hard bitten Socialist" as saying of Eugene Debs:

"'That old man with the burning eyes actually believes that there can be such a thing as the brotherhood of man. And that's not the funniest part of it. As long as he's around I believe it myself.'"

Dale Kramer in his biography of Broun writes of the particular column from which this quotation was taken.

"And mystically inclined as he was, and relating Christ to the brotherhood of man, Broun could not help looking for brotherhood in his own time and place. Slowly over the years his respect for Eugene V. Debs had grown. Debs' statement that when men were in jail he was not free, affected Broun deeply.

"Upon the death of Debs in the autumn of 1926, Broun wrote: 'The Debs idea will not die. To be sure, it was not his first at all. He carried on an older tradition. It will come to pass. There can be a brotherhood of man.'"

BROUN DID not live to be an old man, but otherwise the description of Debs in the second paragraph of this review fits him to a "T." When he wrote and when he spoke, you did believe in the brotherhood of man, and what is more I am eager and willing to argue that belief stuck through the years to many of the people who knew Broun—even those who knew him casually.

There is always the risk in talking about brotherhood to get overly sentimental, an error which Kramer's book avoids.

IT WOULD be well to pursue the brotherhood idea further, because that probably lead up to one of the most widely discussed phases of Broun's life. What led him to turn from the faith of his people, the Episcopal Church, to Catholicism?

Kramer threw much needed light on this whole matter.

Broun had been mulling over this matter of his church connection when he met Alfred McCosker, publicity director of the Mutual Broadcasting Co. It was at Broun's insistence, Kramer says, that McCosker arranged for the columnist to receive religious instruction from Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen.

Broun also was impressed by the fight being made by Father Tranchese for better housing at San Antonio, Texas, in the face of a hostile community. He continued his talks of Catholicism in St. Louis with Father Edward Dowling, former baseball player, former newspaper man and then editor of a Catholic paper.

Broun voiced the fear that Catholicism would stand in the way of his liberalism. Let Kramer continue the story:

"FATHER DOWLING said that there was not (any danger to his liberal beliefs). 'Don't you realize that you're a little naive, Heywood?' he asked. 'You like to call yourself a radical, but the doctrines of the church are far more radical.'

"He pointed out that one of the top CIO leaders, Philip Murray, was a Catholic. And in the big CIO drives the local priests had generally helped, not hindered.

Kramer goes into the subject quite thoroughly, but perhaps the best answer for Broun's conversion was the one that author quotes him as giving to Carl D. Randau, onetime president of the New York Newspaper Guild:

"'I wanted the brotherhood of man. I have found it now because its full fruition can come only under the Fatherhood of God.'"

Kramer calls his book a biograpical portrait. It is. It is a well-rounded portrait, for this book, which the author first thought of writing 10 years ago, is about as complete a picture of a man as words can give.

He speaks of Broun's humor, his love of life, his drinking habits (as every newspaperman knows, he consumed great quantities of gin but was rarely drunk), his willingness to share his money and his talents for a good cause, the influence on him of his first wife, Ruth Hale, the militant feminist.

BUT THE monument to Broun is the Newspaper Guild, which was "born" in his newspaper column for the World-Telegram.

Kramer tells how Broun came to write it. Broun was on the way from his country place in Connecticut to New York to keep a date with Connie Madison, the widow of the actor Johnny Dooley, whom Broun later was to wed. He had not written his column and was looking over the newspapers for an idea.

He glanced through accounts of the National Recovery Act (Blue Eagle) for news of the Publishers' Code.

The publishers were hoping to get their editorial workers classified as professional, the NRA codes providing that persons paid $35 a week were exempt from the codes, were called professionals and were allowed to work an unimited number of hours a week.

He kept his date, had a few drinks and a salad and asked to be excused for 25 minutes. He went to the club's office, where he hammered out on a borrowed typewrite a column which concluded:

"But the fact that newspaper editors and owners are genial folk should hardly stand in the way of the organization of a newspaper writers' union. There should be one. Beginning at nine o'clock on the morning of October 1, I am going to do the best I can to help get one up. I think I could die happy on the opening day of the general strike if I had the privilege of watching Walter Lippmann heave half a brick through the Tribune window at a non-union operative who had been called in to write the current Today and Tomorrow column on the gold standard."

To newspapersmen throughout the land this was the call to action now, not a couple months away on October 1. They deluged Broun with calls, asking him to do something.

He accepted the challenge. Meetings were held in his rent house apartment and elsewhere.

And a union was born.

—Fred Ross

Heywood Broun by Dale Kramer. Current Books, Inc. A. A. Wyn, publisher.

Warning

Dale Kramer told Heywood Broun more than a decade ago that he was going to write Broun's biography, according to the publisher's blurb on the book's fly leaf.

"Broun warned him," says the blurb, "to proceed cautiously because he was a much more devious man than appeared on the surface."

THIS PHOTO of Heywood Broun probably pictures him as most newspapermen remember him. It was taken at the 1938 CIO convention at Pittsburgh, where he attended as a delegate of the Newspaper Guild, of which he was president.

Heywood Broun Would Have Been Proud of McGinnises

When Guildsman K. Brian McGinnis voted "yes" on a motion to strike the Arkansas Gazette at Little Rock, Dec. 17, a whole galaxy of personal plans came to an abrupt halt.

Mac and his wife Rosalie (a former Gazette staffer) long had wanted a quiet place of their own out in the country. The deal was set—the next day, they were to sign papers on a little log house 10 miles west of Little Rock. Already they had given notice to the owner of the house they rented in town.

And the car. The McGinnises had a new one picked out. They had agreed to let the salesman know the next day whether they would take it.

The strike caught the McGinnises short. Rosalie was at home when the strike vote was taken. And when the vote was counted, Mac drew duty on the initial picket line.

Another Guildsman called Rosalie to relate the news.

Rosalie's response: "Did Brian wear his overshoes?"

—from Strike, publication of the Arkansas Newspaper Guild

"I got sort of fed up with the conventional pattern; so, I sort of let go on this one—like it?"

Plant Mishaps Kill 300 in 3 Months

Industrial accidents took the lives of more than 300 workers during the third quarter of 1949, and caused permanent physical impairment to some 4400 others, the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported last week.

Including the deaths and permanent injuries, nearly 86,000 workers in manufacturing establishments were disabled for two or more days by work injuries.

The most significant increases in accidents, the Bureau reports, were in the manufacture of batteries, canning and preserving, ornamental metal work, beverages, heating equipment, leather tanning, apparel and accessories, and tinware.

The principal decreases were in planing mills, trimmings and fabricated textile products, general machine shops, cutlery and edge tools, sugar refining, and concrete, gypsum and plaster products.

Prof. Malin of Swarthmore Is Named ACLU Director

PROF. PATRICK M. MALIN of Swarthmore College has been elected director of the American Civil Liberties Union, succeeding Roger N. Baldwin, who held the post for 30 years.

Baldwin resigned to specialize in international civil rights.

Malin has been a member of the economic department at Swarthmore College since 1930. He was a vice-director of Intl. Committee on Refugees, American director of the Intl. Migration Service and also served in Federal government posts.

Baldwin will continue to handle the ACLU's international work. He will also act for the International League for the Rights of Man, of which he is board chairman, an UN consultative agency with which the ACLU is affiliated.

Announcement of the election of Malin by the ACLU board was made by Dr. John Haynes Holmes, board chairman. Malin will take over the directorship on Feb. 1 at the close of the academic half-year. Clifford Forester, former staff counsel of the Union, will serve as acting director during January.

Drive Planned To Aid N. Y. Laundry Workers

An intensive drive to organize laundry workers in New York City who are still outside the unions' fold has been announced by Manager Sander Genis of the N. Y. Laundry Workers Joint Board, affiliate of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The drive will start after New Years and will conclude Jan. 31. Genis said that 5 to 7% of the city's laundry workers were still unorganized, most of them employed in small laundries in south Brooklyn. Six Chinese laundries still unorganized will also be included in the drive.

NLRB Says No Vote, No Penalty

IF YOU DON'T have the privilege of using the election machinery of the NLRB, the board can't impose Taft-Hartley penalties on you.

The board so ruled unanimously in dismissing charges of unfair practices brought against Kern County (Cal.) Farm Labor Union, Local 218 of the Natl. Farm Labor Union-AFL, by the giant Di Giorgio Fruit Corp.

In upholding a trial examiner's recommendation, the board said that because agricultural workers are specifically exempted from the Taft-Hartley act's definition of employes a union of agricultural workers cannot be prosecuted under the act. Moreover the board agreed that the union had not committed any unfair acts.

The decision was made in a complicated case involving four unions and a strike against Di Giorgio which has been in progress since October 1947. Di Giorgio has repeatedly refused to bargain.

THE BOARD also dropped charges against Teamsters Local 87, which also is on strike against Di Giorgio, but ruled that Local 87 is covered by the Taft-Hartley act because some of its members work in non-agricultural enterprises. Wine Workers Local 45 and Teamsters Local 848, were found to have engaged in illegal activities in support of the strike.

Background of the decision reflects no credit on Di Giorgio or the labor board's general counsel, Robert N. Denham. Originally the Farm Union and Local 87 attempted to bring charges of refusal to bargain against the company and to obtain an NLRB election among 1500 Di Giorgio workers. The board said it had no authority to conduct a poll of agricultural workers.

Denham had no such compunctions, however. After the unions struck, Di Giorgio complained they were indulging in unfair practices. Denham obtained an injunction in the summer of 1948. The trial examiner found substantially against Denham and the case went to the board.

On appeal from the trial examiner's report, a Di Giorgio attorney in oral argument before the labor board last Nov. 21 confessed when asked that his client wanted to have his cake and eat it too.

THE AFL Typographical Union won a round in its bare-knuckles fight with the Taft-Hartley act when the NLRB dismissed charges of unfair practice brought against the union's Local 915 by the Nassau-Review Star of Rockville Center, L. I.

However, the union lost a round the same day when the board ruled that its Baltimore local violated the act by insisting upon a closed shop in bargaining with the Baltimore Graphic Arts League, spokesman for commercial printers.

In the Long Island case, the board, reversing the finding of a trial examiner, declared a one-year, oral agreement calling for the closed shop was valid because it was reached just before the Taft-Hartley measure went into effect in August 1947—(LPA)

A NEW AND IMPROVED CONTRACT has been negotiated by the CIO United Transport Service Employes for dining car workers on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. L. to r., Pres. John L. Owens of UTSE Local 311; UTSE Natl. Pres. Willard S. Townsend; Harold D. Snell, assistant to Townsend; Edward T. Bell, the union's general chairman on the Burlington; W. E. Angier, Burlington staff officer of labor relations; J. E. Wolfe, assistant vice president of the railroad, and P. M. Scott, dining car superintendent. The new contract eliminated a unilateral wage cutting clause, improved the deadhead rule grievance procedure. The old contract had been negotiated by the AFL Hotel and Restaurant Employes.

AMA Opposes Disability Insurance, Fears Patient Would Want to Stay Ill

COMING OUT flatly against the disability insurance provision of the Administration's social security program, the American Medical Association contends disability insurance would "adversely affect the patient's desire for recovery."

An editorial in the current issue of the AMA journal charges that a federal disability program "would represent another step toward nationalization of medical care and socialization of the practice of medicine." This is the largest language it uses in attacking President Truman's health insurance program.

"If enacted," the editorial says, "the bill would encourage further liberalizations which are not difficult to visualize; for example, payment of benefits to dependents of disabled persons, substitution of temporary for permanent disability benefits and eventually full cash sickness and disability provisions. If such a plan were followed, a total national compulsory sickness taxation program for all practical purposes would be in effect."

THE AMA says aid to disabled needy should be administered on a local level, and not through a "system of compulsory federal taxation or control."

Insurance for workers permanently and totally disabled is the most important new feature of the Administration's bill, passed by the House last session, for modernizing the social security laws.

While far more conservative than the program recommended by the Social Security Board, it would permit workers who are permanently and totally disabled to get the same kind of insurance benefits that aged workers get. The conservative House Ways and Means Committee found that total disability was just as deserving of insurance as old age.

Health Co-op Wins Court Decisions In Bout With AMA Affiliate

Second of the current court battles to break the hold of the American Medical Association over physicians' job rights is now under way in Seattle, Wash. Pretrial hearings of the suit by Group Health Cooperative of Puget Sound against the local medical association have ended, with decisions on nearly every point favoring the co-op.

Group Health, formed four years ago, now serves more than 20,000 member-patients, has the services of 20 physicians under contract, and owns a hospital whose facilities have been approved by the AMA.

The co-op charged the local medical society threatened to expell any doctor who furnished prepaid medical care in competition with its own and that the local hospital had adopted a rule barring all doctors who do not belong to the society.

Superior Court Judge Meakin ruled that Group Health has a right to relief from the society's practices if they are as pictured by the co-op. He recommended prompt hearing of the suit.

Organizationally Speaking

The writer attended a conference held at the CIO Regional Office, Chicago, Ill., last week. Various CIO groups, including the new IUE-CIO participated, and CIO Regional Directors from the adjoining areas also attended. The IUE-CIO situation was discussed and plans laid to bring to a successful conclusion the campaign for the new union. Full support was pledged to the IUE by all organizations present.

Nineteen hundred and forty-nine has been a year of achievement. Three hundred and twenty thousand telephone workers were brought into the CIO fold. The Steelworkers strike ended in victory, bringing pension, security, and health benefits. A new world trade union movement, the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, was established. The CIO Convention in Cleveland acted decisively, emphasizing a determination to maintain a free trade union movement unhampered by henchmen of any groups and taking steps to see that this determination is adhered to.

On 1950—the half century mark—I wish you all the happiest New Year. If we all work together, great achievements are in store for us in the coming year and the years to come.

Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler reports that in a representation election held at the Fruehauf Trailer Co., Los Angeles, the UAW-CIO was victorious by a vote of 182 to 34 over the AFL. UAW-CIO Reg. Dir. Cy O'Halloran was in charge of the campaign.

Field Rep. T. D. du Cuennois reports that in a representation election held at the Oscar Nebal Hosiery Co., Staunton, Va., the TWUA-CIO was victorious by a close vote of TWUA 92, no union 91. In an election held at the Greenstone Co., Lynchburg, Va., the workers voted 23 to 13 in favor of the USA-CIO.

Reg. Dir. Fullerton Fulton reports that UE Local 1145 held a membership meeting in the Minneapolis Armory, Minneapolis, Minn., and voted unanimously to affiliate with the IUE-CIO and was immediately granted a charter. This local covers some 5000 people.

Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson reports that in a representation election held at the Chandler Division of the Carcalo Manufacturing Co., Buffalo, N. Y., Local 233, CIO Rubber Workers was victorious over the AFL Upholsterers Union by a vote of 76 to 19. Gordon L. McMahon, URW-CIO field representative, was in charge of the campaign.

N. J. CIO Blasts 7c Fare Rule

THOSE EXTRA pennies the customers have been paying to hang on a strap or hold a seat on a bus for the last 17 months have "unjustly and unreasonably enriched Public Service Corp." by millions of dollars.

That comment was made by Pres. Carl Holderman of the New Jersey State CIO in releasing the results of a CIO examination of the Public Utility Commission order upholding the 7c basic bus and trolley fare.

Holderman, who has appealed to Governor Driscoll to order Attorney General Parsons to seek a court review of the PUC order, said the examination disclosed "10 interesting facts," which included:

The 7c fare was originally requested by Public Service solely to meet increased wage costs amounting to $2,989,626. Public Service said it would have total annual operating revenues of $49,852,779, under the 7c fare, to cover the increased wage cost. In the 12-month period ending June 30, 1949, 12 months' actual operation under the 7c fare yielded $55,251,334—$5,398,555 above Public Service's own estimate of its required additional revenue.

In other words, to meet a wage increase amounting to about 10% of operating costs Public Service was given a 40% fare increase to 7c.

At the reopening of the case, when it was shown that Public Service's income was far in excess of its needs to meet the wage increase, the company, over the objections of counsel for the state and many municipalities, was permitted by the PUC to shift its course in mid-stream and argue the question of adequacy of its rate of return.

Social Security Tax Increased

Social security taxes, from which old-age and survivors insurance benefits are paid, increased from 1% to 1½% for both employer and employee, effective Jan. 1. The new rate means that 1½c (instead of 1c) is now deducted from your pay for each dollar (up to $3,000 a year) which you receive in wages.

This tax increase was scheduled under the present social security law. It does not mean an increase in the rate of benefits which are now being paid under the old-age and survivors insurance program.

Congress has not as yet taken final action on a pending bill which would increase benefit rates and bring more workers under the social insurance protection of the old-age and survivors insurance program. This bill, which has been passed by the House of Representatives, now awaits action by the Senate.

Civil Rights Asked At D. C. Exposition

The District of Columbia CIO Council has urged that the Sesquicentennial in Washington in 1950 be the occasion for efforts to advance the cause of civil rights, and that the exposition itself be a perfect example of civil rights for all who visit it.

Experts Give Congress Plan To KO Poverty

By NATHAN ROBERTSON
For Labor Press Association

TWO WEEKS of hearings have given Congress a program based on a remarkable unanimity of opinion from experts on what needs to be done to raise the incomes of 10 million American families now forced to live on less than $2000 a year.

Rarely has Congress faced a tougher or bigger problem. Yet rarely has there been so much agreement on how to handle a major national problem.

More than 30 experts, from within and outside the government, including economists, social workers, spokesmen for farm and labor groups, educators, and religious leaders appeared before the Joint Congressional Economic Subcommittee headed by Senator John Sparkman (D, Ala.), to offer suggestions. Most of them agreed on what needs to be done.

The subcommittee is now preparing a report for the full committee. If it follows the suggestions of the experts, the committee will recommend enactment of the whole Fair Deal program submitted by President Truman, plus other measures going beyond what the President has asked. Virtually everything that labor and liberal groups have been fighting for would be approved by Congress.

Heading the recommendations from almost every witness was the maintenance of lasting full employment. It was generally agreed that without that as a starting point little could be done to improve the lot of the millions of families and individuals now existing in poverty or near poverty.

But there was almost as complete agreement on a whole program of positive legislative proposals. Here is a summary:

Social Security—Almost every witness backed pending proposals to modernize and liberalize the social security laws so they would cover more of the population and provide more adequate benefits for the aged and handicapped. Some witnesses went far beyond pending proposals, urging nationalization of the unemployment insurance law and insurance for temporarily disabled workers, neither of which is provided in the bill which passed the House last session.

Minimum Wage—Many proposed a higher minimum wage than the 75c fixed by Congress last session, and all who discussed the subject urged expansion of the coverage through both federal and state legislation.

Health—Almost every witness stressed the necessity for federal action in the field of health, the American Medical Association to the contrary. Many specifically urged enactment of the proposed national health insurance bill. Others talked in more general terms of the need for federal action, stressing the part bad health plays in cutting down family incomes.

Education—Almost every witness stressed the importance of better educational facilities for American youth and recommended federal action to provide them. The federal aid-to-education bill now pending in the House was repeatedly recommended, along with a whole series of other proposals including scholarships, better vocational training, and expanded appropriations for school construction and teachers' salaries.

Regional Development—Witnesses stressed the problem areas where most of the inhabitants are in the low-income category because of regional or area problems. The experience of TVA was frequently cited as the pattern for solving such regional problems.

Rehabilitation of the Disabled—Expansion of current rehabilitation programs was generally recommended. Most of the witnesses stressed that it is cheaper to rehabilitate the disabled than to support them as invalids.

Low-Income Farmers—Witnesses generally agreed on expansion of help to low-income farmers through the Farm Home Corporation program, extension of social security and the wage-hour law to farmers, and a broad program to help migrant farm workers.

Fair Employment Practices—Many of the witnesses stressed the special handicaps faced by minority groups in getting jobs and recommended enactment of the FEPC legislation. This, however, faced strong opposition from Chairman Sparkman.

There was little discussion of the cost of these programs but most witnesses stressed the idea that in the long run it would be cheaper to enact these measures than to do without them. The cost of poverty to communities and the nation was heavily emphasized. Many of the proposals were offered as good investments, or as more economical ways of handling the problem than the way we handle it now.

The program outlined by the witnesses in these hearings will be enacted sooner or later. The sooner the better for the country—the rich as well as the poor.

Celler May Subpoena Report Of FTC On Du Pont Empire

Rep. Emanuel Celler (D. N. Y.), chairman of the House Monopoly Investigating Committee, is reported to be preparing to use his subpoena power for the first time—to get a report prepared by the Federal Trade Commission on the structure of the DuPont empire.

The report, prepared months ago by the staff of the FTC, has been kept under cover on the grounds that it would disclose data given the commission by the DuPont company confidentially. But members of the Commission staff have felt this was only a pretext—because the operations of DuPont are well enough known so that no real secrets are involved.

Those who have seen the report say it is a damaging indictment of the way the DuPont chemical empire has operated to crush competition. The DuPont chemical company is the biggest in the country. It also controls General Motors, one of the nation's biggest industrial corporations, and U. S. Rubber, another of the tremendous companies operating in the industrial field. The Justice Department already has brought suit to force dissolution of the DuPont control of GM and U. S. Rubber.

Wood Union Wins Ontario Contract

The first major settlement in the Ontario furniture industry covering 1950 has been won by the CIO Woodworkers.

IWA Eastern Canadian Dir. Landon Ladd said agreement had been reached between the union and Knetchel's Ltd. of Hanover after six months' negotiations.

The settlement includes a 7c-an-hour increase, one week's extra pay in lieu of retroactive pay to Aug. 14, 1949, and a group insurance plan, the cost of which will be shared equally by company and union.

The agreement also provided for a union shop and check-off of union dues in addition to six paid holidays and two weeks vacation with pay after five years of service.

Education Parley

A discussion of the National Health Bill will be led by George Guernsey, CIO Associate Education Director, at the Midwest Workers Education Conference in Milwaukee, Wis., the week-end of Jan. 21-22. The conference is sponsored by the American Labor Education Service.

Victor Reuther, United Auto Workers education director, will be chairman of a discussion on unsolved problems in social security, scheduled for the closing session.

Murray Asks Heavy Vote For Congress

CIO PRES. Philip Murray, in his New Year's statement called for enactment of "the remaining portions of the New Deal program" and for participation by all the people in the 1950 congressional elections.

"We in the United States can make 1950 'just another year' or we can make it a real milestone in our march of progress," Murray said.

"It is my hope at the beginning of the New Year that we will do the latter.

"Much more than our own domestic welfare is at stake—because of the position of world leadership our nation has assumed since the end of the war.

"This leadership—unless we are to forfeit it—requires that we set outstanding examples in democracy and economic advancement. It requires that we set examples which those in other lands are willing to follow. It requires that we put our own house in order.

"TO ME THIS means that we must take concrete action during the year to raise the standard of living of all our people, but particularly those in the low-income brackets.

"It also means that we must expand and make more secure those civil rights which are the foundation of our democracy.

"The CIO intends to work hard during 1950 to help achieve these two things.

"We intend to attack—frequently and hard—the lackadaisical attitude of some groups that unemployment and wasteful use of our national resources must continue. We will work for full employment and wise utilization of all our resources.

"We will continue, with renewed vigor, our fight to wipe out discrimination based on race, creed and color.

"WE WILL continue our campaign to get rid of the Taft-Hartley Act and other laws which place unfair restrictions on labor unions and limits the economic freedom of millions of workers.

"We intend to continue our fight for a more equitable distribution of the fruits of our vast production machine.

"Our program, we are convinced, is designed to make life better for the bulk of our population—not just for those who belong to the CIO.

"It is because of this that we urge Congress to enact without delay the remaining portions of the Fair Deal Program.

"And we also urge that all the people get prepared to exercise their full voting strength at the polls during the elections next fall. We must have a Congress responsive to the will of the majority of the people—a Congress that will work earnestly for better conditions for all our people."

FTC Aide Flays Steel Price Plan

THE STEEL industry's effort to compromise with the Federal Trade Commission on price fixing charges has received a serious setback. Corwin D. Edwards, director of the FTC's Bureau of Industrial Economics, has denounced the industry's plan in such strong language that it probably will be rejected by the commission.

Critics of monopoly, who have been watching the steel industry's effort to work out a deal with the commission, were elated at Edwards' statement, filed with the commission Dec. 27, because Edwards has great influence with most of the members of the body.

The FTC two years ago charged the steel industry with using the basing point pricing system to fix prices. Similar charges against other industries have since been upheld by the Supreme Court, and so the industry has been negotiating with the commission for a consent decree settlement.

MEANWHILE, in Congress, the big industries have been trying to get legislation reversing the Supreme Court action. A bill of this kind passed both Houses last year, but got tangled up in controversy between the two houses. It is due to come up again in January.

All-Out Steel Price Probe Under Way

By DONALD WOODS
Labor Press Associates

A THOROUGH investigation of price increases by the steel industry since the war—showing how monopoly operates under the price leadership of the giant U. S. Steel Co.—has been instituted by the Celler Monopoly Investigating Committee of the House.

The investigation, inspired by the recent $4-a-ton increase which the industry placed in effect after U. S. Steel led the way, is expected to provide a case history of monopoly in operation under modern industrial "oligopolies," in which industries are not controlled by single companies but by groups of big companies.

If the investigation turns out the way it is expected to do, it may prove to be the most important monopoly inquiry for many years. The steel industry is like many other heavy industries today—an industry in which several big companies, supposedly competing, always follow the price leadership of one company, in this case U. S. Steel.

SPOKESMEN FOR industry call this competition. Critics of monopoly contend it is just the reverse—a monopoly, or rather an "oligopoly" where prices and production are controlled by the industry, rather than by the market place.

If this can be proven in steel, it will be proved for many other industries such as electrical equipment, chemicals, cement, and perhaps even automobiles, supposedly the most competitive of America's big industries.

The facts in the case are clear. There have been several major price increases since the war.

Since January 1945, steel prices have been increased about $33.50 per ton in base prices alone, not counting the extra increases, which virtually all purchasers of steel pay. The last increase occurred last month when steel prices went up an average of $4 a ton.

In each case U. S. Steel has set the pace and the other big companies have fallen into line. Critics of the industry contend that if there were competition in the industry the prices would not always follow so closely the pattern set by U. S. Steel. They contend the evidence proves absence of competition.

In the latest increase, for example, the cost of pensions which is used as the excuse for the price increase is only a fraction of the cost added to prices charged consumers. Yet all the big companies went up just as high as U. S. Steel.

If the case can be proved against the steel industry it will give tremendous impetus to the movement already in Congress to do something about bigness in business.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION
of the
CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00
A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 9, 1950 82 No. 2

HST Tells Congress:

THE STATE of the union is good but it would be better if Congress enacted the remainder of the Fair Deal program.

That's what President Truman told the 81st Congress when it opened its second session. Then he outlined again —as he had done at the first session— the things he would like to have Congress do.

He asked for repeal of Taft-Hartley, continuation of rent control, enactment of a middle-income housing law, expansion of social security, development of public power, passage of civil rights legislation, continuation of ECA, federal aid to education and an improved farm income program.

The President is shown above and at left as he delivered his state of the union message. The close-up shows him pointing his finger at Republican members as he blamed the GOP-controlled 80th Congress for the present budget deficit.

(For additional details, see Pages 6 and 7.)

Steinberg Charges

FTA Followed Every Twist In CP Line

THE LEADERSHIP of the Food Tobacco & Agricultural Workers was accused last week of having followed Communist policies through every zig and zag of the party line during the past 10 years.

The charge against the FTA leadership was made by William Steinberg, head of the American Radio Association. He accused FTA leaders of having "adopted the policies of the Communist Party as its own without regard either to the CIO or to the genuine interests of trade unions."

Steinberg, who filed charges of Communist domination against 10 unions at the CIO Executive Board meeting in Cleveland in November, amplified his complaint against the FTA leadership with a 10-page statement read to a special CIO hearing committee.

The hearing was held behind the closed doors of the Board room at CIO headquarters in Washington.

Sitting as members of the committee named by Pres. Murray were Pres. Jacob Potofsky of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, chairman; Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey of the Auto Workers; and Pres. Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union.

Hearings on the United Public Workers were scheduled for Jan. 9, and on the Mine Mill & Smelter Workers for Jan. 18—both at CIO headquarters in Washington. The CIO Executive Board is tentatively scheduled to meet on Feb. 14—and may act on recommendations submitted by the hearing panels.

ARA Pres. Steinberg, in his testimony, made clear that neither he nor the CIO wishes to impose "political uniformity" on CIO members or unions—a charge frequently made by both the Daily Worker, Communist organ, and by some left-wing union spokesmen.

STEINBERG made public his testimony after he had concluded his appearance at the closed meeting.

"As Phil Murray has said," Steinberg declared, "There is room enough in the CIO for many differences of opinion.

"The mere fact that a member of a trade union, or an officer of a trade union, or the union itself, differs from the CIO in an honest judgment as to what proper trade union policy should be, is not a basis upon which any action, I believe, should be taken or can be taken under the provisions of the CIO Constitution," he added.

But it's a "different matter," the ARA president asserted, in the case of "slavish adherence to the doctrine of a financial organization which believes in trade unions, if it believes in them at all, only as instruments of its plan for world conquest."

Steinberg recalled that Donald Henderson—formerly FTA president, now its director of administration—"has been the guiding spirit of this union from its inception."

On Dec. 22, 1941, the FTA News carried this statement by Henderson: "It is a matter of public record that I have denied affiliation to the Communist Party many times." But on Sept. 29, 1949, the same paper carried Henderson's statement that he had resigned from the Communist Party.

THE CIO HEARING on FTA took place in a blizzard of law suits filed by FTA and other left wing unions.

CIO members who, after the Cleveland convention and executive board meeting, had expected an "in the family" investigation of the charges against the unions, guessed wrong about the tactics of many of the left-wing union leaders.

Here's the tally sheet on law suits, at the time of this writing:

1. UOPWA Lawsuit No. 1: Plea for injunction to forbid hearings by the CIO committee on charges against the Office Union. Filed in Philadelphia U. S. Court; denied on grounds that the Philadelphia court had no jurisdiction.

2. UOPWA Lawsuit No. 2: Nearly a carbon copy of the Philadelphia suit; asks court to enjoin CIO from proceeding further with case against the union. Filed in U. S. court in Washington, D. C.; hearings on the request for injunction were set for Jan. 10.

3. UOPWA Lawsuit No. 3: Practically identical with Lawsuit No. 2. Filed in U. S. court in New York City; hearings set for Jan. 9.

4. United Public Workers Lawsuit No. 1: Asked for injunction against hearings or other further action. Filed in Philadelphia early in December; presumably dead, on grounds that that court has no jurisdiction.

5. FTA Lawsuit No. 1: Plea for injunction to restrain CIO from holding hearings or taking further action against FTA; to declare invalid changes in CIO constitution dealing with Communist issue, as adopted at Cleveland convention; and to protect FTA's alleged "property interest" in CIO. Filed Jan. 3 at U. S. court in New York; judge will decide by Feb. 1 whether to take further action.

6. CIO Lawsuit No. 1: Damage suit against UOPWA, seeking to collect $18,700 for which union has signed promissory notes to the CIO.

UAW Watchman Who Found Bomb Kidnapped

George William Thomas, 58, the night watchman who found the Christmas-package bomb at the CIO Auto Workers' headquarters in Detroit was kidnapped early on Jan. 6 and then dumped in a snow bank, still bound and gagged.

Thomas said he was kidnapped by two men outside a downtown hotel. "They drove me all over town," he said.

Thomas said he had quit his job Dec. 24 because he was afraid to work at UAW headquarters. He added that he was unable to identify his abductors.

Left Loses Bridges' Home Local

THE "HOME" local of Pres. Harry Bridges of the CIO Longshoremen's Union now has a new set of officers—all pledged to anti-communist policies.

Phil Sandin, who was elected president of the group—ILWA Local 10 at San Francisco—headed a slate which had pledged:

"I am not a member of the Communist Party or any other group seeking to dictate the policies of Local 10."

The Sandin slate won all of the major offices and took 54 out of the 65 contested positions listed on the lengthy ballot.

Sandin received 2302 votes to 2024 for Henry Schmidt, a co-defendent with Bridges in the current perjury-conspiracy trial at San Francisco.

Bridges and his international union now faces CIO charges of "Communist domination."

N. J. CIO Asks More Benefits

Highlighted by a call for a $39 maximum weekly payment for a married man with two children in all state benefit programs, the New Jersey State CIO disclosed it would seek 19 amendments this year to New Jersey's unemployment, temporary disability and workmen's compensation laws.

Harry Kranz, State CIO legislative director, said the CIO's 30-man legislative committee had decided to seek an increase in UCC, TDI and workmen's compensation benefits to a maximum of $30 weekly, plus $3 per dependent up to three dependents.

Maximum UCC and TDI benefits are now $22 weekly, while workmen's compensation weekly payments are $25 in New Jersey.

Repeal of a number of provisions of the present unemployment compensation (UCC) law will be sought by CIO, Kranz said. These include elimination of the worker contribution; of the one-week waiting period for benefits; of the "active search for work" requirement; and of the requirement that a worker must earn at least 30 times his weekly benefit amount to be eligible for benefits.

THE CIO also called for extension of UCC coverage to include firms employing one or more workers; decentralization of the Trenton office so that benefit determinations are made in local offices; and payment of benefits immediately in lock-outs and after four weeks in strikes.

With GE Next On List

IUE-UE Dispute Aired At 4 NLRB Hearings

THE dispute between IUE-CIO and the UE got an airing during the past few weeks as NLRB fact-finding boards heard testimony regarding the issues involving four different companies of the electrical industry.

The issue of bargaining representation in the five locals of General Motors' electrical division came up before NLRB Hearing Officer David Sachs in Dayton. Starting just before Christmas, the hearings were continued the following week for a total of five days.

Jan. 11 was set as the last date for filing briefs and a decision on whether to hold elections is expected from the Board late this month.

General Electric hearings, involving 99 bargaining units, will begin in New York City on Jan. 17.

HEARINGS involving the Wurlitzer plant in Buffalo took three days, but the prize-winner in time so far is the Sperry-Gyroscope case in New York. The hearing started Dec. 22 and was still going on late last week.

UE lawyers at the Sperry-Gyroscope hearings claimed that CIO's expuslion of UE was illegal and that, therefore, UE is still a member of CIO. As the Sperry lawyer put it, UE is reaching a new high of "obscurantism, obfuscation and obstruction."

IUE officials charged that the UE was "doing everything possible to make the hearings last as long as possible."

As an example they cited the case of UE Attorney Frank Scheiner asking Paul Jennings, president of the IUE local at Sperry. "Have you ever heard of John L. Lewis?"

After an objection from Irving Abramson, attorney for IUE, on the grounds of irrelevancy was sustained, Scheiner asked Jennings,, "Have you ever heard of Philip Murray?" The process was repeated.

Westinghouse hearings began Dec. 28 in Pittsburgh before NLRB Rep. H. Raymond Cluster. These sessions, which will cover the scores of Westinghouse locals, are expected to continue for about three weeks.

An unexpected twist occurred Jan. 3 when UE Pres. Albert Fitzgerald sent an irate telegram to NLRB Chairman Paul Herzog demanding that consent elections be held simultaneously in the three big companies—GE, GM and Westinghouse.

IUE Chairman James B. Carey replied in a letter to the Board that he would be happy to take part in discussions on consent elections provided they were entered into in good faith.

"WE DESIRE that elections among the employes of these companies be held at the earliest possible dates," Carey wrote.

". . . It appears to us that elections should be held, on the Board's order, no later than Feb. 15th in General Motors, and shortly thereafter in the Westinghouse and General Electric cases. Consent elections, therefore, should be held no later than Feb. 1 in General Motors, Feb. 6 in Westinghouse, and Feb. 10 in General Electric."

Carey declared that "this proposal to the Board by UE comes after a long period in which the expelled CIO affiliate has used every conceivable means of delaying collective bargaining votes in GE, GM and Westinghouse.

"UE has used legal harassment in the form of injunctions against locals . . . sought a permanent injunction against the NLRB holding hearings.

"Once the hearings started, UE employed every possible method of disrupting the proceedings, making countless dilatory objections.

"In the face of all this history, UE should not be permitted to use a phony consent election appeal to further delay the determination of a collective bargaining agency by the workers in this industry."

Bed Board Company To Modify Claims

Hereafter the makers of "Rest-Well Bed Board" and "Orthopedic Bed Board" are not going to claim in advertisements that their product:

Makes one healthy or invigorated, or has any beneficial effect for anemia or diseases of the kidneys or other organs; that it produces natural sleep or corrects or prevents deformities of the body.

The owners of the business, at the insistence of the Federal Trade Commission, will stop these practices.

FTC Has No Faith In 'Miracle'—Paints

If there are any "miracle" paints on the market the Federal Trade Commission doesn't believe it.

The Commission has issued a cease and desist order against three firms accused of misrepresenting so-called "plastic" paints.

The three companies, Cello-Plastics, Pittsburgh, Pa., Cello-Nu Products, Philadelphia, Pa., and Cello-Nu Products, Chicago, Ill., are forbidden to represent any of their products as "miracle" paints or to infer that they differ substantially in composition from any other good quality paint on the market.

One of the cited owners, Bertram Unger of Pittsburgh, has also been directed to stop using the term "Chemical Company" in his trade name.

Experts Says:

Proposal Would Cut Rents, Home Interest Sharply

By D. ROCKWELL CLARK

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has endoresd a proposal to remedy the desperate housing situation of millions of "middle-income" families, including most members of organized labor, by establishing a loan program to finance large-scale cooperative and other non-profit housing both for sale and for rental.

The proposal, repeatedly urged on Congress by CIO and AFL, calls for the establishment of a National Mortgage Corporation for Housing Cooperatives, empowered to sell $2 billion worth of bonds on the private investment market within the next two years. The proceeds would be used to make loans to genuine cooperatives and non-profit trusts for the construction of middle-income dwellings.

Bona-fide non-profit trusts and cooperatives would be able to borrow 100% of construction cost, with up to 60 years in which to repay the Corporation and a low annual interest rate of approximately 2½%.

In addition, technical aid and advice on planning and design would be available, and applicants also would be able, on approval of the Corporation, to borrow up to 3% of the estimated total construction cost in order to pay architects, and meet other necessary preliminary costs.

The total out-of-pocket expense to the taxpayer would be the $100 million requested to set up the Corporation.

THE PROPOSAL is staggering in its potential effect on the present-day housing market, which has virtually left the middle-income group out in the cold. It removes the real estate speculator from the picture, and the interest rates and amortization period are so favorable that, in the opinion of qualified experts, families now paying around $90 a month, either in mortgage and tax payments or in rentals, would, if the program goes through, be able to secure identical or better accommodations for between $45 and $60 a month.

Both House and Senate Banking Committees have been asked to hold immediate hearings on the proposition, and fast action is expected. It is possible that the proposal will come to a vote within a month.

The program is designed to meet the objections of those who do not want to see the government engaged in large-scale direct outlays for housing, since the required capital would be raised on the private investment market through sale of securities carrying a 100% government guarantee.

It has powerful congressional support, and with strong White House backing its chances for approval this session are improved. The real estate lobby is expected to train its biggest guns on the program, and the cry of "socialism" will again be raised.

THE IDEA for federal support and supervision of privately-financed loans for cooperative housing has been under study for a long time, and has been gaining increasing favor as interested legislators have examined the experiences of large-scale cooperative building ventures in other countries and of "pilot" cooperatives here, including several started by CIO locals.

(In Sweden, under a similar program, the construction industry is flourishing and approximately 70% of Swedish homes are cooperative-owned.)

CIO was among the first to advocate such an arrangement. At both 1948 and 1949 conventions, strong resolutions were passed calling for direct federal support of building cooperatives. The 1949 resolution said:

"Sixty per cent of America's families whose incomes fall between $2500 and $5000 a year are the forgotten people in terms of basic housing needs." It then asked Congress to fix a goal of 2 million new homes a year, called on cities and states to supplement the federal program, and asked that Congress "adopt the REA principle for cooperative housing providing direct government loans at low rates of interest to be amortized over the life period of the house as provided in the Sparkman bill, S. 2246."

The Sparkman bill, introduced by Senator John Sparkman (D. Ala.), and presently on the Senate calendar awaiting action, provides direct federal loans to co-ops and non-profit trusts, as asked in the CIO resolution, but the establishment of the proposed National Mortgage Corporation with its private financing feature is regarded as preferable although the CIO continues to support the Sparkman measure.

The housing law passed in 1949 calls for construction of 810,000 low-income units of public housing within six years, for slum clearance, and for the beginnings of a farm building program, and was strongly supported and warmly received in labor circles.

The new proposal, however, hits even nearer home, since most trade union members make too much money to be eligible for the publicly-financed housing provided in the 1949 bill. Announcement that the new "co-op" bill has been introduced is expected to start a flurry of activity in labor circles, aimed at forming building cooperatives and drawing up plans and blueprints.

The new proposal emerged in its present form from the Conference on Middle Income and Cooperative Housing, held in Washington Dec. 16 under the auspices of the Cooperative League and attended by representatives of CIO and AFL.

Pay Cutting Drive Halted By TWUA

Betsy Ross, so history tells it, made the first American flag to stand as a symbol in the fight of the colonists against the tyranny and oppression of England.

Members of the CIO Textile Workers who work at the Betsy Ross Throwing Co. in Blakely, Pa., recently struck a blow against exploitation when they walked out of the plant and thereby halted a wage-cutting drive in the area.

The strike was called off when the company agreed to recognize TWUA and to restore a 15c an hour wage cut imposed last April. It also agreed to a union shop and a six-month wage reopening clause.

REA To Issue Loans For Rural Telephones

The big job of getting adequate telephone service into farm homes is moving forward, says the Co-operative News Service.

The Rural Electrification Administration, which was authorized by Congress to lend $25 million for the first year to get new and improved service extended, has issued application forms for the use of those seeking loans.

Congress instructed the REA to get assurance in making loans that "service to be furnished or improved . . . be made available to the widest practical number of rural users."

75c Is Too Much To Pay—WU

The giant Western Union Telegraph monopoly is trying to wriggle out of the 75c minimum requirement made into law by the last session of Congress.

In a hearing before the Labor Dept.'s Wage and Hour Division last week, WU complained that it couldn't possibly pay its messenger boys all that money.

WU officials who testified at the hearing asked that the minimum remain at the present 65c level. A 10c increase they claimed, would cost them more than $1 million, force them to lay off 854 messengers, and substitute telephone service and other mechanized ways of cutting down on messenger service.

Irving Levy, CIO Auto Workers counsel, who represented the National CIO at the hearings, accused WU of trying to get a subsidy from underprivileged kids. He termed their claims an empty threat, pointing out that they had made similar claims in 1938 and again several years later, when they asked for exemption from the minimum rate. They were turned down both times, and their dire predictions fell flat.

Representatives from the AFL Commerical Telegraphers Union and the CIO American Communications Assn., also attended the hearings. Several members of the ACA, union representative for WU messengers in New York City, testified that their take-home pay is only $23 a week and that they have to supply their own uniforms and pay for their own bicycle repairs. They are docked if a message takes longer to deliver than the office manager thinks it should, they said.

Dewey Would Cut U. S. Aid To States

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York is plugging for a surrender of taxing power by the Federal Government to the States of about one billion dollars so that Federal aid to the States could be cut by that much.

The net result of the change would be to make the States more independent of the Federal government, so that the wealthier states such as New York would run their own welfare programs. Only the poorer states would continue to get federal grants and therefore be subject to minimum standards fixed by the Federal government.

This would result in much greater variability in welfare programs among the States, and in most cases much lower standards, because the State legislatures are notoriously slow in social legislation.

Union Takes Off-Season Cut In Pay

AN 11% off-season wage cut has been agreed to be the CIO Fur and Leather Workers for its 12,000 members in New York City.

The cut for slack seasons dates back 30 years but was abandoned during the war.

"The agreement provides for a wage differential during the off season between Jan. 1 and June 16," said Dr. Louis M. Loeb, chairman of the fur industry's conference committee.

"The association (representing employers) and union representatives have agreed that the off-season differential shall be 11%, which will be restored on June 16, 1950, in accordance with the terms of the agreement of May 1948."

The union said the "two-wage system" went into effect 30 years ago and that prior to the union's 1948 strike the industry had the "right to fire any worker who refused to accept the differential imposed by the employer."

After the strike, the union said, it was agreed that the off-season rate would be determined jointly by the union and association.

3 Firms Accused Of Monopoly

A conspiracy to monopolize the manufacture and sale of seamless hosiery machinery and unlawfully restraining domestic and foreign commerce in such machinery is charged in a civil anti-trust suit filed in New York City by the government against Scott & Williams, Inc., Laconia, N. H., its president, and two leading British manufacturers.

The suit charges the Laconia firm acquired the assets of an important competitor, dismantled the machinery, acquired and suppressed inventions, misused patents to coerce competitors and eliminate competition, and entered into cartel agreements with the two British firms for allocation of world markets.

Hawaiian Sugar Workers' Wages Are Tied To Market

About 20,000 Hawaiian sugar workers, members of the left-wing CIO Longshoremen's union, had better be good with figures arithmetic that is—if they want to be able to calculate their wage correctly—in the future.

As a result of a recent 20-month contract signed by the union with the Hawaiian sugar industry, the wages they get will be tied to and vary with prices on the New York sugar market.

The wage-price formula, first proposed by employers, sets an 80c floor on wages—5c more than the industry wanted. If raw sugar prices sag on the fluctuating New York market wages will go down at the same rate until the 80c floor is reached.

On the other hand, if raw sugar prices rise, wages will go up from the present 83c-per-hour level. The rate of rise or fall has been calculated to be 1½c-an-hour for each $2 a ton change in raw sugar price.

The Hawaiian sugar locals of ILWU accepted the plan on the advice of Pres. Harry Bridges.

"You said you have 200 applicants for that job already?—Then how about hiring me to interview them."

Reds Turned Reporter Into Red-Baiter

Their Lying, Cheating, Trickery And Disregard For Democratic Procedures Swung Newsman Into 'Anti' Group

By ALLAN L. SWIM

THIS IS THE simple story of why I became a Red-baiter and how I became a Red-hater.

It is a story without a dramatic beginning. It contains no startling chapters. Nowhere in it is there a cloak-and-dagger episode.

If the story is important, it is so not because it concerns me, but because it illustrates some of the techniques, some of the deviltry and some of the cunning of the Communists.

And perhaps it contains information of value to CIO members who are trying to throw the lefties out of their unions.

IN THE LATE '30's most of the newspapers in my section of the country carried stories and editorials which implied that every person who wore a CIO button took orders direct from Moscow.

As a labor reporter I met a number of the "dangerous Reds" in the rapidly-growing new labor organization and found them to be ordinary, decent guys who knew little about Marx and Lenin and cared less.

For a time I was almost convinced there were no Communists in the labor movement. I told myself, "If these fellows are Commies, like the papers say, then there's nothing wrong with Communism."

Before long, however, I met some genuine party-liners and I began learning—slowly—how they operated.

THERE WAS THE big fellow who served a stretch in prison on a dynamiting charge. He seemed to get a kick out of waving his pardon with one hand and a fistful of CIO literature with the other.

He talked to me about the "class struggle," about the desirability of "striking every plant in town just to show them they can't keep their heels on the workers' necks."

He almost wrecked a good union.

Then there was the skinny little punk who talked conspiratorily about creating a Southern "Black Belt." His scheme was to use the Negro to overthrow capitalism by force. He wanted to start a bloody revolt.

And then there was the clever newspaper man who earned a fat salary by writing things which pleased his reactionary publisher and at the same time quietly advocated control of all newspapers and radio stations by a "people's government."

AS TIME PASSED I ran into many strange characters who preached communism, but denied they belonged to the CP.

I saw the Commie "party girls" work on unsuspecting delegates at Newspaper Guild conventions. They would promise almost anything in return for a vote.

At industrial union council meetings over which I presided, a few Commies attempted time and again to thwart the will of the majority by parliamentary trickery. They showed an almost complete disregard for democratic procedures unless they stood to gain from them.

The thing which most baffled me and caused me to feel the most disgust was the manner in which the Reds kept pace with flip-flops in the party line.

We spent months beating down those "The Yanks Aren't Coming" resolutions. Then we fought equally hard to keep the CP lads and lassies from "launching" a second front.

AS A REPORTER who had covered police and courthouse beats I had become accustomed to dealing with persons who lied and cheated.

But, unlike the criminals, the Commies frequently tried to justify morally their lying and cheating. It was "anything for the cause."

And so I became a Red-baiter in self defense and in defense of the things I thought were good and decent.

My healthy hatred of communism didn't develop until after the war—until the CP openly revealed it was embarked on a worldwide totalitarian conquest.

Hitler-like behavior didn't look any better under the hammer and sickle than under the swastika.

And I could find no justification for the killing, the forced labor, the political exiling that went into the making of the "new order."

YES, THIS IS a personal story—perhaps a bit too personal, too sketchy, too ordinary.

It's not the startling story of a man who "suddenly saw the light" because of some dramatic double-cross by the Commies.

But perhaps it throws some light on the reason for the Red-baiting which goes on in this column.

If you're human and you believe that this country of ours is a pretty good place, despite all its faults, you eventually rebel against those who engage in double-dealing and chicanery in an effort to further the cause of communism.

State of the Union

We had the feeling while listening to President Truman's address at the reopening of Congress that we'd heard the same speech before.

To us this was good. Very good.

It meant the President was still hewing to the line he advocated when the 81st Congress opened its first session. It was a line which we heartily approved then—and which we still approve.

The President, in short, asked Congress to put into effect those portions of the Fair Deal program which it did not enact during 1949.

This program, he said several times during his talk, is designed to benefit the many—not the privileged few.

Yes, his speech sounded good.

It sounded good to the voters during the 1948 Presidential campaign; he said the same things but used somewhat different words.

It sounded good when he addressed the first session of the present Congress.

That is, it sounded good to us and, we believe, to a majority of the American people.

But it must have had a sour sound for the Dixiegop coalition—that group of Republicans and Southern Democrats which seems to have high disregard for the will of the people as reflected by the election returns.

We wouldn't be a bit surprised if this coalition does everything in its power to stymie the Fair Deal.

But we wouldn't be a bit surprised either, if the other members of Congress push through a good portion of the Truman program.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer

Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher

Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss

Business Manager: Richard E. Bauer

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII January 9, 1950 No. 2

Lehman To Avoid "Excesses Of Regionalism"

PLEDGING himself to avoid the "excesses of regionalism," Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (D-Liberal, N. Y.) told reporters after he took the oath of office that he interpreted his election as a mandate to use "the powers of the federal government to advance the general welfare of the people."

Lehman, who with the help of the CIO and AFL defeated John Foster Dulles in a hotly contested election to replace retired Sen. Robert Wagner, also a Democrat, said he experienced "a real thrill" on taking his place in the Senate chamber.

He expressed hope that the Senate would pass a social security bill even more extensive than that voted by the House. He said he'd follow his campaign pledges to back civil rights legislation, to work for Taft-Hartley repeal, for federal rent control, more liberal displaced persons legislation, and enactment of a middle-income co-op housing bill.

He revealed also that he would work for public power and navigation development of the St. Lawrence and Niagara rivers. Governmental economies, he observed, should not be "at the cost of dissipating our true national wealth—the health and well-being of our people."

As he's done "several hundred times since I was elected," Lehman declined to comment on whether he'd run for re-election next November, when his term expires.

Also sworn in were Sen. William Benton (D, Conn.) and Darby (R, Kans.) and the newest members of the House, Mrs. Edna Kelly (D, N. Y.) and Jack Shelley, (D, Cal.) who is also president of the Cal. Federation of Labor. (LPA.)

Unions Join In 'Rights' Fight

The civil rights committees of various CIO unions, including the Steelworkers, Rubber Workers, Auto Workers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will attend the National Emergency Civil Rights Mobilization Jan. 15-17 in Washington, D. C., according to Executive Sec. Roy Wilkins. kins.

Wilkins said the conference, sponsored by 50 national church, labor, civic, fraternal and minority group organizations, will focus widespread attention on the impending fight for enactment of FEPC and other civil rights measures.

Correction

On Nov. 15, 1948, a story appearing in The CIO News implied that the doctors of Richmond County, N. C., were discriminating against striking textile workers. While there is in Richmond County, as elsewhere in the nation, a shortage of doctors, investigation by CIO representatives failed to reveal any deliberate discrimination against the strikers.

In fairness to the Richmond County Medical Association this correction is published.

Doesn't Want Post

Walter White, on leave as executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, does not want to consider appointment as governor of the Virgin Islands to succeed William H. Hastie, recently named federal judge.

"Now there is a guy who has taken a job where you have to watch your step."

Becoming 'Experts' Paid Off, And Then--

IT LOOKED like an impossible situation when the organizers made their first survey.

Nearly all of the workers at the plant lived out in the country—in homes scattered over a wide area.

The buses which took them to and from work loaded and unloaded on company property, well back of the fence which surrounded the mill.

Visiting the employes at their homes would have required miles and miles of driving through unfamiliar territory.

And you can't "handbill" a plant by tossing leaflets through the windows of moving buses.

THE ORGANIZER in charge of the project was one of those fellows who operates on the theory that "nothing is impossible."

He started looking for an opening wedge—for some method of getting in contact with plant workers.

He heard, indirectly that the employes had much difficulty filling out their income tax returns and that they thought they were being overcharged for the help they received from the town's tax experts.

He did a bit of checking on the report, found it to be true, then called his colleagues together.

"Maybe you guys don't know much about income taxes but you're going to learn—and you're going to learn in a hurry," he said.

The group bought copies of "How To File An Income Tax Return" and other material on the subject and studied it diligently.

ONE DAY, early in the "income tax season," the local radio station carried announcements which were of considerable interest to mill employes.

The announcer said that any worker who was having trouble filling out his tax return could get expert assistance if he would go to a certain local address.

The address was the headquarters of the CIO organizers.

A few workers showed up the next day. They got their returns filled out quickly and accurately.

And each one got a handful of printed material dealing with the CIO.

Each day the number of "tax visitors" increased, and at times as many as 40 persons were in the waiting line.

At this point the organizers began showing union movies to the waiting visitors.

AS MARCH 15 drew near, the rush increased—and so did the number of CIO union application cards.

Then the organizers heard that there were a number of women workers who wanted expert tax advice but were unable to visit their headquarters. They had to rush home to take care of their children.

So a baby-sitting service was put into operation.

"We'll come out and care for the kids while you get your return fixed up," the organizers would say.

The idea caught on quickly—and sentiment for the union grew.

Finally a majority of those at the plant had signed CIO cards and a petition for an election was filed.

ONE OF THE men who took part in the campaign said later, "That was the darndest drive I was ever in.

"We won the election by a fair margin—and maybe that should be the end of the story but it isn't.

"Quite a few people who had no connection with the mill came in to take advantage of our free tax service—and darn near every CIO representative in the state got the idea we'd be delighted to handle their returns for them.

"Brother, they nearly worked our socks off!"

A. L. S.

FOLKS' SONG!

TUC Seeks Unity of Unions In Each Industry

By ALLAN FLANDERS

"THE alarmingly chaotic form of British trade union organization is part of the heritage which has come down from the 18th and early 19th centuries; it is one of the penalties of an ancient lineage."

This was the comment of W. Milne Bailey, one of the shrewdest students of the trade union movement who, until his early death in 1935 was the head of the Research and Economic Department of Britain's Trades Union Congress.

The organization of Britain's trade unions has indeed never been planned or promoted by the government or by any particular political party, nor, for that matter, by any central body of their own making, although the Trades Union Congress has helped to facilitate negotiations for amalgamations and for various forms of closer unity.

BEING A voluntary movement, Britain's trade unionism is composed of varied types of organization. Some are very large and some are very small. Some are confined to craftsmen, even to craftsmen in one locality. Some started as industrial unions while others, originally formed by the amalgamation of craft unions, gradually opened their doors to any workers engaged in the same industries.

There are also the two so-called general workers' unions, whose strength is drawn from a wide range of industries. Given this untidy pattern, the problem is to secure joint action among the unions concerned with any one industry in negotiations or other matter of mutual concern in regard to that industry. The federations were formed to meet that need; they are, in effect, a loose form of industrial unionism.

About Author

This article was written by Allan Flanders, Senior Lecturer in Industrial Relations, Oxford University, and formerly Research Assistant to Britain's Trade Union Congress.

The oldest of them is the Printing and Kindred Trades Federation, which was formed in 1899. All the 16 unions concerned with this industry, including the National Union of Journalists, are affiliated to the Federation. The Printing Joint Industrial Council, composed of 40 unions and 40 employers' representatives with alternating chairmen, provides a fertile field for joint union activity through the Federation on such matters as apprenticeship selection and training, employment and production, and the strengthening of organization on both sides of the industry.

This federation has, however, little say in wage negotiations, which are mainly conducted by the separate unions. The latter also reserve to themselves the right to fix their own apprenticeship quotas. An unsuccessful attempt was made in 1949 on the part of the Federation to work out common proposals for a new wage structure for the industry.

ONE OF THE most highly developed federations is the National Federation of Building Trade Operatives, which includes all unions with a marked interest in building and construction. In this industry there are still a large number of separate craft unions, the woodworkers, the bricklayers, the painters, the plumbers, the plasterers, and so on, all having their own organizations.

But national wage negotiations are conducted mainly by the Federation, which has its own full-time regional officers and the authority to call out on strike any of its affiliated membership without prior consultation with the individual unions.

The Confederation of the Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions is the largest of all the federations, with some 40 affiliated unions representing over two million workers. For many years it did not include the largest union in the industry, the Amalgamated Engineering Union, but with the affiliation of this body in 1947 the Confederation is now fully representative of the unions in this whole complex of industries.

It undertakes wage negotiations with the employers' federation on behalf of all its affiliated unions and has produced proposals for the reform of the wage structure of the industry.

Unfortunately the two federations which exist in cotton and woolen textiles are weaker and looser organizations. The Northern Counties Textile Trades Federation only represents the workers in the manufacturing section of cotton textiles, and the "Amalgamations" which are affiliated to it are in turn composed of local associations with their own rules and scales of contributions and benefits.

The integration of industrial policy has also been helped forward by the existence of Joint Industrial Councils in many industries, which act mainly as permanent negotiating bodies between the various unions concerned and the employers.

As Congress Opens . . .

PRESIDENT TRUMAN discusses the main points of his state of the union address with Congressional leaders at the White House Jan. 3 a short time before the opening of the second session of the 81st Congress. Vice Pres. Alben Barkley is seated at the right. In rear (left to right) are Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas (D. Ill.); House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D. Tex.) and House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D. Mass.).

ONLY NEW MEMBERS of the House, Rep. John Shelley (D. Cal.) and Rep. Edna F. Kelly (D. N. Y.) look over House rules and manual before opening of second session of 81st Congress. Both won special elections to replace Congressmen who died during their terms of office. The Senate has three new members. They are Herbert H. Lehman (D. N. Y.), William Benton (D. Conn.) and Harry Darby (R. Kan.).

Dixiegops Play San
As Election Casts L

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

THERE ARE 302 days until elections—but that coming event will throw a heavy shadow over the second session of the 81st Congress.

Trooping back to a renovated, "streamlined" House chamber in the Capitol, Representatives and Senators heard President Truman call once again for enactment of the Fair Deal program.

No sooner had the President finished than the Dixiecrat—Republican coalition got back to the same brand of politics they were practicing when Congress adjourned in October.

Sen. Wherry (R. Nebr.), GOP leader in the Senate, called the speech a "dud."

Rep. Joseph Martin (R. Mass.), GOP leader in the House, offered the opinion that the address on the State of the Union should be re-titled "the state of socialism."

Sen. Taft (R., Ohio), thought the speech advocated measures which "would destroy freedom" and "would give special privileges to labor union bosses."

TWO SOUTHERN Democrats generally agreed with the GOP line. Sen. McClellan (D. Ark.) moaned that the Truman proposals looked like "increased taxes and increased deficits."

Sen. Russell (D. Ga.), a leading Dixiecrat, thought the Truman objectives "praiseworthy in themselves" but added quickly that measures asked by Pres. Truman would lead at once to a "purely socialistic state."

And throughout the country, editorials in the big papers—the same papers that predicted the election of Tom Dewey—echoed the Dixiegop criticism.

BUT CIO PRES. Murray hailed the speech as a "liberal call to action"—and suggested that Congress should act quickly to "enact these proposals into law. They are long overdue."

"All of the measures recommended by the President are 'must' legislation. They are imperatively required for the general welfare of the American people."

Other labor and liberal organizations joined in calling for quick action on the sizeable collection of "unfinished business" facing the Congress.

Truman Gives 'L
Call To Action'—

CIO PRES. MURRAY liked the Presi Union Message, and suggested to C on with the job of turning proposals into l statement:

"The CIO hails President Truman's Message as a liberal call to action. The cated in forthright and unmistakable te business' of the 81st Congress.

"The American people, for whom spoken, expect the Congress to enact these They are long overdue. The measures re President have been the subject of ample and throughout the nation; they have proved by the voters at the polls, as recent elections in New York State.

"These proposals can and should be session of the Congress. The public will on any scheme prompted by petty politic adjourn this session of the Congress bef program has been substantially enacted.

"THE CIO, representing millions of w entirely with President Truman th perity is dependent upon widespread s benefits by all the people rather than mo few. Our nation was founded upon this cratic principle to which organized labor dedicated.

"The CIO looks with approval on the recognition of the important and wholeso bargaining in our national life. We appl man's vigorous and renewed demand for If Congress heeds the will of the people President's message, Taft-Hartley repeal at this session of the Congress.

"All of the measures recommended 'must' legislation. They are imperative general welfare of the American people."

Some of the key issues facing the Congress, with Pres. Truman's recommendations on them:

1. T-H REPEAL:

Truman: ". . . Free collective bargaining must be protected and encouraged. Collective bargaining is not only a fundamental economic freedom for labor. It is also a strengthening and stabilizing influence for our whole economy.

"The federal statute now governing labor relations [Taft-Hartley] is punitive in purpose and one-sided in operation. This statute is, and always has been, inconsistent with the practice of true and effective collective bargaining. It should be repealed and replaced by a law that is fair to all and in harmony with our democratic ideals."

Murray: "If Congress heeds the will of the people as expressed in the President's message, Taft-Hartley repeal can be accomplished at this session of Congress."

2. RENT CONTROL:

Truman: "Rent control is still necessary to prevent widespread hardship . . . I recommend, therefore, that rent control be continued for another year."

The present rent control law expires on June 30, but funds for enforcement of that law are almost exhausted. Congress will soon be asked for an additional appropriation to keep it going.

Meanwhile, loopholes in the law and weak enforcement policies have led to widespread lifting of c raising o

of the co

3. SOCI

Truma that the action a lation
and ext age and
The wide provide pe
dustry dr
improveme surance sy

Social s were passe in the se action in increases million pe

Boost
Ext

Pres.
Congress to the la bill.

The supported governme facilities conducted union and

"A fu problems
tions is o
I recomm of a Lab to encour
ities in man said

D. D. Smith Added To CIO-PAC Staff

CIO-PAC Dir. Jack Kroll has announced the appointment of Darrell D. Smith to the Washington PAC staff. Smith will work out of the national office, concentrating on the middle west.

A veteran unionist, Smith has been a business agent for a teamsters' local, a newspaper man, an organizer in steel, a government official and a political action worker.

Originally from Canton, Ohio, he ran for mayor of the town after the 1937 "little steel" strike, but was beaten because he refused to indorse a strikebreaking governor. His latest political action stint was in Minnesota during the Humphrey campaign against Joe Ball.

Drive Started For D. C. Home Rule

THE WASHINGTON Chapter of Americans for Democratic Action has begun a concerted drive to get the necessary 218 signatures on a petition to discharge the House District of Columbia Committee, at present Washington's "city council," from further consideration of the limited home rule measure which it tabled last session.

The measure, which provides only that the citizens of the District may elect their own city council and does not allow them to vote in federal elections, was passed by the Senate but has met stiff opposition in the House committee, which is dominated by southern Democrats who are not anxious to see the beginnings of equal rights in the nation's capital.

The ADA chapter's first efforts netted 60 signatures, but according to a spokesman, "toil and tears" will be necessary to get the total to 218.

"Those who enjoy the right to vote can help the silenced D. C. resident," ADA explains. "They can write to their Representatives asking that Congress grant the District of Columbia the right to elect its own city council and its own Board of Education."

To Stop Dixiegops In '50 A Buck For PAC Is Nifty

e Old Game
ng Shadow

beral urray

's State-of-the-ess that it get Pres. Murray's te-of-the-Union ident has indi- the 'unfinished

President has posals into law. mended by the te in Congress repeatedly ap- s the November

ed during this look with favor nsiderations to the President's earners, agrees national pros- g of economic olization by the damental demo- America stands sident's express ole of collective President Tru- Hartley repeal. xpressed in the e accomplished

e President are quired for the and immediate many sections

URITY: arnestly hope will complete ssion on legis- the benefits verage of old- vors insurance. d movement to s in private in- s the need for in the public-in-"

y improvements the House late and now face Senate. The bill age by several lifts benefits up to 70%, and provides for disability payments.

Many observers believe that business groups—which have often opposed improving the social security system in the past—may swing around as a result of recent pension agreements in CIO contracts. Increases in social security benefits would cut cost of these pensions to the corporations.

4. CIVIL RIGHTS:

Truman: "I again urge the Congress to enact the civil rights proposals I made in February, 1948."

This is almost certain to lead to one of the talkiest, and sharpest, debates of the second session. Principal civil rights measures — fair employment practices, anti-poll tax and anti-lynching—have moved through committees. Anti-poll tax bill has been passed by the House, but none of the three measures has yet received Senate approval.

Senate Democratic leaders expect to bring the FEPC bill to the Senate floor early in the session, perhaps in February. It is certain to produce a filibuster from the southern poll tax bloc.

Some Republicans have been talking for the record by calling for immediate action—but a year ago they gave quiet support to the Dixiecrats' successful fight against changed Senate rules which would have taken the fire out of the filibuster weapon.

The President has also asked for action on other civil rights measures—statehood for Alaska and Hawaii, and for home rule for the District of Columbia. All of them were indorsed in the history-making report of the President's Committee on Civil Rights, on which CIO Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey was a leading member.

The District of Columbia home rule bill has been passed in the Senate, but has stalled in the House. Liberal and labor groups in the capital have been seeking a discharge petition to blast the bill out of committee, but as yet it has only about 60 of the required 218 signatures.

5. NATURAL RESOURCES:

Truman: "We need to enlarge the production and transmission of public power . . . We must continue policies to assure that their benefits will be spread among the many and not restricted to a favored few."

The President called for action not only on projects like the Columbia Valley Administration—modeled along the lines of TVA—but for similar programs in New England and on the St. Lawrence Seaway. Next day, the President told reporters he foresees an eventual project for the entire central state area, embracing programs for power, navigation and flood control on the Mississippi, Missouri and Ohio rivers.

The public power projects have met furious objection from the utility lobbies, which also fought the TVA 15 years ago.

THE PRESIDENT'S message also gave strong emphasis to the Brannan Plan, which would guarantee minimum farm incomes while cutting consumer prices on food; to helping "middle income" families obtain better housing; to federal aid for education, which has already been approved in the Senate but was caught in a cross-wind in the House; to the national health insurance program; to improving the displaced persons law and to continuation of ECA.

Such a program, which is certain to arouse tremendous opposition from special interests, will need tremendous support from the public if a substantial portion of it is to be passed before Congress adjourns.

But before the major issues arise, the Senate is already working on one item passed by the House—the bill to remove special taxes on oleomargarine.

The bill is supported by most city consumers, and by cotton state interests (cottonseed oil goes into oleo); it's bitterly opposed in the dairy sections (milk goes into butter).

Under present law, colored oleo is taxed 10 cents a pound, and white oleo is taxed one-half a cent a pound; but manufacturers and distributors must pay special license fees, which are higher for yellow oleo than for the uncolored product.

So Congress starts with a battle—the first of many this session.

ven Labor ion Bill

n's message to strong support xtension service

hich is actively unions, provides nds for school workers, to be cooperation with ation groups. standing of the odern labor rela- importance that he establishment xtension Service ducational activ- ld," Pres. Tru-

Election Calendar For 1950

STATE	FINAL FILING DATES	REGISTRATION	PRIMARIES
*ALA	March 1, 1950	1st and 3rd Mondays in each month.	May 2, 1950 May 30, 1950 (runoff)
ARIZ	June 14, 1950 to Aug. 3, 1950	For primary: Before Aug. 7, 1950. For general election: anytime until Oct. 2, 1950.	Sept. 12, 1950
*ARK	April 26, 1950 to June 15, 1950	A 1948 constitutional amendment permits the legislature to enact new registration laws. None passed as yet.	July 25, 1950 Aug. 8, 1950 (runoff)
CAL	March 8, 1950 to April 7, 1950	Through April 28, 1950 for primary; through Sept. 29, 1950 for general.	June 6, 1950
COLO	July 14 to 29, 1950	Through Aug. 23, 1950, for primary; through Oct. 18, 1950, for general.	Sept. 12, 1950
CONN	Nominations by party conventions not later than Oct. 17, 1950.	Oct. 14 to 21, 1950 throughout state. Additional dates: (See PAC 1948 book).	None
DEL	Primary and party convention dates to be set by parties.	At least once each week in April, May and June, 1950. Also on July 12 and Oct. 21, 1950.	Set by parties.
FLA	Feb. 1, 1950	Through April 1, 1950, for primary; May 8 through Oct. 7, 1950, for general.	May 2, 1950 May 23, 1950 (runoff)
GA	Set by Democratic Committee.	Fulton Co. (Atlanta) through May 6, 1950; rest of state through July 6.	Sept. 13, 1950 Oct. 4, 1950 (runoff)
IDAHO	June 9 to July 8, 1950.	March 6, 1950, to Aug. 5, 1950 for primary; Aug. 12 to Nov. 4 for general.	Aug. 8, 1950
ILL	Jan. 16 to 23, 1950	Through March 13, 1950 for primary. April 14 to Oct. 9, 1950 for general. (Cook County: also March 15-21 and Oct. 11-17, 1950).	April 11, 1950
IND	March 3 to April 1 1950	Through April 3, 1950 for primary. May 15 to Oct. 9, 1950 for general.	May 2, 1950
IOWA	County offices: May 6, 1950. State and federal: April 6, 1950	Varies locally, but not after May 26 for primary, Oct. 28 for general. (Cities over 10,000: re-registration for general on Oct. 26 and 27 and Nov. 4.)	June 5, 1950
KAN	June 20, 1950	Through July 11, 1950, for primary; through Oct. 17, 1950, for general.	Aug. 1, 1950
KY	State offices: June 11, 1950. County offices: June 21, 1950	Through June 15, 1950; reopens Aug. 16 to Sept. 16.	Aug. 5, 1950
LA	July 24, 1950	Through July 30, 1950.	Aug. 29, 1950 Oct. 3, 1950 (runoff)
ME	April 17, 1950	For primary—varies by cities thru June. For General—varies by cities from Aug. 22 to Sept. 9.	June 19, 1950 General election: Sept. 11, 1950
MD	Aug. 1, 1950	Baltimore and Montgomery County: through Aug. 11, plus Sept. 21 and 22. Elsewhere: through Aug. 11, plus Sept. 21-Oct. 7, 1950.	Sept 11, 1950
MASS	Aug. 1, 1950	Varies locally, but not after Aug. 18, for primary or Oct. 6, for general.	Sept. 19, 1950
MICH	July 18, 1950	Through Aug. 23, 1950, for primary; through Oct. 18, 1950, for general.	Sept. 12, 1950
MINN	June 14 to Aug. 3, 1950	Continuous through Aug. 22, 1950 (primary) and Sept. 14 to Oct. 17 (general). (No registration in towns of less than 15,000.)	Sept. 12, 1950
*MISS	June 9, 1950	Through July 6, 1950.	Aug. 8, 1950 Aug. 29, 1950 (runoff)
MO	April 25, 1950	Regulations vary, but registration is year round in all localities, with different closing dates before elections. In St. Louis and Kansas City registration closes July 8, 1950 for primary and reopens from Aug. 7 to Oct. 14.	Aug. 1, 1950
MONT	States offices: June 7, 1950. County offices: June 17, 1950	Through June 3, 1950, for primary; through Sept. 22 for general.	July 18, 1950
NEB	June 29, 1950	Through July 29, 1950, for primary; Aug. 9 to Oct. 28 for general.	Aug. 8, 1950
NEV	July 17, 1950	Through Aug. 5, 1950; reopens Sept. 6 to Oct. 7.	Sept. 5, 1950
N. H.	July 29, 1950	Dates vary locally (usually within a couple of weeks before the election).	Sept. 12, 1950
N. J.	March 9, 1950	Through March 9, 1950; reopens April 19 to Oct. 5, 1950.	April 18, 1950
N. M.	April 4 to May 13, 1950	Through May 13, 1950; reopens June 12 thru Oct. 7, 1950.	June 6, 1950
N. Y.	Aug. 8-15, 1950	June 1 to Sept. 20, 1950. In addition: New York City and Westchester County: Oct. 9-13, 1950, 5:00-10:30 p. m. and Oct. 14, 1950, 7:00 a. m.-10:30 p. m. Cities of less than 5,000: Oct. 7, and Oct. 14. Cities of more than 5,000: Oct. 6, 7, 13, 10:00 a.m.-10:00 p.m. and Oct. 14, 7:00 a.m.-10:00 p.m.	Sept. 19, 1950
N. C.	State and federal offices: March 18. Others: April 15	April 29-May 13, 1950.	May 27, 1950 June 24, 1950 (runoff)
N. D.	April 28 to May 27, 1950	June 20 and Oct. 31, 1950. None in towns less than 1500.	June 27, 1950
OHIO	Feb. 1, 1950	Through April 3, 1950; reopens May 13 through Oct. 9, 1950.	May 2, 1950
OKLA	April 24-28, 1950	Oct. 8-28, 1950.	July 4, 1950 July 25, 1950 (runoff)
ORE	March 10, 1950	Before Oct. 7, 1950.	May 19, 1950
PA	March 27, 1950	Anytime except April 27-May 22 (for primary). Closing Sept. 18, 1950 (for general).	May 16, 1950
R. I.	July 22-31 and Aug. 23-28 (D); Sept. 1-6, 1950 (R).	Anytime up to June 30, 1950.	D—Sept. 18, 1950 R—Sept. 27, 1950
*S. C.	Set by Democratic Executive Committee	No primary registration. Regulations for general vary locally, but not after Oct. 7.	July 11, 1950 July 25, 1950 (runoff)
S. D.	April 7-May 7, 1950	Anytime except May 22-June 6 (for primary) and Oct. 31-Nov. 7 (for general election).	June 6, 1950
*TENN	June 10, 1950	Varies locally; for primary not after July 14, 1950; through Oct. 18, 1950, for general.	Aug. 3, 1950
*TEX	State offices—June 5, 1950; District offices—May 5, 1950; County offices—June 19, 1950.	None in Texas.	July 22, 1950 Aug. 26, 1950 (runoff)
UTAH	20 days before party convention (date to be set; usually in August)	June 20, July 1, 25, Aug. 1, Oct. 10, 17, 31. Provision made for voters absent on regular registration days—anytime except 10 days preceding an election.	Sept. 5, 1950
VT	Aug. 15, 1950	Check list revised some time previous to 36 hours before an election—set by town clerk.	Sept. 12, 1950
*VA	June 10, 1950	Through July 8, 1950 (Municipal elections through May 13, 1950).	Aug. 8, 1950 Municipal election— June 13, 1950
WASH	July 1-30, 1950	Anytime up to Oct. 7, 1950.	Sept. 12, 1950
W. VA	July 1, 1950	Anytime up to Oct. 7, 1950.	Aug. 1, 1950
WIS	July 25, 1950	Through Sept. 7, 1950 for primary; through Oct. 26, 1950 for general election.	Sept. 19, 1950
WYO	July 23, 1950	July 24-Aug. 21, 1950, for primary; Oct. 9-Nov.6 for general.	Aug. 22, 1950

*Note on poll tax: Alabama, Oct. 1, 1949, to Feb. 1, 1950; Arkansas, Oct. 1, 1949, to vote in primary or Oct. 1, 1950, to vote in general election; Mississippi, final date, Feb. 1, 1950; South Carolina, final date, Oct. 7, 1950; Tennessee, final date, Sept. 8, 1950 (for general election only); Texas, Oct. 1, 1949, to Jan. 31, 1950; Virginia, final date Dec. 12, 1949, to vote in the municipal elections; final date May 6, 1950, for primary and general elections.

Read What Congressmen Read—CIO Voting Record

About 500 Congressmen are reading the CIO News 1949 Voting Record.

They find it mighty interesting.

You will, too—for it's your business.

It's the story of what happened to your legislative program during the first session of the 81st Congress. It shows how every Congressman voted on 13 issues, how every Senator voted on 16 key tests.

You'll find the CIO News 1949 Voting Record is "must" reading—and a handy reference source—during the months ahead.

Send your orders now to the CIO Publication Dept., 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C. Prices: 5c a copy; 50 for $2.00; 100 for $3.50; 500 for $14; 1,000 for $20.

Mail your order today.

O'Dwyer May Name Fact Board

NEW YORK CITY Mayor William O'Dwyer promised to answer "in a few days" a request by nine top CIO leaders that he name a fact-finding board to look into the dispute between the CIO Transport Workers and the N. Y. City Board of Transportation.

The steering committee of the N. Y. CIO Council had urged that the fact-finders, if appointed, consider the union's demands for better wages, hours and working conditions for the 42,000 employes of the municipal transit lines.

The CIO spokesmen, who represent 500,000 members, were Louis Hollander, state CIO Council president; TWU Pres. Michael J. Quill; ACW Pres. Jacob Potofsky; N. Y. City CIO Council Secy.-Treas. Morris Iushewitz; Retail-Wholesale Pres. Irving Simon; Novelty Workers Secy.-Treas. Alex Bail; Utility Workers Reg. Dir. Patrick McGrath; NMU Pres. Joseph Curran and TWU Local 100 Pres. Matthew Guinan.

PENDING the Mayor's answer, the group promised that there would be no slowdown or interruption of service on municipal subway, bus and street car lines.

Several of the CIO spokesmen indicated "off the record" their confidence that the mayor would agree to appoint a fact-finding group to study the issues.

Previously TWU had asked the Board of Transportation to discuss the union's demand for a 21c-an-hour pay boost, a 40-hour work week, machinery for grievance adjustment and other improvements in working conditions on the municipal lines.

WILLIAM REID, Board of Transportation chairman, said the full program of TWU would cost the city $72 million and that the money was not available. The 40-hour week provision alone would add $30 million to the annual payroll of the transit agency, he claimed. He indicated that the city could not agree to accept an arbitrator's decision.

TWU Pres. Quill last week issued a statement condemning the stand taken by the N. Y. Times in editorially opposing the appointment of a fact-finding board.

"It is strange indeed," Quill declared, "that despite the clamor of the press for transit stability, the N. Y. Times should reject the union's proposal for a practical step toward peace—a step, furthermore, which it applauded during the steel controversy.

"Can it be that the N. Y. Times is afraid that a fact-finding board will uncover the true facts and recommend that the demands of the transit workers be granted?"

100,000 Get Under 50c In Illinois—Annunzio

An estimated 100,000 persons in Illinois are earning less than 50 cents an hour, according to Frank Annunzio, director of the Illinois state Department of Labor. Annunzio made the estimate while announcing plans for improving the present Illinois minimum wage law. The low pay rates are paid in small establishments not ordinarily covered by the usual wage study, Annunzio said.

3rd Quarter Report Shows 1949 Profits Will Not Lag Far Behind 1948 Record

A REPORT ON manufacturing profits for the third quarter of 1949, from the Federal Trade and the Securities and Exchange Commissions, suggests that corporation profits for last year will run not far behind the record-breaking total of 1948.

The Commissions reported that in the third quarter, as a result of a relatively small increase in volume, manufacturing profits after taxes zoomed up 15% over the second quarter, or from $2 billion to $2.3 billion. They still were 20% below the third quarter of last year, an exceptionally high profit period.

Smaller corporations showed greater profit increases than big, in line with the greater fluctuations usually shown by the small companies both on downswings and upswings. Biggest gains were among manufacturers of miscellaneous products, leather and leather products, apparel and finished textiles and fabricated metal products, all of which showed gains of 50% or more.

Profits after taxes, based on stockholders' investments, ranged from 27.2% for auto companies to 5.6% for primary non-ferrous metal companies which traditionally show a low profit on invested capital. The percentage for big companies averaged 13.6%, for smaller ones 8.4%. (LPA)

'All Jobs Are Terminated' As N. Y. Sun Merges With World-Telly

EMPLOYES OF THE New York Sun, the city's second oldest paper, founded in 1833, were stunned Jan. 4 when they found a notice on the bulletin board informing them that the Sun would cease publication that day.

The paper had been sold and would be merged with the World-Telegram.

With no more advance notice than that, the Sun's editorial department employes learned that their jobs were gone. "This is notice to all employes that all positions are terminated at the close of business, Wednesday, Jan. 4, 1950," the bulletin said.

"It may be possible to use some employes temporarily, and these people will be so advised."

Employes crowed around reading the notice with amazement. They couldn't believe it. Some who weren't in the office when the announcement appeared, heard the news over the radio. One man, who was shaving when his daughter told him what had come over the radio, said he felt like cutting his throat.

A JOINT announcement of the sale of the Sun to the World-Telegram and the merger of the two papers was made the same day by Thomas W. Dewart, president of the The Sun, and Roy W. Howard, editor and president of the World-Telegram.

Dewart's statement in which he attributed the blame in part to "rising costs" of labor and "the demands of the unions," brought a sharp reply from the New York Newspaper Guild. The union called the charges misleading, biased and unfair. Pointing out that The Sun was the only New York metropolitan paper whose editorial and commercial employes are not covered by a Guild contract, the CIO union declared that The Sun had not given a wage increase in 1949 in any department, and had not been faced with any increase in 1950.

Exec. Vice-Pres. Thomas J. Murphy of the New York Guild, said that a Guild committee planned to meet with the World-Telegram management to "find out their intentions regarding the over-all staff situation and to get guarantees that Guild members now working for The World-Telegram don't get pushed out by non-Guild people from The Sun. We want to see the Sun people get jobs, but we don't want Guild members to lose jobs."

Pres. Harvey Call of the Sun Editorial Employes Association, an independent union representing 175 members, said its contracts and those of other unions with The Sun, had not been "out of line" with city-wide wage scales. He added that the management never made any plea for cooperation along the lines of economy.

DEWART SAID that "the demands of the unions have wrought here in New York—what they are working elsewhere throughout the nation—an unprecedented and increasing number of casualties among newspapers which once were great and strong.

"Despite continued warnings of the economic consequences various unions have forced and are continuing to force, higher wages, until, in the newspaper business as a whole, these have risen beyond reason."

Merger of the World-Telegram and Sun leaves only three regular evening papers in the nation's largest city. The other two are the New York Post and the Journal-American. The World-Telegram itself is the result of a merger in 1931 of the World and the Telegram. The Post, founded in 1801 by Alexander Hamilton, is the city's oldest paper.

Union Pays Mortgage For Member's Widow

A check for $2280 has been sent to Mrs. Hazel Farrell to pay the balance due on the mortgage on the Farrell home, by District 3, CIO Packinghouse Workers. Mrs. Farrell got another check for $250, and hereafter will get $100 a month.

Her husband, William J. Farrell, was killed by a strikebreaker on the picket line in the 1948 strike at the Rath plant in Waterloo, Iowa. District 3 has reached the half-way mark in a drive for a Farrell Memorial Fund.

CCL Says Govt. Hides Job Lack

The Canadian Congress of Labour has called upon L. S. St. Laurent, the Canadian Prime Minister, and members of the Cabinet to look into the serious unemployment problem in Canada.

In a letter to the prime minister, CCL Pres. A. R. Mosher said he had reason to believe that the number of unemployed persons in Canada now totals 300,000 or 6% of the entire labour force.

Mosher also asked that the government make public the latest unemployment figures. "For the last three months," he said, "the regular report on claims for benefit under the Unemployment Insurance Act has been withheld. We are at a loss to understand why the government is apparently endeavouring to keep this important information from the public.

"We have been repeatedly informed by the government that it has carefully-laid plans for taking care of a substantial increase in unemployment. We believe the time has come for putting these plans into effect. The Canadian Labour movement is determined not to permit a repetition of the 'Hungry Thirties'."

10 Auditors Uncover Taxable $2 Million

Encouraged by the discovery of $2 million in taxable payrolls, which had previously been untaxed, the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission has authorized the hiring of an additional 15 field auditors to check the accounts of marginal employers.

This sum was turned up by 10 new auditors during the past six months. "Each man has turned in an average of five times as much 'new' payroll tax money from marginal accounts as his wages have cost us," declared Harry C. Markle, MUCC executive director. The MUCC presently employs 45 auditors.

Michigan employers of eight or more workers are taxed a certain percentage of total payrolls for the MUCC fund.

Detroit To Lose $100,000,000 For Housing, Is Charge

DETROIT WILL lose over $100 million in federal funds unless Mayor-elect Albert Cobo and the incoming City Council take immediate steps to build housing units on vacant land sites, charged James J. Inglis, executive director of the City's Housing Commission, in a radio address on the CIO Auto Workers' Station WDET-FM.

"I feel very strongly that the city's best interests will be served by starting at once to develop new public housing . . . on vacant land sites, so there will be places to move families who are displaced from future slum clearance projects . . .," Inglis declared.

The retiring housing director also pointed out that low-rent federal housing should be made available to "thousands of deserving low-income families, who are living under deplorable conditions, but not necessarily in areas that will be selected for slum clearance."

He said this group included disabled veterans, old people living on small pensions or savings, widows and others

As housing director, Inglis has prepared plans which would give Detroit 10,000 units on 12 sites, distributed about evenly in outlying areas and congested slums. The program would be financed under provisions of the housing act passed by the 81st Congress calling for the construction nationally of 810,000 units in six years.

But Cobo has rejected the public housing plan in preference to a scheme which would bypass use of the federal funds, use city monies to clear and prepare slum areas for development and then sell the land at a loss to private interests for their exploitation.

As CWA Strike Looms

AT&T To Pay Gifford $95,000 Yearly Pension

By WILLIAM WEISS

PROOF THAT it pays to be chairman of the board of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. came with the disclosure that 65-year-old retiring head, Walter S. Gifford, will receive a $95,000-a-year pension in appreciation of his 45 years' service with America's largest business enterprise.

Gifford's retirement came at a time when 300,000 CIO Bell Telephone employes were asking that their average $75 monthly pension (including social security) be increased by the company to a figure more in line with living requirements.

The Communications Workers of America has charged that the "pattern" of Bell companies' negotiators is set by their parent company, AT&T.

The Bell System may be faced with a nationwide strike of 250,000 CWA members next month.

"A strike of telephone workers may occur by the end of February or before unless satisfactory pay boosts and other contract improvements are negotiated," CWA Vice Pres. A. T. Jones said.

"Six CWA divisions with 100,000 members have already fulfilled the the requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act and are legally prepared to strike right away," Jones stated. "Nineteen other divisions have taken steps to notify Bell companies of their desire to negotiate new contracts or reopen old ones, and will take the legal steps necessary to permit them to strike at the end of February."

The story of Gifford's career with AT&T reads, as one commentator said, "as though it had been jointly concocted by Horatio Alger and H. G. Wells."

He was born in 1885, the same year that AT&T was founded and only a few short years after the telephone itself was invented by Alexander Graham Bell.

HE STARTED to work for Western Electric in Chicago and first directed attention to himself by inventing a mathematical formula for figuring wages of piece-workers, which immediately classified him as an "efficiency expert."

By the time the first transcontinental telephone call was made in 1915 the company considered Gifford ready for New York where, the New York Times says, "his efficiency began paying off on a larger scale."

Back in 1905 an incident which threatened to put an end to his promising career occurred. It seems he developed an aversion to punching timeclocks and was reprimanded. He immediately resigned. According to the Times, the office manager called him back, studied his record—(Ed. Note: and possibly his connections with the front office)—and told him to forget about punching the timeclock.

THE STORY lists as one of his proudest achievements his handling of the employment problem when the telephone company switched to dial phones.

Records of the company showed that an unusual number of women operators were insisting on leaving their jobs to marry and raise families. Gifford, according to the Times, immediately came up with a plan which "took this turnover into account and made the mechanization process virtually painless." (Whether it was "painless" to the company or the expectant brides goes unexplained.)

The rules of AT&T require every employe to retire at the age of 65. "Gifford," the article says, "is no exception. The company's pension plan pays a percentage of salary equal to the number of years of service. Gifford has worked for the AT&T 45 years, so he gets 45% of his average annual salary of $209,750 in his best 10 years or $95,000 a year."

(The same principle applies to any AT&T employe. For example, if a worker has averaged $35 a week for 45 years, at the end of that time he or she is entitled to a yearly pension of $819, or $68.25 monthly.)

During Gifford's 25 years as head of the telephone system, it underwent a tremendous growth. Its assets rose from $3 billion to more than $10 billion. Its yearly revenues total nearly $3 billion.

There are now more than 33 million telephones in the country and more than 180 million calls a day are made. Gifford is one of the largest stockholders. He holds 1,513 AT&T shares at present.

Home Construction Booms In Sweden

In little Sweden, a big cooperative has built as much housing in the past eight years, proportionately, as all the public housing authorities in the United States propose to build during the next six years. This is what Architect Ernest Grunsfeld of Chicago told the city's housing officials recently upon his return from Europe.

JANET RUSSELL
'Adopted' Striker

Guild Local 'Adopts' Little Rock Striker

THE CHICAGO Newspaper Guild has "adopted" an Arkansas striker and is paying her living expenses for as long as the strike lasts.

This technique of strike aid has been used often and successfully by the Guild. Lists of strikers and vital statistics about them—age, family obligations, etc.—are circulated to other locals, whose membership then "adopts" one or more strikers directly, in addition to supplying a steady stream of voluntary cash donations to the general strike fund.

This time the struck paper is the Arkansas Gazette, oldest newspaper west of the Mississippi, whose Guild employes went out Dec. 17 after the Gazette management had refused to agree to the standard job security clause.

The "adopted" striker is attractive Janet Russell, secretary of the Arkansas Guild local.

Start '50 Right, Give Buck To PAC

Now They Know It, Thanks To AMA

THE AMERICAN Medical Association has pulled a bad boner in its fight against national health insurance, according to the Committee for the Nation's health.

It has made one of those mistakes so often committed by people opposed to progressive measures—and has given wide publicity to the very thing it is trying to kill. Nothing arouses more interest and curiosity than a violent attack.

Today, thanks to AMA's expensive and sensational campaign against national health insurance legislation, millions of Americans who might not otherwise have given it a thought have learned about it, says the Committee. In its annual report for 1949, the Committee states:

"Although 55 million pieces of literature have been circulated by the AMA's $2 million lobby, attacking national health insurance violently, this stream of propaganda has also made millions of Americans learn that there is such a thing as health insurance, which many of them had never known before.

"Once the plain people of this country understand that it is possible to pre-pay sickness costs on the insurance principle and be able to call a doctor early in illness without the fear of a fee or the stigma of charity, these people will demand insurance plans which offer them not the limited services which the AMA-sponsored plans provide, but the comprehensive services of physicians and hospitals which only the national health program favored by the Committee can furnish."

THE IMPORTANT accomplishment of 1949 in promoting national health insurance, the committee reports, "was to bring this issue into the foreground as one of the leading domestic issues in the 1950 political campaign."

The Committee predicted that while no comprehensive health legislation is likely to pass in the present session of the 81st Congress, passage of several important special bills included in the national health program may be expected.

The Committee for the Nation's health, a national group of doctors and laymen, was organized in 1946 to promote comprehensive national health insurance legislation. CIO Pres. Philip Murray is a member of the board of directors.

'Freedom' Course Probe Is Planned

DOES A BOSS have a right to make employes listen to a talk by an outside speaker during working hours?

This odd kind of "work assignment" has cropped up in Milwaukee and CIO delegates to the Milwaukee County CIO Council are up in arms about it.

The Council is planning an investigation of a series of "Freedom Forum" lectures given to Allis-Chalmers workers — attendance compulsory.

The Council charges that New Deal and progressive measures were attacked in the lectures as socialism and communism. "This stuff they force us to listen to," one delegate said, "sounds like the same propaganda the fascists try to peddle."

CIO Auto Workers Local 248, whose members work at Allis-Chalmers, also has registered heated protests. Charles Schulz, the local's president, termed the lectures "Republican propaganda," and denounced the practice of compelling the workers to listen as a "work assignment."

Glen Clarke, the CIO Council's secretary-treasurer, has been instructed to look into the matter.

Israeli Workers To Study Abroad

A GROUP OF 50 to 55 workers in Israel will be sent abroad to study production methods in various industrial countries under a plan announced by Histadrut, the General Federation of Jewish Labor in Israel.

A 10-day seminar attended by nearly 100 skilled factory workers from 75 shops and factories in the metal, textile, leather, printing, glass and food industries was held in December at the Histadrut Workers' College. The seminar was part of a program of setting up joint production committees in factories and of sending workers' delegations abroad for first-hand study of productivity methods.

Workers at the seminar were chosen by local labor councils and national trade unions in consultation with Histadrut's Trade Union Dept. At the close of the seminar, the workers returned to their jobs where they will take an active part in the planned formation of joint production committees.

Later some 50 to 55 of the participants will be selected to go with workers' delegations to various countries for several months' training and observation. Arrangements will be made for them in each country to spend some time in actual work in factories similar in size and type to those in which they are employed in Israel.

Organizationally Speaking

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson reports that in a representation election held among the reporters, editors and other editorial department workers of the Buffalo (N. Y.) Evening News, the vote was as follows: Buffalo Local No. 26 ANG-CIO 81; AFL 51; no union 0.

Pres. Thomas E. Andert of the United Optical & Instrument Workers CIO, reports the following representation elections won in St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn.: American Optical Co., St. Paul, Minn., CIO 6. AFL 1; American Optical Co., Minneapolis, CIO 8, AFL 0; Riggs Optical Co., Minneapolis, CIO 14, AFL 0; Riggs Optical Co., St. Paul, CIO 4, AFL 3; Walmon Optical Co., Minneapolis, CIO 8, AFL 4. In two state elections the results were as follows: Twin City Optical Co., Minneapolis, CIO 7, AFL 0; Johnson Optical Co., Minneapolis, CIO 7, AFL 0. Organizer Alberstein handled these elections.

CIO Reg. Dir. Ben Henry reports that in a representation election held at the Progressive Foundry, Perry, Iowa, the workers voted 48 to 38 in favor of the UAW-CIO. Intl Rep. Robert Johnston and William Short, president of Local 450, UAW-CIO, were in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. Ewald Sandner reports that in a representation election held at Robert Reiner, Inc. the vote was as follows: Eligible 260, IUE-CIO 219, no union 13, void 4. CIO Rep. Bart Enright was in charge.

The organized workers of Puerto Rico, recently affiliated with the CIO, are planning a big meeting Feb. 4, which the writer will attend. In chartering the Puerto Rican workers, the CIO has undertaken to give every aid and assistance to build a strong trade union movement in Puerto Rico.

Brother Ernesto Antonini, Secretary of Foreign Relations of the Puerto Rico General Confederation of Labor, Inc., which represents some 150,000 workers, has given the CIO splendid assistance and cooperation in developing a sound, progressive trade union movement that will serve as an example to other movements in the southern hemisphere.

Brother Antonini represented the Puerto Ricans at the London conference which formed the new International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. He cooperated fully with the CIO on all matters. Similar cooperation has been extended by President Thomas Mendez and Secretary Armando Rivero of the Puerto Rico Confederation.

Our unions everywhere are rallying to the support of the IUE-CIO. Chairman Carey has been holding meetings to bring about maximum support from all our affiliated organizations, on the local, regional, state, and national levels in this fight for free trade unionism.

Still Serious Obstacles To Negro Suffrage

"THE LONG struggle for Negro enfrachisement in the South apparently went over the 'hump' in 1949," states an article in a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor.

The fight for Negro suffrage in the South, however, will undoubtedly have to continue for years to come, it adds, for arbitrary local practices and interpretations of registration laws are still serious obstacles. Here are some significant excerpts from the article:

"Broadly, it can be said that the few states which have very heavy Negro populations, and which have so strenuously opposed Negro suffrage in the last five years, have apparently, at long last, become reconciled to the fact that there is no effective legal substitute for the 'white primary' declared unconstitutional by the federal courts.

"The various 'plans' to get around the Supreme Court decision opening the South's Democratic primaries to Negroes have either been knocked down by the courts or expediently abandoned. The last major fight seems to have come in Georgia, where the original enthusiasm over a Talmadge-sponsored re-registration law has appreciably waned.

"The Georgia law, enacted last January, called for a new registration of voters to be completed in time for the 1950 elections. It was admittedly aimed at what its sponsors called Negro 'bloc voting.' The effect was to wipe out the state's existing registration of 1,200,000 votes among whom are 120,000 Negroes. Negroes have voted in Georgia in larger numbers than in any other Southern state.

"The new law put up to the 159 counties—most of them not only small, but distinctly rural—the difficult and costly task of re-registering the voters according to the newly devised qualifications.

"These qualifications include a 'literacy' test, and, for illiterates a requirement that 10 out of 30 specified questions about government be answered correctly."

The article points out that once the law is in operation it will have to stand the test of constitutionality in the federal courts, and these in recent years have invariably considered the intent as well as the letter of the South's voting laws.

Since the counties were slow in appointing registrars, the work of re-registration has scarcely started and if the law remains in effect, it is estimated that it will cut the number of qualified voters in 1950 down to about half the number previously registered. But it is quite probable that the 1950 state legislature, convening this month, will postpone use of the new voters' list until after the 1950 elections.

IN ALABAMA, the article states, an attempt to get the legislature to pass a similar re-registration law, failed. The Federal courts previously had declared unconstitutional this state's requirement that a prospective voter be required to "interpret" the Constitution to the satisfaction of the registrars.

In South Carolina, the legislature meeting in January will be faced with the task of restoring some sort of election laws to the statute books to replace previous restrictions interfering with the right of Negroes which were ruled unconstitutional.

"As the Negro gains political rights in the South," the article concludes, "there is some indication that some parts of the region are taking a more democratic attitude in regard to the Negro race.

"Here and there, Negroes are beginning to win elective office, and in some instances, they are beginning to be appointed to important governmental boards."

Dixie's Racial, Religious Progress Is Cited

These random milestones of Southern progress in 1949 are noted in the Christian Science Monitor:

The citizens of Little Rock, Ark., voted a $359,000 bond issue for a Negro park and recreational facilities.

By awarding an honorary degree to Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, prominent Negro educator, Rollins College, at Winter Park, Fla., became, it is believed, the first Southern white college to so honor a Negro for achievement.

The Florida Legislature passed an enabling act to permit Miami Beach to prohibit discriminatory signs or advertisements of either a religious or racial nature.

The Georgia Leglislature passed a law requiring the counties of the state to use a "secret ballot" in all elections.

The Georgia Supreme Court ruled that counties with substantial Negro populations must put Negro citizens on the grand and traverse jury lists—and now Negroes are being called for jury service in many counties for the first time since Reconstruction days.

Did 'Life' Accidentally Hit Old Guard GOP?

By Bradford V. Carter
For Labor Press Association

THIS IS A story about Life—the magazine, that is. Its mid-century issue, whether the editors meant it or not (and it's a good bet that they did not), is an excellent argument against the Old Guard Republicans, and all the other forces that fought the Roosevelt regime and now battle the Truman program—all in the name of preserving free enterprise.

Life's "average man" of 1900 to 1950 turns out to be one who was making $10,000 a year in 1932 and is now so well fixed that he is thinking of retiring. (Life seems to have overlooked the fact that in this prosperous country, today, 10,000,000 families have incomes of $2000 or under a year.)

There is only one strike picture—a striker felling a policeman. (There are no pictures of police killing strikers.) There is a picture of an apple seller during the Hoover depression, and a picture of a child in a cotton mill, and the caption says "Humanity was exploited as American industry grew to gaint's size." (But there is no mention of the exploitation that still exists in the south today, or of exploitation of the migrant farm workers in California's rich valleys.)

THE ANSWER to the cry of a return "to the good days" is the article by Allan Nevins, the historian, who says that the America of 1900 "was not in fact a just or good society." He quotes the record—the army of youngsters under 16 at work; the fact that the meat packers "not only sweated their labor and robbed the public but also were not above grinding up dead rats into their sausage"; the fact that great wealth "seemed bent on making government itself captive," and did just about that in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, California and Montana. Nevins even quotes one of the class of privileged wealth as saying that the rich own America and intend to keep it, admitting also that the rich bought legislators.

Nevins also pointed out that "for capital to combine was sane business practice; for labor to combine was to challenge the tradition of individual initiative. Business in politics promised respectability; labor in politics could only mean subversive forces at work."

Does the line of the Old Guard Republicans, and the National Association of Manufacturers, and the Committee for Constitutional Government, sound any different today? Even today, in the midwest, union members are being forced to listen, on company time, to "Freedom Forums," which turn out to be attacks on the Truman policies, as previous "patriotic" enterprises to "save America" turned out to be attacks on the Roosevelt program.

WELL, BILL MAUDLIN, 28, the famous cartoonist of World War II, speaks up for what Life calls the "scared rabbit" generation, and he sums it up neatly. "Better the risk of a little inflation than a hole in the head," says he.

And he advises his scared elders to take it easy, not to get into such a tizzy over the urge for security, and he explains why his generation looks for security in the kind of world we live in, with a third World War by no means uncertain.

And he explains why the veterans, by and large, are for the Democrats, and not the Republicans. Maudlin says the veterans are not leaning towards "socialism" but that "the Democrats, in their own special, bumbling, often expensive and sometimes bureaucratic way, take more interest in the things that make us more apprehensive than the Republicans do."

Perhaps if the Republicans listened more to the Bill Mauldins and less to the Tafts and the Wherrys, they might regain the people's confidence, and win an election sometime.

"10 A. M., the Mayor; 10:30 A. M., the Civic Planners; 11 A. M., your board meeting; 12 o'clock, you take your acidosis milk."

Photo by Austin, Tex., American-Statesman

THREE LITTLE POLIO PATIENTS, (l. to r.), Dickie Williamson, 4, Richard Hunt, 3, and Bill Robertson, Jr., 4, all of Austin, Tex., enjoy a workout in a hydrotherapy tank designed to help restore mobility to their youthful bodies. The progress of thousands of infantile paralysis patients stricken last year in the worst epidemic ever recorded in this country depends for help on contributions to the March of Dimes campaign (January 16-31).

N. J. CIO Asks Rutgers Reform

The New Jersey State CIO on January 6 called for major changes in the state's contract with Rutgers University, designed "to create a genuine State University under effective public control and furnishing tuition-free education to New Jersey's students."

Harry Kranz, State CIO legislative director, said the CIO's legislative committee had decided to support Rutgers' request for about $4,000,000 additional state aid to wipe out tuition fees for New Jersey students, "only if Rutgers permits a majority of public members on its board of trustees."

If Rutgers does not agree to this condition, Kranz said, "then the state should contract other colleges and universities in the state to furnish education to capable youngsters, without sinking further state funds into buildings on the campus of a single essentially-private institution."

Mrs. Roosevelt Stays On NAACP Board

Reversing an earlier decision to resign from the board of directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People because of the pressure of her duties at the United Nations, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has consented to complete her present term as a board member, Roy Wilkins, acting NAACP secretary announced.

In a letter to Arthur B. Spingarn, NAACP president, Mrs. Roosevelt wrote, under date of Dec. 26: "I am very glad to stay on for a year."

Movie Shows Voters Need Constant Vigilance To Halt Corruption

1 The movie, "All the King's Men," from which the photos on this page were taken, is the story of Willie Stark, rural American. But it is more than that—it shows what happens when the voters are not constantly alert and should be a lesson for trade unionists.

2 In the preceding scene and this one Stark (who is wearing the white suit and the panama) is at the beginning of his first campaign for governor, running on an "honesty" program in which he sincerely believes. Here he is talking to the voters.

3 Stark gets the political low-down from Sadie Burke, who was sent by big-city politicians to watch him. She tells him he is being used to split the rural vote so the machine can win. Reporter Jack Burden listens as Sadie wises up the candidate.

4 Stark goes on a terrific binge. Instead of making a "safe" speech, he uncovers the scheme of the politicians. Stark causes a terrific sensation, but loses the election. (Had Stark made the speech earlier, he may have won.)

5 With help from Jack Burden and Sadie Burke, Stark is elected when he again runs for governor. He not only attracts the votes but Jack's girl, aristocratic Anne Stanton. Here he looks over his victory statement, at campaign headquarters.

6 From the balcony of his campaign headquarters Stark addresses the crowd, pledging an honest administration. A change is gradually coming over Stark—a lust for power. (In the background is a giant poster of the candidate.)

7 Coupled with Stark's lust for power—symbolized by this scene in which he reviews the state troopers—is corruption. He justifies himself by reasoning he is doing more good than evil. (Along about this time, an informed and determined electorate would have become wise and would have acted.)

8 Stark dedicates a new hospital—built less out of concern about health than out of desire to glorify Stark and his regime. Dr. Adam Stanton (on Stark's right) hates Stark's corruption; but he takes direction of the hospital to save his father's name from Stark's blackmail. Events begin to move swiftly.

9 Stark's corruption finally leads to an impeachment move—which fails when he calls out the rural voters to impress the legislators. But Dr. Stanton—infuriated by Stark's corruption of his sister and threats to his father—shoots the dictatorial governor. Union spectators reported the movie showed need of PAC.

Bill Would Show Congressmen's 'Other' Incomes

By NATHAN ROBERTSON
For Labor Press Association

SEN. WAYNE MORSE (R., Ore.) is proposing the most important Congressional reform in many years — one which is far more fundamental than all the changes in the Congressional Reorganization Act of 1946. It would require members of Congress to disclose any incomes outside of their Congressional salaries.

Unfortunately, the Morse proposal has no chance of approval at this session of Congress because it is one of the most unpopular bills now pending. But if organized labor and liberals get behind it, it will pass within the next few years.

The Morse proposal would unmask the most dangerous lobby in Washington—the lobby which operates from within the chambers of Congress through the members who are connected, directly or indirectly, with special interests.

The reason it is so unpopular and has so little chance even to be considered by a committee is because Congress is loaded down with such inside lobbyists. Some of them are consciously representing special interests. Others are doing so unconsciously, rationalizing the fact that they are voting and working on the side of their own pocketbooks.

MORSE'S proposal would force such inside lobbyists to unmask, and let the public judge whether they were voting their convictions or only their pocketbooks. It would no longer permit this decision to be made by the Congressmen themselves, as is now done.

Furthermore, Morse's proposal would make it doubly difficult for members of Congress to get involved in such scandals as have recently sent a series of Congressmen to jail. If Congressmen were required to let their constituents know their outside income, they would not be so likely to ask their employes to "kick back" part of their salary, or to sell their services to special interests, or to play the market on the basis of their inside information. All of these things have been happening in Congress, and perhaps on a much wider scale than anyone knows about.

But the most important function the legislation would serve would be to uncover not illegal operations, but legal bribery of members of Congress by special interests through fees to their law firms, or other such indirect payments. It might also be expanded to cover payments in the form of donations to campaign funds.

FEW PEOPLE outside of Congress have any idea how serious this problem is. Some liberal members of Congress know well, because they have seen their pet legislative proposals wrecked by men secretly working for special interests either because they were paid directly for their services, or because they held stock in the companies involved.

But even those Congressmen who know how bad the situation is hesitate to do anything about it because of the hatred they would incur and the resentment they would stir up. One prominent member of Congress told me last week he could not afford to push for such legislation because it would make him useless in all other legislative fights—his colleagues would shun him and everything he said or did.

This fear has prevented action on this problem for many years. I have been interested in such legislation for several years, and have talked to many Congressmen about it.

My interest began back about 1944 when I found that most of the members of Congress who were pushing for legislation exempting the insurance companies from the anti-trust laws were either lawyers for insurance companies or had other connections with them. The public, of course, never knew this—or the efforts of these Congressmen would have been discredited.

It is difficult even to gather evidence on the seriousness of the inside lobby for the purposes of demanding legislation. Members of Congress who have such connections do not, of course, like to talk about them. Efforts to question them draw resentment and much evasion. But it is known, for instance, that there are many members of Congress who belong to law firms representing special interests. Most Congressmen are lawyers and many continue to draw fees from their firms.

Other members of Congress get pay directly or indirectly from such interests as air transport companies, railroads, steel companies, and some of the biggest monopolies in the country. When they attack the anti-trust laws, or defend the special interests of these companies they are not talking as statesmen, as they seem to the public to be doing, but as stockholders or paid lobbyists. These facts should, of course, be known to the public.

One of the most vicious attacks ever made on the anti-trust division was made a few years ago by a Republican Senator who was connected with a big company which dominates its industry and was under attack by the anti-trust division. The public, of course, did not realize this.

The viciousness of pocketbook influence on a Senator was recognized years ago by the man who once occupied the office now used by Morse—Sen. James Couzens of Michigan. Couzens was one of the richest men ever to sit in the Senate. But before he took his seat he put all of his money — about $30,000,000 — into government bonds so that he would be above suspicion.

Instead of voting always with the special interests—as most wealthy Senators do — Couzens usually voted against them. He was one of the best public servants who ever sat in the Senate.

Morse's legislation would force more members of Congress to do what dozens did—or suffer the consequences. If they wanted to keep their money in private corporations they could, but the voters would have a chance to judge their actions in the light of that knowledge. No Senator or Congressman who is operating honestly should object to that. But they do—and so do the many who, consciously or unconsciously, are operating dishonestly.

New Use For Phone Book Found By CWA

"Memo from Pac" reports that the Iowa CIO has worked out a scheme for licking "that always pesky job of making up a mailing list of unionists in the state."

In each city, a telephone book is passed around each local, and a check mark is placed beside the names of its members. The book is then sent to the state office, which copies the names onto a master mailing list.

The book then can be sent back to the local, taken apart, and passed on to a registration committee or any other union group desiring to phone the members.

Members without telephones, or those who live outside the area covered by the city directory, are listed separately.

The idea originated with CWA, natch.

Fraud In Michigan Election Charged

CHARGES OF "grave irregularities" that "amount to fraud under the law" were detailed to a House committee in Washington last week by spokesmen for George D. Stevens, labor-backed Democratic candidate for Congress from Flint, Mich.

Stevens is demanding a recount of the ballots in the 1948 election, when he apparently lost by 784 votes out of 146,000 cast.

Pro-union members of Congress point to the signficance of the contest in the light of the voting record of the Republican who was seated in the close election, William R. Blackney. Blackney since he was seated has voted "wrong" on all except one of the key votes recorded by CIO-PAC and Labor's League for Political Education.

Committee Chairman Burr Harrison (D, Va.) has been charged with obstructing Stevens' efforts to obtain a recount because of a letter he sent to the city clerk of Flint, advising him to ignore a subpoena to produce ballots for a recount.

STEVENS, a youthful attorney who is secretary of Flint's school board, said that if he loses out in a vote promised him Jan. 10 in the House Administration Committee, or on the floor of the House when it reaches that body, he'll keep right on fighting and will run against Blackney again next November.

"These die-hards are trying the last resort to keep one jump ahead of the labor movement!"

Stevens' supporters told the committee that, even though they hadn't been able to get a recount, they had instance after instance of errors such as tally clerks falling asleep, and "corrections" amounting to as many as 433 votes made by the Gennessee County board of canvassers' clerk.

The issue, Stanley R. Beattie, who spoke for Stevens, told the Congressmen, "is the disenfranchisement of 72,000 voters. Recounts make for the purity of elections. We are asking that the wrong done by the state court be removed and that the original evidence, the best evidence, be looked into to see whether Stevens lost by 724 votes." (LPA)

ITU Hit Again By T-H

THE NLRB jumped on the Intl. Typographical Union-AFL again in a decision involving the international and seven locals in six cities. For the fourth time, the board found the ITU had violated the Taft-Hartley act by insisting on closed shop conditions. Complaints were filed by commercial printing plants in Chicago, Detroit (two locals), Pittsburgh, Newark, St. Louis and Philadelphia.

Both the international and the locals were held guilty of causing or attempting to cause employers to discriminate against employes on a basis of union membership. In addition, the locals were found guilty of not bargaining in good faith within the meaning of the Taft-Hartley act.

This and previous cases stemmed from the bargaining policy adopted by the ITU after the Taft-Hartley act was passed in 1947. Earlier decisions involved the union and the Chicago Newspaper Publishers Ass'n, the American Newspaper Publishers Assn' and Baltimore job printers.

In the present case, the seven locals and the international were ordered to cease the forbidden practices. (LPA)

Prospects Good for Bill Expanding Social Security

THERE IS strong possibility that this session of Congress will pass a law expanding the Social Security system.

The House at the previous session passed a bill to expand the system, and Sen. George (D., Ga.) has announced that the Finance Committee, which he heads, will open hearings on the bill soon, perhaps by Jan. 16. He predicted completed action at this session.

The House bill would give 11 million persons old age and survivors' insurance for the first time and increase benefits generally an average of 80%.

What kind of a bill will be satisfactory to Republican leadership is a question, in view of the statement by Sen. Taft (R., Ohio). He said that Congress should act at this session but added that it would be "unwise" to link pensions paid by industry with social security.

BUT THE Economic Outlook of the CIO Dept. of Education and Research foresaw the likelihood that industrial interests would want to link pensions—such as have been won by the CIO Steelworkers and the CIO Auto Workers—with social security.

Commented the Outlook:

"One development stemming from the recent CIO collective bargaining agreements for pensions and social security may well be the stimulation of Congress to take long delayed steps to improve social security legislation.

"One of the features of the auto and the steel contracts, and many other collective bargaining contracts now being entered into, is that the pension paid is inclusive of the social security benefits; that is, the higher the government's contribution, as a result of the old age and survivors' insurance program, the less will be the contribution of the employer to the workers' pension.

"For example, if an individual worker is entitled to $100 and the government's contribution is $25, the employer will have to pay $75. However, if the federal government's pension were increased, the company would have to pay only a $50 contribution in order to arrive at the $100 pension.

"A WORKER could be entitled to a $150 pension. The government now contributes only $25 so the company is obligated to pay $125. If, however, the federal government's payment was increased to $50, the company would contribute only $100, thus saving $25 a month on that pension.

"These two examples clearly show that it will be to the advantage of employes for reasons all their own to bring pressure upon the federal government to increase the Old Age and Survivors' Insurance program.

"In other words, the employers now have an incentive to work for increased social security payments by the federal government. One of the basic contributions, therefore, which the trade union movement has made in the whole social security field may well be the stimulation of employer groups to fight for improved federal old age pension programs.

"Employers may well begin pressuring for improved federal benefits, not because they believe in them, as such, but because they are interested in reducing their own costs. But, for whatever reason they engage in lobbying, the majority of the American workers stand to benefit."

WEEKLY PUBLICATION
of the
CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00
A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 16, 1950 No. 3

WHEN RENT CONTROLS were lifted in the town of Shamokin, Pa., on Jan. 1, members of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers found themselves faced with increases averaging 40%. They took their story straight to Tighe Woods, federal housing expediter, who had issued the decontrol order. Here the delegation is with Woods. L. to r., Harold Sneltz, president of ACW Local 129 and secretary of the Northumberland County CIO Council; J. R. Petroski, member of ACW Local 129; John Edelman, TWUA Washington representative; Woods; William B. McCaig, International representative of TWUA Local 173; Richard Sharp, secretary-treasurer of TWUA Local 173; Helen Blanchard, ACW Washington representative; and William Maher, president of TWUA Local 173. (See Page 9 for details and for story on New York State's action on decontrols.)

HST Budget Assures 'Growth of Country'

President Truman has challenged the economy bloc in Congress. He submitted another unbalanced budget in order to carry out his Fair Deal program for making America Stronger. He said that the budget provides for steps "which support rather than impair the continued growth of our country." (See stories on Pages 3 and 6.)

Co-Op Housing Issue 'Summons' Lobbyists

The "middle-income" housing bill, including provision for long-term, low-interest loans to cooperatives, is due for early Senate consideration. A swarm of real estate lobbyists has hit town to turn on the pressure against this bill and to try to kill rent control. The bill is favored by CIO and AFL; it offers a 25% reduction in housing costs. (See story page 9.)

Public Workers Heard on 'Red' Charges

on Page 2)

Public Workers Heard On Red Charges

THE UNITED Public Workers of America, charged with following Communist Party rather than CIO policies, was given a three-day closed-door hearing at CIO headquarters in Washington last week.

Some 48 hours before the hearing started, the Public Workers released to newspapers (not including The CIO News) a long statement denying the charges and using a wide variety of adjectives to attempt a smear of the CIO, Pres. Philip Murray and other CIO officials.

Throughout the period of the closed hearings, the Public Workers used daily press conferences to continue the propaganda campaign against CIO. It followed a now-familiar theme of damning CIO policies and motives, while at the same time insisting that the union leadership wishes to continue its affiliation with the organization it attacks so vigorously.

But while Pres. Abram Flaxer of the United Public Workers continued his denial that the union leadership had either followed Communist policies or flouted CIO policies, witnesses before the CIO hearing appeared to be offering quite another story.

The witnesses against the Public Workers—two of whom released sections of their testimony to the press—were backed up by a mass of photostatic copies of the union's paper and other publications.

PRES. WILLIAM Steinberg of the American Radio Association — who filed the original charges against the Public Workers at the Cleveland meeting of the CIO Board last November—was one of the principal witnesses against the Public Workers.

He charged that the union had "diligently followed every twist and turn of the Communist Party line from its inception to the present date."

Steinberg charged that the State County & Municipal Workers—which in 1946 joined with the United Federal Workers to form the present UPWA — had performed a variety of somersaults on war policy that coincided with changes in the Communist line.

He recalled that in 1940—before Hitler's invasion of Russia—the union had "lavish praise for the isolationist activities of Senator Burton K. Wheeler." In 1946 the union hailed government reports which accused Wheeler of having "gotten his isolationist propaganda from Nazi Germany," Steinberg added.

"They didn't go on to explain that at the same time in 1940, Wheeler was their darling and that they, the union, had attacked Roosevelt for not agreeing with Wheeler . . . This stand concerning Wheeler shows up the mockery, fraud and hypocrisy of the union's pretense at patriotism."

Reviewing other actions of the UPWA and Pres. Abram Flaxer, Steinberg concluded: "We find, as I have already shown, that they operated on behalf of the Communist Party, and that their judgments were not dictated by any concern for the interest of the labor movement of this country or for the CIO."

MMSW Hearing Set For Jan. 18

The Intl. Union of Mine Mill & Smelter Workers is scheduled for a hearing Jan. 18 before a CIO hearing committee in Washington. Like nine other affiliates, the union has been charged with Communist domination. The CIO constitution bars affiliation of unions which follow Communist rather than CIO policies.

Hearings have already been held on similar charges lodged against three other unions: the United Office & Professional Workers; the Food Tobacco & Agricultural Workers; the United Public Workers.

Both UOPWA and FTA have gone into court, in New York and Washington, to seek injunctions against further action against them by CIO. Hearings have been held on two of the injunction proceedings, but the courts have not yet announced their decisions.

ANOTHER KEY witness against the UPWA leadership was Charles Rindone, a special patrolman of the New York City Dept. of Welfare, and formerly a member of UPWA Local 1, and of the Communist Party. Rindone is now a member of the American Civic Employes Association, affiliated with the CIO Utility Workers.

Rindone testified that several months after joining the Public Workers in 1935, he became a member of the Communist Party. He said he had "personal knowledge" that UPWA Pres. Flaxer and many other of the union's officials were "associated with the Communist Party."

He said he could remember at least two Communist party "fraction" meetings at which Flaxer and other union officials had been present to discuss union policies.

"The Communist Party apparatus in the Dept. of Welfare was regularly used to control the actions and policies of the local union and to channel Communist Party policy into the union," Rindone said.

"Fraction meetings were held in advance of the union membership meetings. At those meetings the Communist Party position was always agreed upon. Then the agreed-upon policy would be presented to the union meeting and be adopted by the union."

He also charged that well-advertised dances, raffles and other fund-raising projects were often conducted by the local, with "the proceeds diverted to some Communist party projects."

THE PUBLIC Workers hearings opened Jan. 9 and ended on the evening of Jan. 11. Hearing the testimony was a three-man CIO committee consisting of Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers, Pres. Joseph Beirne of Communications Workers, and Pres. Harry Sayre of the United Paperworkers. Lawyers and spectators were barred from the hearings.

Although some radio commentators had predicted that a crowd of 300 would come from New York and other eastern cities to create a riot outside CIO headquarters when the hearings began, the Monday morning scene on Washington's Jackson Place was serene and peaceful.

THE HEARING WAS RECESSED for five minutes so that Pres. Abram Flaxer (left, wearing bow tie) could tell his members from New York City and Washington that his request that they be allowed to attend the hearing had been denied.

About 50 persons who identified themselves as UPWA members sought to enter CIO headquarters in order to appear at the hearing as witnesses.

In the group were five children, under five years of age, and dressed in attractive snow suits. Neither they nor the rest of the group were permitted to enter the hearing. In attendance at the hearings were Pres. Flaxer, Secy.-Treas. Ewart Guinier, and other national figures in the union.

IN TWO REPORTS made available to the press, and in three press conferences, Flaxer used sharp words against the CIO.

The union's preliminary statement said the charge—of Communist domination of UPWA—"is a lie, the 'trial' is a fake, its methods, the methods of dictators, and its sole weapon, the ancient red herring . . ."

The statement asserted that CIO leaders, not the Public Workers, were violating "basic CIO policy in almost every major particular." In an obvious attack on CIO's foreign policy, it charged that CIO leaders are "sacrificing labor's independent role . . . by surrender to a foreign policy that is the product of labor's enemies."

Later, Flaxer charged that the Dept. of Labor had paid for photostats of "179" documents used by witnesses in making their case against the union. Labor Dept. officials pointed out that the same service is available to "every research organization, public or private, including the Public Workers."

At his press conferences, Flaxer denied that he is a Communist, and claimed that one purpose of the hearings against his union was to "cover up" the CIO's "inability to lead the rank and file and obtain better wages and hours."

THAT CLAIM—with little basis of fact to shore it up—was quickly countered by a statement issued by CIO Pres. Murray. (See other story this page).

Murray Says 'No Need For Confusion About Issues'

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, who has been the subject of an almost continuous sniping attack in the Daily Worker and in the columns of many left-wing union publications, last week issued a statement.

For a public perhaps confused by the left-wing attacks, Murray explained CIO's motives, procedures and actions in dealing with charges of Communist domination against certain unions.

Pres. Murray's statement:

"THE CIO, at its last convention, adopted constitutional amendments barring continued affiliation to any Communist-dominated national union.

"Ten affiliates of the CIO have been formally accused of Communist domination.

"Fact-finding hearings have already been held in the case of three of these accused organizations. Other hearings will be held in coming months.

"These hearings have been conducted in accordance with traditional CIO democratic procedures. The accused unions and their leaderships have been offered complete due process; they have been given adequate opportunity to defend themselves against the charges.

"It cannot be said that any of the unions which have been brought before the CIO hearing boards represent any substantial proportion of American workers. The Communist carbon-copy policies which they have followed through the years have prevented them from following the basic CIO policy of organizing the unorganized; and many of the members who joined those unions in good faith have left those organizations in disgust.

• "The United Public Workers, which yesterday issued a libelous attack upon the CIO, is an organization of some 30,000 members. It has signally failed to organize the millions of federal, state and local government workers who want the benefits of honest unionism but who reject the Moscow-line policies of the United Public Workers.

• "The United Office and Professional Workers, which has instituted a series of legal actions against the CIO, is a puny organization of less than 30,000 members. It has failed miserably to organize the millions and millions of white collar workers who recognize that their economic betterment must eventually come through the collective bargaining process. But the Communist-dominated UOPWA, though it can talk glibly of problems in China, Bulgaria or Timbuctoo, cannot talk the language that will appeal to these American white collar workers.

• "The Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers might have become a great organization representing the economic interests of millions of workers in the food-processing industries. Many of those workers are among the country's most severely exploited; but they have constantly refused to join in any appreciable number a union whose leadership has consistently served the political interests of the Communist Party rather than the economic interests of its own membership.

"THERE NEED be no confusion in the minds of CIO members or the general public about the issues in these cases.

"The CIO, carrying out a policy adopted by the representatives of the great majority of its members, is seeking to end the affiliation of any union dominated by the Communist Party.

"These unions, which are charged with being dominated by the Communist Party and its agents, are being given full opportunity to present the facts to refute the charges filed against them. Instead, they have borrowed the tools of the traditional enemies of labor to harass the CIO, to attempt to discredit our organization, to interfere with our routine activities, to belittle our hard-fought gains and to maximize our set-backs.

"These are the tactics of political adventurists, who have no regard for the fundamental welfare of their members. They do not want constructive labor organizations which will improve the conditions of millions of unionists and act as a force for good on the American scene. The Communists feed on chaos and decay.

"But they will find no success in their campaign against the CIO.

"United, strong, dedicated to the American democratic ideal, the CIO will get on with the job of cleansing American labor of communism in order to advance the genuine interests of our millions of union members."

PAC Work Now On Member 'Buck' Basis

CIO-PAC national office is ready to mail out receipt books for the start of the 1950 voluntary contributions drive, and CIO officials all over the country are holding preparatory meetings to lay the groundwork for intensive fund-raising.

On Jan. 1, on the advice of its attorneys, PAC shifted its entire operation to the voluntary basis, in order to satisfy the Taft-Hartley requirement that the money for union political activities in connection with Federal primaries and elections must come from individual members and not from union treasuries.

Consequently, from now till the 1950 Congressional campaigns are finished, all expenses of running the national office must be raised by individual contributions—and PAC has advised state organizations to do likewise. Union treasuries may be tapped only for municipal and state campaigns.

Truman Says Budget Assures 'Growth Of Country'

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has challenged the economy bloc in Congress by submitting another unbalanced budget for the fiscal year beginning in July in order to carry out his Fair Deal program for making America stronger.

Like the budget presented a day earlier by the Committee for Economic Development, composed of businessmen, the President proposes to balance the budget by future revenues from a growing economy rather than from short-range economies that would make the country weaker.

The President's budget would result in a deficit next year of $5.1 billion, but the chief executive said it was "directed at achieving a budgetary balance in the only way in which it can be achieved—by measures which support rather than impair the continued growth of our country."

POINTING OUT that 71% of the proposed expenditures were to pay for past wars and achieve world peace, the President said only 29%, or $12.5 billion, were devoted to the domestic program aimed at a "healthy and growing economy." He said he was concerned, not that this was "too much," but that it might be "too little" for the purpose of "stimulating the realization of our country's great potential development."

For the first time, the budget this year noted how large a percentage of the proposed expenditures was devoted to building up the assets of the country and would be repaid to the government either directly or indirectly in the future. A special tabulation showed that a total of $12.4 billion out of the total budget of $42.4 billions would be spent for loans, construction, or other development purposes.

Of this, $8.7 billion would be devoted to building up federal assets, including military. The President noted that, of this $8.7 billion, about $5.6 billion would "represent the acquisition of assets which are recoverable or will give continuing returns in future years, and which in normal business accounting would not usually be considered as current expenses." This part of the budget, which might be considered an investment, was higher than the estimated deficit.

The President said that about $4 billion of this investment would be repaid to the government through repayment of loans, the sale of commodities, or the sale of power from dam projects. Much of the rest of this investment budget would go for such development purposes as State and local construction of hospitals and schools, research, education and health.

Overall, the President's budget estimates receipts during the next fiscal year at $37,306,000,000 and expenditures at $42,493,000,000. This spending total is almost $1 billion less than this year's, representing chiefly cuts in foreign programs, and veterans' costs.

THE PRESIDENT'S message included a strong plea for strengthening and expanding social security programs, including national health insurance. He asked for broader legislation on old age insurance than that now pending in Congress, pointing to the increasing burden of public assistance for those not now covered. Bigger appropriations for housing, health and education, also were asked.

THIS CHART gives an estimate of where Uncle Sam's money will come from and where it will go in the fiscal year 1951. Budget Dir. Frank Pace holds a copy of the budget. Note the small expenditure of six cents for social welfare, health and security. (A health program and expanded old age and survivors insurance would be financed by payroll levies paid by employe and employer, and therefore the chart does not show these programs.)

HST Calls For Tripling National Income By '55

PRESIDENT TRUMAN, in his annual economic report to Congress, has outlined governmental and industrial policies designed to raise national production to $300 billion by 1955, which would mean an additional income averaging $1000 per family and "go far toward our goal of the complete elimination of poverty."

For government, the President's program calls for maintenance and expansion of resource development, educational, health, social security and world peace antivities, and balancing the budget through increased economic activity.

For industry, the program calls for maintaining or lowering current prices, raising wages as productivity rises, and increasing capital investment to provide for an expanding market.

The President reported that the nation today is "on firmer ground" than it was a year ago, with production and employment rising after the 1949 recession and a "renewed confidence" prevailing in the economy. He told the legislators that "our basic economic problem" now is not inflation but "to increase production, employment and incomes to complete the recovery" and "go on to higher levels."

For the current year, the President fixed the economic goal as cutting unemployment from 3½ million to 2, or at the most 2½ million, and stepping up national output by about 7%, in order to "regain maximum employment." In an accompanying report the Council of Economic Advisors said this would mean creating 2 million additional jobs this year.

For story on how the President's Council of Economic Advisers rapped the steel industry for increasing prices, see Page 12.

LOOKING toward a constantly expanding economy, the President has now in his annual and economic messages to Congress fixed three goals for the nation. The first is this year's goal—to complete the recovery and achieve maximum employment. The next is the 1955 goal—a national income of $300 billion. The third is the goal for the year 2000—national income of one trillion dollars, which would mean triple today's standard of living.

In reaching these goals, the President strongly emphasized the increasing opportunities for private industry in meeting the demands of an expanding economy. He promised the government would help to reverse the downward trend of private business investment by "certain changes," which he did not specify, designed to "stimulate business activity."

The President warned, however, that business investments can continue at a high level "only if markets for consumer goods continue to expand." He added: "Price and wage policies should be directed at enlarging these markets. For only by broadening the distribution of goods and services can our business system find full use for its expanding productive capacity."

In line with this philosophy, the President sharply warned industry against increasing prices, asserting that there are "few, if any, major areas in which price increases would be justified under present circumstances" and some where price cuts are justified. The report of the Council of Economic Advisors hit hard at the recent increase in steel prices.

THE REPORT of the Economic Council spelled out for business in more detail the kind of market it can expect with an expanding economy, and strongly urged business leaders to make the investments necessary to meet such market demands.

For instance, the President and his Council said, a national production of $300 billion by 1955 would mean consumer spending of $210 billion to $225 billion and would represent a tremendously expanded market for all industrial products from homes and automobiles down to pins and needles, and expand consumption of food by 10%. The average consumer expenditures would increase during the coming five years by 15 to 20%, the Council said.

THE COUNCIL took a strong stand against any cut in corporation taxes at this time. This, together with the President's talk about tax revisions to "stimulate business expansion," hinted that the Administration would propose cuts in the excise or sales taxes on necessities such as travel, telephones, telegraph messages, and perhaps on such things as jewelry and furs, and a longer period for business to balance losses against profits.

About the only new legislative proposal in the President's message was a recommendation that the Federal Reserve Board be given additional authority to regulate bank reserves, including the reserves of non-federal reserve banks that belong to the FDIC (Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation). This has been strongly recommended by Marriner S. Eccles, a member of the reserve board, but will be fought by the the State banks.

Action Urged To Combat Joblessness

EMIL RIEVE, administrative chairman of the CIO's Full Employment Committee, has hailed the long range goals outlined in the economic reports of President Truman and the Council of Economic Advisers, but warned that immediate "practical steps" are necessary to halt recessionary trends and combat unemployment.

Text of the statement by Rieve, who is head of the Textile Workers Union of America, follows:

"The nation has been given the vision of a more bountiful and prosperous America than ever before, in the 1950 Economic Reports of President Truman and his Council of Economic Advisers. The theme of these Reports is that a national output in excess of 300 billion dollars—40 billion dollars more than 1949—can be attained by 1954, provided we adopt prudent policies designed to furnish useful employment to all of our expanding population.

"But for 1950, these Reports show little evidence of practical steps to make necessary adjustments that will fully reverse the recessionary tendencies of 1949, and to insure progress toward the goal of an enlarged national output.

"Movement toward a 300 billion dollar national output must involve, in the Council's words, 'a growth in consumer buying at a more rapid rate than the growth in business investment.' This implies shifts in favor of the consumption forces in our economy, which the Council indicates have fallen to disturbingly low levels in the past few years.

"IN THE FACE of the already announced steel price increases, and the general rigidity of consumer prices during 1949, it is difficult to see how mere internal 'recuperative forces' of the economy can bring about progress toward these high consumption goals.

"In the light of these facts and in the face of further prospective declines in business investment, it appears unlikely that we can accomplish the President's goal of reducing unemployment from the present level of 3½ million.

"Indeed, in the absence of changes in specific economic policy, it appears probable that instead of reducing unemployment, we shall face the prospect of adding to the ranks of the jobless when hundreds of thousands of new workers enter the labor market in 1950.

"The President and the Council should take these facts into consideration when they finally formulate the revised tax program which is promised in these Reports. Steps must be taken to raise personal income tax exemptions and to provide tax relief for consumers.

"We endorse the call for programs to insure the building of 1½ million new residential units annually, which will simultaneously meet a great social need and offer expanding employment and investment opportunities for labor and business.

The President asked the first session of the 81st Congress to raise corporation taxes, but has not yet unveiled his tax program

They'd Fight For Right To Vote, But—

It Takes A Lot of Steam To Get Some People Qualified And Then Get Them To Polls On Election Day

By ALLAN L. SWIM

PERHAPS it's impossible for most persons to get all steamed up in January over elections which won't occur until November.

But it's not too early to begin building the fires which will generate the steam a little later.

And you're just kidding yourself if you figure that you don't have to build fires under many persons to get them to exercise a right which most of them say they would die to defend—the right to vote.

Every PAC block-worker who ever pushed a doorbell knows this is true.

And you frequently find that those who gripe the most about the way the government is run are the hardest to get to the polls.

NATIONAL PAC DIR. Jack Kroll was certainly right when he said that political action is a year-around job.

The politicians—at least the smart ones—work at it 12 months a year.

So do many of the enemies of organized labor, who seem to be much more aware than the average working man or woman of the importance of winning elections.

Unfortunately, too many union members get interested in political campaigns AFTER it's too late to register and AFTER it's too late to pay poll taxes in those states which require them.

And too many take the view that it's just too much trouble to go to the polls on election day.

THE FIRST OF this year's primaries will occur in less than four months. At least two come as early as May 2.

The primaries are extremely important. Winning them in some states is tantamount to election.

This means that CIO members in some parts of the nation have only a limited time in which to start getting up that steam.

A number of contests which might result in victory for labor in November probably will be lost earlier unless real political action campaigns get under way quickly.

You start winning—or losing—elections a long time before the primary votes are counted.

That's because it takes organization—real organization—to come out on top in politics.

IT'S ALL WELL AND good to sit around and talk about the fine things contained in the Fair Deal program.

But a Fair Deal program in Truman's mind and a Fair Deal program in action are two entirely different things.

Truman was elected in November, 1948. The 81st Congres held its first session early in 1949. It's now early 1950 and much of the President's program is still on paper.

It's in that condition because a coalition of Republicans and Dixiecrats—the Dixiegops—did everything it could during the first session of the present Congress to block the President's program.

The only place to smash this coalition or to make it so weak that it's ineffective is at the polls.

And this is the year in which it could be done.

A GREAT STRUGGLE is going on up on Capitol Hill and throughout the country—and labor has a big stake in its outcome.

It is, roughly, between those who believe that a good government is one which does the most for the most people and those who believe that a good government is one which does the least for the people.

The first group, of which labor is an important part, believes that government should be used to provide the people with the services which they want and need but cannot obtain through business and industry.

The second group believes that government should keep its hands off those fields which business and industry have staked out for themselves.

Here's another way to say the same thing:

One group believes that all of the people who make up our country come ahead of any individual, privileged group.

The other believes the privileged groups should get the breaks and that the rest should take what's left over.

YES, IT'S QUITE a struggle—one into which the wealthy will pour huge sums this year and in years to come.

It takes dough to fight back.

That's why PAC is now making a push for $1 contributions. The contribution receipt books will be in the hands of local union officers in a short time.

The money is needed soon so PAC can make some specific plans. There's no better place to invest a buck.

Civil Rights Again

An old and wise friend of ours opines that the civil rights issue is "darn near worn out."

"It ought to be," says he. "At the beginning of almost every session of Congress it's taken down from the shelf, dusted off, kicked around and then put back on the shelf again."

He's tired of such behavior. And so are we. Frankly, we've been tired of it for a long time.

From where we sit it looks as if civil rights legislation will come down off the shelf again this year.

We have a hunch that the same forces which blocked its passage in the past will be right in there trying to give it another kicking-around.

And we also have a hunch that they may not succeed, filibuster as they may.

Nobody who has taken the trouble to investigate the situation will deny that a certain portion of our population gets a rough deal because of race, creed and color discrimination.

And it's obvious to most people that certain types of civil rights abrogation could be checked or eliminated by the proper legislation.

Yet there is a group in Congress which has insisted—often and noisely—that the federal government has no business poking its nose into the matter.

This group can be trounced—and trounced badly—if other members of Congress who profess to believe in a real civil rights program will get in there and pitch for all they're worth.

They should. They really should—and at the present session!

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer

Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher

Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss

Business Manager: Richard E. Bauer

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII January 16, 1950 No. 3

Probe Of Wire Tapping Urged

THE AMERICAN Civil Liberties Union and the Americans for Democratic Action on Jan. 10 voiced their opposition to the practice of wire-tapping by agents of the federal government.

The two organizations called on the Senate Judiciary Committee to open an immediate investigation of "this rapidly-spreading evil."

In a letter to Senator Pat McCarran (D.-Nev.), head of the Senate Committee, they urged that the investigation cover the power of the government to employ wire-tapping either to secure evidence or leads to evidence, the extent of wire-tapping, "and if it does not now do so, whether the Federal Communications Act should not be amended so as to outlaw all such methods by Federal authorities."

The letter was signed by ACLU Board Chairman John Haynes Holmes, General Counsel Arthur Garfield Hays, Acting Director Clifford Foster, and ADA National Director Charles M. La Follette and Executive Chairman Joseph L. Rauh, Jr.

Noting that recent disclosures of wire-tapping by federal agents prompted their action, the ACLU and ADA officials stated that "fundamental rights such as confidential communications between attorney and client, husband and wife, parent and child, doctor and patient, minister and parishioner seem to be in jeopardy."

They added they always considered wire-tapping as an "invasion of the right of privacy and a serious infringement of civil liberties. In our opinion the Federal Communications Act prohibits all forms of wire-tapping, and we call to your attention the various decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court which have strongly criticized and barred these practice in federal cases."

Newsprint 'Trust' Inquiry Asked

THE CIO Newspaper Guild has appealed to Congress to investigate the newsprint monopoly, in the wake of the demise of the N. Y. Sun. Sam Eubanks, ANG executive vice-president, has wired Rep. Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) asking that Celler's committee investigating monopolies take up the matter.

Celler was ill last week, but his associates reported that he was interested in the proposal.

Eubanks said the newsprint monopoly over supply and prices "is a major factor in destruction of newspaper properties," and cited the 104% price increase since 1939. He cited "enormous profits of newsprint producers totally unrelated to any reasonable measure of fair return on mill investment," and charged "excessive newsprint costs in the last three years have contributed to death of newspapers, unemployment of newspaper craftsmen and impaired the ability of many publishers to provide adequate economic security for their employes."

Eubanks said capacity of Canadian mills exceeds demand but that prices will be maintained artificially in 1950 "to the further injury of the newspaper industry in the United States."

(The Sun, in folding, emphasized that the chief factor was the "unreasonable demands of unions" but at that time the New York Guild reported no wage increases had been given by the Sun last year. Other newspaper publishers have shrieked about union demands. There is nothing to indicate that they are doing anything about the gouge in newsprint prices.)

"Who stole the pie I stole from Smitty?"

DOLLARS AND SENSE

Unionist Borrowed Wheelbarrow And - - -

IT ALL STARTED because Nature saw fit to create a rock formation at a spot which eventually became a front yard.

Because of the rock, a CIO representative was puffing and grunting one afternoon.

A neighbor—a stranger to the CIO man—walked past, stopped and watched a minute or two and then said:

"You'll break your back carrying those big chunks of rock out of your yard. Why don't you come over to the house and let me lend you my wheelbarrow."

The CIO man jumped at the invitation—and as a result the CIO soon had a new union.

AFTER HIS yard was cleared of rock the CIO representative returned the wheelbarrow and thanked his neighbor for it.

Then he introduced himself and said he thought he'd enjoy living in his new home.

"Say, I'm the president of a union, but it's not much good because we can't take in Negro members," the neighbor said.

He explained that he was a school custodian, that he and his fellow workers really needed union protection.

But, he added, there were a large number of Negro custodians who were barred from membership.

"Why don't you get into the CIO?" he was asked.

"By golly, that sounds like a good idea. How do you go about it?"

THE CIO MAN shook his head and said, "I don't know whether there's a union set-up here that can take care of you. You see, I've just been in town a short time.

"I'll do some checking on the situation and let you know what can be done.

"One thing you can count on: If there's not a good union here that you can join I'm going to suggest that you stay with the one you've got."

The next day he learned that there was a suitable local union with which the custodians could become affiliated. That night he called on his neighbor.

SAID THE CIO man: "I found out today there's a good set-up here that you can join if you want to drop your present affiliation."

"That sounds good to me," replied the neighbor. "What do I do next?"

"First tell me this: Do you have any written contracts under which you're working?"

"No, we don't."

"Then it seems to me that about all you'll have to do is to hold a meeting and get a majority of your members to vote to come into the CIO."

"OK, I'll do it. Sounds simple to me."

"Better let me send out a representative of the union I'm talking about so he can give you the low-down."

"OK."

ABOUT 10 days passed before the neighbors got together again and when they did the custodian extended his hand and said, "Hello, brother."

"I take that to mean you're now in the CIO," said the CIO representative.

"Yep, went off slick as a whistle. I got 'em to put it to a vote and they voted for the CIO. It looks like we're going to have a good union at last."

The custodian paused, grinned, then said:

"I told my wife this morning that if I get a raise out of that contract we're going to negotiate it will be because I happened to have an old wheelbarrow!"

A. L. S.

Robert Nathan Says:

'We Can And Must Expand Our Living Standards'

Excerpts from a radio talk by Robert R. Nathan, economist, who broadcasts each week for the CIO.

IN THE PAST two weeks President Truman and his advisers have given us five documents which are probably the most important economic statements ever issued by the Government. These include the Presdent's Budget, Economic, and State of the Union messages, plus the Annual Report and the Economic Review of the Council of Economic Advisers. They interpret the past, evaluate the present and offer a program for the future.

There is one common theme which runs through all of these documents—the theme of expansion and progress. There is repeated emphasis that we can and must expand far beyond present production and living standards, and that the benefits of this growth must extend to all groups in our society.

In setting higher production goals for the future, it was not necessary to resort to black magic. Merely studying the past gives us a reasonable basis for knowing what we can accomplish in the years ahead. The novelty is in the fact that the President of these powerful United States has presented clearly defined national objectives and has spelled out the way in which they can be achieved.

THERE IS A restatement of faith in the free enterprise system. Business growth and development is encouraged. A strong plea is made for cooperation between business and government. Businessmen are complimented, along with workers and farmers, for their greater judgment and restraint in the "safe passage from inflation to greater stability." That is how President Truman describes the 1949 recession.

Does all this mean that the Administration is trying to extend kind words and soft soap to the business community for political purposes? I do not think so.

Intelligent leaders in the business community are fearful of booms and busts. They understand that jobless people are poor customers. But the big question comes in deciding what should be done to promote stability and by whom.

MOST DISAGREEMENT concerns the role of government. Firmly, but in soft tones, the Council of Economic Advisers sticks to its position that government must provide the environment in which businessmen and the workers and the farmers can enjoy uninterrupted progress.

This simply means that the Administration is not backing away from the simple proposition which the American public has increasingly recognized over the past 15 years—namely, that government does have an important responsibility and must play a dynamic and not a passive role in economic affairs.

Large business investment means expansion in plants and machinery and equipment. This capacity will be profitable only if there is a corresponding rise in consumption.

Put in other words, we must consume more and more as our productive capacity increases, if that capacity is to be used fully and continuously. . . .

THE COUNCIL of Economic Advisers follows naturally by pointing out that private and public policies must succeed in raising the level of consumption, which is not now sufficiently high for sustained full employment.

If consumption is not adequate to take off the market what industry can produce, the trouble does not arise from our people not wanting to consume more than they now consume. It is a matter of buying power and how our income is distributed. I'm certain that very few of our listeners would find it hard to use more and better housing, clothing, food and services. It is a matter of having the wherewithal to buy what we need and want.

It does seem foolish for us to resign ourselves to recurring depressions or recessions with unemployment and closed plants merely because we haven't been willing to develop policies and techniques to assure adequate buying power.

Confused?

About economics and buying power—about government and business policies?

Then turn your radio dials each Tuesday night to ROBERT R. NATHAN.

Robert Nathan—lecturer, author, economist—talks in simple language about some of the big, confusing problems of the times.

He's heard each Tuesday night, on the CIO's own radio program.

Tuesday nights; 10:45 P.M. EST; ABC network.

Tune him in this week on your local ABC station.

Required Reading For NAM

Enlightened Businessmen Back HT's Proposals

By NATHAN ROBERTSON
For Labor Press Association

THE BIGGEST battle in this session of Congress is between President Truman and the conservatives over the Fair Deal spending program. The biggest news in that battle is that a group of prominent and highly respected businessmen are on the President's side, rather than on the side of the Byrds in Congress.

The businessmen are those belonging to the Committee for Economic Development (CED). They are not self-serving propagandists such as the men who are running the National Association of Manufacturers. They are serious-minded and enlightened businessmen who have taken the trouble to sit down with experts and study the budget problems of the government and try to come up with honest answers.

The answers they have come up with are very close to the answers reached by the experts who helped President Truman frame his budget. They call for continued spending of the kind recommended by President Truman to build and strengthen the country so that the budget can be balanced, not by cutting necessary expenditures, but by increased revenues from improved and expanded production.

The President's budget calls for expenditures of about $42 billion. The NAM budget is set at about $33 billion, and the Byrds in Congress are proposing a budget of about $37 billion. The big difference between these budgets is chiefly the amount to be spent for such things as health and education, public works such as dams and power projects, and construction of schools and hospitals.

THE ISSUE between these two schools of thought is very clear. The President feels it is sound to build for the future even if it means a temporary deficit at a time when 3,500,000 people are unemployed.

The Byrds and the NAM propagandists believe it is more important to balance the budget than to see that people have enough to eat, enough houses, or enough medical care. The NAM has even taken the position that the budget should be balanced in times of depression.

Now the CED has stepped into the middle of this controversy with a budget that takes the ground out from under the Byrds and the NAM. Its budget calls for about the same kind of spending Truman has proposed and totals $40 billion. That $40 billion, however, is based on a high level of employment with no more than 2½ million unemployed.

THE CED concedes that in times like these with 3½ million unemployed it may not be possible to balance President Truman's budget without too much ultimate cost to the country economically. It wants to set a level of spending and taxing that will balance the budget when the unemployed have jobs. That's about what President Truman proposed.

Most newspaper stories about the CED report did not sound that way. That is because the CED presented a budget that showed, instead of a deficit, a surplus of $5 billion that would permit a tax cut of more than $2 billion, and permit paying $3 billion on the public debt. But study of the two documents showed many close parallels between the President's and the CED's budgets, not only in figures but in language.

The CED, for instance, strongly supports many of the President's programs for such things as expanded social security and appropriations for health and education. It wants spending to continue for needed public works that will increase the productive power of the country. Its budget would not be balanced until economic conditions improve.

THESE ARE NOT New Deal businessmen. They are big middle-of-the-road businessmen such as Marion B. Folsom, of Eastman Kodak; J. Cameron Thomson, a Minneapolis banker; John D. Biggers, of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co.; S. Bayard Colgate, of the soap company; Ernest Kanzler, of Universal Credit Corp.; Clarence Francis, of General Foods; and George L. Harrison of New York Life, to name a few.

The position taken by these businessmen gives strong hope that a meeting of the minds between business and labor leaders on major economic policy is not far off. Enlightened businessmen are beginning to realize that the public policies for which labor has been standing are good not only for labor, but also for the whole country, business as well as labor.

WHAT THE CED has proposed, in addition to cutting the excise or sales taxes, which labor would also like to cut, is this: It proposes to withhold taxes on dividends just as employers withhold income taxes for workers from pay envelopes. This would provide a system of current collection on dividends just as the government now collects currently as you earn on your income.

The joker, if any, is that what the corporation collects and turns into the government as taxes on dividends could be subtracted from the taxes the corporation pays on its earnings. At the present rate of declaring dividends this would mean a cut of 20%, or perhaps a little more, in corporation taxes.

For example, take a corporation which makes a profit of $1 million and pay dividends of $500,000. At present it pays 38% on the million dollars, or $380,000. Under the new plan it would continue to pay $380,000, but $83,000 of this would represent collections in advance on the dividends paid to stockholders. The corporation would be paying this $83,000 for the stockholders, instead of having them pay the tax themselves as at present. In the end the stockholders would pay exactly the same as they do now. But the corporation, instead of paying taxes of $380,000, would get credit for the $83,000 and pay only $297,000. This would be a cut of 22% in its taxes.

(Ed. Note: As stated above, the corporations currently pay a 38% tax. Assuming a 50% distribution on dividends, the CED proposal would reduce the effective rate of the corporation tax to 30%. The CIO doesn't indorse this proposal and has proposed an increase in corporation taxes.)

This plan has been proposed by the CED as a means of curtailing the so-called double taxation of corporation earnings. In addition to the 38% which a corporation pays on its earnings, the stockholders are taxed on the remaining earnings, sometimes as high as 70 or 80%. The result is that some stockholders realize very little on their investments.

Proposed 'Investments' In Nation's Future

Here are some of the major new programs for which the President included funds in his budget:

Expansion of public assistance programs	$200,000,000
Expansion of vocational rehabilitation	4,000,000
Aid to medical education	30,000,000
Increased public health facilities	4,500,000
Health services for school children	25,000,000
Co-op housing for middle-income families	50,000,000
Increased material and child welfare grants	6,900,000
Federal aid to education	290,000,000
Other education aids, including scholarships	30,000,000
St. Lawrence Seaway	4,000,000
Expanded unemployment insurance	12,400,000
Industrial safety program	6,000,000
Unemployment insurance for federal workers	113,400,000

Shoe Firms Try To Evade 75c Statute

SHOE manufacturers are trying to evade the new 75c minimum wage that goes into effect Jan. 25 by seeking to use a provision of the law permitting "learners" to be paid under the minimum, the CIO charged last week at a public hearing.

The administration of the Labor Dept.'s Wage and Hour and Public Contracts divisions called the hearings authorized under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The National Shoe Manufacturers Association, representing the big shoe concerns in the industry, is asking that a 57½c minimum be set for "learners" for a three to six months' period. Its spokesmen claim that around 20% of the workers in a shoe factory are hired as learners.

Testimony refuting the industry's claims was presented for the National CIO by Asst. Counsel Elliot Bredhoff, and by Attorney Mitchell Cooper for the United Shoe Workers.

Bredhoff pointed out that the shoe manufacturers had never claimed at previous hearings held under the Act that they had learners. He charged that they were now attempting to use a technicality of the amended law which goes into effect Jan. 25 to pay substandard wages to unskilled workers by claiming they were learners.

To obtain a rate for learners below the legal 75c minimum, the industry must show that opportunities of employment are curtailed unless companies are permitted to hire learners at lower rates. Bredhoff said that so far industry spokesmen have presented no figures to show this.

All they have cited are high turnover rates, and these are mostly caused, he declared, by dissatisfaction of workers with the low wages paid them. They leave the industry whenever they can to take higher paying jobs in other industries.

The AFL had no representatives at the hearings last week, but presented a statement agreeing to accept a 70c minimum for learners. The hearings will continue all this week.

Second Cal. Local Quits Office Union

The 100 members of the Oakland, Cal., Newsvendors local of the United Office & Professional Workers by unanimous vote have quit the UOPWA, and have been issued a charter by National CIO as Local Industrial Union 768. Six weeks ago the Los Angeles Newsvendors also quit UOPWA and received a new CIO charter as LIU 75.

Afoul Of Law

An Eightieth Congress Republican who voted for the Taft-Hartley law is running afoul of the law.

Ex-Rep. James Scoblick (R. Pa.) has been indicted in Scranton, not for violating T-H—but for allegedly issuing worthless checks in an amount of over $1,200.

Scoblick, who served in both the 79th and 80th Congresses, had only two "right" votes out of 16 in the 1947-48 sessions, judged by CIO standards. He was succeeded by Harry P. O'Neill (D), who voted "right" on every issue in the 1949 CIO Voting Record.

Organizationally Speaking

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The writer has just returned from a Southern Organizing Committee Conference presided over by Southern Organizing Director George Baldanzi. This conference was held in Atlanta, Ga., and was attended by the state directors engaged in the Southern Drive.

It is interesting to note that "Texas Bill" Strength with the guitar is now on the CIO staff in the South. He plays and sings American folk songs. Director Baldanzi has planned a series of broadcasts for "Texas Bill." All international organizations and state councils in the territory will be called upon to keep their members advised of these broadcasts.

I note that in Chicago two officers of the UE have made public statements denouncing the UE. Both of these officers have resigned from the UE. It is reported that Ernest DeMaio, Vice-President of District 11, UE, is walking around with a very red face. It is stated that he had full knowledge of the communist actions and never once opposed such actions.

Field Rep. Lee Lundgren and Business Manager Irving Krane, both of Local 1150 UE, in their statements, point out that the apparatus of the UE is controlled by the Communist Party in such a manner to make it impossible for the UE members to run their union in the manner they see fit. Lee Lundgren said he had participated in Communist Party meetings that were held to control the affairs of the UE. He said Local 1150 Pres. Pat Amato; Secretary of UE District Council 11, Alice Smith; UE International Field Organizer Fred Dutner; and a Communist party organizer, Sam Kushner, attended these Communist Party meetings, in violation of the resolution passed at the CIO convention at Atlantic City. The free American trade unionist will overcome this Communist conspiracy to enslave members of the American labor movement.

The writer attended a conference of CIO directors, field representatives, staff organizers, international representatives in Ohio Jan. 14, during the session of the Ohio CIO Council Convention in Cincinnati. This conference was held to obtain for the IUE-CIO the fullest degree of cooperation and assistance from all CIO members and affiliates. Also discussed was assistance to the Communication Workers of America in a coming NLRB election campaign in Ohio.

Shoe Workers Rep. Dave Wilson reports that in a representation election held at the Wessling Jordan Shoe Co., Eldon, Mo., the workers voted 111 for the Shoe Workers to 60 for no union. Joe Stuermen, Herbert Long and Leo Cassidy were in charge of the campaign.

CIO Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson announces that the Newspaper Guild won bargaining rights at the Jamestown (N. Y.) Daily Sun. The organizing was under the direction of Pres. Thomas Rose, of the Buffalo Local of the Guild.

CIO Reg. Dir. Robert McVay reports that the Oil Workers Intl. Union won an NLRB representation election at the Sinclair Plant in Sand Springs, Okla. The vote was unanimous in favor of the OWIU-CIO. Arthur Cross represented the union in this election.

Adolph Germer, Director of Organization, Woodworkers, reports that the IWA-CIO won an important NLRB Representation election at the Weyerhaeuser plant, Springfield, Ore., as follows: Eligible 561; IWA-CIO 265; UBC&J-AFL 219; no union 10; challenged by the board 18. IWA-CIO Reps. Jim Lee, T. C. Stout, George Hill and Bill Baker participated in this election campaign.

CIO Pamphlet On CVA

'Northwest Development Concerns Entire Nation'

EVER SINCE the CIO was formed about 14 years ago, it has given an important place in its program and policies to the need of protecting and using the country's rich natural resources for the benefit of all the people.

A current example of CIO's concern over this problem, is a new pamphlet, "The Magnificent Columbia," just issued by the CIO Dept. of Education & Research.

The pamphlet, which describes a proposed over-all plan for a Columbia Valley Authority, along the lines of the TVA, was prepared by the CIO Committee on Regional Development and Conservation. CIO Councils Dir. John Brophy is chairman of the committee, and Anthony W. Smith is executive secretary.

The pamphlet deals with the planning problems of one valley, the Columbia, and one region, the Pacific Northwest, but most of the problems covered will arise in the other major river basins, the foreword explains. "We have been concerned with them for a long time in the Missouri Valley. We are trying to apply the experience gained in the Tennessee Valley.

AERIAL VIEW of Grand Coulee Dam on Columbia River: A great deal of new hydro-power will be coming into the region through this dam in the next few years. The 11th and 12th generators installed in 1949 after the power shortage had become acute, together with new generators yet to be installed, will bring in 864,000 kilowatts. Above this dam are the proposed Albeni Falls, Libby and Hungry Horse projects, now under construction.

"DEVELOPMENT plans for the Northwest are of concern to the entire country, partly because, for better or worse, they will tend to become the model for the country. For this reason the pamphlet is intended for use among CIO people in all our regional planning work."

The valley of "the Magnificent Columbia," and the country around it, America's great Pacific Northwest, is one of the world's richest regions in natural resources," the pamphlet states.

"If its water power, forests, soils and minerals can be developed in a balanced program for the good of all, they will bring happiness to hundreds of thousands of people. But there are dangers; much of this great wealth can be lost if it is developed recklessly and destructively."

The pamphlet urges a program based on the "commonsense development of all the resources of the Pacific Northwest under a sensible, balanced plan," as opposed to the exploitation of the region "by remorseless monopolistic combines interested only in their own private profit."

A COMBINATION of forces, none of which has ever been friendly to organized labor, are arrayed in opposition to a CVA. Among these are privately owned electric utilities; timber interests; the Army's Corps of Engineers and the contractors back of it; the Bureau of Reclamation and the special interests (not farmers) and "selfish groups everywhere who object to the government's doing a good job for the people."

Although a CVA does not give the whole answer—"how it behaves will depend partly on the kind of men that are put in charge of it"—it will "help put an end to the selfish exploitation of the resources of the valley by special interest groups working through their particular government bureaus," the pamphlet says.

"We are putting the emphasis on sound human goals in the use of natural resources. We consider that CVA, if properly set up and managed, and if properly related to good social objectives, can be one method among others for getting sensible resource development."

Some examples of the natural resources of the Columbia Valley which need to be safeguarded are discussed in the pamphlet.

Its waterpower gives it "more potential hydroelectric power than any other comparable area in the world."

THE PAMPHLET makes the following points:

- The forests of the Pacific Northwest, with its huge stands of Douglas fir, western hemlock and Ponderosa pine, are the region's largest asset, as well as a big asset to the country as a whole, for it holds our last large supply of heavy construction timber.
- Another valuable resource, the fisheries, now threatened with destruction under the programs of the Army Engineers and the Reclamation Bureau, could be protected under a plan coordinated with a hydro-power program.
- One of the big assets of the Columbia Valley is its phosphate rock deposits, which can be made into valuable fertilizer, as at TVA. Soil conservation is a serious problem in the great Northwest, where soil erosion is probably worse than anywhere else in the country.

BY PROPER planning and development, all resources of the region can be used, the pamphlet states, "to provide good living and working conditions and real prosperity for all the people of the Columbia Valley, and to develop and conserve the resources of the Valley for the benefit of all the people of America."

Unless done carefully, however, the CIO pamphlet warns, the development job may make conditions much worse instead of better. "It is imperative that policies be followed in regional development, including the location of dams and transmission lines, the location of reclamation projects, and the granting of contracts for the supply of water and electric power, which will bring about an even and orderly distribution of population throughout the region."

The CIO supports Pres. Truman's call for passage of CVA legislation, although it believes these bills should be strengthened. It is firmly against plans "drummed up by the Army Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation—the so-called Pick-Sloan Plan."

The pamphlet urges all CIO members in the Columbia Valley and the whole country "to fight for a program of well-rounded development and conservation of the resources of the magnificent Columbia Valley."

How To Order CVA Pamphlet

Copies of "The Magnificent Columbia," the case for a Columbia Valley Authority that can develop all the resources of the Northwest under a well-balanced, long range plan, may be ordered from the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D. C. Price 15c each, 10 for $1, 100 for $8, 1,000 for $75.

Science Writer Shatters Myths About Tuberculosis

TUBERCULOSIS is no longer a disease of youth. It now finds its victims more and more among men and women in middle life.

The belief that people in their 30's or 40's are safe from TB is one of the many myths about the disease without scientific basis, says a 20-cent pamphlet "TB—The Killer Cornered," just published by the Public Affairs Committee, 22 East 38th St., New York 16, N. Y.

Half the deaths now come at ages over 46, says Alton L. Blakeslee, science writer, who prepared the pamphlet with the cooperation of the Natl. Tuberculosis Association.

Other myths shattered by modern science include such ideas as that a change of climate is the best treatment for TB, and that the disease may be inherited or caught from a person who has recovered from it.

One fiction that has proved particularly harmful to wage earners is that anyone who has had the disease is not good for much work and makes a bad risk as an employe. The pamphlet quotes recent studies to show that former TB patients "were not absent from work more than others, nor did they suffer any more injuries." As a matter of fact, the former TB patients had a better record of staying on their jobs than other workers.

In 1900 TB killed 194 of every 100,000 Americans. By 1940 the death rate went down to 45.8. In 1948, it was only 30 per 100,000.

There is hope of eliminating the disease, with the aid of new discoveries in research, if the facilities for fighting TB are strengthened, says Blakeslee. All Americans are urged to press for more and stronger state and local health services, as well as an increase in the number of hospital beds for people sick with TB. And everyone is urged by the pamphlet to have a yearly chest X-ray.

Paper Scoffs At Charges Of Socialism

THE STAND of the Natl. Reclamation Association against the proposed valley authorities on the grounds that they lead to socialism and regimentation is caracterized as "a lot of nonsense" in the following editorial from the Bismarck (N. D.) Leader:

The National Reclamation Association, an organization mainly financed by the private power utilities, held its annual convention recently and re-elected Harry Polk of Williston as its national president. Besides acting as a front for the United States Bureau of Reclamation and the power trust, the NRA also has its fingers in several other pies.

SOME OF ITS members would like to abolish the 160-acre limitation on lands irrigated by governmental projects. In other words, the small, family-size farmer would be squeezed out, while the big landowners could reap profits from projects paid for by the taxpayers of the nation.

That measure failed of adoption at the convention, but the NRA sparkplugs will try again and American farmers should keep a sharp eye on them in the future.

The organization also came out, as usual, against "valley authorities." The hand of the power trust is plain enough there, although Mr. Polk and other NRA leaders say they oppose authorities on the grounds that they lead to "socialism" and "regimentation."

THAT'S A LOT of nonsense. All public dams or irrigation projects are "socialism," whether they're built by TVA engineers, Army engineers or Reclamation engineers. So are our public schools and our federal highways "socialism." Yet we haven't heard of the NRA advocating their abolition.

And as for "regimentation," it couldn't be worse than it is under the Pick-Sloan plan. The Army Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation are complete and total dictators. Congress appropriates the funds for the projects; after that, the Army and the bureau take over and are the sole bosses.

UNDER AN MVA there would be five directors right here in the valley, responsible to the people of the valley and probably chosen from among residents of the valley.

Under the Pick-Sloan plan a lot of Army generals and bureau engineers who never saw the valley and know nothing about its problems come in and take over. They are against authorities, quite naturally, because they want to keep their jobs and appropriations and prestige. So they get front organizations like the NRA to stooge for them and declare that everybody is against MVA.

The real truth is this: Everybody is against MVA—except the people of the Missouri Valley.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

Patricia Ann Carey Is Seriously Hurt

CIO Secy.-Treas. James Carey's eight-year-old daughter, Patricia Ann, was struck by an auto and seriously injured Jan. 6. Late last week she had improved somewhat but was still unconscious, hospital authorities reported.

Patricia Ann was injured while on her way to school.

The Careys have one other child, James Jr., 11.

Canadian Labor Unites To War on Joblessness

CANADIAN labor officials are pressuring their government to take quick, constructive action to alleviate unemployment in Canada.

"Our chief concern is what action the government proposes to take to remedy the situation and how quickly it will get under way such projects it has planned," said Pres. Percy R. Bengough of the Trades and Labor Congress and Pres. A. R. Mosher of the Canadian Congress of Labor.

"If government projects are too long delayed, they will become nothing more than relief measures.

"On the other hand, prompt action by the government will undoubtedly be helpful not only in meeting the present situation but in preventing the onset of a serious depression."

Mosher estimated a short time ago that unemployed in Canada totaled about 300,000 or 6% of the nation's labor force. He charged that the government had released no figures on unemployment for three months.

After the charge was made, Minister of Labor Mitchell issued a press statement confirming the 300,000 estimate. Bengough and Mosher said in a joint statement that "it is likely that the situation is actually worse at the present time."

FTC Would Stop Price 'Packing' In Auto Financing

THE FEDERAL Trade Commission has announced it has a plan designed to eliminate and prevent concealed "packing" and other deceptive practices in the sale and financing of automobiles purchased on the installment plan.

The Commission decided to look into the matter following complaints from members of Congress, Better Business Bureaus and individuals, which indicated that through the practice of "packing," fictitious amounts or overcharges are deceptively concealed from automobile purchasers in sale and installment contracts.

More than 50,000 copies of the proposed rules have been mailed to automobile dealers, auto manufactures, financing organizations and other interested parties.

If the proposed rules are put into effect by FTC, sellers of automobiles will be required to furnish the purchaser an itemization in writing at the time of the sale, listing the cash delivered price, insurance cost, finance charges and other item included in the total cost.

Court Enjoins MMSW Pickets

Striking members of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers were enjoined from sending pickets to block the entrances to the pits of three big potash producers at Carlsbad, N. Mex.

The injunction was granted by ex-Sen. Carl A. Hatch, now judge of a U. S. District Court, at the request of Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the NLRB. The 1500 strikers walked out Nov. 19 in an effort to win a 25c pay boost. Present basic wage is $1.60 an hour.

The three companies, Potash Co. of America, U. S. Potash Co. and Intl. Minerals & Chemicals Corp., produce 85% of the nation's potash, a substance vital in commercial fertilizers. Denham, in asking for the writ, said a national fertilizer crisis loomed.

Home Construction

Seven billion dollars, only slightly less than in 1948, was invested in 1949 on new private home construction, the Labor Dept. announced Jan. 1.

Convention Issue Still Available

Although there has been exceptionally heavy demand for the 1949 convention issue of the CIO News, several thousand copies are still available.

Union leaders report the convention issue—which gives full details of the CIO's decision to rid itself of communistic influences—has been used effectively in organizing drives.

Copies can be secured from the CIO News, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington 6, D.C.

Rates for bundle orders are 2c per copy for quantities up to 1000, 1¾c per copy for quantities between 1000 and 2000 and 1½c per copy for quantities of more than 2000.

Three Leaders Quit UE, Charging CP Control

WHILE NLRB representation hearings on the IUE-UE fight droned monotonously into their second and third weeks, three UE officials in the Chicago area tossed explosive resignations at the crumbling left-wing outfit.

The officials, one of whom resigned simultaneously from the Communist Party, accompanied their resignations with bitter charges of direct communist control of Chicago UE locals, totalitarian dictatorship and communist affiliation of other local and district UE leaders.

The three are:

Irving Krane, attorney and business manager of UE Local 1150 for the past seven years; former Communist; delegate to the 1947 and 1948 UE conventions; member of, or participant in, numerous communist front organizations.

Lee Lundgren, field representative of UE Local 1150 and an organizer and official of the local since 1944; avowed member of the Communist Party and member of various communist front organizations.

Ragnar Lofgren, chief steward of the Sunbeam unit of UE Local 1150; long time leader in local union affairs.

THE SIGNED statements of both Krane and Lundgren gave conclusive verification to the oft-repeated charges of IUE leaders that the UE in the Chicago area has been completely under the heel of the Communist Party for many years.

Lundgren declared flatly that "shortly after going to work as a field representative for the UE I was recruited into the Communist Party by Pat Amato, president of Local 1150, UE."

Lundgren pulled out of the Communist Party on Jan. 6 and on the following day submitted his resignation to the executive board of Local 1150, asserting that "the policies of the UE and the Communist Party are leading the workers down the drain."

Krane blasted communist domination of UE in a statement which charged that "the apparatus of the UE is controlled by the Communist Party in such a manner as to make it impossible for the UE membership to freely exercise their fundamental right to run their own union in the way they best see fit."

Despite assurances that he could be reelected business manager of the local again this year, Krane decided not to be a candidate. He explained:

"The members of Local 1150 have been wondering as to the manner in which the single slate of candidates in the current local election came to be selected. Their wonderment can be cleared up by stating that the slate had been determined in advance by the Communist Party and Ernest DeMaio (District 11 president), without any regard to the fundamental right of the membership of Local 1150 to determine who their candidates for local officers should be.

"On the 16th of December," Krane continued, "at a private meeting held on the South Side at which some of the local candidates were present, it was reported by Sam Kushner, former business manager of Local 1119 and at present full-time Communist Party organizer, that Gil Green and other leaders of the Communist Party were opposed to my candidacy because of political differences. This meeting then proceeded to determine the candidates for the forthcoming election in Local 1150."

Al Fineman, IUE-CIO field director for District 11, said that the Krane and Lundgren resignations "more than vindicate the position adopted by the CIO in purging itself of the corrupt and Communist-dominated UE."

Local 1150 represents more than 5000 workers in 14 Chicago companies including Sunbeam Corp., Wilco Instrument Co., Electric Storage Battery's Exide division, G-M laboratories, General Transformer, Jenson Radio Co. and Standard X-Ray Corp.

While UE attorneys ranted at NLRB hearings in Dayton, Ohio; Pittsburgh, Pa., and New York City, UE top brass was dreaming up another method of slowing down "election death."

The Dayton hearing on bargaining representation for 26,000 General Motors electrical workers throughout the country slowly died after five days of UE delaying tactics.

The result: Attorneys for IUE-CIO, the company and UE are filing briefs which will be studied by the NLRB hearing officers. The decision they must reach is whether elections should be held in General Motors' electrical divisions.

The Pittsburgh hearings, on the same issue, will determine the fate of former UE members at Westinghouse Electric Corp.

At these hearings UE Attorney David Scribner demanded that the board hold its hearings in eight different locations, at eight different times. The idea was to stall the elections for as long as possible.

The NLRB compromised by holding two sets of hearings, one in Pittsburgh, one in New York City.

In New York City the case involved Local 450 at Sperry Gyroscope Co.

Here the UE attempted to prove that "UE was never expelled" from the CIO. No immediate end seemed in sight as the proceedings went into their third week with UE attorneys protesting every comma and undotted "i."

The rear guard action of UE lawyers developed a new twist when UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald sent a letter to NLRB General Counsel Robert Denham saying that UE wanted consent elections in the major electrical companies.

James B. Carey, chairman of IUE's Administrative Committee, in commenting on the consent elections, pointed out that "We are not unaware of the fact that UE cannot now participate in consent elections in most of the plants involved because locals which they claim have been unable to comply with the requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act."

Chicago, Illinois
January 6, 1950

Illinois State Communist Party
208 N. Wells Street
Chicago 6, Illinois

Dear Sir:

Effective today, January 6, 1950

I hereby resign from the Communist Party of America.

Yours truly

Lee Lundgren

Lee Lundgren

Executive Board
UE Local # 1150
37 South Ashland Avenue
Chicago 7, Illinois

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Effective today I hereby resign my position as Field Representative of Local # 1150 which I have held for the past four (4) years.

Simultaneously I have sent in my resignation to the Communist Party.

I feel that I can no longer serve in my capacity as a Field Representative when I know that the policies of the UE and the Communist Party are leading the workers down the drain.

Fraternally yours,

Lee Lundgren

Lee Lundgren

Early Senate Vote Seen On Middle-Income Housing

CONGRESS moved swiftly last week to bring President Truman's middle-income housing bill up for a vote, while the real estate lobbyists, 500 strong, swarmed into the capital to begin their 1950 campaign against housing co-operatives and rent control.

A Senate Banking and Currency sub-committee, headed by Sen. John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), started hearings Jan. 12 on the Maybank amendment to the Sparkman billl, S. 2246, which already is on the Senate calendar.

The Maybank amendment proposes establishment of a National Mortgage Corporation for Housing Cooperatives, with initial capital of up to $100 million supplied by the government. The corporation would make loans to "middle-income" non-profit cooperatives and trusts, at a rate of interest approximating 2½%, repayable in up to 60 years. The money to make the loans would come from sale of government-guaranteed bonds on the private investment market.

ALREADY THE proposition has been damned as "socialistic" by the real estate speculators, who see in it—correctly—a huge loss of profit to themselves, if adopted.

Housing and Home Administrator Raymond Foley told the Senate group that adoption of the Maybank proposal would mean that families of moderate means, having incomes ranging from $2700 to $4400 a year, would be able to secure for about $65 accommodations equal to those for which they now pay $90. He added that, in general, rents in the non-profit apartment projects would be about 25% below those in apartments now being built through other forms of federally-insured financing.

The committee hopes to bring the proposal to the Senate floor by Jan. 20. Walter Reuther, chairman of the CIO Housing Committee, testifies Jan. 17.

The real estate boys have adopted the line that the "middle-income" group is well supplied with housing, although President Truman and all government experts state that families of moderate means are the "forgotten class" in the housing picture because they are too well-off to be eligible for the low-cost projects and too poor to afford most privately-built dwellings.

REALTY interests claim that because houses priced lower than $10,000 are being snapped up as fast as they come on the market, everyone is satified.

Also there is on the part of the speculators a sudden pious belief in slum clearance. "We must see that 1950 becomes the year of neighborhood reclamation and slum avoidance," said Robert P. Gerholtz of Flint, Mich., newly installed as president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. "We must make a nation-wide frontal attack on slums . . . Closely related to this program is the need for removal of war-time rent controls."

This was the keynote of the gathering of more than 500 real estate men, mostly presidents of local real estate boards, who met Jan. 11 in Washington's Hotel Statler to install Gerholtz and to hear an address by Rep. Ralph H. Gwinn (R., N. Y.), NAREB's chief spokesman in the House.

(The chief specific proposal for slum clearance from the real estate lobby came from the Society of Industrial Realtors, who solemnly proposed that one way to take care of slums was to tear them down and put up factories.)

THE OUTGOING NAREB president told the gathering that "the voters are opposed to public housing." In fact, he said, federal money for low-cost housing is getting the cold shoulder whenever the voters get a chance to vote on it. He cited four examples where local referenda resulted in a turn-down of federal housing funds. He made no mention of the 670 cities which have voted to accept, and use, federal money for low-cost housing.

Foley told the Senate committee that "the cooperative principle is as old as America," and said that "cooperative and non-profit housing offer great promise of achieving cost reductions because of savings immediately obtainable in operation and maintenance, and potentially in construction costs."

The committee shortly will receive a cost breakdown of the average $12,000 house, which will show that the labor cost runs from $2000 to $2500, materials from $2700 to $4000, that the average price of the lot on which the house is built is $1000, and that the amount involved for taxes and management is from $4500 to $6300. These figures give some indications of why 500 realtors should find it necessary to come to Washington in mid-January and give little dinners for Congressmen.

Army Has New Racial Policy

PRES. TRUMAN'S demand for racial equality in the armed forces has brought tentative adoption by the Army of a new policy providing for the integration of Negroes throughout the service on a gradual, long-range basis.

The plan would eventually end the traditional policy of strictly segregated units and result shortly in the assignment of a limited number of highly qualified Negro soldiers to white outfits.

They will be few in number and confined to "scarce specialists" for the time being. Existing separate white and Negro companies and battalions will continue generally segregated probably for years, an Army official said.

Negro leaders, including George Weaver, chairman of the CIO's Committee to Abolish Discrimination, hailed the proposal as the biggest step toward equality of opportunity and treatment by the Army to date.

Weaver pointed out, however, that while the move will definitely be a step in the right direction, it will be some time before full benefits can be realized.

The proposal will come before Pres. Truman's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services and concurrence is expected.

CIO Group Tells Woods Decontrol Doubled Some Rents In Pa. Town

THE REAL estate lobby has put out millions of sweet-scented words about how rents have not increased in decontrolled areas, but federal rent controller Tighe Woods on Jan. 11 for once heard the other side of the story.

A CIO delegation from Northumberland County, Pa., met with Woods on Jan. 11 and told him, in simple language, what had happened in the little town of Shamokin, Pa., and adjoining county areas in the 10 days after rent controls were lifted on Woods' order.

RENT CONTROLS were removed Jan. 1, on the recommendation of the local rent advisory board.

It's a small town, and it was easy for Amalgamated and Textile union representatives to make an accurate survey of what happened to their memberships. The findings:

Nearly every worker canvassed had been notified of a rent increase. The amount of the increase averaged 40% in all sections. Tenants of the lowest-rental housing, however, were asked to pay much higher increases, in many instances receiving notice that they would pay double their previous rental from now on, or find some place else to live.

ONE SPECIFIC example cited was that of a married worker who was promised a small apartment at $22 a month. Jan. 2 he was notified that the rent would be $40 a month and that, in addition, he would have to supply heat and light.

The delegation told Woods that no new rental buildings had been erected recently and that occupancy was 100%, with a "shameful" amount of doubling up of families. They also said that the landlords had made no repairs in recent years.

Woods indicated that he would recontrol the area if investigation substantiated the facts brought him by the CIO.

Start '50 Right, Give Buck To PAC

New York State May Enact Own Rent Control Law

THE NEW York State legislature, spurred by the "grim comedy of errors" over rent control which has plagued New York City tenants for the past several months, may pass its own state rent control law and notify Housing Expediter Tighe Woods that the Empire State is getting out from under the Federal law entirely.

Gov. Dewey recommended Jan. 11 that the State Temporary Rent Commission propose, for enactment at the present session of the State legislature, "fundamental legislation" on the entire subject of residential rent control.

The governor's recommendation was made as he signed an emergency state law "validating" the New York City Sharkey law.

Nobody knows whether the governor's "validation" makes the city law valid or not, but it represented a nice try on the part of the State Senate and Assembly to help New York tenants out of their predicament.

THE SHARKEY law, which freezes city rents as of March 1, 1949, and sets up a City Rent Commission with veto power over increases granted by federal rent control authorities, was passed by the City Council after investigation had discovered that the federal authorities were granting increases averaging around 40%.

Woods immediately contested the constitutionality of the city ordinance in federal and State Courts on the grounds that the city law was in conflict with the federal statute. The landlords also contested the law. The State Court of Appeals decided Woods and landlords were right. The state legislators hope they have undone the Court of Appeals decision. The federal court case is still pending. And the Sharkey law is due to expire May 1 anyway.

The legal "snafu" has its comic side, but is nothing short of tragic for the tenants involved, since many thousands face actual eviction for refusal to pay federally granted increases because they believed the Sharkey law valid, and many landlords are reporting holding rental property off the market entirely in the overcrowded city while the dispute is setlted. The landlords, of course, hope that the federal law will die June 1.

BECAUSE OF the uncertainty over whether the federal statute will be extended, and because of the great dissatisfaction in New York City over application of the federal law, the State Temporary Rent Commission is reported to be ready to "take time by the forelock" and recommend a state statute to take effect without delay.

Meanwhile, Woods' office in Washington got tough, under the federal statute, to the extent of issuing a ruling that New York landlords must re-decorate every two years, as was the custom when federal rent control first went into effect, and that refusal to do this and perform other usual services would constitute grounds for denial or revocation of increases.

Next month, Woods plans to ask Congress for a $4 million "deficit appropriation" to carry on his activities until June 30, when the federal law expires. This is approximately half the difference between what he asked Congress to give him for the full fiscal year and what he got. The real estate lobby is hoping to kill rent control early by persuading Congress not to give Woods any more money.

"Have nothin' to do wit' him. He's in for rent gouging in a slum area."

Strike Paper Scoops Oldest Paper West Of Mississippi

The youngest newspaper west of the Mississippi, a daily mimeographed sheet put out by CIO Newspaper Guild members on strike at the Arkansas Gazette at Little Rock, recently "scooped" the Gazette, the oldest paper west of the Mississippi, in reporting a brutal murder.

The regular newspaper, handicapped by the walkout of practically the entire editorial staff Dec. 17, completely missed the story of the murder of J. W. Brake, a Walker Creek community resident.

According to police reports, Brake was killed during a drinking orgy with three companions during the night of Dec. 4. His body was tossed into a stream, where it was found Dec. 29.

The finding of the body put an end to the 24-day intensive search through the South Arkansas swamplands.

The Guildsmen struck when the owners of the Gazette objected to the inclusion of the clause, "no employe shall be discharged except for just and sufficient reason."

CIO BREWERY WORKERS officials (above) are on their way to a Senate committee hearing where their state councils' coordinator, Joseph Brady, testified against S. 1847, a bill to prohibit liquor advertising in interstate commerce. Frank Fernbach of the CIO also testified against the measure.

Wood Union To Seek Social Benefits

A SOCIAL benefits program will top the list of demands made by the CIO Woodworkers on lumber operators in five Northwestern states this spring.

Pres. James A. Fadling said the union will seek an industrywide health and welfare employer-paid program which would give each employe coverage for life insurance; full hospital, medical and surgical coverage; payment of sick benefits amounting to $40 per week; and asking that workers drawing state compensation be given a sum equivalent to the difference between workmen's compensation and $40 per week.

The union also will seek holiday pay improvements.

"THESE DEMANDS," Fadling said, "can be granted by any tpye of employer in the industry whether it be large or small operations, long-term or short-term operations.

"These points are necessary to maintain buying power and the employers can well afford the cost of this program even at the present price of lumber."

"The market is firm, orders are high, and building permits already issued point to a prosperous 1950," Union Research Dir. Virgil Burtz said.

Negotiations, which will start in February, affect slightly more than 50,000 workers and 675 companies in the five Pacific Northwest states.

Three Senators Stymie 'Labor Monopoly' Report

DESPITE REPORTS in the daily press implying that the Senate Banking Committee had unanimously urged application of the anti-trust laws to labor unions, this version of the latest attack on organized labor has blown up in the face of its sponsor, Sen. Willis Robertson (D., Va.).

Three Senators, at a closed session of the Banking Committee Jan. 12, obtained unanimous approval for the addition, at the end of Robertson's anti-union report, of a statement indicating they were only willing to pass on the report to the Judiciary Committee, without recommendation. They denied press reports that they approved Robertson's ideas about using the anti-monopoly laws against organized labor.

Senators Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), Glen Taylor (D., Idaho) and John Sparkham (D., Ala.) were the three who wanted to make their position clear.

At present the long, rambling report by Robertson on an investigation of the United Mine Workers and the three-day week in the coal industry last summer, is in the hands of the conservative Judiciary Committee.

Minutes of the Banking Committee Jan. 12 also confirm LPA's earlier report that Robertson had prepared a specific bill on which he wanted the committee's implied approval before the shift to the Judiciary Committee, under whose jurisdiction the anti-trust laws come. This bill was cut out of the report before it was approved for transmission to Judiciary. (LPA.)

GOP 'Uncovers' Demo 'Plot'

Republicans in the Massachusetts House of Representatives have discovered what they claim is a Democratic plot to discredit them in the eyes of the Bay State unions.

When the legislators received their new official stationery, they discovered that the union label had been left off the GOP letterhead, but was included prominently on the Democrats' stationery.

The Democrats said it was just a printer's error—"or maybe the printers' political wisdom."

$1 Billion Paid Jobless Last Year

INDUSTRIAL layoffs shot up during the first seven months of 1949, causing a record-breaking volume of disbursements in unemployment insurance to jobless workers last year.

The U. S. Labor Dept.'s Bureau of Employment Security last week announced that more than $1 billion was paid out by state agencies to some 7½ million unemployed workers in 1949. In 1948, payments totaled $790 million.

Robert C. Goodwin, director of the bureau, said that while the high rate of benefit disbursements reduced reserve funds built up for such emergencies, the payments had been easily financed, and with the exception of one or two states, trust fund reserves were sufficient to finance the payment of benefits even if employment should drop sharply from its current level.

(In a number of states, unemployed workers have used up all the benefits to which they are entitled. Demands for extending the period for paying benefits are increasing.)

"State unemployment taxes amounting to slightly less than $1 billion were collected during the year," Goodwin reported. "For every dollar of taxes collected during the year, about $1.75 was paid out in benefits. The excess of payments to unemployed covered workers reduced aggregate reserves in the Federal Unemployment Trust Fund by less than 8%.

"The balance in the Trust Fund at the year's end was about $7 billion as compared with $7,600,000,000 at the close of 1948."

Goodwin said the average weekly payment for total unemployment which fluctuated around $20 during the first half of the year, rose gradually to about $21 during the last three months.

The employment security system could have been more effective in combating the effects of unemployment, he said, had it not been for the wide variation between states in the amount of weekly benefits paid eligible jobless workers and in the duration of benefits.

Textile Worker Pensions Inevitable

Inevitably, textile workers are going to get pensions, Secy.-Treas. William Pollock of the CIO Textile Workers told 700 members of the union's joint board at Lawrence, Mass. If employers refuse, the union will develop its own type of pension system and bargain for that type, he said.

"Brother, that's traveling!—New York to Chicago on only four cups of coffee."

Republican Sustained In Election Dispute

IN WHAT the minority called "a gross reflection on the integrity and honesty of the House of Representatives," a House Administration subcommittee has voted five to two to sustain the seating of Republican William W. Blackney, of Flint, Mich., over George Stevens, labor-backed Democrat who demanded a recount of the ballots.

Blackney apparently won by 784 votes out of 146,000 votes cast in November 1948, but Stevens charged grave irregularities in the count and appealed to the House committee for the opportunity to check the ballots.

Only two members of the subcommittee were for giving Stevens the chance for a recount —Reps. Anthony Cavalcante (D., Pa.) and Wayne Hays (D., Ohio).

Against Stevens were: Reps. Burr P. Harrison (D., Va.), Omar Burleson (D., Tex.), Chase Going Woodhouse (D., Conn.), Benjamin F. James (R., Pa.), and Karl LeCompte (R., Iowa).

Cavalcante said he and Hays would prepare a minority report for the full committee, and if they lost they would carry Stevens' case to the floor of the House. He said the evidence presented showed "definite corruption and subvention of the Constitution and the federal status and the precedents of the House."

Hays added that "this man Stevens was denied what is the fundamental right of a candidate in Ohio—to look at the ballots. He was denied that by a federal court injunction which was dismissed, and by a letter from the chairman of this subcommittee. I don't know who got the most votes, but Stevens should get a look at the ballots."

House Unit Plans Sessions On Several Welfare Bills

THE LOGJAM of welfare and labor legislation that's been piling up in the House Labor Committee is broken, union spokesmen hope. Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) announced Jan. 9 a schedule of closed committee sessions to reach final decisions on such key bills as federal aid to education and the labor extension program measure.

A bill appropriating $300 million for federal aid to schools has already passed the Senate, and the subject will be taken up by the House committee Feb. 6. Sessions will continue until a satisfactory bill is completed. Lesinski told reporters the measure should be ready for the floor by early March.

Here is the rest of the schedule: Bills on aid to the physically handicapped, and amendments to the vocational rehabilitation act will be worked on during the week of Jan. 16. The labor extension program will come up the week of Jan. 23. Welfare of coal miners, public library demonstration service, and community recreation program bills will be taken up the week of Jan. 30.

After federal aid to education, tentatively scheduled for March 6, the Labor Committee will pass on a bill to provide for federal funds for education of children in areas with schools congested because of new federal activities —like Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Hanford, Wash.

More Funds Asked For Labor Dept.

FUNDS for the Labor Dept., severely cut in recent years, would be about $50 million higher in the 12 months starting July 1, 1950, if President Truman's budget proposals are put into effect. Truman asks $252 million for the department.

A House Appropriations subcommittee starts work immediately on the Labor Dept. fund measure, with orders from Chairman Clarence Cannon (D, Mo.) to complete work by Feb. 3. Hearings are by law secret, though the record is made public when the subcommittee turns in its version.

Extension and improvement of the unemployment insurance program accounts for the bulk of the increase in funds—about $33 million to cover the states' costs resulting from increasing unemployment—and another $26 million proposed to cover first year's cost of the enlarged unemployment insurance program planned in the House-approved social security bill now before the Senate.

CHANGES IN the Wage-Hour law, requiring government lawyers to go into the courts to obtain interpretations of some of Congress's working, and an increased enforcement staff for the wage-hour work, will result in added spending of $4 million over last year.

Smaller sums will go for these new or special projects in the Department:

A study of whether the 75c minimum wage really will result, as its foes claim, in closing of industrial plants, and cutting out jobs for marginal workers. A three-year study of this, and related problems of coverage and exemptions from the Fair Labor Standards Act, is proposed by President Truman for the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Continuation of the big overhaul of the "cost of living" index is indorsed in Truman's proposals.

Enlargement of the international labor affairs activities, including the program of educating German trade unionists, is planned.

The Women's Bureau would again be able to have a small field staff, jobs which have been cut out by Congress despite repeated requests from the President and unionists in the past few years. (LPA)

C. of C. Head Calls For 'Reorganization'

Herman W. Steinkraus, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, wants the Department of Labor reorganized into a new Department of Labor and Industry, or Department of Labor and Management. He says the situation has changed completely since the Department was formed in 1913. Then, he told the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, the Department was "to further the interest of labor, and nobody else," but now "labor has grown into great strength, and the situation has changed completely."

He called for "economy," and a balanced budget, charged big industry was being attacked merely for bigness, asked for an end of "threats" by the government, and a "fair chance" for the Taft-Hartley law, which he said most workers favor.

Fitzpatrick in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

THE MESSAGE

AMA Moves 'Further And Further To Right'

ONE STEP forward, two steps back, seems to be the system followed by the American Medical Association in its legislative program.

An examination of the position taken by the AMA in recent years on various health bills, made by the Committee for the Nation's Health, as reported in its latest bulletin, shows these instances of forward-backward movement:

Last year the AMA refrained from opposing legislation to use Federal funds to aid professional schools and to train more doctors and personnel.

AMA authorities now declare the measure grants federal officials "too much potential authority to interfer in the internal administration of the medical schools."

A resolution passed by the AMA's House of Delegates at a special meeting in September 1938 "unreservedly" supported disability insurance as tending to reduce permanent disability.

In 1949 the AMA reversed its approval by objecting to a section on compulsory contributory permanent and total disability insurance included in bill HR 6000 passed by the House.

"The program proposed in HR 6000," said the AMA board of trustees, "will adversely influence the patient's desire for recovery. Initiation of a compulsory federal disability program would represent another step toward nationalization of medical care and socialization of the practice of medicine."

Last year a joint group of AMA, union and cooperative representatives worked out 20 principles or standards to which such plans should conform to merit professional approval.

Now the AMA has cut the heart out of the plan to assist the organization of voluntary insurance plans sponsored by unions, cooperatives and other lay "consumer" bodies. It has adopted a report requiring that:

The State or County Medical Society must indorse the plan before it will be considered for approval by the AMA. This means that the decision rests with County and State Medical Societies which have a consistent record of trying to block consumer-sponsored plans.

The plan must be considered "on the basis of past performances, not on the basis of contemplated performance." In other words, no new plan can get approval.

The Committee for the Nation's Health believes that the AMA's reversals from even such timid forward steps as it took in the past are based "on political and economic prejudice, not medical grounds," and can best be understood "as a tactical shift dictated by its opposition to national health insurance."

The AMA, it says, "now seems to be weighing every proposal in terms of defending the status quo in medical economics. Consideration of human needs, of training more doctors, increasing facilities, extending preventive care, eliminating the dollar barrier—none of these determines AMA legislative policy.

"THE OVERRIDING factors seem to be the potential effect of each measure on National Health Insurance, and on the control which organized medicine wants to exert over every phase of medical care. To conduct this campaign without compromise, the AMA hierarchy is forced further to the right in search of support.

"Conversely, its defense of the status quo seems to be forcing it into sharper political attacks against liberal programs. To hold its own Maginot line, it must ally itself with other conservative groups, including reactionary elements in the Democratic and Republican parties.

"The militant right-wing attitude of the AMA, as revealed at the December meeting, may mean that it will use its war chests to oppose liberal programs in any field where the AMA sees 'serious medical implication.'"

N. Y. State PAC Gets Ready For Elections

THE RECENT attack by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York on proposed national health insurance drew the rejoinder from Pres. Louis Hollander of the New York State CIO that the voters in 1950 will be offered a clear-cut choice this year between the "welfare state" and the "special interest state."

Hollander spoke at a statewide PAC conference at Syracuse when 100 delegates made plans for setting in motion the CIO-PAC program for state and congressional elections.

Listing health insurance and old-age security as key goals of the CIO, Hollander compared those who cry "socialism" at such proposals to those early critics of such measures as free public education, unemployment insurance and public housing.

"Doctor Dewey says that everybody is doing fine and that there is room for all in our charity clinics," Hollander commented.

HE CHARGED that the members of the Legislature appointed by the governor to study the problems of the aged were in grave danger of reaching retirement age themselves before they come up with a solution to the problem.

He challenged Dewey or any other latter-day opponent of the "welfare state" to come out against public education now or to advocate abandonment of any of the developments of the "welfare state" in such fields as police and fire protection, water supply and sanitation.

REP. FRANKLIN D. Roosevelt Jr. and Paul E. Fitzpatrick, New York State Democratic chairman, addressed the meeting. Both have been mentioned as possible Democratic nominees for Governor.

Roosevelt praised the political unity which he said, "made possible the recent election victories of U. S. Senator Herbert H. Lehman and N. Y. Mayor William O'Dwyer."

Roosevelt received a rising ovation when he called for the replacement of the present Dewey administration by one devoted to the general welfare.

Hollander indicated that the invitation extended to Roosevelt and Fitzpatrick to speak at the meeting did not constitute an indorsement of either for Governor.

Pure Oil Co. Is Warned Of Anti-Union Attitude

APPARENTLY 22 strikes in 10 years against the Pure Oil Co. by the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union have failed to teach that company the error of its ways.

The Pure Oil Nation Wide Council of OWIU-CIO in a recent session at St. Louis, Mo., charged a renewal of unfair labor attitudes and actions by this company—just two years after company officials had promised—at the end of a 10-month-long strike—to quit trying to bust the union.

For many years Pure was known as the "sore thumb" of the oil industry. Every time OWIU attempted to organize Pure employes or negotiate a Pure contract, the company countered with discharges, intimidation and refusal to bargain.

AS A RESULT, various OWIU locals staged a total of 22 strikes against Pure between 1938 and early 1948.

Climax of these strikes was a 10-month shutdown of the big Pure refinery in Toledo, Ohio. During this strike, not a single scab entered the plant, not a barrel of oil was refined. At its conclusion, the union settled for a better deal than it originally struck for and company officials said, in effect:

"We've had enough. From now on we're going to grant that the union is here to stay and we'll do nothing to hinder it."

But in recent organizing efforts among Pure employes in the production fields of Southern Illinois, OWIU has encountered a renewal of the old Pure unfair attitude.

And the Pure Oil Nation Wide Council of OWIU, representing a heavy majority of Pure employes throughout the nation, has warned the Pure management that if the company wants another fight, they'll get it.

Health Insurance Poster Available

A big four-color poster showing how national health insurance would help the whole family is now available at CIO headquarters in Washington.

This striking picture strip telling at a glance the story of what such legislation would mean to Joe Worker, his wife and children, should be pinned on union halls all over the country.

The words "Don't let the $3,000,000 AMA Lobby cheat you out of a healthy life," jump out at you on the poster.

Copies may be ordered from the CIO Dept. of Research & Education, 718 Jackson Pl., N.W., Washington 6, D. C.; price, 25c each, 10 for $1, 100 for $8.

ACW Wins Court Action On Picketing

THE APPELLATE Division of the New York Supreme Court on Jan. 10 upheld the right of the CIO Clothing Workers to picket the stores of the Sa-Ray Clothing Co., Inc., for selling clothing made by a non-union manufacturer.

The appellate court rejected an appeal by the company from the decision of a lower New York court which refused to issue an injunction to stop picketing of two of the firm's stores, one in Manhattan and the other in Brooklyn.

On Nov. 29, the National Labor Relations Board similarly rejected an appeal by Sa-Ray in which the firm sought to invoke Taft-Hartley to prevent picketing of its stores.

Prisoners Of War May File Claims

Former American prisoners of war and civilian internees of World War II may now file claims for compensation. Daniel F. Cleary, chairman of the War Claims Commission, announced. Forms may be secured from state veterans' departments or other designated state agencies, from the regional Veterans' Administration offices or from the Commission's offices in Washington.

Oleo Tax Repealer Near Vote In Senate

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

CONGRESS last week digested three important economic messages from the President and got down to talking about the federal tax on oleomargarine.

The tax is 10c a pound on yellow-colored oleo. Few people want to pay out the extra dime; instead they exercise their fingers by laboriously equeezing dabs of color through the uncolored product.

The tax doesn't bring much revenue to Uncle Sam. It was adopted years ago—together with a one-half-cent tax on white oleo and expensive license fees for manufacturers and distributors—as a means of discouraging margarine-eating in place of butter-eating.

The tax repeal bill passed the House last year, and is now nearing a vote in the Senate. The CIO, appearing at 1949 hearings, strongly supported repeal of the tax as an aid and convenience to consumers.

But the Senate debate has been largely a fight between two groups of agricultural producers—the dairy interests, which favor butter, and the cotton interests, whose oil products go into oleomargarine. The dairy groups want to keep the tax.

Don Montgomery, legislative representative of the CIO Auto Workers, pointed out last year, with some convincing economic material, that no real harm would be done to the dairy interests by repeal of the tax.

Montgomery—a former Dept. of Agriculture consumer expert—showed that increasing demands for dairy products assure a market for milk producers. Removal of the tax on margarine, both colored and white, would make the product more readily available to low-income consumers, Montgomery said, while dairy farmers would continue to get income from their milk products.

It appears that the oleo tax issue will soon be voted upon. But Sen. Langer (R., N. D.), representing a state with a heavy cow population, threw three civil rights amendments onto the oleo tax repeal bill, in the obvious hope of working up opposition from southern Senators.

Sen. Lucas (D. Ill.), majority leader in the Senate, voiced hope, however, that the three amendments would be tabled—and that the unfettered oleo tax repeal bill would pass.

MORE SOLID action on civil rights is due in the House. Rep. Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.), 83-year-old head of the House Rules Committee, said that powerful group would start immediate hearings on the FEPC anti-discrimination bill. Sabath, a veteran liberal, predicted House passage of the measure.

"Both parties have said they are for it, so they are pledged to support the bill," Sabath declared. He added that Republicans "have told the country they are for the FEPC, and now I'm going to put them on record."

The FEPC bill has been referred, without recommendation, to the Rules Committee by the House Labor Committee. It probably stands an easier chance of passage in the House than in the Senate.

The upper body last year adopted rules proposed by the Republican leadership—acting in close cooperation with the Dixiecrat bloc—that make ending of filibusters more difficult than ever before. And FEPC is almost certain to produce a filibuster in the Senate.

SOCIAL SECURITY improvements, already passed by the House, are coming up for study in the Senate Finance Committee. That group scheduled hearings, with government security experts among the first witnesses. Both CIO and AFL unions will testify during coming weeks.

The House bill increased coverage by several millions, and provided for raises up to about 70% in the amount of old age social security benefits.

CIO hailed passage of the House bill last year as an important step forward. But because Congress has delayed so many years in modernizing social security, CIO officials pointed out that even greater improvements in coverage and benefits are needed now.

LEGISLATION to liberalize the 1948 Displaced Persons Act is another early arising issue in the Senate—but there were signs that Sen. Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), who stalled on action all last year, may be resuming his stalling opposition to the bill.

McCarran heads the Senate Judiciary Committee, and he kept that group sitting on the House-passed bill most of last session. The bill would increase the number of displaced persons allowed into the country, and would remove eligibility provisions that have been attacked as biased.

The Senate—late in the session, when many members had gone home—referred the bill back to the committee with directives that it be reconsidered and reported back by Jan. 25.

McCarran professed to reporters that he didn't know of any "deadline"; and, still acting the deadpan role, complained that it's often "hard to get the boys together" on the Judiciary Committee for action.

Reporters didn't take the Nevada Senator's comments too seriously—except to judge that more delay on DP's is probably in the cards.

Meanwhile, Ugo Carusi, a member of the government's Displaced Persons Commission, bitterly criticized a "report" made public by Sen. McCarran which purported to show that large numbers of subversives are entering the country under the present law.

Carusi described testimony taken in Europe last summer by McCarran as "a hodge-podge of untruths, half-truths and simple lies."

McCarran made a short trans-Atlantic visit in 1949, paid his respects to Spanish dictator Franco, and came home with a set of "facts" about displaced persons which have been refuted as completely in error.

THE CIO NEWS 1949 VOTING RECORD

This special 8-page supplement is being printed as a separate CIO publication, for distribution among union members throughout the country.

Prices for the 1949 Voting Record:
5c a copy; 50 for $2.00; 100 for $3.50
500 for $14; 1,000 for $20

Send your orders for the 1949 Voting Record (CIO Publication No. 179), together with check or money order, to:

Publications Department
Congress of Industrial Organizations
718 Jackson Place N. Y.
Washington 6, D. C.

Steel Industry Rapped For Price Increase By Truman's Council Of Economic Advisers

BUSINESS generally was given a pat on the back by President Truman's Council of Economic Advisers, in its annual report to the President, but the steel industry was singled out for sharp rebuke for its recent $4 per ton price increase on basic steel.

The Council reported inflation is no longer a threat, but price increases were serious because they tended to spiral and to retard consumption, which must be expanded if full recovery from last year's recession is to be achieved.

"If there is any room for price change in some vital industrial areas," the Council said, "it is downward and not in an upward direction. Earnings are generally rewarding, though not so high as a year ago, and they can best be protected and advanced by those policies which will maintain and expand volume.

"Steel prices are a case in point. Some reduction in steel prices would favorably influence the whole economic situation. Some of these other products, whose prices are affected by steel prices are also priced at a level where sustained and growing output seems uncertain at current prices.

"THE STATEMENTS of the steel industry accompanying the recent price increases did not in our judgment impair the shortly prior findings of the Steel Industry Board. These findings were to the effect that the situation in the industry, allowing for pensions, did not justify price increases and in fact left room for price decreases in view of no wage-rate increases."

Continuing, the Economic Council warned business executives not to wait for tax cuts. "Changes in tax rates can, at most, be only small under present circumstances," the Council said. "The possibilities for increase in consumption are large.

"We shall not be completely out of the woods after our recent difficulties," the Council added, "until private adjustments and public policies are successful in raising the level of consumption, which is not now sufficiently high for sustained maximum production and employment or for the full prosperity of our business system."

This discussion of prices came in one of the most interesting chapters of the report—entitled "The Significance of 1949 and the Economic Outlook." The significance of 1949, the Council said, was the proof that we have learned to master a recession without going into a depression.

CREDIT, Council added, should go to business, labor, and government. The economic measures enacted under the New Deal to provide cushions for the economy were government's contribution to the handling of the 1949 crisis, the report said, concluding that "we are learning how to use our intelligence to accomplish all that our resources permit."

In another chapter, the Council stressed the importance of wage increases to keep the economy in balance. It said the only way to translate a growing potential for national output into actuality "is to distribute more goods. If the price level is reasonably stable, then the increasing purchasing power necessary for expanding markets must come mainly in the form of money incomes rising in accord with improved productivity.

"And since wages constitute the bulk of personal income, the soundest general formula, once wages, prices, and profits are in a workable relationship, is for money wages to increase with productivity trends in the whole economy."

This call for higher wages marked a sharp break with the policies of the Economic Council under Edwin Nourse, former chairman. Nourse felt increased productivity should be reflected in lower prices, rather than wage increases—a position which labor contended was unworkable because prices rarely go down except in bad times. (LPA).

Steel Price Probe Hearings Jan. 24

Hearings on the recent steel price boost will open Jan. 24 before the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report, Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D. Wyo.) has announced.

The Wyoming Senator denounced the steel price increase as a "tax upon the whole economy of the U.S." at a time when the steel companies "are enjoying extraordinary profits exceeding even those of the record year of 1948."

'Czar' Title Is Shunned By Denham

ROBERT N. DENHAM, general counsel of the Nat'l Labor Relations Board, doesn't really want to be a Czar. He said so openly at the January meeting of the Bar Ass'n of the District of Columbia.

It's Denham's responsibility under the Taft-Hartley act to pass on charges of unfair labor practice, whether the complaint is filed by a union or by a company. If he says "yes," his opinion is subject to review by the NLRB and federal courts. But if he says "no," there's an end to the matter. That's one reason he's tagged Czar.

However, in response to a direct question, he confessed his "no" decisions should be subject to review. "You'd be in court all the time," snapped Thomas L. Harris, assistant general counsel of the CIO. Herbert Thatcher, AFL general counsel, smiled in agreement with Harris.

Denham, in an informal debate, was defending the positive side of the question: "Has the Taft-Hartley act operated to benefit American labor?" His partner was John Gall, general counsel for the Southern Coal Producers. For the negative side, and taking it strongly, were Thatcher and Harris.

Gall was the attorney who filed the first of the recent briefs charging that John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers were committing an unfair labor practice by working a three-day week. Denham had not yet ruled on these charges, and many observers including a UMW spokesman questioned the propriety of his sitting as partner in public debate with an attorney for one party in a highly controversial case still to be decided, even though he managed to avoid saying anything about coal.

The debate, which was chaired by Theodore Granik of the American Forum of the Air, was recorded for broadcasting Jan. 15. (LPA.)

'Fact' Board Named In N. Y. City Dispute

Mayor O'Dwyer staved off a labor crisis on New York's sprawling subway system by naming a four-man board of factfinders to survey the demands of the 40,000 employes and make recommendations. Most of the subway employes belong to the CIO Transport Workers Union. Balance belong to a variety of AFL and independent unions.

Factfinder chairman will be David L. Cole, who served last year on the board that recommended company-paid pensions in steel. Wages, hours and grievance procedures are at issue.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION
of the
CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00
A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 23, 1950 No. 4

THE CIVIL RIGHTS issue erupted when the House Rules Committee staged a power-grab to prevent action on FEPC and other Fair Deal legislation, just as more than 4000 delegates to the National Emergency Civil Rights Mobilization came to town. Top: Reps. Mansfield (D., Mont.), Granger (D., Utah), Eberharter (D., Pa.), Holifield (D., Cal.) and Carroll (D., Colo.) confer on how to beat the Rules Committee. Bottom: Civil Rights Mobilizers from Michigan's 13th district head for the Capitol. (See story on p. 7).

Walter Reuther:

Lobby Favors 'Profitable' Co-op Housing

PRES. WALTER P. Reuther, of the Auto Workers, chairman of the CIO Housing Committee, ripped into the real estate lobby on Jan. 18 as the Senate Banking and Currency Committee prepared to vote on the Maybank amendment to the "middle-income" housing bill.

The amendment would establish a government corporation empowered to sell debentures on the investment market and, with the proceeds, make long-term, low-interest loans to genuine housing cooperatives and non-profit trusts.

Reuther told a sub-committee headed by Sen. John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) that the real estate interests, now screaming "socialism" at this proposal, had favored the principle of co-operative housing over many years. He quoted previous testimony by landlords' lobbyists to support his contention.

"They don't realy object to the cooperative principle," Reuther said, "as long as the government makes it possible for speculators to help themselves. What they object to is legislation such as this, which makes it possible for home owners to help themselves."

REUTHER revealed that on Feb. 2, 1949, he had received a letter from Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, soliciting the CIO's help in promoting co-operative housing for middle-income families.

The letter was followed by a joint meeting, he continued, after which Nelson sent the CIO Committee a memorandum stating in part that the idea of government loans to co-operatives was "worthy of legislative action."

Sparkman interjected that the NAREB, which is on record as opposing the pending amendment, was at the same time promoting a proposal which would have the government take up second mortgages on cooperatives, through the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

"The NAREB is favoring this scheme, which would cost the government more money than the Maybank amendment, at the same time as it is opposing the Maybank proposal," Sparkman said.

(The NAREB proposal does not contain the all-important safeguard found in the Maybank bill, which provides that the administrator of the program, to be appointed by the President, must satisfy himself that the applicant is a genuine co-operative and not a phony organization.)

REUTHER THEN gave the committee another example of what he politely called "inconsistency" on the part of the real estate lobby.

On Jan. 13, he said, Horace Russell, general counsel of the U. S. Savings & Loan League, called the Maybank amendment "pure socialism" and said it was "designed and intended to mislead the American people."

But on April 29, 1949, he had gone on record in support of HR 4488, a bill which asked $5 billion for direct, long-term loans to veterans' cooperatives at an even lower interest rate than is now under consideration, Reuther said.

Again, the difference was that the $5 billion proposal contained no safeguards, requiring applicants to certify that they are not building homes for profit, the UAW head continued.

"He favored that huge program," Reuther said, "but now he opposes lending less money on the same basis because it would actually give people the right to build their own homes and not permit the speculators to milk the American people."

(Russell also told the House Veterans Committee last spring that one reason he favored the $5 billion loan program was that "if it is adopted then Congress won't pass the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill," which provided government-financed low-cost housing.)

"IF THERE was any misrepresentation going on," Reuther declared, "Russell was doing it, not the writers of this bill."

NAREB's spoken objections to the Maybank proposal, according to the committee record, have been on a lofty plane. "It will benefit only one-thirtieth of the middle-income group and discriminate against the rest," said John C. Thompson of NAREB, implying that if the government could not extend these benefits at once to the approximately 8 million families in the middle-income group, it was unfair to make a start.

Reuther told the committee that the great bulk of CIO members "are disqualified from taking part in the low-income housing program because their incomes are too high, and unable to buy available homes because their savings are too low."

"Anyone who calls co-operative housing socialistic is either insane or just downright dishonest," Reuther continued. "The basic unit of Democracy is the family. This bill encourages home ownership, thus promotes the family."

U. S. Survey Shows:

Rents Raised 16 to 41% in Six Decontrolled Cities

By GERVASE N. LOVE

A BULL market in crow for eating purposes, with landlords and real estate lobbyists supplying the demand, loomed last week when Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods showed what happened when rents were decontrolled in six large cities.

The landlords and real estate lobbyists have been proclaiming that rents would rise only moderately if controls were ended. Woods' disclosure, based on a survey made for him by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, showed just how wrong they were and confirmed CIO forecasts of unreasonable and in some cases fantastic jumps.

The survey showed:

- Percentagewise, increase in the six cities averaged from 16.2 to 41.3% monthly.
- In dollars, the average boost ranged from $6.61 to $13.66 monthly.
- In five of the six cities the heaviest increases were imposed on units renting for $30 or less a month, with those in the $30 to $49.99 classification getting the second heaviest tap.
- The longer decontrol is in effect, the greater the number of increases.

Cities surveyed for Wood by the BLS were Dallas and Houston, Tex.; Topeka, Kan.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Salt Lake City, Utah, and Jacksonville, Fla. The survey was made last November and covered only dwellings on which rents could be boosted after decontrol. Thus houses and apartments under continuous leases and units decontrolled previously were excluded.

DALLAS, FIRST of the cities to decontrol itself, showed the greatest number of increases and the highest dollar increases. Between June 23, 1949, and the time of the survey, landlords put the bite on 67% of the tenants not protected by leases. The average increase for all types of units was 35.4% or $13.66 a month.

But in the lowest cost range, up to $30 monthly, 75% of the tenants whose rents could be boosted found themselves paying an average of 55.8% more, or $10.95 additional every month. And the landlords who crack the whip on units in the $30 to $49.99 category hit 59% of their tenants to the tune of 36.2% more a month for an average $14.09 hike. Even middle- and upper-bracket tenants did not escape. In this range 66% of the units were increased by an average 26.2%, or $17.14 monthly.

"It appears significant that the longer a city has been decontrolled the more general the rent rise," Woods commented.

"The range among the six cities surveyed is from 67% in Dallas to 31% in Houston. While both cities are in the same state, Dallas had been decontrolled five months, Houston only one month when the survey was made. This would seem to belie the contention of opponents of rent control that when a city is decontrolled prematurely, rents will rise at first, then level off and even drop.

"At least one explanation why the full effect of rent decontrol is not felt during the first few months of decontrol is the fact that a favorite device used in persuading a city governing body to pass a decontrol resolution is to present a pledge from landlords not to increase rents unreasonably when the lid is off."

Meantime, the fight to continue controls where they still exist is shaping up. Next month Woods will ask Congress for a deficiency appropriation of $4 million to carry on his office's activities until the present act expires June 30. President Truman has notified Congressional leaders that an extension of the act is a "must," and the chances are a bill will be introduced in April. The real estate lobby can be counted upon to oppose both measures, hoping by starving the Office of the Housing Expediter through lack of funds for enforcement to end decontrols ahead of time.

Omaha Rents Up As Much As 166%

The dear hearts and gentle people who rent houses and apartments in Omaha, Nebr., have gouged their tenants so thoroughly since rent controls were ended that Mayor Glenn Cunningham is crying for help.

Citing increases up to 166% since decontrol became effective Nov. 2, Cunningham asked Gov. Val Peterson to call a special session of the Legislature to slap controls back on. The decontrol law was passed over the governor's veto.

Peterson, claiming a "genuine state of emergency exists in Omaha," charged landlords with breaking their pledge not to raise rents more than 10 or 15% even before controls actually ended. As an example he cited one two-room apartment on which the rent was jumped from $26.50 to $60 a month.

Tenants' Friends Aided By CIO

Three Oakland, Calif, City Council members whose scalps are sought by landlord and real estate groups because they voted for low-rent public housing will have the full support of the East Bay CIO.

The three last fall voted to approve a $450,000 Federal loan for surveys preliminary to construction of 3000 public housing units. In retaliation the real estate people forced them into a recall election which has been scheduled for Feb. 28.

The Alameda County Committee for National CIO already is deep in the fight to save jobs of the three councilmen—former Mayor Joseph E. Smith, Raymond E. Pease and Scott Weakley. In a recent plant leaflet distribution CIO members were warned that the attack on public housing in Oakland is "part of a pattern" of national attacks on housing, rent controls and other social legislation. Chairman Arnold F. Campo said the Committee is planning to impress upon every CIO member the need for voting against the recall.

What Survey Showed

Here's what happens when rents are decontrolled, according to the six-city survey made by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics for Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods:

Name of City	Decontrol Date (1949)	Monthly Rent Range	Percent of Eligible Units Increased	Average Dollar Increase Monthly	Average Percent Increase Monthly
Dallas	6-23	All ranges	67	$13.66	35.4
		Under $30	75	10.95	55.8
		$30-$49.99	59	14.09	36.2
		$50 and over	66	17.14	26.2
Houston	10-19	All ranges	31	12.65	41.3
		Under $30	44	10.46	46.4
		$30-$49.99	28	15.20	40.5
		$50 and over	11	13.84	25.8
Topeka	9-14	All ranges	40	9.05	30.3
		Under $30	50	7.09	37.7
		$30-$49.99	42	11.38	29.4
		$50 and over	13	8.12	13.8
Knoxville	6-14	All ranges	61	6.88	26.8
		Under $30	63	5.21	36.1
		$30-$49.99	61	9.78	24.5
		$50 and over	45	6.11	11.1
Salt Lake City	8-5	All ranges	46	6.48	16.2
		Under $30	48	5.96	26.3
		$30-$49.99	49	6.76	17.0
		$50 and over	37	6.37	10.3
Jacksonville	8-5	All ranges (Breakdown not yet available)	56	6.61	26.2

Things Are Tough All Over Except In United States

The following is from a recent discussion among CBS overseas correspondents about economic conditions throughout the world:

MR. MURROW: Perhaps one of the best ways of measuring our good fortune at this half-century is to examine what people in foreign lands regard as luxuries.

MR. SMITH: Well, in Britain, darn near everything British-made is a luxury. Hats, textiles and, alas, Scotch whiskey are all for export only.

MR. DOWNS: Well, in Germany, it's doorknobs with houses on the other end.

MR. SCHOENBRUN: And in France, hot tap water or a cake of fat soap.

MR. BURDETT: In Italy, an orange or a clean, unfrayed shirt. In the countryside, a luxury is an electric light, a telephone, a paved road.

MR. COSTELLO: Don't think this is exaggeration—but for one billion people in Asia—that's half the world's population—anything more than a pound of rice a day borders on luxury.

Big Business 'Take' — 20% After Taxes

By DONALD WOODS
Labor Press Association

ONE OF the most revealing profit reports ever published has been issued by the Federal Trade Commission.

It discloses that since the war Big Business has been making around 20% profit on its invested capital, compared with about half that before the war. And that 20% is after taxes.

The figures give the direct lie to the shrieks of Big Business that the New Deal and the Fair Deal have ruined them and have cut so heavily into profits that there is no incentive to expand. They also show the profit rate is highest for the biggest companies in each field, and that the more concentrated the control of an industry, the higher the profit rate.

The FTC report shows the motor vehicle industry led the entire procession in 1948, with a profit of 25%, after taxes, whereas the return in 1940 was 17.3%. And 1949 was the greatest year for the auto industry in production, sales, and profits.

The FTC study covered 528 identical corporations in 25 selected industries, and showed rates of return (after taxes) on stockholders' investment in 1940, 1947 and 1948 "adjusted to exclude reported accelerated depreciation on postwar facilities."

The Commission reported that in both 1947 and 1948 there was "a clustering of rates of return around the figure of 20% for about half of the industries studied."

Analysis of the figures showed that in 1940 only two out of the 25 industries were in the 25% class, and 16 of them were "clustered" around 10%. Highest was around 17%.

THE REPORT shows clearly that most of Big Business, which was satisfied to make about 10% profit on its invested capital before the war, is now demanding 20% profit on its war-inflated capital structure.

The Commission reported the industries showing the greatest increase in their profit rates between 1940 and 1948 were:

Rayon—up from 8.6 to 20.3%.

Petroleum refining—from 6.7 to 19.4%.

Bread—up from 7.6 to 19.8%.

Office and store machines and devices—up from 13.2 to 23.9%.

Paper and allied products—up from 9.6 to 18.2%.

Wool carpets and rugs—up from 8.9 to 17.3%.

Biscuits and crackers—up from 8.8 to 17%.

Linoleum and felt base—up from 7.5 to 15.4%.

Motor vehicles—up from 17.3 to 23%.

Altogether the Commission found that in 1948, of the 25 big industries studied, 12 showed profits around 20% while two others—motor vehicles and office equipment—were in excess of 23%. Of the remaining big industries, three had profits between 15 and 17%; six had 10-15%, and only two had less than 10%.

The only industries showing lower returns in 1948 than in 1940 were cigars and cigarettes, both of which have found it difficult to raise their prices.

An Important Speech

Issues involved in the demands of the CIO Communications Workers of America for wage increases from the Bell telephone system will be explained to the general public in an important network speech next week.

CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne will speak on Wednesday night, January 25.

The speech will be broadcast over some 130 stations of the ABC network. It will be heard at 9:30 P.M., eastern time; 8:30 P.M., central time; 8:30 P.M., mountain time; 9:00 P.M., Pacific time.

Check the radio columns of your local ABC station to find out what time the speech will be heard in your community.

Be sure to listen to this important speech about an issue that affects every worker—and every city and town—in the U. S. A.

Ever Earn $68,493 An Hour? GM Did

General Motors Chairman Alfred P. Sloan has disclosed that his company earned more profits last year (over $600 million) than any other company ever made in a similar period. He termed the accomplishment "satisfactory."

Sloan, in a New York City "Forward from Fifty" luncheon attended by 500 industrial and financial leaders, asked for a rewarding pat-on-the-back from the country's politicians, whom he said "should be inclined to encourage a performance of this magnitude."

He stated that last years' profits "are likely to move up to over $600 million."

The GM board chairman's speech had a disparagement for company stockholders, who earned $1100 million during the period. He inferred that the record-breaking 1949 profits were less impressive when viewed in the light of return on capital employed.

"If we compare 1949 with 1936," he said, "we find that the return on capital employed rose only three percentage points. And to accomplish this we had to increase our sales in terms of 1949 dollars from $2500 million for 1936 to $5500 million in 1949." He indicated that the process hadn't been easy.

(Ed. Note: A profit of $600 million-a-year amounts to $68,493 an hour.)

In view of GM's record breaking profit year, CIO Auto Worker officials were wondering what the attitude of the company would be, come negotiation time. The present agreement expires May 29.

UE Stalls W'House, GE Elections

HEARINGS on petitions for Labor Board elections at General Electric and Westinghouse are moving slowly as a result of backing-and-filing tactics by counsel for the United Electrical Workers.

The UE was expelled from the CIO in November on grounds of Communist domination. The new CIO-chartered IUE has won to its ranks close to a quarter of a million former UE members and is pressing for early elections in the big corporations of the industry.

The "old UE" has made public statements also indicating a desire for voting as soon as possible, but its legal tactics show interest in delay rather than speed, according to IUE officials.

AT GENERAL Electric, the company, the "old UE" and the CIO-IUE have agreed on definitions of collective bargaining units in 85 out of 100 cases. But in 15 others, the company is trying to break down the old units into new, smaller ones.

In addition, the independent Intl. Association of Machinists and four AFL unions are seeking to carve out craft units out of the big industrial bargaining groups in various GE plants.

The UE contract with GE expires April 1. The expelled union has played both sides of the street, arguing at various times that (1) elections should be held in February, and (2) that the present contract bars the holding of NLRB elections until April.

The CIO-IUE is seeking the election as soon as possible.

700 Attend N. C. Political Rally

Seven hundred persons attended a dinner rally of the United Labor Political Committee in Durham, N.C., last week.

Members of CIO, AFL and unaffiliated unions and the railroad brotherhoods attended. Speakers included Dir. Jack Kroll of CIO-PAC; Joseph Keenan, chairman of the AFL Labor's League for Political Education, and Gov. W. Kerr Scott, of North Carolina.

Board Is Named For Broun Award Contest

The winner of the 1949 Heywood Broun Award will be chosen by Alan Barth, Washington Post editorial writer; John Hersey, noted author and newspaper writer, Quentin Reynolds, magazine writer, and Roland E. Wolseley, professor of journalism at Syracuse University.

The award is given by the CIO Newspaper Guild for the most outstanding newspaper job of the year in the spirit of Heywood Broun. The award is $500 and a Guild Citation. Entries should be sent to the ANG, 99 University Place, New York 3, N. Y. Deadline is Feb. 1.

The annual award, started in 1941, is in memory of Heywood Broun, crusading liberal columnist who founded the Guild. He died in 1939.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

Senate Passes Oleo Tax Repeal Bill

THE FEDERAL tax on oleomargarine last week headed for the legislative ashcan, after having been on the statute book for decades.

By a 56-16 vote, the Senate passed and sent to a joint conference committee a bill to repeal taxes and license fees imposed to make it a less hardy competitor of butter products.

A similar bill had been passed last year in the House. Like the Senate bill, it was vigorously opposed by spokesmen from many dairy-farming districts.

The present law provides a 10c a pound tax on colored margarine, plus a series of sizeable license fees on producers, wholesalers and retailers who handle the product.

THE SENATE bill differs from the House version principally through a provision that colored margarine be sold in triangular packages—so that it will be clearly distinguishable from butter.

The bill ran a gauntlet of hampering amendments designed to make it unattractive to Senators from the polltax states of the south. Offered as amendments were proposals to set up an FEPC, to repeal the polltax, to make lynching a federal crime, and to repeal all wartime excise taxes on consumer goods.

The civil rights amendments were offered by Sen. Langer (R., N. D.), a violent foe of the oleo tax repeal bill. Administration supporters charged the North Dakota Senator with using the civil rights matter simply to provide a stumbling block for the oleo bill.

The Langer amendments were voted down on that basis, by margins of 60-20 and 59-17. Stalwart supporters of civil rights voted with the majority, in order to pass the oleo bill.

Also rejected, by a smaller margin, was a proposal by Sen. Butler (R. Neb.), to tack on a repeal of all excise taxes. That one was licked, 43-32.

The final 56-16 vote cut through party lines. Voting against the bill were 12 Republicans—most of them from midwest dairy states—and four liberal Democrats, also from butter producing areas.

Other Congressional developments:

BASING POINTS: The CIO, in wires to 25 Senators, called for votes against the joint Senate-House conference report on the basing point bill, (S. 1008) which deals with pricing practices of big corporations.

Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director, said that "whatever its original purpose, the present bill would weaken anti-trust laws and place obstacles to its enforcement against price fixing and predatory monopoly practices. Amendments of its confusing language will only create more confusion. It should be killed."

LABOR EXTENSION SERVICE: The Senate Labor & Public Welfare Committee held a series of closed discussions on H.R. 1380, designed to set up workers education projects in collaboration with labor unions, schools and colleges. The bill, strongly endorsed by CIO and AFL, has also been under consideration in the House Labor Committee.

SOCIAL SECURITY: The Committee has opened hearings on H. R. 6000, the House-passed measure to improve social security. CIO will appear during coming weeks, with proposals along the lines suggested by CIO Social Security Committee.

Use Of Electricity On Farms Doubled

Use of electric power on farms has almost doubled in two years, according to the annual report of the Rural Electrification Administration. Kilowatt hours billed to consumers for fiscal year 1947 totalled 2,900 million in 1949, the figure was 5,500 million.

—From St. Louis Post Dispatch

Totalitarian Bird Roosting in America

Lefties Charge Conspiracy And Seek Injunctions

Use Old Employer Union-Busting Weapons In Effort To Avoid Expulsion From CIO By Executive Board

By ALLAN L. SWIM

THE PARTY-LINE lads certainly took a leaf out of the employers' union-busting book when they went into court recently in an effort to halt hearings on Communist - domination charges against 10 CIO unions.

In the first place, they entered court under the Taft-Hartley Act, which they profess to hate more than anybody else does.

They used the old employers' trick of charging conspiracy.

And they sought to obtain injunctions which would prevent the CIO Executive Board from carrying out a mandate of the last CIO convention.

PERHAPS USING a Taft-Hartley provision to get their case before federal courts was more or less of a technicality.

But there was nothing "purely technical" about their charge of conspiracy and their request for injunctions.

They attempted to use the legal weapons which unionists learned years ago to abhor.

Furthermore, their entire action was directly contrary to the old trade union "rule" that you try to settle inter-family quarrels out of court.

The party-liners certainly knew these things and how unionists generally feel about them, but they took legal action anyhow.

THE "GREAT conspiracy" in which CIO leaders are engaged is about as conspiratorial as a drink of plain water.

They took their case before the CIO convention last year. They discussed it openly from the speakers' platform.

Philip Murray and his colleagues said bluntly that the CIO should rid itself of Communist influences.

Constitutional changes which would permit the CIO to deal with the Communist problem were presented to the delegates—and a majority of delegates approved the changes.

Then the convention instructed the Executive Board to deal with Red charges which had been openly filed against 10 unions.

Conspiracy? Nuts!

THE PARTY-LINERS are attempting to make a strong case against the hearing committees appointed by Murray.

These, they say, serve as "prosecutor, judge and jury." And when they say it they're either lying deliberately or they don't know what they're talking about.

The committees have no power other than to told hearings and make recommendations. They have been receiving testimony from both the accused and the accusers.

The CIO Executive Board is the group which will determine whether the unions are to be expelled—and the accused will have an opportunity to argue their case before the Board.

ONE OF THE most amusing accusations made by the lefties is that the CIO "has set everything up so it can kick out 10 unions."

The manner in which they make the "charge" indicates they're talking about some great secret.

Every person who attended the last CIO convention knew the CIO intended to kick out 10 unions if they were found guilty as charged.

The CIO established a procedure to bring this about. This was done openly and with much publicity.

Imagine how ridiculous it would have been had the CIO announced it would act against the Commies without setting up machinery which could make such action effective.

THERE ARE VERY few union groups which are provided three hearings regardless of the nature of charges brought against them.

In this respect the Commies get a break.

They had an opportunity at the last convention to argue their case. The hearing committees offer the second opportunity—and the Executive Board offers the third.

And those who were present knew that the convention delegates were in a mood to kick the party-liners out on their ears then and there!

It's a significant thing that only one of the 10 accused unions—the Furniture Workers—has made any move since the convention to set its house in order.

The others haven't even been pleading innocent. What they're seeking to prove is that it's OK for them to follow the party line—regardless of a convention mandate.

That Man Denham!

It looks as if Robert N. Denham is doing his darndest to take away from Senator Taft the unenviable title of "The Man Labor Likes Least."

Denham, the NLRB's general counsel, really cut a fancy di-do recently at an employers' meeting at New York City.

Denham, in effect, told the group:

"If the NLRB should rule against you in any controversy you should fight the matter out in court."

Such advice coming from a NAM lawyer wouldn't have been out of place—but Denham is the man who is charged by law with the duty of defending the NLRB and its decisions in court!

Denham's action would be paralleled if the prosecuting attorney in a criminal case told the defendant:

"If this stupid jury should find you guilty you should immediately appeal to a higher court."

Following the New York speech, CIO Pres. Philip Murray asked—again—that Denham be booted out of office. His first request was made last November during the CIO convention.

Murray said Denham's invitation to employers to go into court "is sufficient proof (if any additional proof is needed) that Denham is incapable of administering the important post of general counsel of the Board with the fairness and impartiality that office requires."

And at this point about the only good thing we can say about Denham is that he doesn't make any pretense of being fair and impartial.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer

Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher

Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII January 23, 1950 No. 4

A. & P. Challenges Free Enterprise — Nathan

MANY BUSINESS men who preach competition in public practice monopoly in private, Robert R. Nathan, noted economist, said in his CIO-sponsored broadcast over the ABC network last week.

Nathan's observation was promoted by resumption of the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co's. advertising campaign to discredit the anti-trust division of the U. S. Dept. of Justice.

The company was found guilty of charges of conspiracy to restrain and monopolize trade, and paid a fine. The anti-trust division is now sueing to alter the firm's structure so as to stop the illegal practices.

"What does this A&P case really mean to all of us?" asked Nathan in his broadcast.

"Simply, if we are to have a free competitive system, it must be free and it must be competitive. It must operate in accordance with the rules laid down by the people and their duly elected representatives. Our anti-trust and fair trade laws were enacted by a democratically elected Congress. They have been on the books for a long time and have served a valuable purpose. They should be supported and enforced.

"IN ALL MY years in Washington, I can't recall any busines spokesman ever publicly praising the anti-trust division for its work. And surely it works on behalf of a free competitive economy. Every anti-trust prosecution is called a persecution.

"Even where companies or industries have admitted violating the law and have agreed to reform, the anti-trust division is still criticized. The A&P case is a challenge. If we are going to preserve our free enterprise system, let us protect it from attack on all sides."

Nathan said that the U. S. District Court in which the conspiracy charge was tried found the evidence showed that the company was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. A U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, he added, unanimously upheld the conviction in an opinion which described in detail some of the harmful acts by which A&P illegally killed competition.

"Here is how A&P competitors were put on an unfair disadvantage," said Nathan, citing the court records. "With its great buying power and ruthless force, it compelled producers and wholesalers to sell to A&P at much lower prices than to other retailers. In fact, other retailers had to pay higher than normal prices to make up for the special favors to A&P. This was spelled out by the court when it said 'the supplier had to make his profit out of his other customers at higher prices.'

"A&P COMPELLED its suppliers to discontinue normal business practices which might in any way be of value to other retail stores. A&P's buying policies hurt free competition and free enterprise. Its tactics resulted in the raising of prices to its competitors.

"The court found that the company varied its retail prices from one area to another to gain competitive advantages. Where competition was tough, A&P would arbitrarily lower prices and take planned losses. Here, customers benefited temporarily until A&P weakened its competitors and strengthened its own position. Its customers elsewhere subsidized these losses by paying higher prices.

"A&P's ads would have you believe the company was simply accused of having regularly undersold its competitors. This just is not the case."

Nathan broadcasts regularly for the CIO each Tuesday at 10:45 p.m., EST, over the ABC network.

Only 324,000 Are Jobless In Britain

Total working population of Britain now exceeds 22,250,000.

No less than 12,500,000 of the employed workpeople are concentrated in such basic industries as coalmining and quarrying, power industries, transport and agriculture, together with a great group of manufacturing industries which included chemical and allied trades, the metals, engineering and vehicle building trades, the textile clothing, food, drink, tobacco trades and so on. In November the total number of workpeople registered as unemployed was less than 324,000.

"Go to hell, Sir!"

Fire Commissioner Called Off His 'Dogs'

IT ALL began when some men in uniform attended a CIO Council meeting as guests one night during the war.

After the session, one of the soldiers said to a Council officer, "What we need in this town is a labor-operated canteen—a place where the boys can have some fun and talk shop."

At the next meeting the Council voted to establish a canteen and named a committee to handle arrangements.

After several weeks the group located and then rented suitable quarters, and committee members were most enthusiastic.

Then the trouble began.

IN THIS particular city the CIO Council was on one side of the political fence and the city administration was on the other. And the city administration frowned hard on the idea of a CIO canteen.

This first became evident when a fire inspector said the building which had been rented was unsafe for crowds of the size expected.

The next evidence came when the Council's effort to obtain sugar to serve with coffee was blocked by persons connected with the political machine which dominated the city.

Then the Council was turned down when it sought to purchase a big exhaust fan to cool the canteen.

THE SUGAR problem was solved when unionists throughout town pledged to donate small amounts from their own limited supplies.

Then a Council delegate turned up one day with a small exhaust fan—an old one—and several other fans.

But the fire inspector was a determined man who was going to do his duty as his political bosses saw it.

He showed up at the canteen a few hours before time for the grand opening and "discovered" for the first time—although he had been around before—that the floor supports were too weak to hold up the anticipated crowd.

As a result, only a limited number was admitted.

THE FLOOR supports were reinforced a few days later and the inspector was called in to look the job over.

They were OK, he said, but the Council would have to provide an exit through the basement, although the crowd wasn't admitted below the ground floor.

An exit was provided—through the basement of an adjoining restaurant and then through its kitchen.

The inspector then "discovered" that the wiring wasn't safe. CIO electricians said he didn't know what he was talking about but they made the changes he requested.

The canteen operated without interruption for a week, and then another fire inspector showed up.

INSPECTOR No. 2 went over the place carefully, called Council officers into a huddle and said sadly:

"You fellows will have to close down unless you cut an exit through that brick wall. You've just got to have another one."

The next day the Council president called on the fire commissioner and told him bluntly, "You've got to call off your dogs down at the canteen."

"Are you asking me or telling me?" asked the commissioner.

"I'm telling you. We've got a dozen soldiers and sailors circulating petitions of protest against the city at all the camps in the area. The newspapers—and the city administration—won't be able to ignore what those fellows say about you. They'll paint you as an unpatriotic heel."

The commissioner thought the matter over, then said, "Maybe I can afford to be a heel but not an unpatriotic one. The dogs are called off."

After that the fire inspectors dropped in occasionally—just for a cup of coffee.

A.L.S.

SERVICE WITH A SMIRK

ECA Aide: British Production In 2 Years Near 5-Year Goal

By WILLIAM C. GAUSSMAN
Labor Information Officer,
Special ECA Mission to the United Kingdom

IT IS TIME THAT everyone recognized what a good job our workers and managements are, on the whole, doing and nobody should make the ridiculous suggestion that our people are not working, declared Sir Stafford Cripps, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, summing up Britain's accomplishments during the second year of the Marshall plan.

British production is now 30% above pre-war levels, the Labor government's spokesman revealed.

Productivity—output per man hour—has risen by 5% above 1948 levels—and that year's record was 5% above the previous year. This increase in industrial efficiency has been the major factor contributing to Britain's 20% increase in total production during the first two years of the Marshall Plan. The long-term program submitted by the British when the Marshall Plan was under discussion called for an increase of 25% in five years.

The achievement of British coal miners and steel workers have been outstanding, and they have made possible the increased output in other industries. Each miner is digging more coal per shift than pre-war. No other European country has yet hit pre-war averages. The steel industry is producing more than the "target" anticipated.

CRIPPS' FIGURES demonstrate too that Britain has been playing her part in accomplishing another Marshall Plan objective—the integration of the European economy. During the past year Britain's exports to other Marshall Plan countries have increased, and her imports from them have advanced at even greater speed.

Progress has also been made towards meeting the "dollar gap." Imports from the U. S. amount to only 22% of the goods coming into the British Isles today, as compared with 34% two years ago. The sterling value of British exports to the U. S. has risen, during the same period, although since devaluation their dollar value has declined.

Sir Stafford is convinced that devaluation creates the opportunities for further increasing British-area exports to the U. S. that will overcome that loss. As he disclosed in an earlier statement, Britain's dollar reserves and gold reserves have both improved in recent months.

ALL THIS HAS been accomplished without sacrificing the social goals of the labor movement, Cripps emphasized. "Domestically we have aimed to maintain and strengthen our democratic way of life, stressing the need for social justice in order to preserve and extend our essential liberties," he said.

"We have maintained the principles and practices of fair shares. We have insisted upon full employment, while protecting the economy against the consequent fears of inflation. We have sought to increase slowly but surely the standards of the less well paid section of the population by stepping up production and productivity and by some measure of redistribution of wealth through taxation and the social services."

The government's statement also pointed out that while wage rates have not quite kept up with recent fractional advances in living costs, increases in the workers' net earnings have. Earnings in Britain exceed wage rates by a greater per cent than is the case in the U. S. because of a wider use of piece rates and bonuses.

TREACHEROUS CURRENTS

Intolerance is a poison administered by intolerant majorities to minorities. It is a deadly poison to the minorities. The only antidote the minorities can use for their poison is, in turn, equally poison to the majority groups.

Suppose tomorrow we should start sneering, patronizing, and persecuting the Baptists. Day after tomorrow the Baptists would organize for their own protection. They'd have to. The result would be that the measures they took for their own protection would, in the minds of the dominant majority, call for greater restrictive measures, which in turn would bring forth more determined efforts at resistance.

And so it goes in a vicious circle.

Suppose four men were in a boat a mile or so above Niagara Falls. Four men, a Jew, a Protestant, a Catholic, and a Negro. They have four oars. If they want to use those oars for rowing, they take the boat to either bank they choose. If they use the oars as clubs by which they can push each other around they can drift with the current to a point where no amount of rowing will possibly save them. They'll all be swept to destruction.

We're all in the same boat today and we're drifting with the current.

Who wants to start rowing?

—Erle Stanley Gardner

CIO, AFL Form United Political Front In N. Y. C.

THIS CHART from the PAC pamphlet "The Case of the Missing Ballots" tells the sad story of low votes in off-election years. Seventy-one liberal Congressmen were defeated in 1946, and 51 liberal Congressmen lost in 1942. The 80th ("Worst") Congress, elected in 1946, was the one that passed T-H.

CIO AND AFL unions in New York City representing more than a million members have formed a permanent organization for a united political front.

They set up a United Labor Committee which will carry forward, on a year-round basis, political activities aimed at making labor's strength effectively felt in elections and in relations with City Hall. The movement is an outgrowth of the close cooperation between the two groups last fall which was reflected in the election of U. S. Senator Herbert H. Lehman and the re-election of Mayor William O'Dwyer.

Joint heads of the committee are Michael J. Quill, president of the New York CIO Council and of the Transport Workers Union, and Martin T. Lacey, president of the AFL Central Labor Trades. Permanent secretaries are Morris Iushewitz, secretary-treasurer of the CIO council, and James C. Quinn, who holds a similar office in the Central Trades. Permanent offices will be established soon.

IN A STATEMENT issued through Iushewitz it was emphasized that both groups are equally anxious for the success of the venture. Both also saw in the political alliance a means of adjusting jurisdictional disputes, many of which have been settled amicably in the last few months as a result of the election campaign cooperation, and of aiding each other in organization.

It was made clear that politically, the committee will act independently, though last fall it supported Democratic candidates only. The four officers, acting jointly, will serve as a political steering committee.

The committee represents nearly all of the larger unions in New York. However, left wing CIO unions are boycotting it, while some AFL unions will continue to act politically through the Liberal Party or their own internationals.

New York leaders expressed the hope their coalition would speed political union between CIO and AFL in the rest of the country.

$100 FOR PAC: Miss Theresa Courey, secretary-treasurer of Local 12, Communications Workers of America-CIO, Washington, D. C., presents a check for $100 to PAC Comptroller George Rettinger. The local voted the money to the PAC education fund and promised to do a bang-up job in the collection of voluntary contributions for PAC, needed now more than ever.

Ohio CIO Withholds Nod in Senate Race

By AL ZACK

"HE JUST doesn't measure up."

That was the unanimous, unofficial reaction of the 1200 delegates to the 11th Constitutional Convention of the Ohio CIO Council, which Jan. 15, wound up its sessions at Cincinnati.

They were speaking, of course, of Sen. Robert A. Taft, candidate for reelection.

During the four days of deliberations, the delegates had hammered out a liberal program of far-reaching importance to guide the council during the year.

Refusing to be stampeded by newspaper predictions into making any indorsements at this early date, the convention had decided instead to fashion itself a yardstick to measure candidates.

That yardstick is the legislative program of the Ohio CIO Council—a program which considers the problems of the worker, the farmer, the white-collar employe and the small businessman.

As the convention drew to a close and the yardstick was completed, every delegate used it to measure Taft's record. The result was unanimous.

Taft just didn't measure up.

JACK KROLL, president of the Ohio CIO Council and director of national CIO-PAC, summed up the case against Taft as he spoke on the resolution on political action.

"The only thing we have against him (Taft) is his record—his whole record," said Kroll.

"It's a record of double-talk, inconsistency and simon-pure reaction."

Kroll read the record on Taft, citing his speeches on one side of an issue and his votes on the other side of the same issue.

"If ever there was a man who talks out of both sides of his mouth it is the senior senator from Ohio," Kroll charged.

Lashing out at Taft's alleged interest in "liberty and freedom from government interference," Kroll pointed to the record and charged, "the only kind of liberty Bob Taft cares about is the liberty of big business to make more profit and the liberty of the plain people to 'eat less.'

"He doesn't give a damn about the economic liberties of the people from the wrong side of the tracks. He's only interested in liberty for the 'fat cats.'"

BUT IT WAS issues, problems, policies and program that interested the delegates to the Ohio CIO Convention most.

These interests were many and varied. The delegates discussed matters ranging from political action to volunteer fire fighters in the plants .

On political action, the convention dedicated itself to "the mightiest and most dynamic registration and get-out-the-vote drive in Ohio's history." The delegates showed they meant business by starting with themselves. They changed the council's constitution to insist a delegate must be a registered voter to be seated at future conventions.

Recognizing the hardships imposed on voters by restrictive Ohio laws, the convention demanded Gov. Frank J. Lausche call the Legislature into special session to revise registration and election laws.

In other major actions the convention:

REELECTED unanimously Jack Kroll to his ninth term as president, and Secy.-Treas. Jacob Clayman to his second term, elected by acclamation a slate of 17 vice-presidents who comprise the executive board.

APPLAUDED Labor Secy. Maurice J. Tobin for his warm words of support for President Truman's State of the Union speech, and adopted a resolution hailing the President's message as a "declaration of independence with security."

SHOWED it wasn't fooling when it talked farmer-labor unity by giving a resounding welcome to Murray D. Lincoln, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Insurance Companies and the biggest name in the farm cooperative movement. Lincoln, deploring the real estate lobby's fight against cooperative housing, obtained CIO support for the proposal.

HEARD Jack Livingston, Auto Workers vice president, predict that there would be a union shop in General Motors following the coming elections.

APPLAUDED predictions by Secy.-Treas. David J. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers of success for the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

CHEERED Natl. CIO Vice Pres. Allan Haywood's two-fisted attack on Communists and fellow travelers in the labor movement.

HEARD John Brophy, CIO Councils director, detail the need for full use of America's natural resources to better the living standards of its workers.

PLEDGED support to the Communications Workers of America, CIO's newest but husky baby, after hearing CWA Pres. Joseph A. Bierne label the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. a "sheltered monopoly."

Conn. Labor Unites For 1950 Election

By HERMAN WOLF

ORGANIZED labor in Connecticut has united politically to wage joint warfare for its friends and against its foes in the 1950 election.

That was the big news from the Nutmeg State as the Connecticut CIO brought its twelfth annual convention to a close at New Haven. At a political action session, state leaders of the Connecticut Federation of Labor, AFL, Intl. Association of Machinists, United Mine Workers and Railroad Brotherhoods joined with CIO officials in pledging to build a United Labor Committee with an eye to next November.

It was made clear that the 1950 objective will be to return Democratic Sens. McMahon and Benton and Democratic Reps. Woodhouse, Ribicoff and McGuire to Washington—and, if possible, to replace the state's three Republican congressmen with new blood.

Equally important will be the re-election of Gov. Chester Bowles to the first four-year gubernatorial term in the state's history.

Sen. Benton, newly appointed by Bowles, pledged his energies to the repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act.

"My attitude toward the Act is simply stated. Congress should repeal it," he said. "The best men in labor and industry should sit down with Congress to work out a new law consistent with the basic freedoms both of labor and management."

Benton, who is a former Assistant Secretary of State, also paid tribute to organized labor for "showing great realism and great responsibility in combatting communist tactics."

Representing the five labor groups at the political action session were Secy.-Treas. Joseph M. Rourke of Connecticut AFL; Pres. James N. Mulreed, of the state council, IAM; Natl. Rep. Peter Landino, District 50, UMWA; George Snow and John Murphy, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, respectively; Pres. Mitchell Sviridoff and Secy.-Treas. John Driscoll of the state CIO.

"Real coordination of labor's efforts for candidates who are friends of labor is essential for maximum results in registration of voters, use of available campaign funds and getting out the vote election day," said the joint resolution. "It is the sense of this conference that a United Labor Committee be created at once, and we call upon all participating unions to take the necessary steps."

The CIO convention empowered its officers to join in establishing the United Labor Committee, and the four other labor groups are expected to follow with similar action.

Sviridoff and Driscoll were reelected as officers of the state CIO without opposition.

Following a speech by CIO Councils Dir. John Brophy, the convention passed a resolution recommending federal regional planning such as TVA to conserve national resources and provide electricity.

Other speakers at the convention included Roy Reuther, CIO Auto Workers PAC coordinator, Al Barkan, PAC Textile Workers Director, and Tilford Dudley, assistant national CIO-PAC Director.

Ted Silvey, special labor advisor in ECA, reported on unions in the Marshall plan countries.

Opponents Square Off For Civil Rights Showdown

By D. ROCKWELL CLARK

A SHOWDOWN on civil rights loomed on the Congressional horizon as the election-year session of the 81st Congress went into its fourth week.

Brought into full limelight by the three-day meeting in Washington of 4037 delegates to the National Emergency Civil Rights Mobilization, and given a personal send-off by President Truman, the issue was hot enough to give off smoke by the end of last week, and all indications were that it would stay that way right through the 1950 campaigns.

In the House, the Dixiegop coalition on the Rules Committee sought to keep the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill from coming to a vote by making an unashamed power-grab which, if successful, would bottle up FEPC and most of the Fair Deal along with it.

In the Senate, cynics began trying to use the civil rights issue to thwart Fair Deal legislation, through the hoary device of tacking FEPC on as a "rider," thereby assuring—they hoped—defeat of the main legislation by filibuster. This happened on the oleo bill but the attempt was defeated when the FEPC amendment was tabled.

President Truman jumped right into the middle of the situation by telling a group of Mobilization delegates that he hoped the Rules Committee move would be defeated, and that Senate administration leaders would meet the issue head-on and try to break the inevitable filibuster on FEPC "if it takes all summer."

All this took place as the delegates to the union-backed, non-Communist Mobilization, in large-business-like groups, buttonholed every Congressman and Senator who was in town and put them over the jumps on specific issues.

"CEASE STALLING" on FEPC, Congress was told by a joint Conference of three CIO unions and the CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination. Here are some of the conference leaders: Arthur Riordan, IUE-CIO representative at the conference; Thomas W. Shane, chairman of the CIO Steelworkers representatives; Joseph Germano, director, steel union's Dist. 31 and president of the Illinois CIO Council; William Oliver, co-director of the Auto Workers Fair Practices Dept.; CIO Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey, chairman of the CIO Committee and of the IUE-CIO Administrative Committee; Willard Townsend, president of the Transport Service Employes and secretary of the CIO Committee; Albin Hartnett, IUE representative and assistant to Chairman Carey of the IUE Administration Committee; Mrs. Lillian Hatcher, intl. representative of the UAW Fair Practices dept.; George L-P Weaver, CIO Committee director. The three Unions also decided to sponsor local civil rights rallies.

Delegates from 58 organizations in 33 states swarmed over Capitol Hill and then gathered in the Interdepartmental Auditorium to hear reports.

THE Mobilization was frankly a pressure group, working against other pressure groups whose purposes were not so honestly stated, and whose operations were not so above-board.

It was the climax to a series of regional meetings. The attendance was over twice what Mobilization Chairman Roy Wilkins, acting executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, had guessed it would be, in spite of the fact that nearly 800 would-be delegates were turned down by the credentials committee.

(The bouncing came about because Mobilization leaders had decided as a policy matter that no Communists or Communist-front organizations would be invited or accepted. This led, according to Willard Townsend, president of the CIO Transport Service Union and credentials committee chairman, to the submission of a number of phony credentials from persons claiming to represent NAACP. "We may have screened out some innocents," he commented, "but not many; it is my firm belief that the Communists deliberately attempted to sabotage this conference.")

Both the Senate flurry and the Rules Committee grab occurred while the Mobilization was in town. More than one Southern delegate, shocked by these maneuvers, told the intensely serious audience at the Auditorium that Dixie Negroes would redouble their efforts for repeal of the polltax and, in the meantime, would work to qualify Southern liberals of every race to vote.

Cheers greeted one Mississippi delegate who said: "We knew it would be a waste of time to talk to our Congressmen, but I tell you this: you folks give us the ballot and we'll be the ones who'll get you the votes for FEPC."

About one-third of the delegates were from CIO and AFL unions. CIO officials playing an active part included UAW-CIO Political Action Coordinator Roy Reuther; Regional Director Joseph Germano of the Steelworkers; Albin Hartnett of IUE-CIO; and George L-P Weaver, director of the CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination.

On Jan. 14, before the Mobilization, the Committee met at CIO headquarters. It called on Congress to "cease stalling and take steps to make American democracy work." The three big unions also pledged to hold a series of regional rallies for civil rights.

The Rules Committee power-grab, which dramatized the difficulties and pressures surrounding passage of civil rights legislation as nothing else could have done, began while the Mobilization was still in Washington and had not been resolved as the CIO News went to press.

THE RULES committee serves as a "traffic cop" in the House; it decides when bills reported by other committees will reach the floor, how long they will be debated, and whether they may be opened for amendments. Until last year it also could refuse indefinitely to bring a bill to the floor.

At present, the Rules Committee can block consideration of a measure approved by another committee for only three legislative weeks, after which the chairman of the committee which approved the measure may call it up for consideration on "Calendar Day" if recognized by the Speaker.

The legislative 21 days on FEPC expire today (Jan. 23). Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) of the House Labor Committee early in the session notified all and sundry that he would call the measure up for House consideration Jan. 23.

IT COULD scarcely have been a coincidence that the Rules Committee majority, led by Rep. Eugene Cox (D., Ga.) and backed by all four Republican members and three out of the five committee "Democrats," on Jan. 16 voted seven to two to ask the House to give it back its old, virtually absolute, power of sitting on legislation indefinitely.

It had this power until last year, when the House by a vote of 275 to 142, instituted the 21-day limit.

If the power is restored, the only way that any portion of the Fair Deal program can get past the Dixiegops on the Rules Committee will be for 218 members of the House to sign a petition discharging the Rules Committee of further consideration of the bill in question. This is an exact numerical majority of the House, but is many more like-minded Representatives than can usually be found in Washington at one time.

Effect of such a switch on Lesinski's efforts to get FEPC to the floor could easily be imagined. The Capitol is full of legislators who find themselves on the hottest political spot they have occupied in years, including many on both sides of the aisle who have mouthed easy phrases about favoring civil rights and now find themselves threatened with a record vote on the subject.

Rep. Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), venerable Rules Committee chairman, and Rep. Ray Madden (D., Ind.), were the only two Rules Committee members to vote against the power-grab.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray on Jan. 19 addressed a letter to Sabath, House Speaker Sam Rayburn, and Majority Leader John MacCormack (D., Mass.), asking them to work vigorously against the proposed rules change. "It would empower the Rules Committee to make a mockery of the manifest will of the people and in many cases the express will of a large majority of Congress," Murray said.

MEANWHILE, House and Senate Judiciary Committees started hearings on anti-poll-tax and anti-lynching legislation, and it became evident that, whether or not FEPC got before the House or Senate at this session, there would be a show-down on some civil rights measure, no matter how hard the politicians might squirm.

The House is in the habit of passing the anti-lynching bill, least controversial of the civil rights measures; but the very threat of floor consideration in the Senate has been enough to start a filibuter.

The Senate last year amended its rules, ostensibly setting up an effective method of closing debate and thus eliminating filibusters, but actually, in the opinion of Congressional experts, making it even more difficult than before to invoke cloture (close debate). The change was put over by Senate Dixiegops in preference to an administration sponsored proposal which actually would have limited debate. Senate majority leader Scott Lucas has promised to try to get cloture on a civil rights measure at this session even if it means holding up all other legislation.

Bulletin

The Rules Committee power-grab was defeated, 236-183, on Jan. 20. This meant the House probably would consider FEPC on Jan. 23.

The turn-down followed defeat of a GOP-sponsored motion to adjourn the House, which went down by 255-160.

Sen. Hoey Sets D. C. Paper 'Right'

Sen. Clyde Hoey (D., N. C.) was reported recently by a Washington, D. C., newspaper as being in favor of FEPC legislation. The paper printed a correction the following day. Sen. Hoey said he had consistently opposed "all such" civil rights legislation.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, By the Board of Commissioners of The City of Newark, that we hereby request and urge the United States Senators and Congressmen from New Jersey to vote for and support legislation for

(a) Abolition of the poll tax as a voting requirement;

(b) Establishment of a Fair Employment Practice Commission;

(c) Enactment of anti-lynching legislation;

(d) Prohibition of segregation in any transportation facilities;

AND, BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that we memorialize the United States Senators and Congressmen from New Jersey, to give their full aid and support to the Civil Rights program as outlined and requested by the President of the United States.

AND, BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a certified copy of this resolution be forwarded to each of the United States Senators and Congressmen from New Jersey.

BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, N. J.

Adopted at a meeting of the Board of Commissioners of the City of Newark, N. J., JAN 11 1950

CERTIFIED TO BY ME THIS 11TH DAY OF JANUARY 1950

City Clerk

This Resolution when adopted must remain in the custody of the City Clerk. Certified copies are available.

NEWARK, N. J., Commissioners on Jan. 11 passed the resolution (above) which urged the state's congressional delegation to vote for civil rights bills. At the suggestion of Arthur Chapin, N. J. CIO Council's civil rights director, Commissioner Stephen J. Moran—who is also the Council's executive secretary—introduced the resolution. Other cities please copy.

CIO's Stand:

More Security Asked For More Americans

SHARP increases in benefit payments for the aged were called for by the CIO Committee on Social Security last week in a series of recommendations for sweeping improvements in the social security law.

Top committees urged "universal coverage" under the old age, survivors and disability programs "for all Americans . . . so that benefits are received as a matter of right."

It proposed new methods of computing benefit rates so as to give "adequate payments—enough for aged workers to live on at an American standard." As the first and minimum move in that direction, it recommended that benefits be based on the average monthly wage in the income-earner's best five consecutive years, with a ceiling for social security tax payments of $4800 a year.

"Benefits should equal 50% of the first $100 of this average monthly wage," said the committee through Chairman Emil Rieve, "plus 20% of the balance up to the total of $400 a month, with an additional 1% increment for each year of coverage." Rieve is president of the Textile Workers.

AN AGED couple which received $300 a month income during their best five consecutive years would, under the CIO program, receive a pension of $162 a month after 20 years of social security coverage, the committee said. The least a retired worker could receive under the CIO program would be $50 a month. The most would be 80% of the average monthly wage.

The Social Security Committee also proposed:

3 Million Over 65 Incomeless

The case for increased old age pensions and broader social security coverage—

One-third of all Americans more than 65 years old, or 3½ million of the 11 million people in that age group and not in institutions, have no cash income whatsoever.

Half of the remaining 7,500,000 people in 1948 had cash incomes of $806 or less.

The figures were made public by the Census Bureau "in response to interest stimulated by the beginning of hearings on legislation to extend social security benefits."

1 Liberalization of qualifying requirements, and a limit to reductions in benefits because of periods of non-coverage.

2 Permitting women to retire at 60 instead of 65.

3 Payments for dependents of persons receiving total disability benefits.

4 Rehabilitation provisions for disabled persons, including medical aid and vocational training.

5 A program of temporary disability insurance, along the lines suggested by the Truman Administration.

6 A relief system which will permit people "not merely to subsist, but to live," including Federal grants to the states sufficient to give "decent amounts" to all cases.

The Committee also urged "broader federal standards to provide meeting of relief needs and to bring about removal of unnecessary residence requirements and liens on property" for recipients.

The recommendations were made on the eve of the opening of hearings by the conservative Senate Finance Committee on the broader social security bill passed by the House at the last session. The Senate is due to act this session.

THE FIRST witness before the Senate committee was Arthur J. Altmeyer, Commissioner of Social Security, who among other things recommended a program of broader coverage that comes very close to earlier CIO proposals. Altmeyer suggested extending coverage to 5½ million farm operators and farm workers and to many domestic workers, as the CIO has done. He made no mention of certain professional workers now excluded but whom the CIO feels should be covered.

He also proposed to liberalize eligibility requirements for those now past middle age so they would be paid pensions instead of relief grants; collection of social security taxes on the first $4800 of annual earnings, as the CIO proposed, instead of the present $3000 or the $3600 provided in the House-approved bill. He recommended retention of the 1% increase in the monthly benefit for each year a worker is insured, as the CIO suggested, instead of the one-half of 1% in the House bill.

Altmeyer urged higher benefits under a formula which, for instance, would give a worker earning an average of $200 a month and continuously employed since 1937 a monthly benefit of $111 if his wife had also reached retirement age, and $74 if single.

Some of the increased cost of the expanded coverage and increased benefits would be written off, Altmeyer explained, by a reduction in grants to the states for relief. He estimated that the cost would be 6% of payrolls if wages increase in the next 50 years at the rate they increased in the past 50 years, or 7.2% of payroll if they remain static. The House bill in its present form was estimated to cost 6.2% figured on a static wage level.

Comparison Of Proposed Benefits After 20 Years Of Coverage (Single Person)

Average Mo. Wage	CIO Proposal	Present Law	House Bill
$100	$60	$30	$55
150	72	36	60.50
200	84	42	66
250	96	48	71.50
300	108	48	77
400	132	48	77

NMU Vote Bars CPers As Members

THE RANK and file of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union in a referendum completed last week finished up the job of polishing off the Communists which was started at the international convention last fall.

They overwhelmingly approved 35 amendments to the union constitution and two propositions aimed at denying union membership to those belonging to Nazi, Fascist and Communist organizations. They thus gave strong support to NMU Pres. Joseph Curran in his campaign to rid the union of elements which he charged had misused it for years.

The changes were ratified by margins of about five to one, with 22,630 votes cast.

The first proposition reaffirmed the faith of American seamen in the United States and what it stands for, "and makes it clear that we will defend our country against any enemy, including the Soviet Union." The proposition was the subject of considerable debate at the convention but was approved by a better than eight to one majority with 53 delegates abstaining.

The second proposition provides that "members of Nazi, Fascist, or Communist organizations shall not be admitted to membership in the union."

IT WAS opposition to these two proposals that led to disturbances at NMU headquarters in New York in November, according to Neal Hanley, NMU national secretary, and M. Hadley Stone, treasurer.

"The issue has been real trade union democracy," they said, "against a subversive, non-democratic, totalitarian group working under the leadership of a leader who refused to work according to our constitution."

ARA's Steinberg Old Hand At Fighting Commies In CIO

WHEN PRES. William Steinberg of the American Radio Association filed formal charges that 10 CIO unions and nine union presidents had consistently followed the Communist Party line instead of CIO policy, he knew he was exposing himself to prolonged and vicious attacks by the party-liners.

This knowledge came from battles he had had with Communists in the past.

Steinberg, 37, a native of New York City, knows what can happen to a union when its policies are dictated by the Communists. He is one of the many union leaders who have quietly licked Communist opposition without deserting the principles of militant trade unionism.

Because there has been nothing in his trade union career which could be attacked as "strikebreaking" or as "company unionism," the Commies' main theme song against him is simply: "Who is he, anyway? A nobody — a Philip Murray stooge."

THE ARA formerly was the marine department of the American Communications Association, which is one of the 10 unions now facing charges. The marine radio operators have a long history of militant trade unionism. Before the CIO existed, the radio operators on East and West coasts formed two separate independent unions.

These merged, and the resulting union was among the first to apply for a CIO charter. This was granted, and the charter increased the union jurisdiction to include many new fields. At the height of its power, ACA claimed approximately 25,000 members. The marine department carried the brunt of the organizing effort, and from 1942 on, Steinberg held a succession of offices in the department.

"From the very beginning," Steinberg says, "there was one internal fight after another over the Communist issue. The majority in the marine department remained anti-Communist but by 1946 the international was consistently following the party line."

"We were reluctant to split the union," he continues, "but the point came when we felt we could no longer be represented by such leadership." The marine radio operators, Steinberg explains, have "sensitive" jobs and those who work in merchant marine vessels are under the direct jurisdiction of the Coast Guard. In addition, "we felt that the leadership was all too willing to sacrifice contract gains for political hay-making."

AFTER A long preliminary skirmish within the international, the marine department, led by Steinberg, conducted a referendum on whether to disaffiliate entirely. The referendum carried, and ACA Pres. Joseph Selly, for reasons of his own, chose not to contest the results. In May, 1948, ARA received its CIO charter.

WILLIAM STEINBERG

Pres. Harry Bridges of the CIO Longshoremen then started on "a campaign of hate and vilification against ARA," Steinberg continues. He flatly accuses Bridges of "inciting a secession movement" on the West Coast. "The AFL Electrical Workers was chosen as the instrument for the raid," he says. The attempt failed.

The ARA now has 70% of its jurisdiction organized and under contract, Steinberg says, and runs seven hiring halls. "We have about everybody except a group of 800 or so who revolted against the partyliners around 1940 and went AFL." Total ARA membership now runs around 2500.

WHILE THE AFL raid was going on, ARA was standing shoulder to shoulder with ILWU in support of the 1948 maritime strike and was attempting to negotiate its own contracts with the shipowners. Before its negotiations were concluded, Bridges offered to make "a nice package deal for the ARA," consisting of a simple renewal with no gains, Steinberg says. ARA held out over Bridges' objections and signed an agreement "which was the finest in the maritime industry."

"The ACA," Steinberg says, "has fallen off to about 5000 members and is coming apart at the seams, and the same thing is happening in all the other Communist-dominated unions."

Steinberg emphatically does not believe in red-baiting for its own sake, nor in "the imposition of political uniformity. Honest judgments as to what is proper trade union policy can differ . . . My charge is not that these unions have differed from CIO policy. This they had a right to do, if they honestly believed that the policies they advocated were the proper ones . . . Nor is my charge that the policies and activities of these unions were always wrong or that the policies of the CIO were always right," he says.

"MY CHARGE, rather, is that the leadership . . . have no loyalty to the CIO or to genuine trade unionism, that they use trade unionism and the CIO to achieve the purposes of the Communist Party, and in accordance with that objective, they adopt policies and take actions solely on the basis that those policies and actions will serve the interests of the Communist Party."

As for the Commie cry that he is just a "Murray stooge," picked out of thin air to do the "hatchet job," Steinberg comments drily:

"I volunteered to file these charges, I was proud to do it, and the only time I ever met Phil Murray in my life was when I went up on the convention platform to shake his hand after he announced the steel settlement."

Murray To Acheson:

UN Recognition Is Asked For ICFTU

A REQUEST to help win official status at the United Nations for the new democratic world labor organization has been sent by CIO Pres. Murray to Sec. of State Dean Acheson.

Application for "consultative status" has already been made by the new Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions to Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations. It was sent from London by J. H. Oldenbroek, who holds a similar position with the ICFTU.

The world labor group seeks to win official status as a consulting organization to the UN's Economic & Social Council. That UN agency acts on numerous issues of general interest to labor organizations. The Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions has enjoyed official status for the past several years.

Murray, in his letter to Acheson, voiced hope that the U. S. delegation to the United Nations would support the ICFTU request. He said that the ICFTU, "as a body accepting principles of freedom and democracy, has a basic interest in the activities of the Economic & Social Council."

Meanwhile, the ICFTU is moving ahead with plans for establishment of its headquarters at Brussels, Belgium. Search for an adequate headquarters has already started in the Belgian capital, and a meeting of an ICFTU executive board subcommittee dealing with staff and financial problems was held there last week.

Representing the CIO at the meeting of the six-man subcommittee was Elmer Cope, CIO's European representative.

ICFTU Sec. Gen. Oldenbroek expects that the organization will be operating in full stride by July 1, with headquarters established and major staff appointments completed.

Equal Job Insurance In States Asked

"UNEMPLOYMENT insurance in the U. S., accepted as a sound principle and a help to our private enterprise economy, should be made equally effective, with minimum standards set by Congress in all the 48 states of the Union," Labor Secy. Tobin declared in a radio debate with Sen. Bricker (R., Ohio).

"This will eliminate the possibility of individual states leaving their laws unchanged at lower levels prevalent in some states, without taking recognition of the increased cost of living that has occurred since this law was originally written in 1935," Tobin continued.

"The objective that was set in 1935 was to give an unemployed worker approximately 50% of his earning wage. In order to do this today, the President's program proposed to pay about 50%, up to $30 a week. In other words, if a worker earns over $60 a week he will not receive more than $30 a week insurance.

"There is one state which still has the $15-a-week maximum payment authorized in 1936 when the state passed its first unemployment law. That maximum has remained unchanged for 14 years. That gives the average worker in that state a maximum which is equal to only $8.22 a week in purchasing power based on 1939 costs.

"After 14 years of experience and 14 years of opportunity for the states to approach good standards, it is sound for the Federal Government to establish minimum standards for the protection of the economy and for the protection of individual workers."

CIO Aide On Point Four:

'Offer Straight Goods With Clean Hands'

AT THIS hour in the world's history, the House Foreign Affairs Committee was told Jan. 13 by Donald Montgomery for the CIO, "we must offer straight goods with clean hands." The CIO, he said, supports President Truman's Point Four Program to aid under-privileged nations to grow and prosper. Montgomery is a Washington representative for the CIO Auto Workers.

"The fact is," Montgomery said, "that we in the U. S. with all our wealth and advantages shall not preserve our luxuries, shall not preserve our political freedom, indeed may not preserve our lives, unless we link our resources, our capabilities and our destiny with all free peoples and with all people who want to be free."

He urged that the President's program "not be set afoot hobbled with all the hobbles which the slack-visioned masters of high finance and big business urge upon you.

"Basically, the Congress is compelled to decide whether Point Four is an old way of making money under a new guise, or is a new way of making common cause with all the world's people."

The CIO opposes the proposals of Rep. Christian Herter (R., Mass.) that the program by-pass the United Nations, that U. S. corporations should receive special favors in the nations aided, and that the program be limited to countries struggling against "communism and other forms of statism." That last word, Montgomery observed, has been used by Republicans to describe President Truman's Fair Deal program, as well as the democratic socialist program of the British government.

Montgomery called for strengthening the Administration's Point Four bill to encourage systems of cooperative credit, and to allow aided nations to undertake programs of self-improvement independent of U. S. corporations.

Labor, both in the U. S. and in the aided nations, should have a voice in the program and steps should be taken to insure fair labor standards through encouragement of unions and collective bargaining in the aided countries, the CIO urged.

Resolutions adopted by the Intl. Confederation of free Trade Unions at its founding meeting in London last November, as well as the resolutions voted by the CIO's national convention, were cited as grounds for the CIO's position.

Passaic, N. J., Chest Drops Labor Division To Save Money

THE MANAGEMENT representatives who dominate the board of directors of the Passaic, N. J., Community Chest were able to figure out only one way to slash administrative costs when last fall's campaign for funds ended up 25% short of the $228,000 goal, according to Pres. Joseph A. Smith of the Passaic County CIO Council.

"Curiously, the board majority can find no possible way to cut down expenses except to eliminate the labor representative," Smith said.

The Council is spearheading a drive to maintain efficient operations even with a depleted budget. It is fearful that if management regains complete control of Chest operations, the importance of the central fund raising body will be minimized until it becomes extinct and services not only for workers but for all citizens will be back on the old hit-or-miss basis.

"We can appreciate the chaos that will result from a multitude of fund-raising drives," said Smith. "If the Labor Division is eliminated, at the very least it will make our efforts to assist in raising money a lot tougher. It's tough enough now with one of our largest employers, Botany Mills, refusing to permit plant solicitation."

Organized labor in Passaic, Garfield, Wallington and Clifton, where the Chest operates, has always supported it vigorously, but has had representation on the board only for the last four years. The present board includes five labor spokesmen, three of them represent the CIO. The Labor Division was established about two years ago under the direction of Al Wagner, of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers, and has chalked up a record of steadily increasing service to working people. Wagner has resigned, effective next month, to move out of the city.

UAW Fights Detroit Rise In Transit Fares

Secy-Treas. Emil Mazey of the CIO Auto Workers has protested Detroit Mayor Cobo's plan to increase transit fares, and proposed a citizens' committee to study the problem. He assailed the plan as a burden on those least able to afford it, while not touching the merchants, factory owners and other employers "who are the greatest beneficiaries of our public transportation system, even though they personally do not patronize it."

Everett To Run For Congress, Price Will Seek Re-election

ROLLIN H. EVERETT, executive secretary of the Cincinnati Newspaper Guild and a former member of the Cincinnati City Council, has agreed to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congressman in the 1st Ohio District.

Everett, who made his decision after being urged to run by Democratic, CIO and AFL leaders, apparently faces no primary opposition. The incumbent, Rep. Charles Elston (R.), possessor of one of the worst voting records in Congress, from Labor's standpoint, is expected to run again. Everett, long a civic leader in Cincinnati, served two terms in City Council and was defeated for re-election last fall largely because of overconfidence by his backers.

Rep. Melvin Price (D.), has announced that he will be a candidate for re-election in the 25th Illinois district. Price, a World War II veteran from East St. Louis, is completing his third term in Congress. He has always shown an active interest in legislation supported by organized labor and, according to the CIO News voting guide, cast his ballot "right" during the first session of the 81st Congress in all measures listed.

Arbitration Tradition Viewed Dangerous

Dangers to the arbitration process from the increasing importance being given to precedents were cited by Dr. William H. McPherson, of the University of Illinois Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations, in an article in the Arbitration Journal.

If the trend toward follow-the-leader is maintained, he warned, arbitration will become more legalistic, more costly and less likely to result in equitable rulings. Each arbitration case should be settled on its own merits and within the framework of the particular situations, he urged.

Water 'Production' Means To Be Sought

An inquiry into the ways science has found to produce—from sea waters and from the clouds above the earth—usable water for home, irrigation and industrial use will take place shortly, Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) announced Jan. 5.

In view of the acute water shortage in the New York metropolitan area and the chronic shortage in the western section of country, O'Mahoney indicated that he is pressing for an enlarged version of his bill to authorize Interior Dept. to spend up to $50 million to develop practical means of producing usable water from the ocean. Hearings will be before the Senate Interior & Insular Affairs Committee, of which O'Mahoney is chairman.

On the initiative of Sen. Sheridan Downey (D., Calif.) the measure will now authorize the Interior Dept. to check the claims of scientists that "seeding" rainclouds with minute particles of silver iodide will double, triple or even quadruple the rainfall.

REP. FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT is shown here talking in his office with a group of CIO Textile Workers from Virginia and Alabama. The CIO members are part of a delegation of 35 who came to Washington last week to attend a legislative institute run by their union. Ben Segal of the TWUA education department was in charge of the group. The delegation sat in on House and Senate hearings, attended sessions of Congress, and visited various Senators and Congressmen. Similar groups from other parts of the country will come to the Capital to attend institutes scheduled this month and in February.

Reporter Gets Award

Jack Pickering, Detroit Times reporter who was tipped off to the dynamite Christmas package found at headquarters of the CIO Auto Workers in Detroit, has been given the Distinguished Service Medal of the American Veterans of World War II (AMVETS), their highest award. Pickering, a member of the Detroit Newspaper Guild, was honored for outstanding service to the nation and to veterans, particularly for his work in behalf of paraplegics.

Secy. Tobin Estimates:

22 Million Covered By 75c Minimum Law

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

BIG POSTERS announcing that the hourly minimum wage has been increased from 40c to 75c, effective Jan. 25, are now on display—or should be—in factories, shops and plants all over the country.

The new posters were sent this month to 600,000 employers by the U. S. Dept. of Labor's Wage-Hour and Public Contracts Division, which administer the Fair Labor Standards Act (Wage-Hour law) as amended by Congress last October. Employers with workers subject to the law's provisions are required to display the notices "in conspicuous places where such workers can readily see them."

An estimated 1½ million workers will be benefited in a varying degree by the new 75c minimum. Secy. of Labor Maurice Tobin has stated that by far the great number of those who will receive direct pay increases are already earning at least 65c an hour.

Together with the other new amendments to the Wage-Hour law, which include provisions to strengthen the child labor and homework provisions, Tobin estimates that some 22 million workers engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods for interstate commerce, will be affected.

FEW CIO members will be benefited by the new minimum, as the union contracts under which they work mostly call for wage rates well above $1. The CIO, however, was a strong supporter of the amendment passed, while at the same time pointing out that it should be higher—at $1, the amount called for in the CIO's legislative program.

The 1½ million workers whose pay will be brought up to 75c an hour starting Jan. 25, are in fact but a small proportion of the workers throughout the country who are getting substandard wages.

The Federal law covers only those who work for concerns engaged in interstate commerce, or who make goods for interstate commerce. Millions of other low-paid workers still have no minimum wage protection, or only such minor protection as is offered by various state laws. And these laws for the most part cover only women and minors in specified occupations.

Only five states include men in their minimum wage coverage. Connecticut, in 1939, was the first state to take this action. Four other states followed suit in the next few years—New York, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

ALTHOUGH some states have improved their traditionally low minimum wage rates for women in specified occupations, such as restaurants, retail stores, laundries and dry cleaning firms, most of them are still much below the new 75c federal law minimum.

No state has a general minimum wage that high, although the District of Columbia has a weekly minimum of $30, and $30.60 for women and minors in manufacturing and beauty culture.

A report released last week by the U. S. Women's Bureau, based on a study made of state minimum wage laws and orders from July 1, 1942, to Jan. 1, 1949, shows that the majority of the hourly minimum wage orders were in the 50-59c class in laundries, mercantile or retail trade, dry cleaning and dyeing establishments.

New York has the highest rate for laundries—$23 a week for work up to 40 hours a week—and this was laregly due to the pressure of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers' laundry division, which has been working hard to improve the conditions of laundry workers.

Washington, D. C., has the highest weekly rate for retail store employes—$25 for a week of 36 to 44 hours.

Office workers are now covered by the minimum rates in 12 jurisdictions, the Women's Bureau states. California has the highest hourly minimum for office workers, 65c, followed by Massachusetts with 60c. Nevada and Kentucky each have a 50c rate.

WISCONSIN is the only state which has given special attention to a notoriously sweated group—domestic service workers. An order effective in February 1947 set a minimum of $12 a week for women who receive board but not room in cities of 3500 and over; $10.75 for those in towns of 1000 to 3500 population; and $10.25 elsewhere. If furnished with both board and lodging, the minimum is from $7 to $8 a week, depending on the population of the locality.

Another large, poorly-paid group, agricultural workers, who are excluded from Federal Wage-Hour coverage, are given little or no attention by state laws: Wisconsin, Nevada, Alaska and Hawaii have low minimums for women agricultural workers only. In Wisconsin the rate is 38c an hour.

Puerto Rico covers both men and women agricultural workers in sugar cane with a daily minimum ranging from $1.40 to $1.50 for an eight-hour day.

HIGHEST MINIMUMS for women are found in the manufacturing category, with the District of Columbia leading with a $30 weekly minimum for a workweek of 32 to 40 hours. The part-time hourly rate for work of less than 32 hours a week is 85c, and the overtime rate is $1.12½. The next highest is 65c, in effect in California and Oregon.

But in Arkansas, the minimum rate for women in manufacturing and other categories is actually only $1.25 a day for an eight-hour day, six days a week for experienced workers, and $1 a day for inexperienced!

Although the analysis of present state minimum laws shows some progress since the first such law was passed by Massachusetts in 1912, much legislative work remains to be done to bring minimums up even to the 75c provided by the federal law.

Wage-Hour Law's Main Points

Main points of the amended Federal Wage-Hour Law are:

Wage-Hour Coverage: The amended law, as formerly, applies to workers engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods for interstate commerce. Since there was much confusion in the past as to whether certain workers should be included, the amended act seeks to clarify this. It makes the test of coverage for workers not actually "engaged in the production of goods" on the basis of whether they are engaged in "any closely related process or occupation directly essential to the production thereof."

Minimum Wage: Besides increasing the hourly rate from 40c to 75c, the amended act has a definition of the regular rate of pay not in the original law. It includes all remuneration for employment except overtime premiums and other specified payments, such as gifts not dependent on hours workers, production or efficiency (Christmas presents, for example).

Each covered employe must be paid at the rate of not less than 75c an hour, whether he is paid by the hour, week, month or other basis. William McComb, administrator of the law, stated last week, that a wage of, or equivalent to $30 a week for a 40-hour week, or a monthly salary of $130 for work weeks of not less than 40 hours, would be in accordance with the law.

Employes engaged in canning fish and employes of carriers by air formerly exempt from both the minimum wage and overtime provision, are now covered by the minimum pay requirement only. A new minimum wage and overtime exemption is extended to employes of certain laundries and cleaning and repairing concerns.

The former provision that subminimum rates may be paid to messengers, learners, apprentices and handicapped workers, after certification, is continued with a minor change in respect to messengers.

Overtime Pay: The Wage-Hour law still provides for at least time and a half pay for work beyond 40 a week, but the amendments attempt to clear up what payments are to be included—such as premiums for Saturday, Sunday and holiday work, and bonuses—which are to be excluded in determining a worker's "regular rate" of pay for purposes of computing work after 40 hours.

Child Labor: The amendments broaden the child-labor provisions (which set a minimum age of 16 for general employment and 18 for hazardous job) by directly prohibiting employment of boys and girls below the minimum age in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce—including any closely related occupation or process directly essential to such production.

Retained is the former provision which prohibits the shipment or delivery for shipment in interstate commerce of any goods produced in violation of the child labor restrictions, but only if within 30 days prior to removal of goods.

Exemptions: A number of specific exemptions are provided, some retained from the old law, some of them new and some changed. Part of them give exemption from both the minimum wage and overtime terms, others give complete, or partial exemption from overtime only.

The list of exemptions is long. Those barred from both minimum wage and overtime include salesmen, retail and service concerns, agricultural workers, certain canning, packing and processing employes, taxi, streetcar and bus operators, certain switchboard operators; newspaper delivery boys, seamen and others.

Exempt from overtime only are employes of certain railroads, pipelines; certain dairy employes, all fish canners, cotton and cottonseed processing, and many more. Packers, canners, and others engaged in work on perishable fruits and vegetables are exempt from the overtime provision up to no more than 14 work-weeks in any one calendar year. Certain seasonal workers are partially exempt from overtime pay for up to 12 hours in a day or 56 hours in a work-week.

"Only 15c! Now you know how he stands on the Wage-Hour Law."

Information, Please!

The other day the office of U. S. Senator Sheridan Downey (D., Cal.) called CIO-PAC and the following conversation ensued:

"The California CIO-PAC has asked us to supply Senator Downey's voting record for the first session of the 81st Congress. We don't have the information. Could you supply it?"

"Certainly, we'd be glad to send you the complete record."

You wonder why we print this? Because it was Downey's office which didn't have his voting record, and PAC which said it would be glad to fill the request.

Clothing Workers Declare War On Chiseling Bosses

CHISELERS IN a lot of small, non-union shops are getting ready to resist the new 75c minimum wage law when it goes into effect Jan. 25, warns the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Evidence is mounting, particularly in the South, reports Advance, the union's official paper, that some bosses have given their workers to understand that they have no intention of meeting the requirements of the new law.

One case cited involves a shop in Alabama where the employer held a mass meeting and bluntly told the workers that he would not increase their wages to meet the new minimum. Here's how he plans to do it:

INSTEAD OF shipping the finished product to a jobber in another state as formerly, he will ship to an office opened by the same jobber in Alabama in the hope of avoiding the interstate commerce provision of the federal wage-hour law. What he failed to mention or did not know, Advance points out, is that the Supreme Court declared this dodge illegal in a decision under the old 40c minimum wage law.

A second typical case involves the employes of a plant in Virginia, who after learning about the 75c minimum from an ACW pamphlet, went to the boss about it. He told them to mind their own business and furthermore said that he had no intention of paying the 75c an hour.

THE UNION paper reports that the Amalgamated is checking every report of chiseling and will turn the information over to the U. S. Dept. of Labor for investigation. "The ACWA intends to see that everyone that refuses to pay its employes the legal wage will be brought to court and prosecuted," Advance says.

The speed-up is another device some of these smaller, non-union shops are imposing on their already overworked, underpaid employes.

Advance quotes from a statement put on the plant bulletin board by a Georgia employer warning employes: "You are going to have to attain 100% production to keep your jobs, and you are going to have to diligently work practically every minute of the 460 minutes given you to attaing 100% production."

To help workers fight these chiselers, the Amalgamated says it is distributing 100,000 pamphlets to carry the story of the 75c minimum wage to workers in unorganized plants.

Glass Workers Win Pension Plan For 18,500

A COMPANY-PAID pension plan covering 18,500 employes of the two largest concerns in the flat glass industry has just been negotiated by the CIO Glass Workers.

The agreement, reached between the Federation of Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers and the Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Libby-Owen-Ford companies after 10 days' intensive negotiations at Atlantic City, N. J., provides pensions at age 65 ranging from $60 for 15 years' service to $125 for 50 years. Workers with 25 years continuous service will receive $100.

Union officials said that some 1300 workers employed in six PPG and four LOF plants are now eligible for pensions under the plan.

BENEFITS INCLUDE the amount due the worker under Federal social security, but payments for his dependent wife and children are not deductible. The union points out that in this respect the glass workers' plan is an improvement over similar company-paid pension systems under which additional amounts due for dependents under social security are also deductible from the amounts paid by the company.

Other main points in the agreement include:

NEGOTIATING PENSIONS: Representatives of the CIO Glass Workers waiting for the final pension proposal of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Libby-Owens-Ford companies. Seated at right center (l. to r.) are Union Counsel Sam Rothbard (smoking cigarette), Intl. Union Pres. Joseph Froesch and Secy.-Treas. Lewis McCracken. Negotiations took 10 days. Payments are $60-$125. (The picture was taken by Vice-Pres. Leland Beard.)

- Eligibility for old age retirement benefits is retroactive to May 1, 1949.
- Payments at age 65 are made on the basis of $4 a month for each year of continuous service up to 25 years. Workers with more than 25 years' service are entitled to $1 a month for each additional year beyond 25, up to 50 years.
- An outstanding point in the agreement to which the union points with pride is the definition of "continuous service." Under this a worker may be absent from the plant by leave or layoff up to five years without a break in his continous service record.
- Elected union officials on leave get full credit indefinitely while on official duties.
- Benefits for non-occupational health and accident insurance are increased from the former allowance of $15 a week for 13 weeks, to $26 for 26 weeks. Hospital and surgical provisions, to apply to varied local plans, are increased from $2 to $3 a month for a married employe, and from $1 to $1.50 for a single worker.
- A worker who becomes totally disabled after 15 years service, before he is 65, will be entitled to three-fourths of his pension, with benefits readjusted when he reaches 70.
- No worker is forced to retire at 65. The company may request his retirement only after he reaches 70.

THE AGREEMENT becomes effective in May 1950, after final approval by the stockholders at their May meeting. The union has already accepted through the 60-man committee which negotiated the agreement. The committee, composed of international union officers and committeemen from the 10 locals involved, has power under the union's constitution to approve the agreement.

Joseph Froesch, international president, called the committee together to negotiate with the PPG and LOF officials.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. plants involved are at Creighton and Ford City, Pa., Crystal City, Mo., Henryetta, Okla., Mount Vernon, Ohio, and Clarksburg, W. Va.

Libby-Owen-Ford plants are at Toledo and Rossford, Ohio, Ottawa, Ill., Charleston, W. Va., and Shreveport, La.

UAW Spurns Chrysler's 5-Year Pact

THE CIO Auto Workers announced last week that 89,000 members employed by Chrysler Corp. would strike Jan. 25 unless a satisfactory pension plan was offered by the company.

UAW Chrysler Dir. Norman Matthews said a plan submitted by the company was entirely unacceptable.

The company had offered, in exchange for a five-year contract covering non-economic issues, to grant a pension plan under which it would make up the difference between social security benefits and $100 a month for workers at the age of 65 who had 25 years service.

Matthews said the company's request for a five-year contract was "ridiculous." He asserted the workers were unwilling to extend the present contract for "five minutes, let alone for five years."

He called the pension proposal itself, "unsound and inadequate," and said the workers demand an arrangement "which is financially sound and guaranteed." This referred to the company proposal that it have complete control over the plan with no immediate funding provisions.

"The increase in life insurance and disability benefits," Matthews continued, "amounts to a cost of less than one cent per hour to the company and the offer to cooperate 'as in the past' in the medical-hospital program constitutes no offer on this type of coverage since the Chrysler workers would continue to pay the whole cost as they do at the present time."

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

2 Radio Firms Face Charges

The Federal Trade Commission has accused a radio tube-making firm and a radio set-making firm of discriminatory practices in the price of tubes. The two are Sylvania Electric Products, Inc., described as "one of the largest manufacturers of tubes in the United States," and the Philco, Corp. of Philadelphia, said to be the largest manufacturer of radio receiving sets in the United States.

The FTC charged Sylvania granted discriminatory prices to Philco and accuses Philco of "knowingly inducing and receiving discriminatory prices." The FTC charged Sylvania sells tubes to some customers, including its own authorized distributors, "at substantially higher prices than it sells such products of like grade and quality to respondent Philco." The effect, the FTC charges "may be substantially to lessen competition" or to "tend to create a monopoly."

Laid-Off Workers Win Vacation Pay

Firestone Textiles, Inc., which closed its plant at New Bedford, Mass., recently had to dig down for $75,000 in vacation pay for 900 workers.

The CIO Textile Workers said the award was made without recourse to arbitration because the company had pulled the same stunt last year at another of its plants and lost an arbitrators' decision at that time.

105 Areas Have 7% Or More Jobless

THE U. S. BUREAU of Employment Security has announced that the number of areas having 7% or more of their working force unemployed rose to 105 in December. This compared with 99 in November.

The survey shows 33 areas have 12% or more workers unemployed. Such areas are classed as "E" areas because of their high percentage of labor surplus.

Four new areas were on the bureau's "E" list for December. They are San Diego, Cal., Clinton, Ind., Washington County, Me., and Silver City, N. M.

Three areas classed as "E" in November were dropped from the December list. These were Ansonia and Waterbury, Conn., and Vincennes, Ind.

Organizationally Speaking

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The writer addressed the Ohio CIO Council Convention in Cincinnati on Saturday, January 14.

While at the convention the writer had the opportunity to meet with all directors and organizers of CIO affiliated unions to lay out a program for supporting IUE-CIO in its campaign in Ohio. These representatives all welcomed the opportunity to assist in this campaign. In regard to IUE activities, CIO Reg. Dir. Robert Davidson was placed in charge of the Dayton area, Reg. Dir. George DeNucci was placed in charge of the section south of Cleveland outside of Dayton. All activity north of Cleveland is being handled by CIO Reg. Dir. Sam Sponsellor.

The convention was a great success. This council is doing a wonderful job, and the officers are entitled to a great deal of credit for the good work being done.

NLRB's General Counsel Robert Denham is again acting in a manner consistent with his past performances in seeking an injunction against the United Mine Workers, although he is doing nothing about the coal operators' refusal to live up to their agreement concerning the UMW pension fund. Denham's attack is not only against the UMW but against the whole labor movement.

Assistant Organizational Director R. J. Thomas and Reg. Dir. Anthony Federoff have been assigned to assist in the organizing drive of IUE-CIO. Brother Thomas will be assigned to the GE Plant in Schenectady, N. Y., to coordinate and direct the activities there. He is to work closely with the IUE representatives in the area. Federoff will be assigned to the Westinghouse plant in East Pittsburgh, with the same set-up there. All CIO unions are called upon to render every support to the IUE-CIO to help them establish free American trade unionism.

Reg. Dir. Fullerton Fulton reports that in a representation election held at the Red Wing Pottery, Red Wing, Minn., the workers voted as follows: 208 for CIO Chemical Workers; 201 for the AFL; 3 neither; 8 challenged. Fulton also reports that in a representation election held at the E. B. Sewall Manufacturing Co., St. Paul, Minn., the vote was as follows: 69 eligible; 47 USA-CIO; 17 IAM; 1 no union; 3 challenged.

Reg. Dir. James J. Leary reports that the CIO Textile Workers were victorious in an election at the H. & H. Bag Co., Kansas City, Mo. The employes voted unanimously for representation by TWUA-CIO, which also won a union security election at the Central Bag Co., Kansas City, Mo., by a vote of 98 to 34. In both above elections the organizational work was handled by Howard Bergs, Business Agent for the Textile Workers Joint Board, Kansas City, Mo.

Sub-Reg. Dir. John J. Maurillo reports that in a representation election at the Hoffman Packing Co., Syracuse, N. Y., the Packinghouse Workers were victorious over the AFL and an independent union. The campaign was conducted by Intl. Rep. Lemuel Ward of the UPWA-CIO.

Reg. Dir. Joseph Walsh reports in a Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board election, building service employes at the Medical Arts Building, Scranton, Pa., voted 16 to 2 for Local 497, Building Service Union, RWSDU-CIO. Although they have been on strike nine weeks, employes of the Penn-Hadley mills, Scranton, who are members of the CIO Textile Workers, voted 109 to 6 for a union shop. TWUA-Rep. Sam Fiore and Elwood Taub directed the campaign.

Discriminatory Bequest Rejected

A bequest of $140,000 for scholarships for "American-born" students, "Jews and Catholics excepted," has been turned down by Lafayette College, Easton, Pa. The money was offered by Federick F. T. Dumont, former U. S. diplomatic official.

The action of the college's board of trustees was taken Jan. 4 after an original announcement by Dr. Ralph C. Hutchinson, president of Lafayette, that the first payment of the bequest, $13,506, would be accepted despite the discrimintory bars.

After the board's decision, Dr. Hutchinson issued a statement saying that "the legacy contains an inoperative clause discriminating against Jews and Catholics. The Board has taken action declining the legacy as containing intimations of discrimination which are contrary to the history, practice and ideals of Lafayette College."

CIO Asks Denham Ouster, Offers Aid To UMW

TWICE within a week NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham, the big injunction and lawsuit man, edged a little farther along the limb he has been climbing.

Twice the CIO whipped out its trusty saw and cut another notch behind him.

Last week Denham went into the U. S. District Court in Washington and under Taft-Hartley asked for an injunction restraining the United Mine Workers from enforcing the three-day week UMW members have been working in their part-time strike.

A few days earlier he undercut the NLRB itself by openly inviting employers who don't like board decisions to take them to the courts.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray promptly teed off on both occasions. And even Sen. Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), co-sponsor of T-H, joined in the punching when Denham asked the court to send the miners back to work full time.

Denham's court action was based on the mine operators' charges that the UMW has violated T-H by refusing to bargain in good faith and with using the three-day work week as a "club" to force an "illegal" contract on the industry.

On the same day NLRB's Baltimore region office issued a complaint charging the UMW with violating T-H by a series of unfair labor practices.

Specificaly, Denham asked the court, until the complaint is settled, for an order stopping the UMW from seeking an allegedly illegal union shop provision, a clause allowing members to work only when "able and willing," and a welfare fund paying benefits only to UMW members. He also asked that the UMW be barred from ordering or even allowing members to participate in any "strike, work stoppage and/or concerted refusal to perform services" for the coal operators in support of alleged illegal demands.

"THE CIO vigorously protests the action of General Counsel Denham in instituting a complaint and in filing injunction proceedings against the UMW," said Murray. "By this action, Denham is again demonstrating his anti-labor bias and prejudice.

"In the proceedings against the UMW, Denham is seeking to enjoin a work stoppage which is entirely lawful under the express provisions of the last collective bargaining agreement negotiated between the coal operators and the mine workers union.

"There is no legal support for Denham's assertion that it is unlawful for the miners' union to again request in collective bargaining the renewal of such provisions. Employers have traditionally retained the legal right to shut down their properties for economic reasons. A union certainly may equally assert its economic rights without being subject to injunction proceedings.

ROBERT N. DENHAM
Lambasted by Murray

"In this attack upon the United Mine Workers of America through the instrumentality of the evil Taft-Hartley Law, Denham is challenging the legitimate rights and interests of all of organized labor. I have instructed the General Counsel of the CIO to lend all possible assistance to the legal staff of the United Mine Workers in support of the basic labor principles involved and in opposition to the proceedings instituted by Denham."

TAFT MOVED into his attack on Denham with deceptive mildness, describing the injunction move as "unfortunate."

"I don't think," he said, "that the Taft-Hartley Law intended to give the board the right to seek a temporary injunction against a strike when there is no contract and when a legitimate difference of opinion exists on wages and welfare fund payments, even if there are other demands which are illegal.

"We didn't intend to give any one the right to send people back to work—except when there's a national emergency — when no contract exists."

The T-H act gives this right only to the President, Taft pointed out. The law might possibly be "stretched" to cover Denham's action, he conceded, but added that "I can't see that it would be an effective means of restoring the full production of coal."

THE DISTRICT Court set Jan. 26 for a hearing. Taft predicted Denham will come out of it without his injunction. But even if it should be granted, the miners could still strike as they wished for objectives that are not allegedly "illegal," such as higher wages.

Denham's advice to employers to clutter up the courts with their appeals if they don't like NLRB decisions was given in a speech in New York during a bitter attack on board members.

Murray charged Denham's statement "again demonstrated his anti-labor bias and his unfitness for office."

"This invitation, coming from the man who by law is charged with the duty of defending the Labor Board and its decisions in the courts," he continued, "is sufficient proof (if any additional proof is needed) that Denham is incapable of administering the important post of General Counsel of the Board with the fairness and impartiality that office requires.

"Denham's unseemly attack on the Board arises from the fact that the Board in a few cases has manifested some degree of independence and has disagreed with Denham's biased and prejudiced interpretations of the Taft-Hartley Act.

"During the CIO Convention, I issued a statement calling upon President Truman to remove Denham as General Counsel of the NLRB. The President possesses ample power to take this action. This latest intemperate statement by the Board's General Counsel demonstrates that his removal is long overdue."

Pres. Joseph A. Beirne, of the Communications Workers, also rapped Denham and urged the President to remove him from office.

"Employers need no such encouragement from Denham," he said.

He recalled instances where Denham's pro - management actions had caused serious delays in CWA cases before the NLRB.

"CWA called on President Truman to remove Denham from his job because of his inability to remain impartial and an obvious leaning toward management in his decisions," said Beirne.

"We renew this request for his removal now that he has finally brought his pro-management bias out into the open. A man who openly espouses the cause of management in labor disputes does not belong in a position like Denham's."

FTC Finds Radio Kits 'Deceptive'

An individual would have to be very smart indeed, according to the Federal Trade Commission, to put together a radio set that actually works from one of the kits sold by Radio Kits, Inc., a New York concern.

In fact, FTC says, in an order prohibiting further manufacture of the kits, if the purchaser follows the diagrams and instructions included he will be very fortunate to wind up with a contraption which even slightly resembles a radio.

The Commission found that "there are many persons who cannot, without assistance from trained radio technicians, build complete radio sets from these kits."

The advertising claims of the company were characterized as "deceptive" by FTC.

Organizer Unhurt As His Auto Burns

Emil Luter, CIO Woodworkers staff representative in the Southern States, has a reputation as a red hot organizer who is used to burning up the road as he speeds from one assignment to another.

Now he has burned up his car and his belongings, as well.

He and Mrs. Luter were nearing Nashville, Tenn., after a recent trip from Louisville, Ky., when their car suddenly burst into flames. They were barely able to get out safely and had no chance to save their baggage before the car and its contents were destroyed. Gasoline from a hole knocked in the tank by some metal object had caught fire.

UOPWA Request For Stay Rejected

AN OFFICE & Professional Workers demand for a temporary restraining order against the CIO's investigation of charges of Communist domination in that union, was flatly turned down last week in U. S. District Court.

Judge Burnita Matthews, hearing the case in Washington, refused the request during the course of a two-and-a-half-hour hearing.

The woman jurist, appointed to the court during recent months, took under consideration a motion by Arthur J. Goldberg, CIO general counsel, to dismiss another UOPWA plea for an injunction against the CIO. He voiced sharp opposition to the demands for both the short-run restraining order and the injunction.

Hearings on charges against the UOPWA were held last month by a three-man CIO committee. The committee is scheduled to report its findings to the next meeting of the CIO's 50-member executive board.

The next CIO Board meeting is scheduled for Feb. 14.

No court order has yet been granted to hold up CIO's proceedings against four out of 10 unions accused of following Communist policies rather than those of the CIO. UOPWA has filed an injunction petition in New York, as well as in Washington. Another plea for a sweeping injunction against CIO has also been filed in New York by the Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers.

Court hearings on both these petitions have already been held, with decisions expected perhaps before Feb. 1.

Meanwhile the fourth in the CIO's hearings on charges of Communist domination was held in the case of the Intl. Union of Mine-Mill & Smelter Workers.

IN THE HEARING—held in the Board Room at CIO headquarters—were three of the union's top officers and some 25 or 30 Mine-Mill members. Pres. John Clark, Sec.-Treas. Maurice Travis and Vice-Pres. Reid Robinson led the Mine Mill delegation.

Pres. William Steinberg of the American Radio Association—who filed the original charges against Mine-Mill and nine other left-wing unions — said he had presented a statement accusing the union's leadership of close and constant adherence to Communist policies.

Stanley Ruttenberg, CIO research director, filed in the record a batch of photostats of various issues of the union's papers, and charged that they reflected various twists and turns in Communist policy. Ken Eckert and Homer Wilson, both former officials of the union, were said to have offered a mass of evidence to show how Communist party officials, within and without the union, had directed its policies and activities.

The Mine-Mill hearing opened on Wednesday, Jan. 18, and lasted until noon on Jan. 19. It then recessed until Monday, Feb. 6.

The hearing committee consisted of Pres. Jacob Potofsky of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, chairman; Pres. Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union; and Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey of the United Auto Workers.

Furniture Workers Set Up Pro-CIO Unit

A RANK and file committee to support Pres. Morris Pizer in his fight to line up the United Furniture Workers in support of the National CIO was organized by leaders who are reported to represent 70% of the union's voting strength. The committee was set up at a recent meeting in Chicago.

Expressed sentiment from other locals indicates that about 90% of the membership is behind Pizer and the general executive board minority in their battle against anti-CIO forces within the international led by Secy.-Treas. Max Perlow and Organization Director Ernest Marsh, according to William Gilbert. Before being ousted by Marsh, Gilbert was the union's midwest director.

Most of those attending the caucus came from the Middle West, but leaders of locals in other parts of the country also attended, Gilbert said.

They unanimously approved a resolution calling for full support of Pizer "for his fight to keep our union in CIO and for supporting National CIO" Gilbert reported. They demanded a "democratic union," indicated they were "determined to fight" against domination "by any clique or political party in our union," and pledged themselves "to win our fight by such an overwhelming majority that we will come out of our next international convention in June as a united union and as a strong part of the CIO."

Thomas Binnall, Gardner, Mass., was elected chairman of a broad "UFWA Rank and File Committee for CIO." Jack Hochstadt, New York, was named secretary and Sam Sloan, Chicago, treasurer.

Following the caucus meeting, officers of the union's Illinois-Wisconsin District elected Gilbert district representative and organizer, and gave him authority to assist all other districts in the midwest region.

At the December meeting of the UFW general executive board in New York, the left-wing majority rejected by a 14 to 10 vote a resolution supporting National CIO policy, despite a fight led by Pizer. The UFW president said the majority ousted one pro-CIO member on a technicality and refused to seat another.

The UFW is one of the international unions cited to appear before a CIO hearing committee on charges of having consistently followed the Communist Party line.

Hartley, Goldberg To Debate T-H

What should be a lively debate on Taft-Hartley takes place on the CBS network's People's Platform show, Sunday, Jan. 29, at 12:30 P.M., eastern time.

The subject: Should Taft-Hartley Be Repealed?

The speakers: (1) Ex-Rep. Fred Hartley, a co-sponsor of T-H; (2) Arthur J. Goldberg, CIO general counsel.

Dwight Cooke, outstanding discussion moderator, will preside over the show.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION
of the
CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00
A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 30, 1950 No. 5

CIO OIL WORKERS in Hammond, Ind. borrowed a voting machine from the county clerk and brought it to their Labor Day picnic, to demonstrate its operation. It proved so popular that they kept it at Oil Workers Hall till Jan. 24. A sign above the "voting booth" read: "Believe it or not, this simple machine, properly used, can settle many of the specific problems of labor." Officers of several other CIO locals held classes in voting-machine operation, too. (See PAC story, pages 6 and 7.)

Murray Revokes California Council Charter

THE CERTIFICATE of affiliation of the Communist-dominated California State Industrial Union Council was revoked last week by CIO Pres. Phil Murray.

Pres. Murray acted on the unanimous recommendation of a three-man committee which held a hearing on Dec. 19, 1949, and found the Council guilty of charges, filed last October, that it followed the Communist Party line and actively opposed national CIO policy.

The charter revocation was the first since the CIO Executive Board adopted rules last November permitting the president to revoke certificates of affiliation of state or local councils, subject to appeal to the Executive Board.

Previously he could only take custody of funds or property after the filing of charges, with the decision on revocation left to the Executive Board.

Under this procedure, the charter of the old Greater New York CIO Council was revoked on charges of failing to follow national CIO policy. A charter was issued to a right-wing group of unions.

The three-man committee which heard the charges against the California Council found that it:

"1. Wilfully and repeatedly defied and opposed CIO policy.

"2. Publicly allied itself with the political program of the Communist Party.

"3. Recklessly interfered, through its officers and employees, in the affairs of CIO affiliated local and international unions.

THE LETTERS "CIO" once dominated this sign, at the entrance of the offices of Local 17 of the Longshoremen and Warehousemen's union at Sacramento, Cal. The sign now carries no reference to CIO. (The International Union of which the local is a part has been charged with Communist domination and faces possible expulsion from the CIO).

"4. Utilized its official organ, the Labor Herald, to villify CIO representatives, oppose CIO policy and to create disunity, division and disruption within the CIO throughout the state, all to the disrepute and injury of the CIO."

The CIO president's action was made known in a letter addressed to James L. Daugherty and Bjorne Halling, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the California Council.

He advised the Council that under CIO rules, it may appeal his action to the next meeting of the CIO Executive Board, scheduled to be held in Washington on Feb. 14-15.

THE COMMITTEE which heard the charges consisted of Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization; John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils; and John J. Moran, vice-president and director of organization, CIO Communications Workers.

At the same time, Murray designated Richard Leonard, a CIO national representative, to take over the property and funds of the Council in accordance with CIO rules. Leonard is a former vice-president of the Auto Workers.

He also called upon Leonard to contact a new advisory committee of 19 CIO union leaders in California for the purpose of establishing a new State Council "which will work in the interests of California CIO members and in conformity with the policies and principles of CIO."

The CIO hearing committee was set up in response to charges filed by more than a dozen CIO union officials in California who asked revocation of the Council's charter and establishment in a new statewide CIO agency.

No officers or representatives of the Council appeared at the committee's hearing in Washington, although invited, but a number of the complainants testified and offered documentary evidence in support of their charges.

The committee in its report declared:

"We are compelled to agree that the California State Council, as charged, is guilty of promoting disunity and discord within our ranks by its disruptive and irresponsible actions, and by its divisive tactics has given aid and comfort to the enemies of labor who perpetually seek our destruction.

"The California Council and its officers, on the basis of the record, have repeatedly violated the rules established by the CIO Executive Board and the CIO constitutional conventions, and which were in effect during 1948 and 1949, during the time covered by the complaint."

The committee said that the Council had "repeatedly publicly defied CIO policy." It held that this was in violation of rules providing that state and local industrial union cocuncils "shall confine their activities and statements to issues of local or state concern, and to matters of general policy that have been passed upon by the national CIO. Councils shall take no action or issue statements in conflict with CIO policy."

The committee likewise charged the California group with failure to consult with and be guided by the advice of the CIO national office in cases of doubt as to CIO policy, or on problems of procedure and structure.

The committee commented that "the record shows that the California Council not only did not consult and be guided by the national CIO, but ignored and defied advice given them by the national CIO, and made public attack upon the national CIO and its officers."

The complaint listed 10 charges: that Council officers "on numerous occasions" interfered in the internal affairs of local unions and attempted to turn them against their parent national unions; that Council officers attacked officers of the Oil Workers Intl. Union during a 1948 statewide oil strike; that a Council official sought to persuade locals of the Steelworkers to ignore that union's national policies

Also, that the Council and its paper openly encouraged workers to leave the CIO Utility Workers and join the AFL union; that the Council "was closely allied" with the Communist Party in attempting to defeat liberal candidates in the 1948 election through the instrumentality of the Wallace third party; that Council officers have endorsed and urged subscriptions to the Communist People's World, described as a "union-busting, strike-breaking rag"; that the Council encouraged opposition to the European Recovery Program, in defiance of national CIO policy.

Also, that the Council has distributed literature attacking CIO policies and slandering CIO officials; that Council officers have refused to account for funds collected and spent for political action; and that through these actions the Council has repeatedly violated the CIO Constitution and its rules governing local and state councils.

Named by Pres. Murray to constitute an Advisory Committee to make plans, in conjunction with Leonard, for establishment of a new Council were:

Timothy Flynn, CIO regional director, northern California; Irwin deShetler, CIO regional director, southern California; Charles Armin, Oil Workers; Arthur Morrison, Packinghouse Workers; Marie A. DeMartini, Communications Workers; Morris Zusman, director, California Natl. CIO-Political Action Committee; Jerome Posner, Clothing Workers.

Also John Despol, secretary-treasurer, California Natl. CIO-PAC; C. V. O'Halloran, Auto Workers; Floyd Gartrell, Rubber Workers; Robert Greenock, Newspaper Guild; Harold Shapiro, Shipbuilding Workers; Philip O'Rourke, American Radio Association; Joe Clark, Woodworkers; Charles Smith, Steelworkers; Charles Abar, Natl. Maritime Union; Harry Stillman, Textile Workers; Clement J. Lewis, Utility Workers; and Albert Lunceford, Greater Los Angeles CIO Council.

CIO Aid Is Pledged CWA In Dispute With Bell

A QUARTER million CIO Communications Workers are preparing for a possible strike against the Bell System, the world's largest single corporation and largest private employer.

In reply to a letter from CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne, CIO Pres. Philip Murray pledged "every possible assistance" to the telephone workers in their dispute with the Bell companies.

Murray said the "decision as to whether there will be peaceful labor management relations in the telephone industry is clearly one that rests with the management of the Bell system.

"I am sure that I speak not only for the membership of the CIO but for the public at large when I call upon this corporation to measure up to its public responsibilities, and, through the processes of collective bargaining, conclude a settlement with the Communications Workers of America."

(A CWA booklet which was issued last week explained: "The Bell System consists of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., 21 subsidiary operating companies, the Western Electric Co., the manufacturing branch of the business, and the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

("AT&T has a two-fold function. It is a holding company, financing the activities of its subsidiary companies and its own activities, and it is an operating unit for handling long distance communications.")

BEIRNE said in his letter that the Bell System has turned a deaf ear to CWA proposals for a wage increase, shortening of apprentice periods, narrowing of geographical wage differentials, pension reforms and a shorter work-week.

He stated that the weekly wages of telephone workers had fallen from seventh place in 1939 among the major groups of American wage earners to 25th in 1949.

CWA is dealing with an employer whose conception of labor relations belongs back in the days of slavery," Beirne said.

Beirne urged CIO members and the general public "to use the telephone as much as possible" if the strike is called "so that unattended equipment will develop mechanical trouble more speedily than when we are there to maintain it."

Beirne, in Cincinnati for a meeting with local presidents from over the nation, said he spent an hour on Jan. 25 discussing the situation by telephone with William Margolis, in Washington. Margolis is an aide to Cyrus Ching, head of the mediation service.

AT&T indicated it would attempt to continue operations through its telephone-operating subsidiaries throughout the country if the strike is called.

Murray To Back Phone Workers In Radio Speech

CIO Pres. Murray will deliver a nationwide radio speech Wednesday night, Feb. 1, in support of the CIO Communications Workers' demands for higher wages, improved pensions and better working conditions throughout the Bell Telephone System.

Murray will be heard on Wednesday night over some 130 stations of the American Broadcasting Co. (ABC) network.

His speech will be carried at 9:30 P.M., Eastern time, 8:30 P.M., central time; 8:30 P.M., mountain time; and 9:00 P.M., Pacific time.

Be sure to tune in on your local ABC station for this important speech by Pres. Murray.

$108,000 Asked For Labor Relations Probe

The Senate Labor Committee has voted unanimously to ask the Senate for a $108,000 fund to carry on an investigation of labor-management relations, in preparation of a report due in December, 1950. Meeting Jan. 20, the Senators okayed the proposal, brought in by the subcommittee headed by Sen. James Murray (D., Mont.).

Unscramble Egg Dispute; Do You Find Middleman?

Everybody, or practically everybody, was complaining about the price of eggs last week.

The farmers said it was too low. Housewives and the Senate Agriculture Committee said it was too high. The middlemen haven't been heard from.

The Senate committee was told retail prices were still too high even though they are 20 to 30c a dozen lower than last fall's top. Rep. James I. Dolliver (R., Ia.) said Midwest farmers are receiving 20c and even less per dozen. Sen. George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), a committee member, reported New England farmers were being paid 23c for eggs that sell around 65c at retail. It costs the farmers more to produce the eggs than they get for them, he said.

UAW Strikes After Chrysler Spurns Three Proposals

EIGHTY-NINE thousand members of the CIO Auto Workers employed by Chrysler Corp. went on strike Jan. 27, halting the assembly lines of the nation's third largest automobile manufacturer in a dispute over pensions.

Six months of negotiations failed to bring agreement in a dispute between the union and the company.

UAW Pres. Walter Reuther blamed the strike on "the arrogant and stubborn attitude of the Chrysler Corp.," and accused the company of "refusing to accept its responsibilities to its workers and the people of the community."

He declared the UAW had been prepared to call off the strike if the company had met the established pattern of 10c an hour—either in the form of:

Six cents for pensions and 4c for a hospital-medical program,

Or in some other combination which would provide Chrysler workers with a guaranteed, adequate pension plan and a hospital-medical program,

Or a flat wage increase of 10c an hour.

Reuther said the union had offered to arbitrate any technical problems unresolved after 30 days of additional negotiations but that the company had turned down the proposal outright.

The UAW president listed nine major points which he said made the company proposal unacceptable to the union:

1. Despite the highest profits in its history, Chrysler Corp. refused to meet the 10c-an-hour economic pattern which has been accepted by a large portion of American industry.
2. The company-proposed pension plan would cost less than 3c an hour.
3. No provision is made for a trust fund under the plan. Also no provision is made for setting aside earmarked funds to guarantee payment of pension benefits.
4. The company can cancel the plan after five years and the worker who reaches age 65 even one day after date of cancellation receives no benefits.
5. Eligibility rules are rigged with numerous "jokers" which would deprive thousands of workers with long years of service of any pension benefits.
6. The corporation's proposal denies the workers any voice in the administration of the plan.
7. The company insists on forced retirement regardless of the individual's wishes.
8. The company proposal makes no provision for company payment of hospital and medical benefits for workers and their families and provides only minor improvements on life and disability insurance at a cost of less than 1c an hour.
9. The company offers its inadequate and unsound proposal conditioned upon the union's extending the present collective bargaining agreement for a period of five years.

On Jan. 17 the company made public its initial offer. It was a plan providing that workers could retire on $100 monthly, including social security, at age 65, after 25 years of service. The company demanded complete control of the plan.

Later the union solidified its demands into a 10c package and made a surprise offer to take a wage raise instead of the pensions.

UAW had insisted that a definite figure for hourly payments be included in the contract. The company termed this impossible.

As the strike got under way in Chrysler's 14 Detroit plants, soup kitchens were rolled out for the pickets, and lines of marching workers carried placards proclaiming, "We want pensions, not Weckler's love letters."

(Weckler is Herman L. Weckler, Chrysler Corp. Vice President and General Manager.)

In addition to employes of 14 Detroit plants, Chrysler workers were out at Atlanta, Ga.; Newark, Del.; Kansas City, Kan.; Evansville, Kokomo and New Castle, Ind.; Helena, Ark.; Marysville, Mich., and two plants at San Leandro, Calif.

WOMEN MEMBERS of the CIO Auto Workers (above) sing as they picket the Dodge plant, Detroit, on the first day of the nation-wide Chrysler strike. The sign being carried by the young woman in the foreground refers to Herman L. Weckler, Chrysler vice president and general manager.

'Texas Bill' Goes On Air For CIO In Dixie

"Texas Bill" Strength is working for the CIO down in Dixie now.

He's featured weekly on his popular program of folk songs, broadcast by the CIO Organizing Committee over radio stations in seven states.

His debut as CIO entertainer was on Sunday, Jan. 22.

The program, originating at Station WGST in Atlanta, is carried on a network in Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. It also is heard in many parts of Texas.

George Baldanzi, Organizing Committee director and executive vice president of the Textile Workers union, appears briefly on each of the programs, discussing the problems of Southern workers.

"Strength already was a popular entertainer in the places he had been heard—and reports from his first broadcast for us indicate he went over big," Baldanzi said.

Shipbuilding Aid Is Urged

AMERICAN shipbuilding and ship repair facilities today are declining at a rate which, within five years, will make them incapable of meeting an international emergency comparable to World War II without five to seven years of rebuilding and manpower training, President Truman was advised last week by Pres. John Green of CIO Shipbuilding Workers.

"The shipbuilding industry in this country today does not have one half the skilled mechanics necessary to train other shipbuilding mechanics if an emergency should arise," Green said.

"Shipbuilding and ship repair, in private yards, faces a virtual black-out. . . . Permitting the industry to die in this manner is deliberately killing the skills and equipment necessary to this nation for competitive, commercial shipping and for emergency defense situations."

In view of President Truman's budget recommendations, virtually ending shipbuilding and ship repair allowances, Green urged the President to convene a tripartite maritime conference of government, industry and labor to study the nation's shipbuilding facilities.

Perlow's UFW Local Votes To Back CIO

INTL. Secy.-Treas. Max Perlow, who for months has been leading the left-wing fight against National CIO within the United Furniture Workers, was set back on his heels last week by his own Local 76-B, in New York.

More than 3000 members of the local, largest in the union, at a special meeting heard Perlow urge continued defiance of the CIO. Then, by a landslide vote, they enthusiastically approved the plea of Intl. Pres. Morris Pizer for militant support of the National CIO. Pizer has been heading the fight inside the international to keep the UFW within the CIO and to adhere to CIO policies.

Perlow was manager of the local before taking the international post. His efforts to swing it behind the Communist faction dominating the international were so obviously doomed that his followers, sensing defeat, attempted to stave off a vote by having discussion continued until a meeting in March.

"No filibustering! . . . Vote, Vote! . . . Quit the stalling!" and similar cries rang through the meeting hall.

AFTER KILLING the motion to stall, the members voted overwhelmingly to support the pro-CIO position taken by Pizer and an embattled minority of the General Executive Board.

Pizer was frequently interrupted by applause as he pleaded the cause of the National CIO and progressive trade unionism. Manager Michael DiCicco announced that he emphatically disagreed with the policies Perlow advocated, charging that the union's money and energy were being wasted because organizers had to "chase around the country" trying to keep locals within the union.

Earlier Pizer had turned back against Perlow charges the latter had levelled against him in the bitter CIO-Communist fight in the union. Perlow had accused the international president in a letter to all locals of attempting to instigate one-man rule, attempting to disregard Executive Board decisions, and trying to use union finds for his "personal gain."

"These accusations are entirely unfounded," declared Pizer. "They are motivated by the fact that I dare to express a point of view that I think is in the best interest of our entire membership.

"I believe that our international union should cease attacking National CIO. I believe that we have to stay in the CIO. I am against any action that will lead to our expulsion from the CIO and thereby head our union toward destruction.

"Ever since I privately and publicly expressed these thoughts, I am being subjected to personal and malicious attacks by Perlow and his cohorts."

THE UFW is one of the unions directed to appear before a National CIO hearing board on charges of consistently following the Communist Party line.

Pizer answered Perlow's accusations in order.

"It is Perlow who has always attempted, and more so now, to become the dictator of our international union," said Pizer in replying to the "one-man rule" charge.

"He is trying to be the president, secretary-treasurer, organization director, editor of the Furniture Workers Press, office manager, director of the insurance and comptroller of the mimeograph machine.

"He has pretty good control over the mimeograph machine and part of the office, but fortunately, not over the members."

SO FAR AS disregarding GEB decisions is concerned, Pizer said that the board, a majority of which is aligned with Perlow, at its last meeting referred the question of National CIO policy and affiliation to the next UFW convention. This, he said, opened the question for discussion by the membership—in the columns of the Furniture Workers Press as well as at local meetings.

"On the nod of Perlow," he continued, "the majority of the editorial board prohibited me from printing an article presenting the point of view for National CIO policy and affiliation. But in the December issue they ran a long editorial, presenting one side of the picture and attacking the CIO.

"Not only was my article prohibited, but even my editor's note (disassociating myself from the editorial and the slanderous attacks on the CIO, which appeared in the previous issue) was kept out. Thereby an attempt was made to create the impression in the minds of the membership that their president and editor approved of everything that appeared."

He urged all members to express their views, pro and con, and promised to do what he could to get both points of view printed.

PERLOW'S CHARGE that Pizer was attempting to use union funds for his personal gain was based on the president's effort to use the union mailing list to acquaint the members with his viewpoint.

"The minute I attempted to send out this letter," said Pizer, "Perlow created a scene in the office, shouting that HE was the custodian of the mimeograph machine and all supplies. Through his ties with the office workers union (UPOWA) he impressed the office staff that they must take orders from HIM and not the president."

Perlow, he said, denied him access to the mailing list. Through CIO counsel he is taking this matter to the courts.

"Yes, Perlow is for economy," he continued. "Perlow will save a penny if that will muzzle people who don't agree with him, and will recklessly spend thousands of dollars if that will promote his one-sided, personal point of view.

A UFWA Rank and File Committee for CIO was organized at a meeting in Chicago early this month by delegates claiming to represent 70% of the international's membership.

House Unit Votes Tax Loophole Plug

The House Ways and Means Committee has voted to impose $90 million taxes on the nation's life insurance companies for 1947-48-49, to partially plug a loophole in existing tax laws.

This compromise settlement amounts to a very small levy, since the companies earned 4½ billion over the three-year period. Some of the insurance companies are reported planning a court challenge, charging retroactive taxation, but most of them have agreed to the settlement, probably on ground that if they don't Congress can hit them harder from now on.

. . . All Men Are Created Equal, But---

Men Who Abide by 'Master Race' Theory Seek To Prevent Enactment of Laws To Provide Equal Opportunities

By ALLAN L. SWIM

ONE HUNDRED and 74 years ago a group of men prepared a document—the Declaration of Independence—which said:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal . . ."

Today men in high places—in Congress and out—are doing everything they can to make a mockery of that simple statement of principle.

Some 25 years ago a fellow named Adolph Hitler began peddling a "master race" doctrine which eventually led the world into its most devastating war.

And recently we've been witnessing another attempt by men in high places to keep the "master race" idea alive in the U. S.

They're the men who fight the Truman civil rights program.

SO IT WON'T be charged that I'm one of those "damnyankees who doesn't understand the problems of the South" let me point out that I lived for 30 years in Arkansas, Tennessee and Georgia.

I have been in every Southern state many times. I grew up in a segregated community. As a reporter I "covered" several lynchings. I know about the poll tax from personal experience.

And I helped bring a measure of economic freedom—through unionism—to hundreds of Southerners who are treated as second-class citizens because they're not white.

My experiences, which have been rather varied, long ago convinced me that the people of the South generally are far ahead of their political leaders in civil rights matters.

It's true that many of them cling to "the old Southern traditions", but doing so frequently gives them guilty consciences.

LET'S NOT WASTE a lot of time arguing about whether there ever could be such a thing as complete social and economic equality.

Our concern should be with equality of opportunity. It's the thing we should fight for.

Men and women should be permitted to climb as high as their ability permits them. They shouldn't be held down merely because of their race, color or creed.

And, above all, no person should be denied the right to make a decent living merely because he or she belongs to one of the minority groups.

FEPC legislation was designed to provide equality of job opportunities.

Those who fight FEPC seem to operate on the theory that you can judge ability by the color of the skin.

THERE IS MUCH more involved in the civil rights struggle than the immediate domestic welfare of our own people.

The U. S. has assumed a position of world leadership in recent years. It's carrying the ball for democracy all over the globe. It's the chief opponent of communism.

Imagine how false our story of democracy must sound to the colored peoples of the Orient who know that Negroes are required by law to ride in the back of street cars in many of our cities.

The disfranchisement of Negroes in parts of our country simply doesn't make sense to the dark-skinned men and women in other countries.

Imagine our attempting to sell our segregation practices to the people of China and India.

And imagine the weapons our inequality of opportunity provides the peddlers of communism.

IT'S IMPOSSIBLE right now to know how much—or how little—Congress will do about civil rights legislation at its present session.

It's certain that the "master race boys"—those who deny that all men are created equal—will fight with all their strength to prevent enactment of the Truman program.

They can be beaten—if those who profess to believe in civil rights will make a real fight. Mere lip service won't get the job done.

It will take hard work and a lot of it. It will take pressure from the folks back home. It will take courage.

It's a job that must be done eventually if we're to retain our leadership and our national self respect.

The sooner we do it the better.

Union Talks Back

It's been the fashion, in post-war years, for industry to try to shift the blame for some of its most unsavory practices. Unions have been blamed for price increases which labor didn't cause and didn't want.

Now the United Steelworkers of America has talked back—sharply.

"We're tired of being a whipping boy for this (steel) industry," the union said, "especially when we are charged with responsibility for things which we have not done."

What the union did was to get a long-needed $100-a-month pension and a social insurance plan for its hundreds of thousands of members.

What the steel industry did was to jack up prices by more than $4 a ton—and to claim, falsely, that the union's welfare-pension program was solely the cause.

Now the union has demonstrated, with facts and figures, that the industry spokesmen are talking through their tall silk hats.

The union showed, for instance, that the steel industry's cost of raw materials is down something like $400 million a year: that the pension-welfare plan, whatever it cost, could have easily been paid out of super-high profits, without a price increase; that the new prices will bring the industry about an extra $264 million a year from John Q. Consumer.

That $264 million is a lot more than the pensions and welfare plans will cost the industry.

There's food for thought by our Congressmen in those figures.

And they give the lie to those newspaper columnists who blame labor for each price increase. The blame clearly lies in corporate selfishness.

Hillman Grants To Total $42,500

THE Sidney Hillman Foundation has alocated $42,500 for scholarships, grants-in-aid, merit awards and other prizes for 1950, the trustees announced last week.

The foundation honors the memory of the late Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and seeks to perpetuate his conception of labor-management relations and his other interests in the broad field of social welfare.

The foundation for the first time set up a series of eight prize awards of $500 each, to be given annually, in general, periodical and labor journalism; radio, and television, fiction, drama and motion pictures. In the field of general journalism there will be separate awards for articles or series of articles, and editorials.

"Submissions in these respective fields," said the foundation announcement, "may deal with the general subject of trade-union development, race relations, and world peace, including related problems. Especially relevant will be those submissions 'dealing with a labor or social theme, honestly representing the labor struggle or the struggle for human betterment.'"

JACOB S. POTOFSKY, Hillman's successor as ACW president, is also president of the foundation. He said that the trustees of the fund set aside $1000 for the annual Hillman Award for Meritorious Achievement, last year presented to Sen. Frank P. Graham (D., N.C.), former president of the Univ. of North Carolina.

The foundation voted $10,000 to the Univ. of Chicago social science department, covering a two-year period, to analyze school and college textbooks for the purpose of rooting out prejudice and discrimination.

Scholarships were awarded as follows: Brandeis Univ., Waltham, Mass,. $2000; Howard Univ., Washington, $2000; New School for Social Research, New York City, $2000; New York State School of Industrial Labor Relations, Cornell Univ., Ithaca, N. Y., $2000; Roosevelt College, Chicago, $5000; and the Chaim Weizmann Institute, Rehovoth, Israel, $5000.

The Sidney Hillman Tool Fund, which assists rehabilitation of refugees in Israel and trains them as artisans, received $5000. A similar amount was set aside for the annual Hillman lecture series.

Mrs. FDR Wins Geist Award

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has been awarded the Irving Geist Foundation's first prize for the most distinguished contribution to interfaith and interracial understanding appearing in a New York newspaper in 1949.

The award, which is administered by the Newspaper Guild of New York, was based on her column, My Day, in the New York World-Telegram.

Second prize of $400 went jointly to Ted Poston and Oliver Pilat, both of the New York Post, for outstanding reporting on group frictions. The award to Poston was based on a series on anti-Negro rioting at Groveland, Fla., and the framing of three young Negroes on rape charges. Pilat was honored for a series on the background of the Peekskill, N. Y., riots of last summer.

Seymour Marks, of the Long Island Press, received third award of $100 for a series on the "Redfern Rookery," a Negro slum area in Rockaway, which assisted in getting a new low-cost housing project for the area,

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President — James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer

Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher

Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII — January 30, 1950 — No. 5

Keyserling Urges Keeping Prices Down

Business and industry must adjust prices so the consumer can buy their products and a high level of employment can be maintained, Leon H. Keyserling, acting chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, told the Scrap Iron & Steel Institute in Washington last week.

"You can have all the demand in the world but if the price is not right you won't have the sales," said Keyserling, reflecting a position the CIO took a long time ago.

In order to retain "reasonably" full employment, the economist said, the production level five years from now must be $50 to $60 billions above 1948 and 1949. With a constantly expanding population and labor force, he warned, the U. S., by either standing still or failing to expand its production "actually is going backward."

"Nurse! What do these two want here?"

Lights Went Out And So Mayor Won

THIS IS A STORY about a mayor who "won" re-election to office because the lights went out while the ballots were being counted.

His opponents charged the "power failure" was a fraud, but he served another term, anyhow.

Then the CIO came to town.

This resulted in a series of events—including a curious "torchlight" parade—which brought an end to the mayor's career as head of the city government.

THE MAYOR was "a quite disreputable old man," according to a veteran CIO representative who related the story.

He served many terms before the "more respectable" elements of the town decided to put up an opposition candidate.

This candidate bucked a well-oiled local political machine and knew the odds were against him, but he agreed to make the race.

The campaign ended, the voters went to the polls—and then election officials gathered at City Hall to count the ballots.

As the tally was being made the lights went out suddenly. After they finally came back on, anti-administration watchers charged the ballot boxes had been switched.

Despite the protest, the incumbent was declared elected.

SOME MONTHS later CIO organizers moved into town and undertook the task of signing up several hundred women at a garment factory, the town's only industry.

The mayor worked hand-in-glove with the plant owners in an effort to defeat the unionization drive.

"He used every trick in the bag in an effort to drive the organizers out of town," said the veteran who related the story.

"He even encouraged mob attacks, with the police standing by and doing nothing to prevent violence."

And many of the town's people approved of the mayor's opposition to the union although they disliked his methods.

AS THE NEXT city election approached a curious situation developed—as a direct result of the CIO.

Many of the citizens were anxious to get rid of the mayor but didn't want to give support to the CIO.

Some of them considered that defeat of "His Honor" would be construed as indorsement of the union drive.

Eventually a second candidate entered the race and a heated campaign followed.

It was one of those political battles which stir a small town to its very foundation.

Shortly before election day it appeared—on the surface at least—that the anti-administration man could win if he got an honest ballot count.

His supporters, including CIO members, recalled that the lights had gone out at the crucial moment two years earlier.

THE VOTERS went to the polls, marked their ballots and returned to their jobs or homes to wonder what the outcome would be.

Shortly before the counting of ballots was to start, the husbands of CIO members started a "torchlight" parade through town and toward City Hall.

The "torches" were flashlights, which they waved and blinked as they paraded along Main Street.

They marched into City Hall, with their flashlights very much in evidence.

The crowd cheered and laughed. The people knew another "power failure" wouldn't help the mayor.

And when the ballots were counted the town had a new chief executive.

Our Position Remains Unchanged

HST Ties In Excise Tax Cut With Boosting Revenue

PRESIDENT TRUMAN asked Congress Jan. 23 not to cut federal excise taxes without at the same time raising revenue by plugging loop-holes and increasing corporate taxes—but Congress seems cool to any change in the tax laws except cuts.

The President warned Congress that he would not approve legislation cutting the excise taxes unless it made up the revenue somewhere else. This plain threat of a veto was designed to head-off a move in Congress to rush through a bill cutting the taxes on a long line of commodities from toilet preparations to luggage.

THE PRESIDENT'S message hit hard at some of the long existing loop-holes in the tax laws which he said "undermine public confidence in the tax system." He aimed first at the depletion allowances for oil and mining companies, which for many years have permitted these companies to escape hundreds of millions of dollars in taxes.

The present laws on taxation of oil companies, the President said, "are allowing individuals to build up vast fortunes with little more than token contributions to tax revenues."

"For example," he added, "during the five years, 1943 to 1947, during which it was necessary to collect income tax from people earning less than $20 a week, one oil operator was able, because of these loopholes, to develop properties yielding nearly $5 million in a single year without payment of any income tax.

"In addition to escaping the payment of tax on his large income from oil operations, he was also able through the use of his oil tax exemptions to escape payment of tax on most of his income from other sources. For the five years, his income taxes totalled less than $100,000 although his income from non-oil sources alone averaged almost $1 million each year.

"This is a shocking example of how present tax loopholes permit a few to gain enormous wealth without paying their fair share of taxes."

THE PRESIDENT also asked Congress to plug loopholes which permit educational and charitable organizations to engage in business and industry without paying taxes that such activities would pay if privately owned. He also asked for taxes on life insurance companies and on the income of movie stars now using a device to escape much of their taxes.

Plugging these loopholes, the President said, "would be a substantial step toward increasing the fairness of our tax system, and should add several hundred million dollars to its yield—sufficient revenue to permit substantial excise tax reduction where it is most urgently needed."

The only specific figure used by the President in outlining the scope of his proposals was a request for "one billion dollars in additional revenue by revising and improving the estate and gift tax and the corporation tax laws."

Excessive exemptions and unduly low rates on estates, the chief executive told Congress, are permitting large fortunes to be transmitted from one generation to another free of taxes.

As a means of fostering small business, the President asked Congress to confine the increase in corporate taxation to those companies making more than $50,000 a year. This would confine the increase to one-tenth of all corporations—but would apply to all the big ones. (LPA).

Vacation Pay Won For 3600 Members

Some 3600 members of the Textile Workers Union won $265,000 in vacation pay in 16 arbitration cases in 1949, a recent compilation showed.

The decisions served to bolster TWUA's contention that vacation pay is an earned right, not a management handout, because in almost every case the workers involved had been laid off and in some cases had been employed by firms no longer in existence at the time of the arbitration hearings. Without the union to take up their claims, the workers would have lost virtually all the money, and without the arbitration clauses in their contracts they would have lost at least part of it, the TWUA pointed out.

FTC Looks At Shoes As Well As Skates

Just because the roller skating outfit Junior got for Christmas has "Made in America" stamped on the bottom of the skates themselves is no assurance that the shoes to which they are attached haven't been "Made in Mexico."

So says the Federal Trade Commission in a complaint issued against Sport Shoes Inc. of Chicago, Ill. FTC charges that the legend "Made in Mexico" on the sole of the shoes was effectivly covered up when the skates were attached.

Sport Shoes Inc. has been given 20 days to answer the complaint.

Fair Deal Majorities CAN Be Elected To Congress

By D. ROCKWELL CLARK

THIRTY-SIX out of the 96 seats in the U. S. Senate become vacant in January, 1951.

A switch of three votes in the Senate in the first session of the 81st Congress would have passed most of the Fair Deal.

All 435 seats in the House become vacant in January, too.

A switch of 20 votes in the House in the first session of the 81st would have passed most of the Fair Deal.

This is why the 1950 Congressional elections are important to labor.

At present, the 36 Senate seats are held by 23 Democrats and 13 Republicans.

The 435 House seats are held by 263 Democrats, 171 Republicans, and one ALP member.

The elections this fall may change the balance.

There'll be a chance to change governors in 34 states, and legislatures in 46 states, too.

In short, except for the offices of President and Vice President and a little less than two-thirds of the Senate, almost the whole political fabric of the nation undergoes the scrutiny of the voters this November.

THEY CALL it an off-year election. Off-year for whom?

1946 was an off-year for labor unions and liberals all over the country. Only 34,410,000 people bothered to vote—far less than half the eligibles. The 80th Congress, elected by those few voters, was one that labor and liberals will long remember—with distaste.

In 1948, 48,883,000 people voted. Harry Truman was re-elected, to "everybody's" surprise — everybody who had enough to eat, a decent house to live in, a good school for his children, and enough security on his job, that is.

The same 48,883,000 people who voted in the Presidential elections also put into office a fairly liberal House and Senate. They swept the 80th "Worst" Congress out. Yet only 52% of the eligibles voted.

WHAT will happen in 1950, the off-year?

If CIO-PAC has anything to do with it, a Fair Deal majority will be returned to both houses of Congress.

In the House, a minimum of 157 districts in 37 states will need close attention. In about half of these districts, there is an opportunity to replace the reactionary incumbent: in the other half, the PAC-supported incumbent must be re-elected.

In the Northeast and Midwest the job is to hold liberal gains. Many of these districts have long histories of going liberal in Presidential years and reactionary in off-years. A total of 107 districts in these regions are classed as marginal, which means that a slight shift either way from the 1948 record would probably change the results.

In the Western states, labor and liberals have the greatest chance of actually picking up new seats in the House. There are 22 crucial districts out of the 35 in the eight Western states; there is an opportunity to defeat 15 reactionary Congressmen and, on the other hand, seven liberals face tough opposition.

POLITICAL yeast is at work in the South. In the last election, 39 Southern reactionaries were elected without opposition.

But this year labor and liberal groups are making strenuous efforts to get effective opposition for all Southern reactionaries. Registration figures, though still low in most Southern states because of bad laws, are on the upgrade.

The situation on candidates is still fluid, and local PAC's have made very few endorsements as yet, but everywhere there is activity.

A SIGNIFICANT development is the increasing cooperation between CIO and the AFL League for Political Education. In Connecticut, New York, Ohio, and Utah there are excellent, functioning United Labor Committees working state-wide.

In other states, such as Oregon, California, Mississippi, Alabama, Texas, similar groups are operating informally. Thousands of such committees have been set up on a city or county basis.

Because of their state-wide field and national importance, the Senate races attract the most attention, though the outcome of all 1950 races is vital.

The Southern Senate races are mentioned in a separate story.

Elsewhere in the nation, interest centers primarily on:

The June 6 Democratic primaries in California, where Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas will seek the Senatorial nomination against incumbent Sheridan Downey.

The Illinois situation, where Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas will face strong opposition from former Rep. Everett Dirksen (R).

Utah, where incumbent Elbert Thomas (D), chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, will run in the Democratic primaries against former Governor Maw, and the victor will probably face Wallace Bennett (R), former president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Pennsylvania, where Senate Majority Whip Francis J. Myers will have a tough fight against strong Republican opposition. Gov. Duff (R) and Rep. John C. Kunkel have announced they will seek the Republican nomination against Myers.

Wisconsin, where there will be opposition to Senator Alexander Wiley (R).

Connecticut, where two Democratic senators, Brian McMahon and William Benton, both are up for re-election and will be strenuously opposed.

Ohio, where Robert A. Taft (R), leader of the Dixiegop coalition, will face the winner of the Democratic primaries on May 2.

All Senate contests will be dramatic as the candidates emerge.

PAC Candidates Do Quite Well

The first 1950 political returns from the South came in on Jan. 24 and showed just what a determined fight by labor and liberal groups can do.

Mayor Delesseps S. Morrison of New Orleans, foe of reactionary Gov. Earl Long, was assured of re-election when he won the Democratic nomination by a two-to-one majority over four opponents.

In the same race, PAC-supported candidates won 24 out of 29 contests for city positons, including a majority of the city council, and two more were so close as to call for runoffs.

The total votes cast, 185,165, represented nearly 90% of registered voters. Of these, about 26,000 were Negroes, the largest number to go to the polls since Reconstruction days.

All of this bodes ill for reactionary Congressman Edward F. Hebert, since New Orleans is in his district.

THIS BIRD IS ALWAYS WORRIED ABOUT THINGS — BUT WHEN IT'S TIME TO REGISTER AND VOTE, HE ALWAYS GETS LOST. DON'T BE A LOST-RICH!

Give a BUCK to PAC
REGISTER! VOTE!

A SKIP-MUNK IS A GUY WHO'S NEVER THERE WHEN YOU WANT HIM TO REGISTER SO HE CAN VOTE.

DON'T BE A SKIP-MUNK!

Give a BUCK to PAC
REGISTER! VOTE!

How Many Wil

Your Senator Up For Re-election in 1950 is:	In 1944 The Total Vote Was:	Your Sen. Won by:
Ala., Lister Hill, D	247,749	160,621
Ariz,. Carl Hayden, D	130,226	50,444
Ark., J. W. Fulbright, D	214,441	150,557
Calif., Sheridan Downey, D	3,305,234	151,602
Colo., Eugene Milliken, R	494,888	63,075
Conn., Brien McMahon, D	828,497	38,968
William Benton, D	*
Fla., Claude Pepper, D	470,943	200,537
Ga., Walter George, D	272,569	unopposed
Idaho, Glen Taylor, D	209,469	4,723
Henry C. Dworshak, R	*
Ill., Scott W. Lucas, D	3,913,926	217,230
Ind., Homer Capehart, R	1,651,385	21,723
Iowa, B. Hickenlooper, R	1,021,687	29,734
Kan., Harry M. Darby, R	*
Ky., Garrett Withers, D	*
La., Russell Long, D	*
Md., Millard Tydings, D	558,430	131,020
Mo., Forrest Donnell, R	1,559,103	1,988
Nev., Pat McCarran, D	52,411	8,779
N. H., Charles Tobey, R	217,057	4,041
N. Y., Herbert Lehman, D	*
N. C., Clyde R. Hoey, D	759,850	307,776
Frank P. Graham, D	*
N. D., Milton Young, R	210,422	25,572
Ohio, Robert A. Taft, R	2,983,219	17,999
Okla., Elmer Thomas, D	702,394	81,629
Ore., Wayne Morse, R	443,235	94,955
Pa., Francis Myers, D	3,730,277	23,724
R. I., Edward L. Leahy, D	*
S. C., Olin Johnston, D	101,736	91,322
S. D., Chan Gurney, R	227,447	63,049
Utah, Elbert Thomas, D	248,280	49,216
Vt., George Aiken, R	123,248	38,958
Wash., W. G. Magnuson, D	819,879	87,657
Wis., Alexander Wiley, R	1,256,480	97,369

* This Senator appointed or elected since 1944.

Eighteen States Will Al

THIS YEAR, in critically important races, 34 governors will be up for election, and all or part of 46 state legislatures will be changed by the voters.

The state contests are of more than usual importance in 1950, because upon these legislatures and governors will fall the task of carving up the states in line with the finding of the 1950 census. They may, if they choose, set up all new Congressional districts.

The way it looks now, 18 states will show enough of a population difference to warrant re-districting. Depending on what the voters do this year, this may take the form of an honest reapportionment of Congressional districts or it may lead to some of the sorriest gerrymandering ever seen.

(Funk and Wagnall's Collegiate Dictionary: "Gerrymander (N). An unnatural or arbitrary redistricting of a state or county.")

Eleven of these states will lose a total of 14 Congressmen and seven will pick up an equal number, according to a survey based on the 1948 estimated census and compiled by the staff director of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

The 11 which stand to lose are Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

The five southern states and Illinois, Missouri and Oklahoma each will lose one Congressman apiece, it appears. Pennsylvania will lose two and New York will drop three.

The population shift which has brought this about has been westward. California stands to gain the amazing total of eight new Representatives. Oregon and Washington pick up one each, as do Florida, Indiana and Michigan.

THE ONLY two states not electing a portion of their legislatures this year are New Jersey and Virginia, which, according to this tain the same gressmen.

The govern be hard-foug with 18 Dem publicans inv

Gov. Thoma of New York, tial candidate is running ag cratic candi may be Rep velt Jr.

And Gov. D ning mate, (R.) of Cali ably will seek the Democrati Roosevelt, sq

PAC-indorse (D.), former be opposed b non (R.) in C

Gov. "Hu (D), son of may tangle Ellis Arnall since the sta

Here Is The CIO-

CIO-PAC EXECUTIVE BOARD MEMBERS (l. to r.): Frank Rosenblum, ACW Secretary-Treasurer; Jacob Potofsky, ACW President; Emil Mazey, UAW Secretary-Treasurer; Walter Reuther, UAW Pesident; James B. Carey, CIO Secretary-Treasurer, and administative committee chairman, IUE; Philip Murray, CIO President, Steelworkers Jack Kroll, PAC director; David J. urer and also Secretary-Treasurer C. W. Werkau, CWA Secretary-Treasu

Vote This Year?

Or a margin of:	But only this many eligibles voted:	In 1950 this many can vote:	How many will vote?
64.8%	15%	1,564,000	?
38.7%	32%	404,000
70.2%	20%	1,100,000
4.6%	50%	7,385,000
12.7%	68%	721,000
4.7%	65%	1,445,000
42.6%	28%	1,538,000
—	13%	1,917,000
2.3%	67%	318,000
5.6%	76%	6,014,000	?
1.3%	70%	2,659,000
2.9%	66%	1,735,000
		1,333,000
		1,618,000
		1,525,000
23.5%	37%	1,418,000
.1%	62%	2,649,000
16.8%	44%	95,000
1.9%	68%	376,000
		10,236,000	?
40.5%	14%	2,090,000
12.2%	68%	332,000
.6%	63%	5,345,000
11.6%	53%	1,452,000
21.4%	50%	1,242,000
.6%	60%	7,324,000
		513,000
89.8%	20%	1,039,000
27.7%	62%	387,000
19.8%	61%	386,000	?
31.6%	61%	240,000
10.7%	54%	1,814,000
7.7%	62%	2,190,000

Liberals Face Dixiecrats In Early South Fights

THE FIRST decisions in 1950's Congressional and state elections will be made in the Southern states, since the South has early primaries, as a rule, and the primaries, for all practical purposes, determine the outcome of the elections.

The primary fights this year will be intense, because the South's traditional "one-party" political operation is charging, through the activity of liberal groups, into a "two-party" primary race in state after state.

It all takes place on the "Democratic" ticket, but the shadings of Southern "Democratic" opinion go all the way from J. Strom Thurmond, governor of South Carolina, who ran for President on the States' Rights (Dixiecrat) ticket, to Frank Graham, newly appointed Senator from North Carolina, a staunch Fair Dealer and a former public member of the War Labor Board.

THE PARADE starts off May 2, when Alabama and Florida have their primaries.

In Alabama, there are nine Congressional districts, of which five currently are held by active members of the Dixiegop coalition. Sen. Lister Hill, who was supported by labor in 1944, faces a tough fight. PAC-indorsed Gov. James E. Folsom cannot, by state law, succeed himself, which leaves the field wide open.

Liberal groups working to find and elect candidates in Alabama are up against a poll tax which not only requires payment of $1.50 a year but says that any and all delinquent poll taxes, up to a total of $36.00, must be paid.

All poll taxes are due a full three months before the primary. Would-be voters also must register, and to register they must be accompanied by two qualified voters. Under this system, only 14% of Alabama's potential 1,564,000 voters cast their ballots in 1948, a Presidential year.

In Florida, PAC-supported Sen. Claude Pepper faces heavy opposition from conservative Rep. George Smathers. The six-man Florida delegation to the House probably will be increased to seven by the 1950 census. Florida has no poll tax; registration for the primary runs to April 1. There is no gubernatorial election this year. In 1948, 39% of eligibles voted.

North Carolina's primaries come on May 27.

The two North Carolina Senators, of opposite opinions on almost every issue, are both up for re-election this year. One is Frank Graham, mentioned above; the other, reactionary Clyde R. Hoey. Graham was appointed to fill an unexpired term. Hoey was elected in 1944 by a wide margin, but with only 14% of eligibles voting.

All 12 North Carolina representatives are seeking re-elec tion.

There is no poll tax in North Carolina, but the state's registration laws are tough. The law permits counties to call for new registration at intervals, and this year approximately three out of every four counties have done so. North Carolina citizens may register only on three days of the year—the three Saturdays within the two-week period April 29-May 13.

ARKANSAS' primaries are on July 25, but in order to vote on that day, the registrant must have paid his poll tax by Oct. 1, 1949, nearly a year earlier. Sen. J. W. Fulbright is up for re-election. He has a fairly spotty record. All seven Arkansas Representatives are candidates for re-election. Only 22% of the state's potential 1,100,000 voters cast a ballot in 1948; only 20% in 1944.

On July 11 come the South Carolina primaries.

Sen. Olin Johnston, of South Carolina, who was supported by labor in 1944, will be opposed by Dixiecrat Gov. Thurmond, while former Secy. of State James F. Byrnes tries to replace Thurmond as governor. Of the six-man South Carolina House delegation, only one has a liberal record.

In South Carolina, the only primary registration is "enrollment on the party books," and the poll tax of $1 is payable only for voting in the general election, but whatever the apparent ease of becoming a voter, only about one in every three eligibles was "enrolled" in 1948.

Th wide-open Texas primaries are on July 22.

Gov. Allan Shivers and the 21-man Texas House delegation are up, including House Speaker Sam Rayburn.

Texas has no registration at all. The poll tax must be paid by Jan. 31, or six months before the primaries, however. In 1948, nearly 40% of Texas' millions paid their poll taxes. A referendum to repeal the tax was defeated last fall, by a narrow margin, in a light vote.

TENNESSEE'S primaries are Aug. 3.

Gov. Gordon Browning, anti-Crump and PAC-supported, will face opposition. Tennessee's 10-man House delegation will be in a free-for-all. Three of the Representatives have consistently bad labor records, but the caliber of the delegation has improved measurably. For instance, Tennessee was the only Southern state where a majority of the Congressmen voted against the proposed power grab by the Dixiegop Rules Committee.

There is a poll tax of $1 to $2 in Tennessee, for the general election only; women and veterans were exempted under a law passed by the last (anti-Crump) session of the legislature. The state elections are particularly important this year. The new legislature will redistrict, since Tennessee stands to lose one Congressman after the 1950 census; it will also be called on to approve the first revisions to the outmoded State constitution since it was written in the 1870's.

On Aug. 8 come the primaries in Mississippi and Virginia. Five of Mississippi's six Congressmen are up for re-election. Included is the infamous John F. Rankin.

A poll tax of $2 must be paid in Mississippi for two consecutive years before the would-be voter may cast his ballot, and these payments must be made on the due date each year and cannot be combined. The due date this year is Feb. 1. Under this set-up, Rankin was elected by 16,800 votes, with no opposition, in 1948, although there were 2,183,796 people in the state in 1940 and nearly 312,000 in Rankin's district.

Virginia's nine-man House delegation, including only one liberal, is up for re-election.

A VIRGINIA voter has to pay a poll tax of $1.50 a year, before May 1, and delinquent taxes up to $4.99 also must be paid. In addition, the would-be voter must go before the registrar and write correctly the answers to a list of questions set forth in the state constitution. Until two years ago the voter could at least take the list of questions with him; now, the Attorney General has ruled that the voter must remember the questions as well as the answers.

In 1949, only 35.3% of potential Virginia voters were able to register.

Louisiana's primaries are Aug. 29.

Sen. Russell Long and the eight Louisiana Representatives will provide a political slug-fest unmatched in recent years. (See story elsewhere on this page.)

Louisiana has no poll tax, but registration must be renewed every eight years, and this is the year. Hours of registration, except in the 30 days prior to July 30, the final date, are from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and there is no provisions for mobile registrars. In 1948, only 35.3% of the state's potential voters registered and only 28% voted.

(As a result of the intensive efforts being put on by labor-liberal groups, however, registration in New Orleans Parish in less than one year has come within 2000 of the 209,000 registered in the entire eight years previous.)

Finally, Georgia's primary is Sept. 13, although registration in Fulton Co. (Atlanta) must be completed by May 6.

Sen. Walter F. George, anti-Fair Deal chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is up for re-election, as are nine out of the 10 Representatives, most of whom are reactionary. Gov. "Hummon" Talmadge's term also expires this year.

Georgia has no poll tax, and the effective date of its strangling new registration law has been postponed for two years, so the outlook for voter registration is good. In 1948, 67% of the potential voters were registered, though only 22% voted.

er Congressional Districts

stimate, will re- umber of Con-

ship races will and colorful, ats and 16 Re- ed.

E. Dewey (R.) feated Presiden- 1944 and 1948, and the Demo- against him nklin D. Rooseey's former run- Earl Warren nia, very prob- election against andidate, James f FDR.

Chester Bowles A director, will rmer Gov Shan- necticut.

on" Talmadge d-Gallus Gene," h former Gov. D.) in Georgia, ttorney general has declared them both eligible to run.

Gov. William S. Beardsley (R.) of Iowa, who was elected with PAC support, is running again; his opposition is not settled.

Gov. Paul A. Dever (D.) of Massachusetts, also elected with PAC support, will face tough Republican opposition, as yet unnamed.

PAC-indorsed G. Mennen Williams (D.) of Michigan also faces a fight; his opposition is still smarting from his "surprise" election.

The Ohio voters, who will decide whether to retire Sen. Robert A. Taft (R.), will also decide whether to keep Gov. Frank Lausche (D.).

In Oregon, State Senator Richard Neuberger (D.), well-known liberal author, may run against Gov. Douglas McKay (R.).

The Pennsylvania situation is wide open. At least a half-dozen candidates have announced they will be in the Republican race for governor. On the Democratic slate two have announced. Gov. James H. Duff and Rep. John C. Kunkel are seeking the Republican nomination for Senate. Senate Majority Whip Francis J. Myers has announced his candidacy for re-election.

Gov. John O. Pastore of Rhode Island, the first state governor publicly to go on record against the Taft-Hartley law, is up for re-election.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, Dixiecrat candidate for President in 1948, will run against Sen. Olin Johnston (D.); former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes has announced his candidacy for the governorship on an anti-Fair Deal platform.

PAC-indorsed Gordon Browning (D.) of Tennessee faces a fight from the remains of the Crump machine.

These are only a few of the governorship contests of importance.

AC Executive Board

resident and chairman of PAC Board; Donald, Steelworkers Secretary-Treas- RAC; Joseph Beirne, CWA President; ; Emil Rieve, TWUA Pesident; William S. Pollock, TWUA Secretary-Treasurer; and L. S. Buckmaster, Rubber Workers President. Not shown: Desmond Walker, Rubber Workers Secretary-Treasurer. (No picture available.) The PAC Board will have a dinner meeting on Feb. 14, same day as the CIO Executive Board convenes.

'Chamber Of Horrors' Warns Of Miracle Cures

By WILLIAM WEISS

A NUMBER of unethical businessmen and self-styled inventors have operated successfully for years on Barnum's theory that "there's a sucker born every minute."

They have offered—and sold—"miracle" cures for rheumatism, cancer, arthritis and fallen arches.

They have marketed fantastic mechanical contrivances "guaranteed" to eliminate nearly every human ailment.

They not only have cheated the public out of money but have also impaired the health and even caused the death of gullible customers.

High on their "sucker list" are the working men and women of the nation. Persons with annual incomes of $3000 and less are regarded by many of the gyps as the best prospects for many of their worthless gadgets.

Nobody knows just how much Americans spend annually on phony "health improving" mechanical and electrical contraptions but the figure must run into the millions of dollars.

Some of the gadgets are simple and inexpensive. Others resemble Rube Goldberg creations and are costly.

THERE'S A governmental agency which cracks down whenever possible on the handlers of the "cure-alls." It's the Food and Drug Administration, which maintains a fantastic "Chamber of Horrors" in Washington.

I went over to the "Chamber" recently to find out what the "sucker list boys" try to palm off on the public.

One of the most amazing fakes shown me was the "spectro-chrome," a worthless machine which enjoyed wide popularity until FDA inspectors caught up with the "inventor," "Doctor" Dinshah Ghadiali of Bombay, India.

His mysterious outfit consisted of a metal box mounted on an adjustable stand. Inside the box were a 1000-watt lamp and a fan to keep it cool. Light from the lamp shows through an aperture into which various colored panes of glass are inserted.

Poor Ad!

When the "inventor" of a "high frequency" machine to cure arthritis was summoned to court to answer FDA charges of fraud, he himself was so crippled with arthritis that he had to testify from a wheel chair. He was unable even to raise his arm to take the oath!

Suppose a prospective "patient" had diabetes. The "Doctor" would instruct him to expose his body to alternate yellow and magenta rays at certain specific times of day or night. An elaborate chart furnished with each machine points out the time at which the rays are "most effective." For example, if the time table called for a yellow ray at 4 p.m. and the user jumped the gun and used it at 3 p.m. he could expect little or no benefit, the chart said.

In addition the diabetic was advised by "Dr." Ghadiali to give up insulin if it had been prescribed by an authentic physician and to eat foods with a heavy starch content.

Purple light was supposed to decrease sexual activity, white light to increase it. Venereal diseases could be cured in early stages by green light but advanced cases required a series of yellow light flashes, the "Doctor" claimed.

THE "SPECTRO-CHROME" (above) is on exhibit at the Food and Drug Administration's "Chamber of Horrors" in Washington, D. C. The maker claimed it cured any disease by shining colored lights on the patient. Over 9000 of these worthless machines were leased to ailing individuals for $90 a year before the "inventor" was finally convicted, fined $20,000 and sentenced to three years in jail.

THE "MECHANICAL HEART" for which this FDA employe is an attractive backdrop was supposed to cure toothache, nervousness, burns, fallen arches, broken noses, but it did none of these things. It consisted of a dry cell battery, a small buzzer coil and attachments to apply electrical currents to various parts of the body. Hundreds of these gadgets were sold at about $300 each.

"DR." Ghadiali, possessor of self-bestowed M.E., D. C., and ph. D. degrees in addition to his M.D., claimed his machine would cure any human ailment, including cancer and tuberculosis. "You don't need a diagnosis," he told his victims, "just tell me where you hurt. The machine will do the rest."

As fantastic as it may seem, more than 9000 of these contraptions were leased to individuals at $90 a year before FDA secured a conviction. The "doctor" was fined $20,000 and sentenced to three years in jail.

According to FDA "Chamber of Horror" attendants, an incident occurred during the spectro-chrome trial which indicates how honest but gullible persons are sometimes willing to testify how they have been benefitted by use of such phony gadgets.

A former "patient" took the stand and solemnly stated, "I had fits all my life until Dr. Ghadiali cured me. His spectro-chrome stopped my fits. I feel fine."

Whereupon the witness stiffened, collapsed on the floor and began frothing at the mouth!

"CHAMBER" attendants pointed out another "miraculous" gadget which, according to the attached label, "would absolutely cure bronchial troubles, sinus conditions, burns, injuries and illnesses in general."

It was a small glass tube containing barium chloride in a metal container about the size of a 5 cent lead pencil. While an ordinary pencil would have just as much curative powers, this little item was more expensive. It cost $300!

No need even to point this device at any part of the anatomy to benefit from its claimed healing powers. It was designed to be hung around the neck and, in some cases, likely remained there until the patient was dead!

Over in one corner of the "Chamber" was what appeared at first glance to be a poor man's Turkish bath. This, I was told, came complete with plumbing connections, a portable generator and cabinet in which the person seeking to be cured of arthritis, diabetes, lung abscess or jaw decay, seated himself.

Fumes from drugs heated on the generator circulated through the cabinet and were positively guaranteed "to cure all or any of the above ailments."

It was designed, the accompanying booklet stated, "especially for hopeless cases" or for "whatever is wrong." The inventor said it was worth much more than the "modest price," $2200.

VICTIMS OF colds, bronchitis, asthma, neuritis and kidney disorders who preferred to be shaken and jolted back to health had their choice of various elaborate "chamber" exhibits.

One of these, a large box-like affair costing $6500 featured a mattress with concealed heavy springs. When the springs released the occupant would be tossed up toward the roof of the box. Corrugated vibrating rubber side pads massaged him on the way down.

Another exerciser "guaranteed" success and cure by the use of "dancing atoms." A third, a combination oscillator and roller, sold for $1840.

In the event a "quick cure" applicant showed a preference for electrical devices, he had a choice of several contraptions, all equally worthless. One of these, which cost $1500, consisted of an inverted induction coil installed in a second-hand cabinet. The coil produced an electric shock to the patient by means of terminal pads and was particularly effective, according to the circular, in treatment of cancer.

ONE OF THE most primitive of the exhibits is a round "patty-cake" like ordinary concrete disk, termed by its modest inventor, "Farmer Brown's Master Cell."

Immersed in drinking water for 72 hours, it was supposed to impart the secret of life. Cows which drank this water would become calves on the spot, and old chickens, after two or three gargles, became pullets again, the inventor said.

'Faith!'

FDA enforcement agents frequently come in contact with pathetic cases when they attempt to seize fraudulent devices from people who believe they have benefited from their use. One woman, protesting a seizure said, "You must not take it away. It helped me. It helped my husband. It helped my mother. She just died last week."

Crops such as corn, sprinkled with the water would have a phenomenal yield, "Farmer Brown" claimed. It was leased, not sold, for $10 a year.

Although even the most gullible individual might have been expected to gag on this one, strangely enough interstate distribution soon followed newspaper publicity concerning the "cell" and the elixir of youth it was claimed to produce.

A Federal Court Judge was unconvinced however, and issued an injunction forbidding Brown to ship the "cell" in interstate commerce.

MANY OTHER exhibits of fake devices are on display at Food and Drug Administration headquarters, most of them designed to victimize innocent people searching frantically for a "short cut" cure for bodily ills.

The number and scope of the unscrupulous men who prey on the gullibility of these unfortunates would be greatly increased were it not for the constant vigilance of the Food and Drug Administration, which is part of the Federal Security Agency.

Almost 43 years ago, the first comprehensive national food and drug law was enacted by Congress. The law, and its successor, the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act of 1938 have been of inestimable value in protecting American consumers and conscientious manufacturers. In addition, the laws have contributed immeasurably to the improvement of the quality and honest labeling of the nation's food, drug and cosmetics.

Americans owe a debt of gratitude to FDA law enforcement officers. These men are highly trained specialists, experts in detecting cases of attempted fraud—whether it be in the misbranding of a product, the tracing of a disguised shipment of contaminated food or the investigation of a suspicious appearing mechanical "cure all" contraption.

Vets Warned Of Gyps

As the first of the $2800 million insurance dividend money goes out to 16 million World War veterans, they have been warned by the Better Business Bureaus of all major cities to look out for gyps. The warning is designed to protect the veterans from buying, particularly, dubious oil and mining stocks, unseen real estate, partnerships in nebulous businesses, agencies for merchandise that won't sell, wildcat insurance, and courses in "gyp" schools.

FEPC Foes In House Act Like Reds In Unions

By GERVASE N. LOVE

CONGRESSIONAL backing and filing over the Fair-Employment Practices Commission bill last week was for all the world like a union meeting or convention with the Communists on the losing side.

With the Dixiegops replacing the lefties, foes of FEPC forced a broad battle of technicalities that set House parliamentarians to working overtime, in quest of tactics to keep alive a vicious circle. The foes wanted to stall and the friends wanted action, and the parliamentarians, being impartial, served both sides to the point of desperation.

The only accomplishments during the week—and they were both minor and clouded—were the appearance of discharge petitions and a tentatively scheduled showdown vote in the House Rules Committee for Jan. 31.

The Rules Committee provided a major share of the frustration during the week. On Tuesday it refused by a five to five tie vote to bring up the FEPC legislation for House action, the Dixiegop majority scoring a victory. Then Rep. Clarence J. Brown (R., O.) moved for reconsideration on Jan. 26 because two GOP committee members, Rep. James W. Wadsworth (N. Y.) and Rep. Leo E. Allen (Ill.), were not present.

Came Jan. 26 and Wadsworth was still out sick. But he hoped to be back by Jan. 31, so the committee delayed final action and tentatively set a vote for that date. Neither Wadsworth nor Allen has said how he will vote on FEPC, but polls have listed them in opposition to the bill. Many observers believe that when the vote is finally taken, it may end in another tie, this time six to six instead of five to five.

THE APPEARANCE of the petitions, under which the Rules Committee may be forced to discharge a pending bill for House action if 218 signatures are obtained, touched off a tussle between Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. (D.-L., N. Y.) and Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. (D., N. Y.).

Roosevelt filed his discharge petition Jan. 23. Two days later Powell, author of the bill, filed a second petition, a rarety in House history.

The same day Powell took the floor and in effect accused Roosevelt of filing his petition to further his chances of becoming Governor of New York. Republicans favoring FEPC were refusing to sign the Roosevelt petition, he asserted. Roosevelt's action, he said, was "ill-timed."

The late President's son vigorously denied that either personal or political motives prompted him to file the petition. He offered to withdraw it if Powell would give him a list of Republicans who would not sign the Roosevelt petition, but would sign the Powell petition in sufficient numbers to make it operative. Powell, he observed, seemed "to have a closer connection with the American Labor Party and the Republican Party than I."

"If that does not prove to you, Mr. Powell," he said, "that I have no personal motives in this but to bring FEPC to the floor, then I do not know whatever will prove it to you. Now let's see who really wants FEPC."

Powell said that 64 Republicans joined with Democrats the previous week to block a change in House rules under which the Rules Committee could bottle up legislation at will. Only two of them, he explained, had signed the Roosevelt petition.

WHEN THE rules change was blocked, one of the preliminary parliamentary moves was a motion by Minority Leader Joseph Martin (Mass.) to adjourn. Powell was one of four non-Republicans who voted for the motion, which was defeated. Had it passed, a showdown on the change would have been delayed, and as a result action of FEPC would have been delayed and possibly stalled off until Congress adjourns.

Last Wednesday was "Calendar Wednesday" in the House for the first time in five months. On "Calendar Wednesday" the chairman of any committee can bring to the floor a bill which his group has approved, regardless of its status in the Rules Committee, if it's on the calendar. FEPC adherents forced its revival in their quest for a showdown vote.

So what happened? The committees are called alphabetically. First up was the Armed Services Committee, of which Rep. Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) is chairman. He brought out a bill giving World War II veterans another chance to apply for terminal leave pay, and pushed it through after appropriate debate. Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) of the Labor Committee, was all set, but was still waiting at adjournment. As things stand now he'll probably wait until the middle of March, if not later, before the alphabet gets down to the letter "L."

THE SECOND and fourth Mondays of each month are "discharge days," on which the chairman of a committee can call for House action on a bill his committee has approved, after the Rules Committee has hung on to it for 21 days. Monday of last week was the fourth Monday of January, and FEPC forces were hopeful.

But Speaker Sam Rayburn, a Texan, had nine such bills up. So he ruled in favor of measures giving statehood to Alaska and Hawaii. They held the floor while quorums were called for five times. On each occasion half an hour was devoted to hunting up all the Representatives in the Capitol and getting them on deck. Another half-hour was devoted to a formal roll call. On top of that there was a teller vote, in which members are tallied as they pass between counters. More than three of the five hours the House was in session was spent on the roll calls. Nobody did much talking about Alaska or Hawaii and they'll be taken up again in the future. Seven hours of "discharge day" remained when adjournment was forced over objections of the FEPC forces.

On Jan. 26 another delay was created when the House voted unanimously to bypass the next discharge day, Feb. 13. The Republicans asked for it because so many of them will be out of town in connection with Lincoln's birthday.

Senate Alters, Passes 'Equality' Amendment

THE SENATE last week adopted the Equal Rights amendment to the U. S. Constitution, but a couple of days later friends and foes were still trying to figure out who won.

The amendment, which purports to give equal rights to women, has long been opposed by the CIO because it would mean, in the words of Pres. Philip Murray, "abandoning the great body of laws that protect women workers from exploitation." These include legislation limiting women's working hours, regulating health and other working conditions, securing minimum wages, and social legislation that applies only to women such as maternity aid, widow's pensions and air for dependent children.

But the Senate tacked on a clause that appears to safeguard special legislation protecting women and assuring them of fair treatment. This appeared in effect to nullify the amendment and turn it into an equal status bill—which the Senate rejected shortly before acting on the amendment.

THE AMENDMENT itself, sponsored by Sen. Guy M. Gillette (D., Ia.) and 32 other Senators, has been sought by its proponents for 27 years. It reads:

"Equality under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex. Congress and the several states shall have power, within their respective jurisdictions, to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

The rider, presented by Sen. Carl Hayden (D. Ariz.), added:

"The provisions of this article shall not be construed to impair any rights, benefits, or exemptions, now or here after conferred by law upon persons of the female sex."

The vote on the amendment was 63 to 19, or eight votes more than the required two-thirds majority. The vote on Hayden's rider was 51 to 31. The measure now goes to the House, where it must win by another two-thirds majority. If approved there it must be ratified by three-fourths of the states within seven years before it becomes part of the Constitution.

Earlier the Senate defeated an equal status bill introduced by Sen. Estes Kefauver (D. Tenn.) which had the support of CIO. This measure would have established a 15-member commission, to be appointed by the President, to review legal discriminations against women and recommend legislation to correct them.

In discussing his bill on the floor, Kefauver maintained that the Equal Rights amendment would eliminate not only such things as minimum wage and maximum hour laws protecting women, but even laws against rape and white slavery. His proposal was defeated by a vote of 18 to 65.

GM, W'house First Rounds To IUE-CIO

THE CIO International Union of Electrical Workers scored smashing victories in its first election fights with the Communist - dominated United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers in plants of the industry's largest manufacturers.

In the Newark, O., plant of the Westinghouse Corp., which began operations only recently, the IUE-CIO won collective bargaining rights by a 10 to 1 margin in balloting conducted by the National Labor Relations Board. The UE was unable to drum up enough signed membership cards to demonstrate an "interest" and couldn't even get on the ballot. The votes not captured by the IUE-CIO all went for no union.

IUE-CIO then drew first blood in General Electric Co. contests with UE by notching an impressive 3 to 1 victory at the company's Cobourg, Ont., Canada, plant. The election was conducted under Canadian government auspices and represented a clear-cut victory for the CIO affiliate.

"This just shows," said James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer and chairman of the IUE-CIO Administrative Committee, "that the workers in General Electric and Westinghouse are sick and disgusted with the UE and are flocking to the IUE-CIO in increasingly large numbers."

In another Canadian election, also conducted by the government, the IUE-CIO won bargaining rights from the UE at the Leland Electric Co., Guelph, Ont., by a substantial 4 to 1 margin.

Steel Union Gets MMSW Canadian Jurisdiction

THE EXECUTIVE Council of the Canadian Congress of Labour at its January meeting in Ottawa granted the jurisdiction in Canada formerly held by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers to the United Steelworkers of America, CCL Pres. A. R. Mosher announced.

The Mine-Mill union was expelled by CCL last October. The CCL temporarily retained jurisdiction for itself pending the recent Executive Council determination. The council decision is subject to confirmation by the membership of the locals affected.

At Washington, D. C., the Mine-Mill union has received a hearing before a committee named by CIO Pres. Murray on charges of following the Communist Party line and failing to follow CIO policy. The committee will report to the CIO Executive Board at a meeting in Washington Feb. 14-15.

"As part of the USA, the workers will continue to have the full support of the CCL as well as the support of the 950,000 members of the USA in Canada and the United States," said Mosher.

"The CCL is confident that the USA, as one of Canada's foremost unions, will provide strong and efficient service to the men in the mines, smelters and plants which were at one time under the jurisdiction of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers."

MOSHER SAID the decision was particularly important to gold miners in the Timmins area, who formerly enjoyed collective bargaining agreements since lost under the old jurisdiction. The CCL reorganized them and is now negotiating for contracts, a task the Steelworkers will take over.

C. H. Millard, Steelworkers national director for Canada, welcomed the new members on behalf of the 50,000 USA members in Canada.

"Our union has already organized completely the iron ore mines in Canada and the United States," he said. "The full resources of our international union will be placed behind the campaign to organize the base metal and gold miners.

"Arrangements will be made to set up a Mine and Smelter Workers division to handle the affairs of the new jurisdiction we have asked to accept. A staff will be recruited from among the miners and smelter workers themselves to organize this relatively unorganized field. Their objective will be to establish union standards in the industry."

THE EXECUTIVE Council also took recognition of increasing unemployment in Canada by voting to establish an organization of the jobless, having direct affiliation with the trade union movement. The step is said by the CCL to be the first of its kind by an established labor organization in any country.

A committee to set up the new group consists of Sam Baron, Montreal, Canadian director of the Textile Workers Union, chairman; Alex McAuslane, Vancouver, Oil Workers; Murray Cotterill, Steelworkers; Joseph Mackenzie, Ontario Federation of Labour, and Donald MacDonald, CCL. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, the Canadian Catholic Confederation of Labour and "any other legitimate agency sincerely interested in the welfare of the unemployed" will be asked to cooperate, the council said.

More than 300,000 Canadian workers are now jobless and the number is increasing.

Carey Asks U. S. Approval Of Genocide Convention

CIO SECY.-TREAS. James B. Carey, in a statement read to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, urged American ratification of the United Nations Genocide Convention, which would outlaw the systematic elimination of races and peoples by ruthless governments.

Carey charged that more than 11 million prisoners are contained in Soviet Russia slave labor camps at the present time.

"Both Hitler and Stalin organized the greatest machinery for literally squeezing the blood out of human beings for two purposes," Carey said. "First, to get human energy without pay, and secondly to kill, through overwork, the undesirable people."

"The population of slave labor camps in Germany reached almost 11 million," he continued. "The number of inmates, including those from the Baltic nations in the Siberian slave labor camps, including the salt mines, is certainly higher," he stated.

The Senate Committee is holding hearings on the UN proposal to outlaw genocide, which UN has defined as "a denial of the right of existence to entire human groups and which is the same as the denial of the right to live of individual human beings."

The Carey statement was read by Stanley Ruttenberg, CIO Education and Research Director.

Court Rule Aids 150,000 Unemployed

IN A FAR-REACHING decision, the Ohio Supreme Court has sustained the contention of the Ohio CIO Council in an important unemployment compensation case.

The court, in refusing to grant a writ of prohibition sought by employers' groups, batted down a Big Business attack on jobless workers which the Ohio CIO had labeled as "morally reprehensible and legally unsound."

George D. Geyer of Osborn, Ohio, a restaurant owner and vice president of the Ohio Restaurant Association, had asked the court for a writ of prohibition, which would have compelled the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation to refuse payment of benefits, at the new rate, to those who were unemployed prior to last Aug. 22.

That was the effective date of the new unemployment compensation act, passed by the Legislature, which increased benefits $4 a week and extended the benefit period for an additional four weeks.

Geyer's attorneys, who represent the Ohio Chamber of Commerce and the Ohio Association of Manufacturers, took the position that the increases should only go to those who filed claims after Aug. 22.

Such a position, the Ohio CIO Council said in a friend-of-the-court brief, "would not only discriminate against a class of working men, but it would discriminate against and penalize those working people who most sorely need the additional benefits. It needs no demonstration to establish that by and large the longer an employe is out of remunerative work, the more he needs additional benefits."

Atty-Gen. Herbert S. Duffy, who carried the brunt of the battle, estimated that 150,000 workers would be affected. These 150,000 had been forced to go without additional compensation, granted them by the Legislature, for the several months the employers' case had been before the courts. Now barring appeals of individual cases, they will receive the increased benefits.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

State Dept. Pamphlet Shows:

Point Four Will Not Only Help Two-Thirds Of Humanity But Will Provide Jobs in U.S.

AMERICAN exports average $5.80 per person a year to developed nations such as Canada, the British Isles, Western Europe, the Scandanavian countries, Australia and New Zealand.

To nations in the intermediate stage of development, like Spain, Italy, Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union, South Africa and some of our South American neighbors, they average $1.25.

But to the underdeveloped areas that make up the rest of the world—most of Central and South America, Africa and Asia—they average but 70c.

Thus the State Dept. dramatizes, with charts and sketches, the cold profit potentialities for this country in making effective Point Four of President Truman's inaugural address in a new pamphlet, "The Point Four Program."

IT WAS NOT dollars and jobs alone or even primarily that led the President to plan on helping economically backward nations to help themselves. The humanitarian motive, the simple hope that the people who live in such countries might have some of the comforts and conveniences that are commonplace to the American worker, was at least an equally important factor—as it was in the thinking of delegates to the 1949 CIO National Convention who indorsed Point Four.

"Only by helping the least fortunate of its members to help themselves," said the President in summarizing Point Four, "can the human family achieve the decent, satisfying life that is the right of all people."

The convention resolution asserted that the mechanical modernization of industry in the undeveloped countries must be matched by the modernization of workers' rights. The techniques and "know-hows" that we must export, it added, have to include the minimum wage, collective bargaining and the joint settlement of grievances, for without them "the program will not achieve the human as well as material gains which are its objective."

CONGRESS was asked in June, 1949, to breath life into Point Four by legislation "to authorize an expanded program of technical assistance for such areas, and an experimental program for encouraging the outflow of private investment beneficial to their economic development."

The original Administration bill was unacceptable to Republicans on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and a compromise drafted by Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) has been given bipartisan approval. It was introduced earlier this month.

"The aid needed falls roughly into two categories," says the pamphlet. "Technical, to improve food production, health, education and productive skills; and financial, to develop transportation, communications, water control and productive industries.

"Millions of people in Africa, the Near and Far East, Central and South America, and the islands of the Caribbean and South Pacific have in recent years awakened to the possibility of a better life, and are looking to the United States and other democratic nations, both directly and through the United Nations, to help them start on the upward climb.

"The President's leadership assures them that they are not looking in vain. The first year of Point Four will prepare the foundation and set in motion a vast human enterprise extending far into the future."

THE STATE Dept. brochure shows how the two-thirds of the human race occupying underdeveloped areas actually live—"ill-clothed, ill-housed, and enfeebled by disease and hunger," and illiterate.

"With modern technical instruction and capital investment working hand-in-hand, the transition from a primitive agricultural economy can be made gradually to a more productive economy," the State Dept. pointed out on the basis of experience.

"The necessary steps are the training of a labor force and the modernization of farming, followed by the establishment of industries that can use small factories economically, such as cement plants, textile factories and hand tool factories.

"Accompanying the gradual process, it may be necessary to undertake the development of roads, railroads and waterways, power plants, irrigation projects, extractive plants to assure a flow of raw materials, and establishment of channels of distribution. Only then will a country be ready to undertake industrialization, a goal which must be reckoned in terms of many preparatory years."

The U.S. and UN technical cooperation programs will cost about $35,000,000 the first year. The U.S. hopes to promote a heavy flow of private investment funds abroad.

(Ed. Note: If the underdeveloped areas could be developed only to half the point already reached by the United States, the demand for American goods produced by American workers would be limited only by this country's productive facilities—and jobs should be plentiful for an indefinite period.)

FCC's Denial Of Radio Licenses To 2 Papers Upheld

THE U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals last week upheld the right of the Federal Communications Commission to deny radio licenses to newspaper companies it found indulged in monopolistic practices.

The appeals were taken by the Mansfield (O.) Journal Co. and the Lorain (O.) Journal Co., which are owned and controlled by the same stockholders. Both applied for the right to operate radio stations.

The FCC refused a radio station license to the owners because it found that the Mansfield Journal, only paper in its community, "coerced" advertisers by forcing them to accept exclusive advertising contracts with it and not to advertise through the city's only radio station, WMAN. In addition, the FCC found, the newspaper refused to publish WMAN's programs and made no comment about the station unless it was unfavorable.

The conclusion the FCC drew from its findings was that this conduct was aimed at suppressing competition and monopolizing mass advertising and news dissemination. Such practices, the FFC held, were "likely to continue and be reinforced" by operation of a radio station and would be against the public interest.

The newspapers in their appeals maintained the FCC infringed upon the freedom of the press, went beyond its powers by studying their competitive activities, and in effect found them guilty of a crime without trial.

In an opinion by Judge George T. Washington, however, the appellate court held that the FCC acted fully within its jurisdiction.

"I know it's silly of me to ask but didn't I see you two men in the cab of the engine of this train when we left Grand Central?"

Potofsky, Rieve Hail 75c Minimum

THE 75c minimum wage which became effective Jan. 25 is a token of "economic liberation and advancement for millions of Americans," Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO Minimum Wage Committee, said in welcoming the increase from 40 cents an hour.

While the new rate is "a severe blow against any renewal of sweatshop practices," the CIO will continue to work for eventual advance to $1.00 an hour with universal coverage under the law, he added.

"We in the CIO express our gratitude," said Potofsky, who is president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, "to President Truman, to Labor Secy. Maurice Tobin and to that large group of forward-looking Senators and Representatives who fought a valiant legislative campaign in behalf of the improved wage law.

"The Administration, through this action, has clearly shown its adherence to the platform of the 1948 campaign; that great liberal document attracted the support of millions of wage-earners throughout the nation.

"It is, in fact, a tribute to the effectiveness of American unionism that only 1½ million workers in interstate commerce will have their wages increased through the application of the new minimum wage. Through the collective bargaining process, unions have won basic wages far in advance of 75 cents an hour for the great majority of American workers.

"Were it not for the effectiveness of the collective bargaining process, our wage level today would be far lower and the degree of exploitation in American industry far more serious.

"In behalf of the CIO, with its millions of members, I pledge continuing activity to constantly achieve a better balance between the wages of American workers and increasing productive efficiency of our great industrial machinery.

"I also pledge to the millions of workers in the lowest income brackets that we in the CIO will work unceasingly for further improvement and extension of the coverage of the Federal Wage Hour Law. We will not give up the struggle until poverty is banished from the American scene."

Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union described the legislation as "the greatest single safeguard against depression erected since the end of the war" but like Potofsky claimed the minimum should be set at $1.

President Truman hailed the law as "a measure dictated by justice . . . founded on the belief that full human dignity requires at least a minimum level of economic sufficiency and security."

Probe Of Segregation

Rep. Jacob K. Javits (Rep.-L. N. Y.) has introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of segregation and discrimination in the armed services as the basis of race, creed, color or national origin. Javits asked for a special committee of 19, to report by June 1. In support of his request, Javits said "nothing could be more useful as propaganda material to the Communists than the persistent charges of segregation and discrimination."

Story of Store's Labor Dispute Costs Paper Heavy Ad Loss

THE PORTLAND Oregonian, one of the Northwest's largest newspapers, is learning the hard way that not everybody agrees a newspaper's job is to print the news as it comes.

It printed a detailed account of the intermediate report of Thomas Wilson, NLRB examiner, finding the Meier & Frank Co., a large department store and the newspaper's heaviest advertising space purchaser, guilty of unfair labor practices in a dispute involving an AFL clerk's union.

The store promptly pulled out the bulk of its advertising, including about 7½ pages already in type.

The Portland Journal, which printed a less detailed account of Wilson's findings, just as promptly found its columns bulging with Meier & Frank ads it had previously sought in vain.

Labor and liberal organizations promptly leaped to the Oregonian's defense and accused the store of an attack on the free press.

THE CIO Portland Newspaper Guild, representing editorial employes of both papers and also Journal circulation workers, hit at the "use of economic pressure" by Meier & Frank and warned that "news suppressed or warped to please an advertiser is not news."

"A threat of economic power by an advertiser against a newspaper," said the Guild in a resolution, "is a danger not only to the newspaper directly affected but also to all others in the area beyond."

The store has long resisted the clerks' union efforts to organize its employes. Following the loss of an NLRB election the union filed charges of unfair labor practices, including intimidation of employes.

Wilson in his intermediate report found the firm has acted unfairly by questioning employes in regard to their union membership or sentiment and in forbidding solicitation of membership in a discriminatory fashion.

The trial examiner recommended that the store be required to cease interfering with efforts of the employes to organize, that interrogation be prohibited and that the ban on solicitation be ended until a reasonable and nondiscriminatory regulation, aimed at preventing interference with store operation, be set up.

The first stories carried were in effect a preview of Wilson's findings. The Journal printed a brief summary, the Oregonian a more detailed account which included the background and statements by the principals. The next day Meier & Frank cancelled several Oregonian advertisements already in type.

A COUPLE of days later the text of the trial examiner's report was made public and the Oregonian published an account. More ads were cancelled the same day. The Journal bypassed the story in its city edition and then ran a follow-up on its original story to the effect that some charges would be dropped. This was based on Wilson's finding that Aaron M. Frank, president of the company, was within his rights in making a speech opposing the union.

The Oregonian published a Page 1 statement briefly outlining the situation in which it stated that Meier & Frank had not informed the newspaper of the reason for "this sudden and drastic curtailment of space."

"As a matter of traditional policy," the statement said, "the Oregonian strives to report the news completely, impartially and without fear or favor. The Oregonian will continue to do so. We invite the patronage of those who approve this policy."

FRANK FLOUNDERED badly in his attempts to justify his position. At first he told the United Press that the space cut was due to snow. The next day, when reminded that the store's Journal advertising had jumped remarkably, he withdrew that statement and replaced it with one saying that the placing of ads had nothing to do with the publication of news.

He also spoke vaguely about experiments with "new techniques" in advertising, then relapsed into silence when asked to reconcile his statement with the cancellation of many columns of advertising already in type.

Editor & Publisher, weekly publication of the newspaper industry, rose to the situation nobly and with enviable finesse. It succeeded in staunchly defending the Oregonian and at the same time raising not the faintest shadow of condemnation against the Journal.

Organizationally Speaking

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The California State CIO Council charter has been revoked. The committee designated to hear charges made its report to Pres. Murray, citing flagrant abuses of authority and violation of CIO policy by the officers of the Council.

Pres. Murray ordered the revocation of the California State CIO Council charter on Jan. 25, 1950. Richard Leonard was appointed coordinator of the affairs of the Council in the interest of the CIO membership in California and in conformity with CIO policy. Brother Leonard will have the assistance of an advisory committee of 20 leaders and members of CIO affiliates within the State.

The ex-officers of the Council resorted to various means of subterfuge in an attempt to delay the hearings, but these attempts did not work. In the findings of the committee, the Council's own record, taken from the letters, statements and publications, was the basis of conviction. These ex-officers had used the Council to achieve their own ends, they supported the third party, and went so far as to support the communist paper, "Peoples' World." They defied CIO policy consistently, following the Communist Party line, this being consistent with the actions of all slaves of the Soviet Union. These ex-officers have been given the opportunity to comply with the decision handed down or to appeal to the CIO Executive Board. True to form they have resorted to their usual tactics to prevent CIO members from taking over the Council and institutions by creating a phony set-up to take possession of the "Labor Herald." The National CIO will endeavor to restore to the workers that which properly belongs to them.

By the time this is published, the writer will be in Puerto Rico, attending a big meeting of the workers there, at which time he will present a charter from the CIO to the workers of Puerto Rico. The CIO will extend every assistance possible to establish a strong trade-union movement in Puerto Rico, one that will be of great benefit to all the workers. This charter is being granted at the request of Pres. Thomas Mendes, of the General Confederation of Labor, Inc. The writer will report later the happenings there and his observations.

The Communications Workers of America-CIO (telephone workers) are preparing for strike action. True to form, the AT&T and its subsidiaries are resisting proper collective bargaining for the workers in this industry. Pres. Beirne, CWA-CIO, spoke over the radio on the ABC network explaining the just and reasonable demands of the telephone workers. Pres. Murray will deliver an important radio broadcast on Wednesday, Feb. 1, over the ABC network. His speech will be heard at 9:30 p.m., Eastern time; 8:30 p.m., Central time; 8:30 p.m., Mountain time, and 9 p.m., Pacific time. Pres. Murray's speech will be well worth hearing and should prove of very considerable assistance to the CIO telephone workers. I suggest that you tune in. To Pres. Beirne and associates everywhere, the CIO will be with you and will render every possible assistance to bring about the realization of your just demands.

The United Automobile Workers-CIO were forced to call a strike at the Chrysler Corporation, because the company failed to meet the union's proper demands and objectives. The UAW-CIO has the full and complete support of the National CIO in this action to realize their just demands.

CIO reg. Dir. Ben Henry reports that the UAW-CIO was victorious in a representation election at the Lattner Manufacturing Co., Cedar Rapids, Ia., by a vote of 25 to 2.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. John J. Maurillo reports that in a representation election at the Railway Bearing Co., Syracuse, N. Y., the UAW-CIO was victorious by a vote of 115 to 83. Francis X. O'Mealia, UAW Sub-Regional Director, conducted the drive.

CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler reports that in a union security election held at the North American Aviation plant, Los Angeles, Calif., the workers voted in favor of the UAW-CIO by 6800 yes, 1508 no.

CIO State Dir. William Smith reports that the United Transport Service Employes won a 3 to 1 victory in a NLRB election at the Piedmont Leaf Tobacco Co., Winston Salem, N. C.

Eight Jailed For Strike Action In '48

THE WHEELS of Georgia justice sometimes take peculiar turns.

Last week they went off on a tangent. As a result of a ruling by the Georgia Supreme Court, eight CIO Textile Worker members were jailed for an offense they did not commit and for which they had never been tried, TWUA attorneys said.

To support their contention, the lawyers quote U. S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black, who said the eight were "denied due process of law."

Black commented on the case when the union sought unsuccessfully Jan. 19 to have the Supreme Court consider an appeal from the action of the Georgia Supreme Court.

The case arose from a 1948 dispute between TWUA and the Celanese Corp. of America, makers of synthetic yarn. That year the union negotiated a 15-cent hourly increase for the industry. Celanese agreed to the raise at its Cumberland, Md., plant and said that when the Rome, Ga., contract expired later in the year, it would put the raise into effect there.

When the contract expired, however, the company offered 10 cents and refused to submit the issue to arbitration, union attorneys said.

The workers struck and stayed out until December, 1948, when the company agreed to pay the 15 cents.

During the strike, the company got an injunction limiting pickets to two and forbidding "intimidation and coercion." The workers ignored the order and scores were arrested. When the strike was settled, the eight men now in jail had been found guilty, fined and given sentences of from 10 to 20 days.

As is customary, the terms of the strike settlement included an agreement by the company to drop court action and to reinstate all workers without prejudice.

Since the charge was "civil contempt," the action became meaningless when the injunction was removed, the union claimed. The judge, however, refused to modify the penalties he had imposed.

TWUA attorneys believed the case looked like an easy one to win on appeal because the men had been found "guilty of civil contempt." The Georgia Supreme Court ruled, however, that the men were guilty of "criminal contempt." The men had never been accused or tried for criminal contempt.

Although the jail sentences are brief, the company says it won't take the men back when they are released.

TWUA Pres. Emil Rieve, in a letter to all members of Congress, reviewed the case and pointed out that the Celanese instance is by no means unique, especially in the South.

He said the only remedy is to remove from state courts the power to issue injunctions in labor disputes affecting interstate commerce.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

Union To Congressional Committee:

Steel Must Bear Responsibility For Price Rise

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

THE NATION'S big steel industry showed a "public be hanged" attitude when it jacked up prices by more than $4 a ton last December.

• Those steel price increases were "unwarranted," "indefensible" and "far in excess of any demonstrable cost increases" from pensions or anything else.

• The CIO United Steelworkers of America is getting mighty "tired of being a public whipping boy for this industry — especially when we are charged with responsibility for things which we have not done."

These were some of the points heard by the Congressional Joint Committee on the Economic Report last week from Otis Brubaker, USA-CIO research director, who represented Pres. Philip Murray at a Washington investigation of the steel price hike.

The pension-and-welfare program won by the United Steelworkers, Brubaker pointed out—with facts and figures—was not responsible for the industry's latest jab at steel consumers.

"The cost of pensions and social insurance will not approach the additional revenues which will be derived from the price increases and from demonstrable cost savings," Brubaker flatly charged.

Some facts offered to the committee about the business of making and selling steel:

1. The latest $4-plus price increase will bring the industry an additional $264 million.

2. A drop in the price of scrap steel—a big factor in the making of steel—saves the industry about $400 million a year. Drops in the prices of non-ferrous metals and fuel oil save the steelmakers an additional $80 million — these more than offset slight rises in transportation and other minor costs.

3. Higher productivity and other savings — together with the savings on scrap, etc. — would permit the industry easily to absorb the cost of pensions and welfare, while lowering the price of steel.

BRUBAKER appeared before the joint group of Senators and Representatives in a crowded hearing room at the House Office Building in Washington. He was followed to the stand by Don Montgomery, Washington representative of the CIO Auto Workers, who also criticized the steel price increase.

The CIO union witnesses offered sharp and effective rebuttal to Ben Fairless of U. S. Steel and a string of other industry executives. The corporation men tried, without too much success, to blame the union's pension-welfare program for the rise in steel prices.

Big Steel's Fairless estimated that the pension-welfare program would cost the corporation some $64 million a year—though it was not altogether clear how that figure had been arrived at.

Flanked by some 20 corporation top-level executives, Fairless tried to give the impression that poor old U. S. Steel was getting by on a shoe string.

UNDER SOME sharp questioning by Sen. Joseph O'Mahoney (D. Wyo.), Fairless said that "in my opinion U. S. Steel has not made a fair return on its sales or investment at any time during the last 20 years."

This picture of the giant corporation struggling to make both ends meet was challenged in figures presented by the USA-CIO.

Brubaker said that the company's accounting practices tend to hide about $30 million in profits each year. Even so, the company reported $129 million after taxes in 1948, and its return on investment has averaged about a solid 7% during the post-war years.

He recalled that the Fact-Finding Board appointed last summer by Pres. Truman had found that steel industry could meet the union's demands without price increases, while still maintaining a high level of profits.

"The steel companies must bear the sole responsibility for their price actions," the union official said, for the union made no deal "covertly beneath the bargaining table" concerning price problems.

Now, he said, the company "has tried again to blame the Steelworkers for this latest unwarranted increase in its prices."

A LOOK at the record during the past several years, Brubaker went on, will show that the union's wage increases and other gains were merely a handy excuse for the company to raise prices.

Since December 1944, the steel industry has jacked up the price of steel between 58.3% and 60.1% —in seven "clearly defined" actions.

"Usually," he pointed out, "the pattern has been two price increases for each wage increase—one price increase before the wage increase and one after."

And the biggest wage increase was followed by the smallest price increase.

A curious thing about prices in the steel industry, Brubaker remarked, is the way everybody follows the lead of U. S. Steel — a "policy which leaves the American people at the mercy of U. S. Steel Corp. so far as steel prices go.

"This may well not be monopoly as defined in our anti-trust laws, but it certainly produces the same offspring.

"We are convinced that the price system now used is not the product of competition, and that it does not produce prices which bear any necessary relation to costs. This is not a healthy situation for our economy."

IF THE VARIOUS steel companies wanted real competition, the union economist added, there have been many opportunities for them to start competing — but they haven't.

"If Youngstown Sheet & Tube, and other companies in this industry, were directly interested in price competition, here was a beautiful opportunity to take business away from 'competitors' by refusing to raise prices—or by raising them by a lower amount.

"As you know, however, those companies weren't interested.

"They literally fell all over themselves trying to get their prices increased to the identical prices quoted by U. S. Steel, without a moment's delay."

(As a matter of fact, some steel makers want even higher prices. Ben Morreel of Jones & Laughlin told reporters he'd like to to raise prices again as soon as "the competitive situation" permits it. Usually, competition means lower prices.)

THE CIO steelworkers have fought a "mainly defensive" battle against inflation since the war, Brubaker added.

"It has been an effort to keep industry from throwing us into a depression by siphoning off more profit than the system would bear. We want, and we must have, lower prices.

"We sincerely regret the action taken by this industry. It may well mean higher prices for many steel products and may endanger economic stability.

"We challenge the industry to lay the full facts on the table before you and the American people. We urge you to continue this investigation until you find an answer.

"But you, and we, must find an answer — or resign ourselves to 'boom and bust' and the eventual physical and moral bankruptcy of our system of free enterprise."

CIO Council Is Set Up For D.C.

John Brophy, CIO Councils Director, has announced that his office is setting up a separate District of Columbia Council. Previously the Maryland and D. C. Councils had been combined.

Brophy said the change was made because of the dissimilarity of political and legislative problems in the District and Maryland.

The new body will be known as the District of Columbia Industrial Union Council and will fight for the vote in D. C.

Board Meets Feb. 14-15

The CIO Executive Board, comprising 50 members, will meet in Washington on Feb. 14-15.

The Board meeting will be preceded by a session of the CIO vice-presidents on Feb. 13.

Newsprint Probe Soon

THE STEEL and newsprint industries will undergo the scrutiny of Rep. Emanuel Celler's monopoly investigating subcommittee later this month, and meanwhile Celler's group will consider three specific bills to strengthen federal anti-monopoly measures.

As a result of earlier hearings on the nature of concentration in U. S. industry, the subcommittee will meet and act on proposals:

To increase criminal penalties under the anti-trust laws from $5,000 to $50,000 and lengthen possible imprisonment penalties.

To require the Justice Dept. to report to Congress periodically on what is happening to consent decrees entered into to settle anti-trust cases, which Celler said may be "of highest importance to our economy."

And to put teeth into the Webb-Pomerene act so that it can't be used by combinations of exporters to make trade agreements effective here as well as abroad.

The monopoly subcommittee has asked the House for $75,000 to carry on its studies, and Celler expressed hope that it would get "some" of the money.

Celler, disclosing his plans Jan. 24, said that the newsprint situation is serious. ANG-CIO asked for the investigation.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Fair Employment Practices Commission S. 1728 HR 4453	Bars discrimination in industry based on race, creed or color; provides penalties for job bias.	Senate bill on calendar, may come up next month. House supporters seeking to get bill on floor for debate.	Write, wire Senators, Congressmen to support and seek earliest possible vote.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S. 2246 HR 6618	Provides for long-term, low-interest U. S. loans to co-ops for building moderate-cost housing projects, etc.	Senate Banking Committee has completed hearings; House hearings started Jan. 30.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to give bill full support.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors benefits, etc., under social security. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Senate Finance Comm. now holding hearings. CIO to ask further improvements in House bill.	Ask Senators to try to strengthen HR 6000 over present provisions.
Federal Aid To Education S. 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. Has been stuck in House Labor Comm. for months.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to ok Senate bill.
Labor Extension Service Bill S. 110 HR 1380	Provides workers' education program in cooperation with schools, unions, Labor Dept.	Approved by Senate Labor Comm. House Labor Comm. is still studying bill.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to seek early passage.
Mundt-Ferguson Bill S. 2311	Bill endangers civil liberties, union rights — under guise of fighting subversive activities.	CIO opposed bill at hearings last year. Senate Judiciary Comm. may bring out revised bill.	Ask Senators to oppose bill as dangerous to civil rights.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

Greetings To Histadrut

Fraternal greetings were sent last week by the CIO to Histadrut, the General Federation of Jewish Labor in Palestine, on the 29th anniversary of its organization.

"These 29 years have shown tremendous progress not only for labor in Israel but for your entire nation," said the message signed by Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO-Israel-American Committee and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. "Today, with more than a quarter-million members who with their families represent more than half the population of Israel, you represent a positive force for democracy not only in Israel but throughout the entire Middle East.

"The CIO, which has always looked with brotherly pride on your accomplishments, hopes that in your 30th year, Histadrut will continue its magnificent accomplishment on behalf of the economic and social welfare of your membership."

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00 A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., FEBRUARY 6, 1950 82 No. 6

PICKETLESS STRIKE: Two policemen maintain a lonely vigil outside a gate of the Chrysler plant in Detroit. CIO Auto Worker pickets were conspicuous by their absence as the union adopted a new walkout technique — "picketless striking." A few locals in other parts of the country maintained token pickets. Eighty-nine thousand UAW members walked out Jan. 27 when the company refused union pension demands. (For story and another picture please turn to page 3.)

Steelworkers Launch FEPC Drive

A NATION-WIDE campaign in behalf of fair employment practices in industry was launched in Pittsburgh Jan. 29 in the first of a series of meetings by the Civil Rights Committee of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO.

Highlighted by an address by CIO and USA Pres. Philip Murray, the meeting was attended by 490 delegates from local unions in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and eastern New York.

Petitions were circulated with the object of securing a half-million signatures demanding immediate enactment by Congress of a Fair Employment Practice Law. Similar petitions will be given delegates attending meetings in Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Birmingham.

"In this great era of progress in the arts and sciences, it doesn't make sense that we are pleading with Congress for fair play, for equality of treatment for all men," Murray said.

STEELWORKERS (above) at Pittsburgh launch a campaign to arouse sentiment for the FEPC Bill. (Right) some of the speakers at the meeting: l. to r., Rep. Eberharter, Judge Hower S. Brown, and Reps. Davenport and Buchanan. The three Congressmen are Pennsylvania Democrats.

"ONE OF THE great obstacles our country faces today is the solution of this problem. It has been partially solved in most of the organized industries through the labor movement and particularly by CIO. It is the duty and obligation of our organization, the United Steelworkers, and all other right-thinking people to promote a constructive campaign that has for its ultimate goal the elimination of all evils of discrimination.

"Out of this meeting we hope to generate a greater interest so that necessary Congressional action will be taken."

He cautioned the delegates that it is not sufficient to attend meetings and then go home and forget it.

"Sometimes we express sympathy to these Godly objectives but do little or nothing about them," Murray continued. "There are many enemies to be met. Witness the debacle in Congress where a diabolical attempt is made to prevent the subject even being discussed on the floor, by a coalition of evil forces.

"The proposed legislation hits at the evils of discrimination in industry, but there is even a larger issue and that is civil rights—the God-given right of every man to enjoy equality of treatment. The most crucial struggle ahead of us is this matter of a man not being afforded equality of treatment because his skin is dark.

"Every man, woman and child is a child of God and no matter what a man's creed he should join forces to eliminate these evils.

"We cannot let the 81st Congress adjourn without a declaration against discrimination. The people of the United States are all right but there is a great deal of ignorance about this question. This organization can do more to educate the people in the next few months than all the lobbying through the ages."

MURRAY SAID the Steelworkers might go on the radio Feb. 12 in connection with the campaign. He noted that day was Lincoln's birthday and remarked:

"Do you think that Abraham Lincoln, a Republican, would team up with the Dixiecrats if he were here today?"

He praised President Truman for his courageous fight and declared the President will keep up the battle "until the day when we no longer have this problem."

Other speakers at the one-day conference were Judge Homer S. Brown, Reps. H. J. Davenport, Frank Buchanan and Herman P. Eberharter. In the morning session James G. Thimmes, USA vice-president, and James J. Thomas, Homestead district director of the union, and Roy Wilkins, secretary of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, addressed the delegates.

Thomas Shane, union director in Detroit, is chairman of the Civil Rights Committee of the United Steelworkers.

Paul Styles Is Named To NLRB

PAUL STYLES of Atlanta, Ga., was named last week to serve a five-year term as a member of the five-man National Labor Relations Board.

A one-time AFL local official, Styles was appointed by Pres. Truman to succeed J. Copeland Gray, who had completed a two-year membership on the NLRB. Gray had been under heavy attack from unions for his consistently anti-labor decisions.

Styles had served as Atlanta regional director of the Board for the past four years. He first went to work with the agency in 1937, and served for two years with the War Labor Board.

The new appointee is 42 years old. He has had a variety of jobs as a printer, cotton mill worker, newspaperman and union official.

A MEMBER of the typographical union, he is a former president of the AFL Trades & Labor Council in Huntsville, Ala., his home town. He was also a co-chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Industrial Commission in that city.

At other times he worked in the cotton mills and as reporter-editor-and-typesetter of a weekly paper.

Washington observers believe that Styles' appointment may bring about a more liberal tone in NLRB decisions. Gray frequently voted with two other conservative members of the Board to produce a long string of 3-2 decisions against labor.

Steel Union, Aided By CIO News, Gets Action In Safety Campaign

By AL ZACK

MILITANT ACTION by the Steelworkers and exposure by the CIO News of shocking disregard for human life on the part of Wheeling Steel Co. officials led to almost instant action by the company.

The CIO News, on Jan. 2, 1950, detailed an almost incredible story of management's refusal to heed repeated warnings by Steelworkers Local 1190 at the Mingo Junction (Ohio) plant of the company.

As a result of the disregarded warnings, one man was killed and another seriously injured when 160 square feet of steel roofing, weighted down by 14 inches of flue dust, collapsed.

LOCAL UNION OFFICIALS, with the cooperation of Steelworker District Dir. Paul Rusen, demanded instant action and concrete assurance that such a disaster would never recur.

When top management met with union officials, Local 1190 officers pulled out a copy of the CIO News containing the Mingo Junction story.

As red-faced management representatives squirmed in their chairs, the union spokesmen read the CIO News story, word for word.

Hard on the heels of this meeting came top management action—too late to save the life of John Stoddard or the suffering of Ralph DeBacco.

Jess Sivard, safety director for the Mingo Junction and Steubenville plants of the company for the last 39 years, was fired.

John Tapman, general superintendent of the South Division—the plant where the disaster occured—also was fired. He had been superintendent for the last half dozen years.

The new safety director, promising a program of complete cooperation with the union's safety committee, instituted mass meetings where union officials spoke, bluntly detailing the safety needs demanded by the workers.

MEANWHILE the Ohio CIO Council, in a radio script used widely throughout the state, laid part of the blame for accidents of this nature on the shoulders of the State of Ohio.

Pointing out that adequate inspections by state factory and building inspectors could have averted the tragedy, the State CIO charged that there were only 30 men on the state's payroll to handle such inspections

Of these 30, three inspect nothing but scaffolding and two inspect nothing but pressure piping.

The other 25 are charged with inspecting all the factories in the state, as well as the public buildings, schools, hospitals, etc.

Dixie Demos 'Walkaround' FEPC Bill

FEBRUARY 1 was Calendar Wednesday in the House.

Calendar Wednesday is a day on which the chairman of any House committee can call for action on a bill approved by his group, providing it is on the House calendar, regardless of whether the powerful Rules Committee has acted on it.

It is likewise one of the avenues down which backers of legislation for a Fair Employment Practices Commission hope to drive their bill to a showdown vote. Last Wednesday, as on the previous Wednesday, they got caught in a traffic jam caused by Southern Congressmen bent on giving the FEPC the walkaround.

(The walkaround is a dignified slow motion version of the runaround. The Southern Congressmen who oppose FEPC leave their seats, walk slowly off the floor and stand in the door counting noses. When the noses are few enough, one of their number left behind demands a quorum call. That takes up half an hour. Enough quorum calls and the first thing you know Calendar Wednesday has become just a plain, old Thursday, with a different set of rules.)

The House committees are called alphabetically, so that each chairman can call for any bill on the calendar. There wasn't much possibility of getting down to the Labor Committee on Feb. 1, but Chairman Lesinski (D. Mich.)—whose committee has reported the FEPC bill to the Rules committee — wasn't taking any chances. He was there bright and early.

THE ANTI-FEPC block likewise wasn't taking any chances. It went into its pedestrian filibuster right off the bat. First Rep. Davis (D., of Ga.) took a look around and forced a roll call. The required 218 members eventually answered up, and half an hour was gone. Rep. Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) demanded action on Calendar Wednesday and insisted nothing else was in order. Rep. Williams (D., Miss.) thereupon hit the jackpot.

First he moved to disregard Calendar Wednesday. He lost by a voice vote. Then he called for a standing, or counted, vote. He lost again, 138 to 28, but the tally revealed lack of a quorum. A quorum became automatic under House rules. More than enough Congressmen showed up to answer, and Williams' motion lost again, 271 to 104. But a lot of time had lurched on.

The House got off to a fresh start. Chairman Spence (D., Ky.) of the Banking and Currency Committee, first on the list, called up a minor amendment to the housing laws. He asked for unanimous consent to dispense with reading it, a normal procedure usually adopted to save time. But not on Calendar Wednesday. Davis objected and it was read. Another 20 minutes gone.

Spence began to discuss the bill. The Southern members, one by one, in pairs and in groups, walked off the floor until Rep. Rivers (D., S. C.) was practically the only one left from below the Mason-Dixon Line. While they peeked in from the cloakrooms, Rivers—

You guessed right. He said there wasn't a quorum on the floor.

And so it went, right up until adjournment.

Only Ghosts of Past Picket in Chrysler Strike

OLD-TIME CIO Auto workers, veterans of rough and tumble organizing drives in the auto industry, must rub their eyes and take a second look when they wander around strike-bound Chrysler plants these days.

The plants are still there, the fences remain, clerical help comes and goes, but one factor always associated with strikes is missing. There are no pickets!

Instead of picketing, UAW members are spending their time helping their wives with house cleaning, doing needed repair jobs around the house, and in general following a course of watchful waiting.

So far there has been no break in the strike picture. Federal Conciliators are in Detroit but there has been no demand for their services.

LOCAL 844 in San Leandro, Calif., reports that on the first day of the strike there was "one character who had an idea that he was going to work. He changed his mind when a company foreman ordered him to scram!"

One day before the strike was called UAW officials offered the company a final four-point proposal.

1 That the Chrysler Corp. agree to the 1949 pattern of 10 cents an hour established in the auto industry at the Ford Motor Co. and recommended to the President's Steel Fact-Finding Board.

2 That this 10 cents an hour be paid in one of the following ways:

A. Six cents an hour for a pension program and 4 cents for a hospital-medical program; or

B. Some other combination upon which the corporation and the union could agree that would provide an adequate pension program and an acceptable hospital-medical program for Chrysler workers and their families; or

C. A flat 10-cent an hour increase.

3 That upon the corporation's acceptance of this proposal, the strike would be called off and negotiations would continue on the technical details of the pension and hospital-medical program for which the 10 cents an hour would be allocated.

4 That if the corporation and the union were unable to agree within 30 days on the technical details of the allocation of the 10 cents any unresolved questions would be submitted to arbitration for a final decision which would be binding on the parties.

$1 Assessment Voted For Strike

The CIO Auto Workers' Executive Board has voted to levy an emergency strike assessment of $1 a week for up to 12 weeks on all employed members of the union.

The assessment will become effective if the strike in progress at the Chrysler Corp. plants continues for more than two weeks.

The strike support vote by the board was made possible by action of the UAW-CIO convention last July. At that time, the convention by a near-unanimous vote gave authority to the International Board to levy such assessments when 50,000 or more workers are on strike or are affected by a strike.

CHESTER KWIATKOWSKI, striking UAW Chrysler worker, helps his two sons with a toy construction job on his living room floor. Kwiatkowski spends his time helping his wife around their Detroit home. UAW members reporting for picket duty on the second day of the strike were sent home by strike committeemen. Strike began Jan. 27, involves 24 plants.

CWA Is All Set To Strike Bell Phone System This Week

THE CIO Communications Workers were scheduled to strike the giant Bell Telephone System on a nation-wide front Wednesday, Feb. 8, barring a last-minute agreement by the company to arbitrate the issues involved.

CWA Pres. Joseph A. Beirne said the first strike call would affect about 100,000 workers in eight union divisions. He added that 220,000 other CWA members who would not be called upon to walk out until March 1 would likely refuse to go through the picket lines set up by the strikers.

Declaring that the union had offered to arbitrate all its demands but that the Bell System companies had refused, Beirne said the walkout would take place "unless some change comes into the situation" before the hour set for the walkout.

BEIRNE accused the Bell Telephone monopoly of "exploiting half a million workers by causing a decline in real wages for telephone workers, resulting in a falling standard of living for these workers and their families."

He called wage negotiations with the telephone industry "a sham."

"We've been bargaining with the telephone monopoly for several months; in one instance, as far back as last May," Beirne said. "Absolutely no progress has been made. Despite the deplorable wages and working conditions in the industry, not one company has made a single proposal which would up wages one penny. On the contrary, they have made proposals which would decimate the contracts."

BEIRNE SAID the union has proposed arbitration with individual companies or for all groups involved. "In every instance," he declared, "we have received a flat 'no' from the company."

He cited the case of Southwestern Div. 20 when the governors of six states proposed arbitration as a solution. "The union promptly accepted the offer but the company rejected it."

"What is to be done with a company which adopts such an arbitrary attitude," Beirne asked, "trying to break or weaken the union, refusing to bargain across the table and refusing to let impartial arbitrators decide the issues? What else can CWA do except strike the industry?"

Beirne stated that the union was in a much better position to win a strike than it was in 1947 when telephone workers failed to achieve their objectives in a six-week strike which upset communications on a national scale.

The telephone workers are asking for an unspecified increase in the basic wage rates, a reduction of the work week from 40 to 35 hours, shorter apprenticeship periods, narrowing of geographical wage differentials, improved pensions, better vacations and a stipulation that workers be paid for time lost while they vote in elections.

The union has appealed to other CIO unions and the general public to help it "jam" the switchboards and the dial systems by making repeated calls in the event the strike is called.

Ohio Goes CWA

The CIO Communications Workers added another sizeable group of telephone workers to its ranks when the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers voted for CWA in an NLRB election. The final tally showed: CWA-CIO, 7535; IBEW-AFL, 4064; no union, 1128.

CWA has been assured the support of the CIO by Pres. Philip Murray. In a nation-wide radio address last week Murray said the Communications Workers "have deep grievances—grievances which they have sought for years to remedy. The time is fast approaching when these grievances of the people who staff your telephone system must be settled. If a strike must occur, it will be the last resort of a patient and responsible CIO union."

The CIO president said the public may hold the mistaken idea that the Bell System is an "ideal place to work. It has that false impression because the Bell System has spent millions of dollars to give just that idea."

But "behind that bright front window which the Bell company displays to the public" lie the facts that the great majority of Bell employes are "disgracefully underpaid"; that they have "little real security"; that thousands of them face technological unemployment in the next few years; and that older employes can look forward only to "meager pensions in their old age."

"Telephone workers are underpaid and they are getting more underpaid every year," Murray asserted. "There is no economic basis for this cold-blooded wage policy adopted by the big telephone monopoly. But the telephone workers see no reason why they should be the sacrificial goat in the Bell System's drive for exorbitant profits."

CWA bases its wage demands on the fact that wage levels in the telephone industry—both in relation to prices and in relation to wages of other workers—have grown progressively worse for the past ten years. Phone workers today are almost at the bottom of the industrial wage scale, the union says.

IN 1939 only petroleum refining, electric light and power, construction, coal mining, steel, autos and printing trades received higher average weekly earnings than telephone workers. All these industries have maintained generally their top position in weekly earnings while telephone wages have dropped far behind.

In 1939, for example, auto workers earned 10c an hour more than telephone workers. Today they earn 37c an hour more. In 1939 construction workers made 11c an hour more on the average than telephone workers. Today they earn 59c an hour more. Rubber workers in 1939 earned 7c an hour less than telephone workers. Today they earn 17c an hour more.

Workers in electrical manufacturing in 1939 earned 10c an hour less than telephone workers. Today they earn 14c more. Steelworkers in 1939 earned 2c an hour more than telephone workers. Today they earn 30c an hour more.

Commenting on the wage situation in the telephone industry, Beirne said:

"President Truman's Steel Fact-Finding Committee found that telephone workers received the lowest wage increase treatment of all workers between 1939 and 1949. The National Association of Manufacturers has even commented on the decline in telephone worker wage levels."

History, $9 AT&T Dividend March On!

1923—French and Belgian troops began occupation of the Ruhr . . . 76 burned to death in Camden, S. C., school fire. . . . Hitler wounded in Bavarian revolution. . . . Yankees beat Giants in World Series. . . .

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared $9 dividend.

And AT&T did the same thing in 1924, 1925, 1926 and 1927.

1928—Trotsky and four others exiled from Russia. . . . Los Angeles dam collapsed, 450 lives lost. . . . First all-talking picture shown in New York City. . . . New smaller sized paper money first printed. . . . Raleigh Count won Kentucky Derby. . . . Arnold Rothstein shot to death in N. Y. . . .

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared $9 dividend.

And AT&T did the same thing in 1928, 1929, 1930 and 1931.

1932—168,000 telephone workers were laid off by Bell Telephone. . . . Lindbergh baby kidnapped, later found dead. . . . Bruno Hauptmann arrested, tried, convicted, electrocuted for crime. . . . Swedish "Match King" Kreuger committed suicide in Paris. . . . Sino-Japanese war began, Japanese marines land in China. . . .

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared $9 dividend.

And AT&T did the same thing in 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1936.

1937—Italy withdrew from League of Nations. . . . Gas explosion in Texas school killed 294. . . . Dirigible Hindenburg exploded and burned at Lakehurst. . . . Paris Exposition opened. . . .

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared $9 dividend.

And AT&T did the same thing in 1938, 1939, 1940 and 1941.

1942—Coral Sea naval battle fought. . . . U. S. Air Force made first attack on Italy. . . . 491 kiled in Cocoanut Grove night club fire in Boston. . . . WPA liquidated by Roosevelt.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared $9 dividend.

And AT&T did the same thing in 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946.

1947—300,000 Bell Telephone workers walked off the job on strike. . . . Selective Service Act expired. . . . Atomic Energy Commission formed. . . . Al Capone died. . . . So did Mississippi's Senator Bilbo. . . .

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared $9 dividend.

And AT&T did the same thing in 1948, 1949 and 1950—and will keep on doing the same thing as long as possible.

Rate Rise Asked!

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia has been trying to get the State Corporation Commission to allow it to increase its rates.

During a recent hearing, the telephone company's attorney pointed out that the cost of everything else has gone up since the war and he said telephone rates can be expected to follow suit.

(Should someone have asked him about telephone workers' wages?)

Hate Peddlers Are Busy Again

Exploit Race and Religious Prejudice, Fight Unions and Get Finances From Business and Suckers

By ALLAN L. SWIM

SOME OF the characters who go around beating their chests and shouting "down with the Communists" are as bad as the Commies themselves.

They—the extremists of the right—peddle a brand of totalitarianism no less vicious than the type which prevails in Russia.

They do their darndest to undermine the theory that all U. S. citizens should enjoy equal rights and equal opportunities regardless of race, color or creed.

Some of their "front" organizations are as crumby as anything in that line ever dreamed up by the Reds.

The more rabid of these characters would send all Negroes to Africa, all Jews to Israel, all Catholics to Italy or all Orientals to the Far East.

And in one manner or another they'd get rid of or subjugate other racial and religious groups of which they disapprove.

IT CAN BE argued successfully, of course, that the U. S. has no close-knit, over-all fascist organization.

Because this is so, some persons contend that we can afford to ignore the fascist-minded groups and concentrate all our efforts on the Communists.

This is poor reasoning.

We can't afford to ignore any organization which seeks to undermine democracy, regardless of its size or power.

It would be a mistake to assume that groups which are weak today will not become strong in the future.

And it would be folly to go on the assumption that the poisonous seeds these outfits are sowing today won't produce some bitter fruit tomorrow.

MOST PERSONS are familiar with the Ku Klux Klan and recall that the Columbians "made" the headline not so long ago.

But there are few who know that literally millions of "hate" leaflets and pamphlets are printed and distributed each year by organizations which seldom get into the news spotlight.

One of the leading hate peddlers is Joseph Kamp, leader of the Constitutional Educational League. Another is Gerald L. K. Smith, who is much better known than Kamp.

In nearly every section of the country there are one or more "crackpot" outfits which exist solely to exploit race and religious prejudice.

And almost without exception these groups seek to undermine the trade union movement.

OVER A PERIOD of years I investigated and wrote newspaper stories about the hate mongers.

Among the organizations into which I poked my nose were the Klan, Christian American, Fight for Free Enterprise, Commander Party, Independent Order of Minute Men and the Gerald Smith outfit.

During the latter years of the war most of these organizations put on a patriotic front, and continued to be low immediately after the end of the conflict.

Then they began stirring again—and in recent months new outfits of the same type have been popping up here and there.

Almost all of them sing the same theme song—"Americanism." And to put their brand of "Americanism" into operation they would destroy some of our racial or religious groups and do away with the unions.

THE HATE peddlers, for the most part, are smooth operators who obtain their funds from two groups—corporations which fight unions and "suckers" who fall for their drivel about Americanism.

Among the leading "peddlers" are a couple of men who once faced sedition charges, a man who formerly worked as a race track tout and some crackpots who have lived comfortably for years by selling the idea that the U. S. is likely to fall victim at any minute to the "great Jewish conspiracy" or the "great Catholic plot."

Unions should investigate and expose these groups whenever possible—not only for the benefit of their own members but for the public at large.

And Congress could perform a valuable service if it would have a committee or two look into this situation.

An Adamant 'No'

It's getting monotonous!

It wasn't so long ago that the giants of the steel industry were saying "no, no, no, no" to the CIO Steelworkers. A strike followed.

Then the biggest of all business operations—AT&T—took up the same refrain with the CIO Communications Workers.

It said "no" to the union's bargaining demands and then "no" to its request for arbitration.

Finally CWA announced it intended to go on strike Feb. 8 unless AT&T changed its position.

At this point AT&T feigned shocked and horrified surprise that the union was fed up with its behavior and intended to hit the bricks.

If AT&T had taken an honest look at its own books and at a few other statistics it would have known that it had pushed 'phone workers to the limit of their patience.

Back in 1939 'phone workers were reasonably well paid. They aren't any more.

Eleven years ago auto workers earned 10c an hour more, on an average, than 'phone workers. Today they earn 37c an hour more. In 1939 rubber workers earned 7c less. Now they earn 17c more. Steel wages have increased 28c an hour more than 'phone workers' have in 11 years.

That's only part of the story. Technical developments have been making heavy inroads on 'phone workers' jobs.

And the Bell System sought to withdraw recognition from the union because it voted to affiliate with the CIO.

Nobody wants a telephone strike. But AT&T's position has been such that workers in the industry considered a strike offered the only method of adjusting its grievances.

And the CIO has pledged its full support to CWA.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer
Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher
Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII February 6, 1950 No. 6

Anti-Unionism Equals 'Frustration'

By BOB SENSER
For Labor Press Association

THE ANTI-UNION guy with a chip on his shoulder is that way because he's frustrated. Usually he's a boss coming up against a union for the first time.

He's bad enough, but a more dangerous type of anti-unionist is the "neutral" who has no connection with management, and is thus "impartial." He's frustrated, too, and has to do something about it, so he lets it out on the unions.

That's what many psychologists believe, and one of them explained it all to 72 labor editors and union education directors who attended a public relations conference at Chicago sponsored by the Univ. of Illinois. He is Ross Stagner, professor of psychology in Labor and Industrial Relations at Illinois U.

"The person who is aggressively opposed to unions is someone who is frustrated, someone who is angry and who builds up a lot of tension inside him," said Stagner. "There's the businessman who wants to boss his establishment and wants to run everything his own way.

"A union comes along and says he can't do everything the way he wants to, that he has to follow certain rules on wages, hours and working conditions. For some employers this means an extreme case of frustration.

"Another specimen of the frustrated anti-unionist is the one who has no outward connection with management and thus is often regarded as 'neutral and impartial.' This type, too, has a certain amount of aggressiveness built up in him which he needs to let out. The fighting spirit may come from any of a number of reasons. Maybe his wife henpecks him and he can't talk back to her.

"Anyway, because of some experience of his, he builds up steam, and is looking for some outlet for it. He hears somebody talking about 'nasty, feather-bedding unionists.' So he relaxes his frustrations by hating unions. In many cases this belligerent anti-unionism is caused by such inner tensions which the person himself doesn't understand."

For most anti-union people, Stagner pointed out, it is not a case of being aggressively, but rather one of being coolly "against." He said that this latter fault was caused by "stereotyped" mental pictures of unions and union leaders.

"I know," he added, "because I come from Texas, and it was a long time before I stopped picturing union organizers as persons with horns and tails."

Stagner urged that unions pay particular attention to schools, "because that's where the first impressions, the first pictures are built up in the minds of people."

Stagner's remarks came as a part of an all-day conference to discuss union public relations—or, in Stagner's terms, ways of building better "pictures" of unions in the minds of the general public.

Maybe AMA Journal Doesn't Tell It All

Not more than 10% of U. S. doctors know what President Truman proposes in his national health program and less than that know what's in the British program, Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing told the National Press Club in Washington.

Ewing just returned from a six-weeks study of health and education in Europe. The national health programs of Great Britain and Sweden, he explained, "are part of a plan in both countries to nationalize everything that they can nationalize." The only object in the President's plan, he said, is to improve the national health.

He also predicted that the U. S. will be forced soon to follow Great Britain's example and provide aid to higher education before "some universities" become bankrupt.

"So, remember, a vote for me helps you . . . and if anybody knows of an empty apartment, please let me know."

Boss Made Mistake When He Fired Sally Ann

VETERAN organizers know that it frequently takes months—and sometimes years—to establish unions in anti-union towns.

When they get together to swap stories about their experiences they usually talk about the tough ones.

"I practically became an old settler before I wound that one up" is a phrase they frequently use.

But occasionally somebody spins a yarn like the story of Sally Ann, the factory worker who got fired.

SALLY ANN (which isn't her real name) and her co-workers suddenly found they couldn't meet a production schedule which provided them with 40c an hour.

The material on which they were working was extremely difficult to handle—and the girls soon became desperate under the prodding and criticism of their foreladies.

Sally Ann began circulating a petition—one of those "Please, Mr. Boss" things which humbly requested an increase in piece rates.

A short time later Sally Ann was called into the office. "Go home and we'll call you back when we need you," she was told.

That was the company's usual firing procedure and Sally Ann knew it. She went home.

A SECOND PETITION, about which the company had no knowledge, made the rounds during the afternoon and by quitting time every employe of the department had signed it.

The next morning it was sent to the office—and early in the afternoon every worker in the department was fired!

Soon Sally Ann's home was filled with excited workers. They talked for hours about what they should do.

Somebody said there was an organization called the CIO which helped out workers who were in trouble. It was a union "or something," the worker said.

Sally Ann and a friend were asked to go to the "big city" some 60 miles away and learn what they could about the CIO. They went by bus the next day.

NEITHER SALLY ANN nor her friend had the slightest idea where to locate representatives, so they asked a policeman.

He directed them to a tall building in the center of town and they headed in that direction.

The building directory contained several hundred names—mostly of lawyers, realtors, finance companies and manufacturers' representatives.

The first union they found listed was the Furniture Workers. They decided that wasn't the proper one. They reached the same decision regarding the Steelworkers.

Then came Textile Workers Union of America. This, they figured, might be the right union, inasmuch as they were shirtmakers.

They visited the TWUA office, told their story and were soon on the telephone talking with the union's regional director.

ON THE FOLLOWING evening several organizers arrived in Sally Ann's town and within two days 90% of the workers in her department and another unit of the plant had signed union membership cards.

At about the same time the company's president flew in from a distant city, told local management it had made a bad error, asked all discharged employes to return to work and increased wages 5c an hour.

If the mere threat of a union could do this, the workers told themselves, a union might work wonders.

The company turned down a request for union recognition. The case went before the NLRB. The townspeople really turned on the anti-union pressure.

But the union won a smashing victory when the votes were cast—largely because of Sally Ann.

A. L. S.

A BAD CONNECTION!

Reds Plot To Block Arms Aid, Through Bridges Group

By ELMER COPE
CIO European Representative

HAVING FAILED in their efforts to wreck the European Recovery Program, supporters and stooges of the Cominform in some European trade unions have just launched an intensive campaign to sabotage implementation of the Atlantic Pact and the Military Aid Program.

Basic objective of the campaign is to persuade European longshoremen not to unload arms shipments made under MAP agreements. In some areas, the campaign is being accompanied by calling strikes in domestic industries. In French ports, the object is also to prevent loading and sailing of vessels carrying arms and troops to Indo-China.

The great danger of the campaign lies in its threat to the whole free trade union movement and to the realization of the legitimate demands of the workers, particularly in crucial countries like France and Italy. For, as governmental authorities and the public react to Communist threats, the inevitable effect will be to distract attention away from pressing social and economic problems.

Even worse, repressive measures aimed at Communist sabotage might very well catch in their net the free trade unions pursuing their legitimate activities in defense of the workers' interests.

As in the Communist-inspired strikes of 1947 and 1948, designed to serve the ends of Soviet foreign policy, current Communist political objectives are being cleverly linked to fully justified workers' grievances and trade union demands. The general failure of governmental authorities in France and Italy to recognize the validity of these demands has thus played into the hands of the Communists.

THE CURRENT campaign has apparently been extended to all key ports of Western Europe. So far, the greatest successes have been achieved in Italy. In France, the Communist impact appears to be strongest in the ports of Le Havre, Bordeaux and St. Nazaire——less in Marseilles where the Communist CGT, though in the majority, is confronted by an active, militant Force Ouvriere local.

In Cherbourg, longshoremen members of CGT have voted overwhelmingly in secret ballot to reject the party line, and the secretary of the CGT local has resigned in protest against CGT policy. Top figures of both the CGT and the Communist Party have been sent to all key ports to direct operations.

With the President of the French Republic, Vincent Auriol, intervening personnally in the situation—an unusual step under French constitutional procedure—the French Cabinet has determined to take strong measures against what it describes as "sabotage" and "attacks on the national sovereignty." Communist reaction to threatened governmental action has been defiant.

Although the actual call to action was only issued in November at the WFTU—i.e., Cominform—Asiatic Conference in Peiping, China, the first step in the present campaign was the formation last July of the WFTU-directed International Union of Seamen and Dockers.

THE INTL. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union was represented at the founding congress in Marseilles. Although ILWU Pres. Harry Bridges was refused permission to leave the U.S. to attend the congress, he was elected president of the organization.

Real head of the present campaign, however, is probably Bill Gebert, a Polish citizen who is the assistant general-secretary of the WFTU in charge of Trade Departments. After the first World War, Gebert spent over 20 years in the U.S., where he was a member of the Central Committee of the U.S. Communist Party and for a time directed Communist work among Slavic-Americans in U.S. industrial areas.

There is no doubt but that this intensified Communist action in European ports, along with WFTU-Cominform activities in Asia, constitute the most serious immediate problems confronting the newly formed International Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

Action Is Asked On D. C. Home Rule

The CIO last week appealed for House action on a bill to give home rule to the District of Columbia.

Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director, asked all members of the House to sign Discharge Petition 19 which would permit a Senate-passed bill to by-pass pigeonholing in the House District Committee.

The bill—S. 1527—passed the Senate last year by a heavy majority, but has been kept under wraps in the House committee ever since that time.

"There is no valid reason why residents of the District should be relegated to the status of second class citizens," Cowan wrote. ". . . We believe the present system is fair neither to the nation nor to the District itself."

Steel Welfare Benefits Negotiated

MAJOR welfare benefits—a direct product of last fall's victorious steel strike—have been worked out for nearly 250,000 steel workers.

Other workers will win similar coverage and protection as detailed agreements are completed between the CIO Steelworkers and the rest of the steel industry.

The benefits, to be financed by basic 2½-cent an hour contributions from both employers and workers, take the form of tremendous improvements for every steel working family.

Philip Murray, USA-CIO president, hailed the agreements already worked out at Bethlehem smaller companies, in these words:

"The over-all protection for the worker and his family in life insurance, hospitalization and sickness benefits is a history-making advance in labor-management relations in American industry."

DETAILS OF the five agreements already worked out were contained in the February issue of Steel Labor, the USA-CIO's official paper. It described the computation of benefit plans as an "enormous mathematical task" which had consumed "countless hours of negotiations" by representatives of the union, the companies and their staffs of insurance experts.

Here is a picture of what workers at Bethlehem and U. S. Steel will get (the benefits vary slightly between the two companies because of adjustments for plans already in effect, special conditions, financial problems, etc.):

1. LIFE INSURANCE. The worker is protected with life insurance while he is on the job—and after he retires. Face value of the worker's on-the-job policy will range from $2000 to $4000, depending on his wage rates. After he retires, he will have a policy worth $1250.

2. ACCIDENTS AND SICKNESS. Each worker is guaranteed $26 a week for 26 weeks in cases of accidents or sickness not covered by workmen's compensation laws.

3. HOSPITAL SERVICE. Hospital service will be provided up to 70 days for each period of hospital confinement. This coverage goes not only to the worker but to his wife and dependents, and unmarried children until they are 19 years old.

The hosiptal service gives to each person covered the benefits of bed, board and general nursing service; use of operating and delivery rooms; anesthesia and dressings; drugs, laboratory exams and special tests.

4. MATERNITY SERVICE. Women steelworkers and wives of steel workers get 10 days of hospital care for themselves and their infants.

5. EMERGENCY SERVICE Emergency out-patient service is provided in case of accidental injury. The worker is protected if he requires emergency hospital treatment, and also if he requires medical care at home.

(The hospitalization service at both U. S. Steel and Bethlehem are being handled through national agreements with the Blue Cross agency.)

STEEL LABOR reported that "because of the extra benefits which accrue to those with dependents and because of the graduated life insurance policy, a scale of contributions has been worked out. These begin at a basic $2.90 a month for those with no dependents and a basic $4.15 a month for those with dependents.

"The scale increases 30 cents a month to a maximum $4.40 for those with no dependents and there is a similar 30-cent increase in employe contributions up to $5.65 for those employes of Bethlehem with dependents."

Complete arrangements have been worked out with Allegheny-Ludlum, Great Lakes Steel and Superior Steel, the union paper reported.

Detailed agreements with the rest of the industry are expected to be speeded up because of the spade work completed with the two biggest companies, U. S. Steel and Bethlehem. Contributions to the insurance fund have been made since the first of the year.

Murray Latimer, who heads the union's special staff of insurance experts, estimates that $800,000 has already been paid into the fund under this arrangement.

The Great Lakes and Superior plans went into effect Jan. 1 Bethlehem's took effect Feb. 1; Allegheny-Ludlum's starts Feb. 15, and both the union and U. S. Steel are aiming for a March 1 inauguration date at U. S. Steel.

NLRB Orders GM Electrical Division Election

THE CIO's new International Union of Electrical, Radio and Mechanical Workers, CIO, last week scored on two major fronts.

The fronts:

1. The Natl. Labor Relations Board ordered an election among employes of General Motors' electrical division.

2. U. S. District Judge Irving Kaufman granted a temporary restraining order which bars General Electric from handing any checkoff money over to the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, expelled from CIO for Communist leadership. Argument for a permanent injunction will be heard this week.

In other fields, IUE-CIO was driving ahead. It was getting full cooperation from CIO in organizing drives in the big GM, General Electric and Westinghouse chains and also in the independents.

MORE THAN 27,000 employes of GM's five electrical divisions will be given an opportunity this month to repudiate the Communist-controlled UE. The NLRB election petitions were filed by the IUE, while the UE, as the NLRB noted, "urged dismissal of the CIO petitions."

UE's argument that "the current contract of the employer barred further proceedings" was denied by the government agency which ruled unanimously that "the contract does not bar a present determination of representatives."

Specific time of the five different elections will be fixed by John A. Penello, NLRB regional director in Baltimore. The divisions will be: Frigidaire Dayton, Ohio; Delco Appliance, Rochester, N. Y.; Delco Products, Dayton, Ohio; Delco-Remy, New Brunswick, N. J.; Packard Electric, Warren, Ohio.

The Board said it had studied "1—the actions at the November, 1949, convention of the CIO in Cleveland, in which the UE delegates walked out and the CIO voted to expel the UE; 2—the special local membership meetings which voted to disaffiliate from the UE and to affiliate with IUE; and 3—the chartering of locals by the IUE."

The NLRB announced that in each of the company's five divisions the IUE locals will have their designated local numbers on the ballot.

"The UE had contended," the Board remarked, "that the use of the local numbers violated the UE's property rights.' On this point the Board opinion stated: "We do not purport to pass upon the property rights of the parties in any respect. We find merely that the IUE-CIO's name in conjunction with the names of its locals will not confuse the voters in the elections."

The overwhelming preference for IUE was officially noted in the Board's decision when it related:

"The vote at Delco Appliance Division and Delco-Remy Division was unanimous. At Delco Products Division the vote was 999 to 1 against the UE and in favor of the IUE-CIO. The meeting at Packard Electric Division was held in two sections. In one section, where the attendance was between 800 and 1000, the vote was unanimous. In the second section the vote was 58 to 3 against the UE and in favor of the IUE-CIO. At the Frigidaire Division. of approximately 2000 members present, three or four voted in favor of UE and the remainder in favor of the IUE-CIO."

In Cornwall, Ont.

Commie Attempt To Raid TWUA Is Talk Of Town

By GERVASE N. LOVE

CORNWALL, Ont., is an enterprising and attractive city of more than 15,000 population on the north bank of the mighty St. Lawrence River. It lies 70 miles southwest of Montreal and just across an international bridge from the United States.

Through it runs the Cornwall Canal, also known as the Soulanges Canal nearer Montreal. Surplus water from it has proved a bonanza for industrial development, and the city has become a large-scale textile producer.

The largest plants are Courtaulds, on the bank of the canal at the eastern edge of the city, and Canadian Cottons. In them are employed some 4000 workers whose militancy is a byword in the Canadian labor movement. Back in 1946 they took a vote among themselves and overwhelmingly rejected the AFL United Textile Workers in favor of the CIO Textile Workers Union of America.

THE WORKERS have been paid off for that vote in cold cash, improved working conditions and other benefits, but the UTW and the Communists who dominate it north of the border have kept on trying. They haven't got very far, but 4000 militant union members in one small city would add considerably to the waning prestige of the Canadian Communists.

So they have kept at it, crawling farther and farther out on a limb until it broke, and they landed right where the Cornwall Textile Joint Board and the three locals could (and did) take a smashing wallop at them.

The limb cracked when R Kent Rowley, UTW international vice president and Canadian director, who was interned early in the war by the Canadian Government and kept out of circulation until Soviet Russia joined the conflict, issued a challenge.

"Textile workers everywhere," he bleated, "should study the record carefully."

The Joint Board and the three locals did just that.

The result was an open letter that showed the TWUA record in Cornwall to be one of supreme accomplishment for its members when stacked up against the sorry local history the UTW and the Commies who dominate it have written in the last three years.

For instance:

Since 1946 Courtauld employes, represented by TWUA, have received wage increases averaging 50½c an hour.

Since 1946 Canadian Cottons employes, represented by TWUA, have received 36½ cents in direct wage increases and another 10c where there has been reorganization.

Since 1946 employes of Dominion Textiles, kingpin of the Canadian cotton industry, represented by UTM, have received but 20c an hour.

Conroy Approves

"The TWUA-CIO has done one of the best trade union jobs in Canada and has done a most effective job for the textile workers of Cornwall," said Secy.-Treas. Pat Conroy of the Canadian Congress of Labour in a note accompanying the open letter of the Cornwall, Ont., Joint Board and three locals of the CIO Textile Workers.

"The Communists' attempts to raid the established and effective locals of Cornwall is of major importance to all Canadian workers," Conroy continued.

THAT ISN'T all. Here is what the open letter has to say:

"Since 1946 the workers of Courtaulds have received increases averaging 50½c per hour; reduction of the work week by six hours; liberal life, sick and accident, hospital, medical and surgical insurance paid entirely by the company, together with greatly improved vacation pay.

"In Canadian Cottons the workers have received 36½c per hour in direct wage increases plus another 10c an hour where reorganization has been applied; plus two weeks' vacation with pay for all with one or more years' service, with two weeks' vacation with pay based on 4% of earnings for those with less than one year; life, sick and accident, hospital and surgical insurance for all employes and hospital insurance for dependents of employes paid by the company, and a pension plan without equal in Canada, paying up to $100 per month."

The letter was signed by Archie LeBrun, Joint Board president; Thomas Duffy, president of Local 779; Andre Derouin, president of Local 805, and Thomas Webster, president of Local 806.

Rowley took it very hard that there was no strike to enforce demands at Canadian Cottons last year. The four TWUA leaders rather unkindly pointed out to him that "after a lot of fanfare, strike votes and bombastic newspaper statements, you set the wage pattern in cotton for all of Canada when you capitulated to Dominion Textiles, the largest cotton producers in Canada, and signed an agreement providing for no wage increases and no bonus, no 45-hour week, no union or closed shop—this despite the fact that Dominion Textiles earned in 1948 the highest figure in their history ($5,382,475), which was 90% greater than their profits of 1947, and despite the fact that negotiations were concluded before devaluation (of the Canadian dollar in relation to the U. S. dollar), and before negotiations were started in Canadian Cottons.

"The demogoguery of yourself and your associates is best displayed by the demands on Dominion Textiles of 13c an hour (reduction of hours with no reduction of take-home pay) 45-hour work week, the closed shop, etc., etc., etc., and then all you could report as a result of negotiations was a minimum insurance plan the like of which was negotiated with Canadian Cottons several years ago and since substantially improved, and an improved vacation plan that affects only a handful of the workers involved!"

The letter went on in the same vein for six legal-size pages, all comparing what the TWUA and the UTW have done for the Canadian textile worker. The record shows conclusively that in addition to all other contract improvements, workers under TWUA agreements enjoys a far higher degree of job security than those under UTW agreements.

The Commies' attempt to take over TWUA members under UTW has caused more excitement among Cornwall textile workers than anything since the town became a city in 1944 (it was founded as New Johnstown in 1784 by United Empire Loyalists who fled from the then brand new United States.) The workers in Howard Smith's pulp mill, along the canal an the opposite side of the city from Courtaulds, in the nearby sawmills, on the railroads and along the riverfront are watching it with interest.

Labor To Dixie Demos: 'We're For Fair Deal'

CIO, AFL Support HST's Program

AMERICAN unions are solidly behind the Fair Deal, three leaders of labor's political arms told 200 Democrats from 14 southern states who met at Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 27 to renew their party faith at a regional conference.

"We are for the Fair Deal program and for the spirit of progressive and liberal government that it expresses," said CIO-PAC Dir. Jack Kroll.

Kroll was joined in his indorsement of the Truman program by Joseph Keenan, director of AFL Labor's League for Political Education, and C. T. Anderson, secretary of Railway Labor Political League.

KROLL put particular emphasis on the necessity of enactment of the Brannan farm plan.

"The South's rapid economic progress should be a matter of pride to the entire nation," he said. "We feel this progress has been largely brought about by the minimum wage law and by the organization of Southern workers. The adoption of these factors have given Southern workers increased purchasing power, made them better customers and better producers,"

He said the CIO is much concerned with the decline in farm prices during the past year. "We are actively aware that in the past, depressions have started on the farms of the nation," he declared. "For this reason, the CIO, at its last convention wholly endorsed the conception of the Brannan plan."

JACK KROLL

JOSEPH KEENAN

Both Kroll, who is CIO-PAC Director, and Keenan, who heads the AFL's League for Political Education, told the Democrats' Southern Regional Conference that President Truman's program has organized labors' unqualified support, spoke out against sectionalism.

A pledge of 100% support for the Truman program also came from Keenan. Warning against sectionalism, he said "We must live as a nation. That's labor's principle. That's what we've fought for."

Said C. T. Anderson, secretary of the Railway Labor Political League: "You may not like everything the Democratic party stands for, but you at least know what it stands for and what the price is. The Republican party since 1932 hasn't yet told the people what it stands for. In my experience, they've been for nothing since the Panama Canal. The people know what you stand for and what you are proposing."

No hint of civil rights discord arose during the all-day conference, which was closely shepherded by North Carolina's Democratic National Committeeman, Jonathan Daniels, who had charge of arrangements.

VICE PRES. Alben Barkley was the featured speaker at the North Carolina Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner, which came at the close of the regional conference. The dinner, most successful in the State's history, raised more than $32,000 for the party's war chest, Barkley said.

"I express the hope that the organization of Democratic forces in the nation will not fall apart merely because a victory has been won in a single election. The battle for democracy is like the battle for liberty in that it requires eternal vigilance.

"The Democratic party, through its long and glorious history, has achieved enough for the welfare of the American people to justify continuous and coordinated labor on behalf of all Democrats, in and out of office, to keep the light forever burning which points the way to progress and to solid achievement in behalf of America and everything for which she stands."

Barkley pictured the Republican party as "on its death bed." "It looks to me," he said, "like the Republican party may be on the way out from now on."

OTHER SPEAKERS at the conference included Treasury Secy. John Snyder, Agriculture Secy. Charles F. Brannan, National Democratic Chairman William Boyle, Army Secy. Gordon Gray, Undersecretary of State James Webb, Budget Director Frank Pace, and Leon Keyserling, acting chairman of President Truman's Council of Economic Advisors, Mrs. Charles W. Tillett, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. Dorothy Vredenburgh, secretary of the Democratic National Committee.

Govs. Kerr Scott of North Carolina, Sidney McMath of Arkansas and James E. Folsom of Alabama took turns presiding.

Dixiecrat Leader McCorvey:

'We'll Let Others Share Glory Of Electing President'

By Robert Christofferson

"IF WE THINK we can elect a better government than the people can, we can do it and they can't do anything about it."

The statement was said humorously, but many viewed it seriously, for it came from the man who engineered the political maneuver that took Alabama's 11 electoral votes away from Harry S. Truman in 1948 and gave them to Dixiecrat candidates Thurmond and Wright.

McCorvey

The speaker was portly Democratic Party Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey of Mobile. The occasion was the Jan. 21 meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee at Montgomery, called to set qualifications for the Democratic primary on May 2. McCorvey's blunt remark referred to the power the committee has in controlling Democratic Party affairs in Alabama.

But that was not the only eye-opener in the hour-long, 21-page speech delivered by the party chairman.

In the 1948 Presidential election McCorvey stood forth as a shining knight in the armor of states' rights to defend the South against President Truman's civil rights program ("civil strife," in Mr. McCorvey's book).

In his speech before the party executive committee, he revealed himself for what he is: A Dixiegop of the first order, fighting not only civil rights but the entire Fair Deal program.

To many the revelation was nothing new. Liberals and labor have been saying for a long time that the Democratic Party chairman was a Democrat in name, a Dixiecrat in practice and a Republican in belief—the recipe for a Dixiegop.

McCORVEY ATTACKED "excessive taxation," deficit spending, "socialistic government," the swelling "federal payroll," "welfare state" (the state of disintegration in McCorvey's book), the "federal (government's) tidelands (oil) grab."

An impassioned defense of state control of tidelands and oil deposits thereunder took up more than a page of the speech. "This money (from oil leases) rightfully belongs to the states, but the federal government is trying to grab it," he cried. McCorvey, a corporation lawyer who represents two of the largest oil companies, Standard and Gulf, denied that the fight over the tidelands "is a fight between the federal government and the big oil companies." The fight, he declared, "is a fight between the federal government and the several states."

McCorvey gave his listeners a history of the Democratic Party, the reasons why the "Solid South" remained "solid" for so long, some jokes and poetry, the history of the States Rights movement and a "vindication" of the 1948 campaign of the Dixiecrats (a name he objects to because it is "too much localized").

McCorvey suggests the possibility that in 1952 the Dixiecrats might "share" with the Republicans "in the glory of electing a President."

"In 1952 the southern states should nominate their Presidential electors prior to the national conventions of the major parties," McCorvey suggested.

"Let these Presidential electors get together and pick out some outstanding American who stands for states rights, such as we did in 1948, announce that we will support him for President, and then, if one of the major political party comes along later and nominates the same man we have nominated that will be perfectly all right, and we will let them share with us in the glory of electing a President."

McCORVEY suggested that the "States Rights" Democrats of the South could easily start the ball rolling by electing as their choice a man of the type of General Eisenhower. . . . "Every utterance that I have seen from General Eisenhower . . . has indicated that he believes in the principle of States Rights. . . ."

(Ed. note: Of late, General Eisenhower has been talking more and more like an Old Guard Republican.)

In one astoundingly frank paragraph in his speech, McCorvey let it be known what he thought of most Americans:

"We of the South are in fact the back-bone of the country . . . the people of our section are really the true Americans. We have in the South the purest Anglo-Saxon blood in the Western Hemisphere. In Alabama and other Southeastern states the percentage of foreign-born population and native-born population with foreign-born parents is less than 2%, while in the state of New York, taken as a whole, the percentage of foreign-born population and native-born population with foreign-born parents (like Mayor LaGuardia, for example) is 43%, while in the city of New York the percentage of foreign-born population and native-born population with foreign-born parents is the astounding figure of 69%.

"Just think of people from that section of the country comparing themselves to Alabamans when it comes to considering who are the real Americans."

LABOR WAS WELL REPRESENTED when the State Democratic Executive Committee met to set qualifications for the Alabama Democratic primary on May 2. Pictured clockwise around the table in a Montgomery hotel room are Robert A. Kilpatrick, Brotherhood of Railway Clerks; Eugene M. Wells of the CIO; Hugh Brown of the AFL and William Mitch of the Mine Workers. Ben Blankenship of the Communications Workers is shown standing. J. P. Knight of the Railway Brotherhood also attended the meeting, but does not appear in this picture.

Dixiecrat Loyalty Oath Proposal Proves Dud

The issue of party loyalty did not come to an open showdown at the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee meeting. A pre-dawn caucus of the Dixiecrat members reportedly resulted in rejection of a proposal to bar candidates who did not support nominees of the Democratic Party of Alabama.' "

This would have meant those who were opposed to giving Alabama's electoral votes to Thurmond and Wright, since the Democratic electors were nominees of the 1948 Democratic primary.

The meeting was called to set qualifications for the Democratic primary on May 2.

Gessner T. McCorvey, Executive Committee Chairman, urged the committee to "declare that the official name of our party is 'the Democratic Party of Alabama.' "

He also recommended that the party emblem on the ballot be revised to identify it with the so-called states' rights movement.

The chairman's proposals went absolutely without response. Instead, the committee adopted a party loyalty resolution that simply required that candidates must have supported the nominees of the "Democratic Party." The loyalty oath authorized is the same that has been in effect for more than 25 years.

One important change is evident, however, in party rules. Previous rules had opened the primary only to "white" Democrats. The adjective "white" is omitted in this year's rules.

Rubber Union Wins Pensions At Goodyear

THE GOODYEAR Tire & Rubber Co. has agreed to the pension demands of the CIO Rubber Workers for its 24,000 workers, employed in 10 plants throughout the country.

The company will pay pensions of at least $100 a month to workers who have reached the age of 65 and who have 25 years' service.

The new plan differs from existing programs in that if 1% of a retiring employe's total earnings exceeds $1200, the 1% will be paid him annually for life.

Thus, if an employe has worked 25 years and his total earnings amount to $125,000, 1% of this figure would be $1250, which would be the amount of pension received.

As in the basic steel formula, the company will pay the entire cost of the pension except for the amount paid by social security payments. However, if social security benefits are increased as expected, the company will add half of that increase and tack it on to the workers' monthly pension.

This means that if the federal benefits should be increased $20, $10 would be added to whatever the retiring employe would have received before the social security increase.

The new pact also includes a new arrangement whereby the company will pay the entire cost of the present group insurance plan, which up until the present has been partly financed by employes.

WORKERS WITH less than 25 years' service at age 65 who have more than 15 years' service will receive proportionately smaller pensions. Employes permanently and totally disabled after 15 years' work will receive a minimum pension of $50 a month.

Goodyear is the second of the "Big Four" in the rubber industry to agree to a pension plan.

The plan is subject to approval by the URW Executive Board and Goodyear stockholders, to become effective April 1, 1950.

Goodyear has 14,000 employes at Akron, Ohio. Other plants are located at Los Angeles, Calif.; Gadsden, Ala.; New Bedford, Mass.; Muncie, Ind.; Jackson, Mich.; St. Mary's, Ohio; Topeka, Kan.; Windsor, Vt., and Lincoln, Neb.

'There Is No Such Thing As Good Monopoly,'--Bergson

ATTY. GEN. McGrath and Asst. Atty. Gen. Bergson told the New York State Bar Association that bigness in business is a threat to the anti-trust laws because big business can impose illegal restraints on competition "more easily than could a small one."

Spelling out what they are attempting to do, the two top prosecutors of monopoly emphasized they are not attacking bigness as such, but bigness as a vehicle for monoply. Their speeches, largely ignored or distorted by the daily press, offer the clearest picture of the government's campaign against monopoly yet provided.

The monopoly problem is "next to unemployment the most pressing domestic economic problem of our time," McGrath said.

"WE RECOGNIZE, of course," he said, "that bigness as such is not a crime. We also must recognize, as has the Supreme Court, that 'size carries with it an opportunity for abuse' and that therefore we must be constantly on the alert for these abuses."

Tracing the history of the enforcement of the anti-trust laws, McGrath told how the Supreme Court in 1920 crippled enforcement by ruling in the U. S. Steel Corp. case that steel's "power to monopolize the steel industry did not constitute a violation of the Sherman Act, in the absence of a showing that the corporation was exercizing that power."

Then, in one of the most potent sentences that has come from an Attorney General in years, McGrath added: "To my way of thinking, that is but another way of saying that the Sherman Act only outlaws bad monopolies. The plain language of the Act is to the contrary."

Bergson, who is directly in charge of anti-trust enforcement, declared, "Our experience has shown that there is no such thing as a good monopoly. Whenever we have found a monopoly we have also found that it was used selfishly for private benefit rather than for public good."

"Size in itself is not an anti-trust crime," Bergson said. "Neither is the possession of a hunting rifle a crime. But just as a rifle may be used to perpetrate a crime, so may size be an instrument for violating the anti-trust laws. In either situation that which was otherwise lawful becomes tainted with the illegal effects it caused and becomes an appropriate object for judicial action."

"I BELIEVE that most of us would agree that while many anti-trust violations may be committed regardless of size, bigness may facilitate the attainment of illegal ends. A big company which would do so, may impose illegal conditions on an industry more readily than could a small one.

"In such a situation, size is not the offense. The offense is the monopoly power or the restraint of trade, the achievement of which was aided by the defendant's size. To neutralize the means by which the offense was perpetrated, to us seems not only to be logical but also to be required by long-established principles of the anti-trust laws."

Bergson gave examples of how the anti-trust division's cases against big companies have broken up monopolistic practices. "Some proponents of the 'good monopoly' theory take the position," he said, "that efficiency is of paramount importance and that if the enforcement of the anti-trust laws might interfere with efficiency, violations of those laws should be condoned.

"The Germans made this mistake. Through their system of cartelization and their much-vaunted efficiency they were able to ride for a time the crest of economic power. Their worship of these concepts, however, warped their entire philosophy and eventually led their country to chaos and destruction."

Bethlehem Ship To Pay Pensions

The "Bethlehem pension formula" of $100-minimum pensions has been put into operation for the company's 12,000 shipyard employes.

Eight months of negotiations between Bethlehem Shipyard officials and the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers union were climaxed by a 5 a.m. agreement on the pension issue.

The new pact doubles the shipyard's present $50-a-month pensions, paid for entirely by the corporation. To qualify for that amount, workers must have reached the age of 65 afer 25 years' service with the corporation.

In addition, the new pact brings improvements in the present life insurance plan and the inclusion of hospitalization benefits. Workers and the company will each pay 2½ cents an hour for the welfare coverage.

Previously the workers had paid 3 cents for the insurance alone.

The new agreement was arranged to coincide with the similar pact held by the CIO Steelworkers with the rest of the Bethlehem Steel set-up. The old agreement would have expired June 23, but the new one ends on Dec. 31, 1951—the same date as the steel union's current pact.

Like the steelworkers' agreement, it provides a wage reopening period at the end of 1950.

Union Spikes Wilson Plan

CIO PACKINGHOUSE Workers recently turned an attempted sales promotion scheme by Wilson & Co. into another boost for UPWA's "Don't Buy Wilson" campaign.

The company had planned a special sales stunt to push its products at a large super-market on the outskirts of Denver, Colo. The Union has sought unsuccessfully for many months to obtain a contract with Wilson & Co.

While the inside of the market displayed elaborate banners and special mark-down prices for Wilson meats, outside UPWA representatives and members quietly passed out handbills which told approaching customers of the company's attempts to smash the union.

Prospective buyers stayed away from the Wilson display in large groups and some protested to the management for even carrying the goods, UPWA officials said.

At the end of the day, the shelves remained stocked with Wilson meats and the attempted promotion had ended as a dismal flop for the company and a spectacular gain for UPWA.

Oil Workers To Set Goals For 1950

The National Policy Committee of the CIO Oil Workers Union will meet at the union's headquarters in Denver on Feb. 27 to establish collective bargaining goals for the coming year, it was announced by OWIU Pres. O. A. Knight.

He said the committee would consider pensions, a shorter work week, wages and all other phases of contractual relations in the industry.

Laundry Workers Win Sweeping Pact Gains

SOME 25,000 New York laundry workers have won pensions, a form of guaranteed annual wages, and the benefits of wage-hour minimum rates.

The improvements were contained in a contract sign by the Laundry Workers Joint Board of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers with four major employer associations in the New York metropolitan area.

ACW Secy.-Treas. Frank Rosenblum, who announced the new two-year agreements, said they provide for wage reopening at any time upon 60 days' notice.

NOTING THAT less than a dozen years ago the New York laundry industry was widely regarded as a sweatshop, Rosenblum hailed the employers' concessions and "the steady improvement in wage and working condition, job security, the social welfare benefits, and now the introduction of pension benefits."

Under the new pact, employers will pay 1% of their weekly payrolls into the pension fund, and a study will be made to determine how the pension funds can be increased.

The 75c minimum wage was also written into the pact, though the new wage-hour law exempts the laundry industry from paying the rate automatically. Weekly minimum rates in two divisions of the industry were lifted $1.25 and $2.20, while male employes are guaranteed 40 hours of work a week.

Rosenblum said this provision is "tantamount" to a guaranteed annual wage.

All workers will receive seven holidays with pay, a week's paid vacation, and two week's paid vacation after four years on the job. A series of health provisions provide sickness, accident, maternity, hospital and surgery benfits.

Oklahoma Council Convention Votes Strike Support to CWA

THE OKLAHOMA CIO Industrial Union Council passed a number of important resolutions at its recent convention in Oklahoma City.

Twenty CIO Communications Workers delegates were given a standing vote of support in their coming struggle with the AT&T.

CIO Reg. Dir. Robert McVay addressed his opening remarks to these new members of the Council and told them he was proud to welcome them into the CIO.

The main speaker, Ass't. Sec. of Labor John Gibson, told the delegates that "after more than two years of operations the record is clear. The emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley law are a complete failure. It makes no contribution toward the adjustment of national emergency disputes."

Resolutions adopted dealt with political action, community services, opposition to legislation prohibiting sale of intoxicating beverages, promotion of union labels, improving farmer-labor unity, support of CIO policy, support of American Veterans Committee, investigation of the State Industrial Commission, support of CWA-CIO demands and condemnation of AT&T.

Anthony W. Smith, assistant to IUC Dir. John Brophy, pointed out the responsibilities of the state council to carry out the program of National CIO and said: "The responsibility for what goes on in the state of Oklahoma is yours and yours alone. It will be effective exactly to the extent that you give your officers and representatives in this state and the CIO Regional Office support in the things they are doing here."

Newly elected officers are: Albert W. Mitchell, Oil Workers, president; Paul Copeland, CWA, vice president, and John W. Jacobsen, Brewery Workers, secretary-treasurer.

"Got something that will enchant my boss into giving me a $10 raise?"

Poverty and Poorhouse, or Pensions for Workers

By D. ROCKWELL CLARK

THE MEN in the picture below are "retired" members of the CIO Steelworkers, "preserving their dignity and independence" in the Lake County, Ind., poorhouse.

Presumably, 1% of their paychecks was deducted for Social Security from Jan. 1, 1937, when the law went into effect, until the day they "retired."

But they're still in the poorhouse.

That's what's wrong with the present Social Security law.

It is supposed to provide a decent-sized government-paid pension for every worker who stays on a "covered" job long enough to get "fully insured." It is supposed to take care of his widow, if he dies, and of his dependent children whether he dies or retires.

The law operates as it was intended to; it is honestly administered. But no worker can retire on his Social Security income today and have enough money to live. No widow can support herself or her family on it.

THIS IS part of the reason for CIO's big drive to negotiate pensions in industry. And CIO's drive, in turn, spurred Congress to action, to bring the Social Security law up to date. The result was that HR 6000 passed the House late last Spring and is now under consideration by the Conservative Senate Finance Committee.

HR 6000 made many improvements but did not, in CIO's opinion, go far enough. Starting Feb. 16, CIO witnesses will present two full days of testimony backing up the findings of the CIO Committee on Social Security, headed by TWVA Pres. Emil Rieve.

It is tragic that a law so well-meant should come so perilously close to failure because it has not been revised to keep pace with changing economic conditions, and because it was not well drawn in the first place.

Here are some flaws in the present law and in HR 6000:

1. Benefits. The average benefit paid out now, after 12 years of accumulation of funds, is only $24 a month, which would have been inadequate in 1939. It is so far out of sight now that state payments for direct relief of the absolutely destitute average almost twice as much. Yet Social Security is supposed to keep people off the relief rolls!

2. Coverage. The law now covers only 35 million people—54.8% of the labor force. The rest must get along without even this earned pittance to look forward to.

(HR 6000 would raise benefits an average of 70%; the CIO more than that. For example: a man of 65 with a wife of 60 and no other dependents, whose "average wage" while he worked was $300 a month and who had contributed to Social Security steadily for 20 years, would get $48 a month under the present law, $71.50 a month under HR 6000, and $144 a month under the CIO proposal. HR 6000 extends coverage to 71.6% of the labor force, the CIO proposal to almost 100%.)

3. Wage base. At present, employer and employe each contribute 1½% a year on the first $3000 of the worker's income. The theory was that most workers were at the $3000 level or lower, and that therefore, payments financed in this manner would accurately reflect wage losses. Now, however, 96% of all covered workers are at or below the $4800 level. Wages up to $4800 should therefore be taxed, CIO feels. HR 6000 ups the level to only $3600.

4. Method of calculation. The law was so drawn that benefits are not paid on the basis of average wages actually received. Instead, the "average" is pulled down by prolonged illness, unemployment, or work in an "uncovered" job. A 55-year-old man whose wages had averaged $500 a month for 10 years would find his "average" down to $250 a month by the time he became eligible for his first payment, if he had been unable to work after 55. Hence his benefits would drop.

HR 6000 remedies this somewhat; it retains the same basic formula, but says that periods of total disability will not drag the average down. CIO says the benefits should simply be calculated on the basis of the average income received by the worker during his "best five years." Both HR 6000 and the CIO would provide for payments to the worker during periods of total disability; HR 6000, however, would pay the worker only, providing nothing for dependents, whereas CIO would add dependents' benefits as well.

5. "Extra work." The present law, as many oldsters have found to their sorrow, provides that if the retired worker tries to make ends meet by going back to work, he cannot earn more than $14.99 a month in "covered" employment, without losing his entire benefit for that month. This has been softened somewhat by HR 6000; it allows extra earnings of up to $50 a month and makes only a pro-rata deduction for earnings beyond that figure.

NO OTHER feature of the present law so clearly reveals the "them as has, gits" philosophy which crept into it, unnoticed. What it amounts to is that only the near-destitute are penalized.

If a worker has an insurance annuity to piece out with, if he has a savings bond or two maturing every month, if he has some stocks and bonds, he keeps his Social Security benefits, too, and no questions asked.

But if he is without extra funds, he has two choices; go on relief, which in many states means surrendering title to whatever property he does own; or go back to work, if he can, in which case he risks losing his benefits, or at best is held to a total extra income of $50 a month.

CIO's pension program, which gave rise to the sudden Congressional interest in revising Social Security, in no way competes with the law. It is regarded as a completely necessary supplement to it. It is true that most pension contracts set a total payable pension sum and then state that the company may subtract from this total the amount the retired worker receives in Social Security benefits; but at least the total the worker receives comes somewhere near what he needs to maintain himself in decency.

INDUSTRY witnesses before the Senate Committee are putting up very little resistance to the proposed improvements because they hope they foresee a steady reduction in the amount they will have to put into employer-financed pension plans.

The CIO will continue the fight on both fronts.

* * *

Meanwhile, in Camden, N. J., a 71-year-old man named Albert E. Lobley is still trying to keep himself and his wife alive on $48.81 a month.

Lobley, a former CIO member, appeared last April 12 before the House Ways and Means Committee to testify in favor of HR 6000.

At that time, nearly a year ago, he had used up all his savings, had exactly $1 in the bank, and was "merely existing." The $48.81 a month went entirely for food, and at that the Lobleys ate meat only once a week. His married son was paying the heavy doctor's bills for Lobley's crippled wife. Mrs. Lobley left the house only to go to the doctor's office. Neither of them had seen a movie in three years. They had no new clothes and no prospect of any.

"Fortunately," Lobley told the Committee, "I owned my own home. But immediately after retiring I was swamped with the expense of paying medical bills. I therefore had to take out a $1000 mortgage on my home . . . This borrowed money has long ago been spent . . . It is being repaid by my son."

The CIO News checked up on the Lobleys to see what might have happened to them while Congress stalled. They are just two of the 2,500,000 people now receiving Social Security benefits.

"No change," Lobley reported. "We managed to take in a boarder . . . My son's expenses are increasing, and next spring I guess I'll just have to find a job."

As we said before, he's 71 years old.

There are now 12,000 unemployed in Camden.

Franco Is Accused Of Deception Attempt

DICTATOR FRANCO is "attempting to deceive the outside world when he claims there is no opposition to his regime within Spain," Pres. Trifon Gomez of the Spanish Confederation of Labor told a press conference at Washington.

Gomez declared that information "gathered in all circles from extreme right to extreme left" indicated that Spaniards could resolve their internal problems peacefully and without fear that Franco's Fascism would be replaced by Communism, provided the world's democratic nations maintain the policy embodied in the United Nations resolution of 1946 under which UN members withdrew their ambassadors from Madrid.

Gomez said he thought slowdowns by Spanish workers forced a breakdown recently in Spain's economic relations with Dictator Peron of Argentina. The workers made it impossible for Franco to carry out Spain's end of the agreement, Gomez said.

The exiled labor leader pointed out that an amalgamation of Confederation leaders with monarchist groups after a 1948 conference in France put him in touch with at least 80% of anti-totalitarian labor inside Spain through a well organized liaison system. This pooling of resources has greatly strengthened and stimulated anti-Franco activities, he reported.

Gomez pointed out that he attended the London conference at which the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions was established, bearing credentials actually signed inside Spain despite Franco's police methods.

"Because benefits are related to average earnings and hence reflect the standard of living which an individual has achieved, ambition and effort are rewarded . . . Because benefits are paid as a matter of right, following cessation of substantial covered employment, the worker's dignity and independence are preserved."
—Report of the House Ways and Means Committee on HR 6000.

TWU Wins Pact Gains In Philadelphia

THE FACT-FINDING commission technique was used successfully in Philadelphia to win substantial contract gains for the CIO Transport Workers and to avert a threatened strike that would have tied up public transportation in the nation's third largest city.

The board's recommendations, which will give members of TWU Local 234 additional benefits estimated at $1.5 millions a year, were accepted by the local executive board and the shop stewards, and were approved at a general membership meeting last week. A referendum vote was being taken as this edition of the CIO News went to press, but there was no opposition in sight.

The employes will receive most of the benefits in non-wage items, but the transportation department received a 2-cent per hour increase, raising the rate to $1.47 an hours for operators, and the maintenance department got 5 cents an hour to wipe out part of a long-standing inequity.

PENSIONS were increased by $10 a month to a minimum of $100, with most pensioners receiving above the minimum. Many operators work split shifts during the morning and evening peak traffic periods. The intervening time, known as "spread" time, or "dead" time, has never been paid for, although it may run to six hours. Under the commission's recommendation it will now be paid for at straight time after three hours.

Sick leave pay was boosted by $5 weekly and made effective at the beginning of an illness. In the past no benefits were paid for the first seven days.

Job protection was strengthened by a guaranteed work week and by freezing one-man operation at the present level. If the company wants to increase one-man operation, it must give the union 60 days' notice and then work out a joint agreement. The union secured approximately 30 of its 38 demands.

IN VOTING reluctant acceptance of the recommendations, Philadelphia Transportation Co. directors instructed Pres. Charles M. Ebert to make the necessary preliminary moves to win a fare increase. During the commission hearings repeated attempts were made to line up union spokesmen and witnesses in favor of a boost, but with no success.

"We're not financial wizards," TWU Pres. Michael J. Quill bluntly told the commission. "It's the bankers' job to get up the money and it's our job to take it away from them."

John O'Donnell, TWU general cousel, who presented the bulk of the union case and testified for seven hours on the first day of hearings, tartly suggested that a rise might be avoided, or at least reduced, if the city were to cut down the rental it receives for properties leased to PTC.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO Vice President and director of organization, was one of the witnesses for the union. He told the board that 100,000 CIO members live in the Philadelphia area and that there was no desire to inconvenience either them or other citizens by a strike, but that if one were necessary the union would have solid CIO backing both locally and nationally.

ALBERT M. GREENFIELD (l.), chairman of the fact-finding board in the Philadelphia transit wage dispute, and CIO Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood shake hands at a hearing before the board. Pres. Michael Quill (r.) of the CIO Transport Workers, which represents the Philadelphia workers, is a smiling observer. Acceptance of findings averted a strike.

Electoral College Revamp Amendment Passes Senate

A PROPOSED constitutional amendment revamping the system by which Americans have elected their Presidents over the last 145 years was approved last week by the U. S. Senate by a 64 to 27 vote.

The measure was sponsored jointly by Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. (R., Mass.), and Rep. Gossett (D., Tex). Some supporters claimed it scrapped the old electoral college system. While abolishing the college as such, however, it retained the basis of the system.

It does not provide for direct election of the President by the people, which was urged by the last CIO Convention. An amendment to this effect, support of which was sought by CIO Legislative Director Nathan E. Cowan in telegrams to Senators, was offered by Sen. Humphrey (D., Minn.) but was defeated.

The new plan provides for computation of electoral votes as at present—one for each member of Congress.

The high candidate in any state, however, would not receive all its electoral votes as at present. Instead they would be divided among all candidates in proportion to the number of votes cast. The vote in each state would be forwarded to a joint session of Congress, which would add up the totals. Should there be only two candidates, the one with the higher total would, of course, win. If the top man among three or more candidates polled at least 40% of the electoral vote, he likewise would be declared elected.

HOWEVER, IF no one received at least 40% of the electoral vote in a contest with three or more candidates, Congress would pick the winner from the two highest at a joint session. Each member of the Senate and the House would have one vote, and a majority of the total membership would be necessary to elect.

The amendment now goes to the House, where it must win by the same two-thirds majority it chalked up in the Senate. If approved there, it must be ratified by two-thirds of the states—36—before it becomes part of the Constitution.

Help Me Fight NLRB, Denham Asks Again

GENERAL Counsel Robert N. Denham of the NLRB was around yelling for help again last week.

Help, that is, in his fight with the NLRB members, who sometimes have the nerve to disagree with him.

This plantive little wail was sounded before a meeting of the American Trucking Association, Inc., in Washington. He hinted very broadly that members of that organization should haul before the courts any NLRB decisions against them they don't happen to like. Under Taft-Hartley, Denham has to defend these decisions when they do get into court. Just what kind of a defense they'd get is a little hard to figure.

Two weeks earlier Denham made the same type of plea before an employers' group in New York. The reaction from union men and liberals was terrific. CIO Pres. Philip Murray demanded that Pres. Truman oust him.

Denham's speech before the truckers' association was largely devoted to the secondary boycott. He found time, in addition to everything else, for a gratuitous attack on the AFL Teamsters' Union.

A SECONDARY boycott charge against a union is a pretty tough one to sustain, Denham said. Principally, he indicated, because the board members don't agree with his conceptions and partly, he hinted, because they keep changing their minds.

"As I have said on other occasions," he said, "the decisions of the board are not self-enforcing."

"If the board issues an order and wants to enforce it, it must go to the Circuit Court of Appeals and petition that court for an order of enfocement, at which time the entire proceedings are reviewable for conformity to the law, but not as to the facts, if the record as a whole discloses substantial evidence to support the board's findings.

"By the same token, if the board should dismiss a case, or refuse some desired relief to a charging party, and that charging party wants a review of the board's action, it can only obtain such review in the Circuit Court of Appeals."

DENHAM REFERRED to a case in which the NLRB rejected a secondary boycott charge as "one of a goodly number that seem like secondary boycotts until they get under the scrutiny of the board where we have found that our appraisal of the secondary boycott feature of the law has been too broad."

"All things that look like secondary boycotts to us of the General Counsel's office and to the courts that are called on for injunctions," he pouted a few paragraphs farther on, "don't necessarily take on that aspect when they get up to the close scrutiny of the board . . .

"Until there have been some coordinating decisions of the courts clarifying these varying points of view, it is our theory in the office of the General Counsel that we must proceed on a case to case basis, and only appraise any given case after a thorough investigation of all the facts that has been completed.

"To what extent the courts will have an opportunity to finally determine these questions will, of course, depend upon the extent to which the board goes to the court with its petition for enforcement, and the extent to which dissatisfied charging parties may go to the courts with their petitions for review."

Picket Maritime Commission In Transfer of Six U. S. Ships

FOR TWO hours last week 100 merchant ship officers and crew members picketed the office of the Maritime Commission in New York in protest against that body's continued approval of the transfer of American ships to foreign registries.

The protest, which will be repeated this week, was sponsored by the CIO Marine Engineers Beneficial Association through the Committee to Combat Ship Transfers.

It was touched off by Maritime Commission approval for the transfer of six T-2 type oil tankers, built during the war, to Panamanian registry. The vessels are owned by the National Bulk Carriers Corp.

The approval was conditioned upon the company's replacing them with tankers of equal capacity registered under the American flag.

Shifting registry of American flag ships to foreign countries has become a favorite practice of ship owners seeking to avoid the wages and working conditions built up by American maritime unions.

Panama, Honduras and Liberia are the favorite "runaway" spots. They have no laws under which seamen can sue operators for compensation for injuries received aboard ship, and in addition have wage and tax rates substantially lower than in this country. Meantime, American maritime workers are without jobs because the vessels on which they once worked now fly the flags of other nations.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in 34 years, Ashtabula, Ohio, City Council is controlled by the Democrats. This occurred when three CIO-PAC backed candidates were elected to the City Council. They in turn elected a manager. Pictured are CIO and PAC officials together with the newly-elected city officers. L. to R., front row, John Thornton, Steelworkers Dist. 26 PAC Director; Gerald Severino and Ed Walsh, councilmen; Dennis Dunlevy, city manager; Anthony Turano, councilman; and Fred Saverice, Steelworkers staff member. Back row, L. to R., Dist. 26 radio commentator Eddie Weygandt; CIO Council Pres. Nelson Humphries; PAC financial-secy. Ed Wrisley; CIO Council Vice Chairman Don Freeborn; CIO Council Chairman Walter Ashley and Dist. 26 Rep. James McPhillips. Laverne Halsey, chairman of Ashtabula County PAC, was not present when this was taken.

It's Snowing Requests For 75c Exemptions

ALL IS NOT yet clear sailing under the amended Federal wage-hour law increasing the minimum wage to 75c, which went into effect Jan. 25.

Changes in the law have thrown out of kilter many of the regulations built up since the law was passed in 1938.

This means that stacks of revised regulations and orders gearing the 75c minimum and other changes into administration of the law have to be issued.

The law authorizes the wage-hour administrator to make special regulations interpreting and clarifying provisions concerning rates for apprentices or learners, handicapped workers and others barred from the 75c minimum by special certification.

Employers seeking to avoid payment of the 75c minimum have been quick to use all possible loopholes of the law, and have snowed the Wage-Hour agency under with applications for exemptions.

The administrator has met the situation so far by completely withdrawing all previous rates set for for learners in some industries, and issuing temporary regulations in others.

Regulations involving learners have been withdrawn in the millinery, woolen, artificial flower, the main part of the apparel, and the textile industries. Temporary regulations have been granted for the hosiery, glove, knitwear, and cigar industries, and the cotton garment segment of the apparel industry.

In general, the temporary rates for learners bring the former rates of 30c and 35c up to 60c and 65c.

Learners rates in the various industries will be established permanently in some cases after public hearings are held, and in other cases upon application from individual companies or employers.

Hearings on learners rates in the shoe industry have already started but were adjourned to permit further study. Meanwhile some individual shoe employers have applied for and received certification to pay subminimum rates for learners. The general pattern for the applications acted upon has been 65c for the first six weeks, and 70c for the rest of the 12-week training period.

The CIO United Shoe Workers has protested the granting of certification to shoe employers to pay subminimum rates to learners, pointing out that the industry previously had never been granted exemptions for learners on an industry-wide basis.

"Miss Reed, your union contract says you must give thirty days notice before you strike."

Ohio CIO Leaves Safety Code Parley

Representatives of management have given conclusive proof that they do not honestly want factory safety codes that adequately protect workers, according to the Ohio CIO Council.

The Council said management representatives flatly refused a request by labor representatives for competent technical advice on new codes.

As a result, Sec.-Treas. Jacob Clayman of the Ohio CIO Council reported, CIO members on the safety code committee have presently broken off negotiations with management.

Third of U. S. Spends More Than It Earns

A THIRD of all family and individual spending units spent more than they earned in 1948. That dramatic evidence of the need for better distribution of income to provide the purchasing power needed to avoid a depression has been revealed by a Federal Reserve survey.

Those who spent more than they earned came to 31%; another 6% used up all their spending power, but did not go into debt because in most cases they had no credit. Yet it is among the middle and lower income brackets that mass purchasing power must originate if we are to consume the goods and services our mass production industries turn out.

These figures strongly back up the demand of labor and government economists for expanded purchasing power in the lower and middle income groups. Ever since the postwar inflation started the President's Council of Economic Advisers has been warning of the need for such expansion if purchasing power is to be sufficient to buy the goods produced by American industry without widespread unemployment.

The Federal Reserve survey showed that while corporations were making record-breaking profits of more than $20 billion in 1948, low and middle income families were having a harder and harder time making ends meet.

Thirty-eight per cent of the families and individual spending units under $1000 a year spent more than they took in, while another 27% just managed to break even. Only a third were able to save anything. This was far worse than the year before, when only 26% spent more than they made.

IN THE INCOME group between $1000 and $2000, 34% of the spending units spent more than they took in, and another 9% just broke even. Spending beyond income was not confined to the lower income groups, however, but went well up the income scale throughout the middle income brackets.

The Federal Reserve researchers reported that the number of families spending more than they took in had jumped steadily since the end of the war, and most sharply since 1946, when the inflation began to get out of hand. It was most severe among families in which incomes had been rapidly changing, rather than those where incomes had been stable.

Most of the families which spent more than they took in during 1948 were not going into debt, but using up past savings. This indicates strongly that spending among these groups will drop unless there is a better distribution of income in the future. Many of these families in 1948 were still using up savings accumulated during the war, when the distribution of savings was more balanced.

The number of spending units which spent more than they earned in 1948 was 15,500,000. Altogether, they spent about $12 billion more than they earned, indicating the rapidity with which they are using up past earnings. The rest of the spending units saved a total of $24 billion, but most of it was in the top 5% income units. (LPA). See Nathan Robertson's story, page 12.

UAW, IAM In Peace Pact

THE CIO AUTO Workers and the International Association of Machinists, independent, have signed an agreement to refrain from raiding each other's memberships, according to Labor Secy. Tobin.

UAW Pres. Walter Reuther and A. J. Hayes of IAM have agreed to avoid jurisdiction rivalries which in the past have caused some serious strikes in organized plants.

Each union, however, retains freedom of action to compete in the organization of non-union projects.

Congratulating both organizations, Tobin said, "This pact between two great unions has been negotiated without intervention or pressure by the government in any form. I believe this move can be a major contribution toward industrial peace through the removal of unnecessary jurisdictional disputes. Certainly it is evidence that organized labor can work out its own internal problems voluntarily and without Government intervention."

ILWU Leaders Say Sign T-H

Officers of the CIO Longshoremen's Union have recommended to the executive board and locals compliance with the Taft-Hartley act. The union, headed by Harry Bridges, has been bitterly opposed to the T-H act, and its officers have refused to sign non-Communist affidavits. Bridges is now on trial, accused of perjury in swearing he had never been a Communist when he applied for citizenship in 1945.

Louis Goldblatt, ILWU secretary-treasurer, said the decision to reverse the union's position was made "to meet any raiding attack from AFL or other CIO unions."

Organizationally Speaking

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

(As Mr. Haywood is in Puerto Rico this week, his column is comprised of field reports.)

The Communications Workers of America-CIO has recorded another notable gain in its march toward complete CIO organizing of all telephone workers as a result of an election among the 13,000 workers affiliated with the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers. The vote was as follows: Votes cast, 12,727; CWA-CIO, 7535; IBEW-AFL, 4064; void, 48; challenged, 257; no union, 1128. The victory was especially notable since every type of attack, particularly the "fear technique," was utilized in opposition to CWA-CIO.

The Company and IBEW propaganda laid particular stress on the strike vote taken by CWA, attempting to frighten the Ohio workers out of affiliating with CWA-CIO. Pres. Thomas Ryan of the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers was a stalwart leader in the campaign for CWA-CIO, participating actively in conveying to the workers the advantages of affiliation with a great national union that can stand up and fight even the gigantic AT&T. CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne also actively participated in the election.

CIO Reg. Dir. George DeNucci reports that in an NLRB election at the Grossman Co., Columbus, the Playthings & Jewelry Workers-CIO were victorious by a vote of 45 to 19. Rep. Edward Rosenhahn was in charge of the election.

CIO Reg. Dir. James J. Leary reports that Dir. D. R. Stewart of District 5, Oil Workers International Union, says the following elections were won by his union: Union shop election at the Bay Petroleum, McPherson, Kans., by a vote of 50 for, 4 against; representation election at the National Cooperative Railway Assn., McPherson, Kans., 133 for, 28 against. Both elections were directed for OWIU-CIO by Rep. Loyd Haskins.

CIO Reg. Dir. Sylvester Graham reports a union shop election at the Fruehauf Trailer Co., of Billings, Mont., on behalf of United Steelworkers of America, Local 3169. Result was 100% in favor of the union shop.

CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler reports the Auto Workers won a union shop election at Eason Grinding Co., Los Angeles, Calif., by a vote of 92% in favor of UAW. UAW Intl. Rep. Richard Cartwright was in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. John B. Easton reports the United Steelworkers of America won a consent election for clerical and office employees at the Houdaille-Hershey plant, Huntington, W. Va., by a vote of 38 to 17. Staff Rep. Frank Cornwell conducted the organizing campaign.

CIO Reg. Dir. Loren Houser reports that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who have had a plant under contract for the last nine years in Portland, Ind., had their representation challenged by the UAW-AFL. An NLRB election was held and the Clothing Workers won, 2 to 1. The company is the Jay Garment Co. The campaign was conducted by Reps. Harold Wilson and Nelson Joseph.

CIO Reg. Dir. W. B. Taylor reports that in a representation election held at the Mengel Company, Louisville, Ky., IWA-CIO won by a vote of 875 to 185.

CIO Reg. Dir. Delmond Garst reports the following victories: Federal Paper Co., St. Louis, Mo., representation election 62 for CIO Textile Workers, 11 against; Royal Bedding Co., St. Louis, union shop election, CIO Textile Workers 48, 11 against. TWUA Rep. William A. Doyle was in charge.

CIO Reg. Dir. George Craig reports the following election victories: Union shop election at the Aldan Rubber Co., Philadelphia, Pa., 74 for the United Rubber Workers, 2 against; Eugene Tormey, URC-LPWA Representative, was in charge; United Paperworkers of America won an election at National Waterproof Papers, Inc., Philadelphia, 59 to 6; Spence Condiff was in charge; Playthings, Jewelry & Novelty Workers won at the Hanassin Products, Inc., Philadelphia, by a vote of 14 to 0; Textile Workers won an election at Stafford & Company, Philadelphia, by a vote of 103 to 31; James Coyle and Walter Ellis were in charge; Textile Workers also won an election at the Wilson Yarn Mills, Philadelphia, by 24 to 19.

CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Bonacci reports that the United Packinghouse Workers-CIO won a representation election at the Poultry Plant, Provo, Utah, and secured a bargaining agency for 11 workers. The plant is a branch of the Utah Poultry Cooperative Association. UPWA-CIO Rep. Ora Owen was in charge.

CIO Sub-Reg. Dir. John J. Muarillo reports that in a representation election at the Sylvania Electric Corp., Seneca Falls, N. Y., the USA-CIO defeated the IBEW-AFL by 253 to 204.

CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler reports a union shop election victory for Amalgamated Clothing Workers Local 55D at Clinton Clothes Co.'s seven stores in the Los Angeles area by a vote of 33 yes, 6 no.

3 States Try To Bar ABC

ATTY. GEN. FAIRCHILD of Wisconsin is the latest state law enforcement official to ask for an injunction to bar the American Bowling Congress on charges that it discriminates against Negroes and other colored persons. The complaint charged that ABC and its practices "constitute a public nuisance."

Atty. Gen. Nathaniel L. Goldstein of New York State in Jan. has asked an injunction against the "whites only" American Bowling Congress, to bar it from sponsoring tournaments and carrying out other activities in the state.

Goldstein asked the New York Supreme Court to enjoin the organization because its constitution, limiting membership to "white males," is against the public policy of the state.

"I know that the American people do not tolerate bias in sports," Goldstein said. "Racial standards must never be set up as a test of athletic ability."

Last October, the Illinois Attorney general took similar action against the Congress there, after the national CIO had announced in Washington that it was seeking revocation of the group's charter.

Fat Profits Foe of Jobs For All

By NATHAN ROBERTSON

For Labor Press Association

AMERICA'S goal of maximum production and employment on a sustained basis is seriously threatened by the demand of big business for higher profits than industry has ever before enjoyed.

This has been made clear within the last couple of weeks by:

1. The Federal Trade Commission report showing that most big business today is making profits of about 20%—or even more—on invested capital, after payment of all taxes, compared with half that before the war.

2. Testimony before the Joint Congressional Economic Committee by sopkesmen for the steel industry that it must have higher profits than ever before. Few of the spokesmen were willing to make a figure—but those who did, suggested 18 to 24% after taxes—indicating that steel's idea of a fair profit is about the same as industry's in general.

These two developments show clearly that big business, which in many cases is powerful enough to fix its own profit figures without worrying about competition, is demanding a bigger slice of national income than it has enjoyed in the past and bigger than most economists believe it can receive without throwing our economic machinery out of kilter.

If we are to reach our goal, fixed in the employment act of 1946 as maximum production and employment, and designed under President Truman's program to triple our standard of living within the next 50 years, we must face the fact of this demand from industry for higher profits. There is no question about the power of much of industry to realize that demand. The issue is —what do we do about it?

EITHER we must revise our eco-economic plans or we must convince industry through education or legislation that such profits are dangerous. We cannot get the kind of economy we have planned if industry is allowed to continue to take such profits. It does not leave enough money in the hands of consumers to buy the products that industry produces. Sooner or later it will head us into a depression—a depression that is likely to be far more serious than the one that almost wrecked our economy from 1929-33.

The reason is this. Even conservative economists have agreed that our problem is to maintain purchasing power to buy the things we know how to make in such quantities. That purchasing power comes mainly from consumers who want goods and from business which wants new and better plants for production.

The problem is to maintain the balance between these two kinds of demand. If too much goes into business expansion we soon are turning out more goods than consumers can buy. If too little goes into business expansion we stop growing and become static—our goal of a higher living standard is gone.

Most economists believe — on the basis of past experiences — that we tend in good times such as now to put too much purchasing power in the hands of business through big profits, so that business expands too rapidly. They think we must find a way to maintain steady, but more moderate expansion, and put the rest of the purchasing power into the hands of consumers so they can buy the expanding production. They do not believe this can be done if industry demands a profit of 20% on invested capital after the payment of all taxes.

Government economists — including those advising the President — have felt throughout the post-war era that more purchasing power than was healthy was going into the hands of business, and too little into the hands of the consumers. That is why the President's Council of Economic Advisers has repeatedly pushed for high wages and lower prices, to lower the profit margin for business so that consumer buying power could keep pace with our productive power. See story on Third of Nation, Page 11.

Fewer Mich. Strikes

Man-hours lost in Michigan through strikes dropped 25% in 1949, compared to 1948, state statistics show, and there were fewer strikes. The state's biggest strikes in 1949 were the Ford and steel walkouts which accounted for more than two-thirds of the man-hours lost. Both resulted in union victories.

McDonald Chosen

Secy.-Treas David J. McDonald of the CIO Steelworkers has been appointed to the board of directors of the USO Campaign Committee of Pennsylvania, according to H. Ward Zimmer, USO state chairman.

U. S. Steel Pays Extra Dividend Despite Plea of Low Profits

U. S. STEEL—which had just finished complaining that its profits were miserably low—last week did a somersault.

The complaint had been made to a Congressional Committee investigating recent steel prices.

The somersault came in the form of a special extra dividend to company stockholders. At the same time the company announced its profits had reached a 30-year high of nearly $166 million after taxes.

Profits in 1949 were about $37 million higher than in the previous year. Irving Olds, U. S. Steel board chairman, complained that the six-weeks strike of CIO Steelworkers had chopped an estimated $37 million from the company's profit level.

The strike occurred when the company refused union demands for welfare and pension programs, which a Presidential Fact Finding Board last summer said could have been paid out of profits without an increase in price.

The Big Steel profit bulletin confirmed that 1949 had been a pretty good year indeed for the industry. Bethlehem earlier had reported a new record of $99 million profits after taxes.

THE PROFITS—and the strike and the Congressional probe have apparently combined to make U. S. Steel conscious of its public relations.

The corporation announced that Phelps Adams had been appointed —at a $35,000 salary—to a post of special public relations adviser in the corporation's New York headquarters.

Adams was formerly chief of the Washington bureau of the New York Sun, the big city's most reactionary, anti-labor paper. That paper recently went out of business, because of lack of circulation and advertising.

Read It And Weep . . .

U. S. Steel Ups Dividend Rate To 65 Cents

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Directors of United States Steel Corp. today increased the dividend on common stock to 65 cents a share, payable March 10 to holders of record February 10.

Payments of 50 cents had been made quarterly since the stock was split 3-for-1 last May 12.

The dividend action came after the corporation reported net income for 1949 of $165,958,806, the highest in 20 years. This was equal to $5.39 a common share and compared with $129,627,845 or $4 a share in 1948.

For the fourth quarter only, which reflected the shutdown during the strike, U. S. Steel earned $32,735,397 equal to $1.01 a share. Income for the preceding three months was $39,171,144 or $1.26 a share.

The strike began Oct. 1 and lasted 42 days.

. . . For Poor U.S. Steel

Senate Unit OK on Co-Op Housing Expected

A DRAFT OF the middle-income housing bill probably will be completed by a Senate Banking Committee sub-committee this week, Chairman Sparkman (D. Ala.) announced last Friday.

The announcement followed by a few days publication of a report on cooperative housing in Europe prepared by the sub-committee on the basis of an inspection and study trip last summer.

The report declared that European cities and countries the committee visited have done a better job of slum elimination than this country, the result being that "we did not see any slums that compare with some right in our Nation's Capital."

While co-operative housing systems have met "with much success" in Europe and low cost government-sponsored housing additionally has contributed to slum clearance, private housing continues to make progress abroad. The chief advantages claimed for co-ops are their ability to erect large scale projects with all advantages of mass purchasing and construction, the committee found.

IT ALSO FOUND that every country visited is continuing its wartime rent controls.

The committee gave the impression that it felt apartment construction in the United States is just beginning to catch up with Europe.

"We saw a large number of apartments and houses for the average family built 20 to 30 years ago that were modern in design and layout," the report said. "The garden type only recently coming into its own in this country is commonplace, and very few of the houses built in the last decade or two were not built in accordance with a neighborhood and community plan."

The report also said:

"While people in European cities are more apt to live in an apartment or flat than they are in our country, it often seemed that we were behind our European brothers in trying to provide adequate housing for our people."

SEN. FLANDERS (R. Vt.) held up co-operatives in business and housing as a possible alternative to pure private enterprise and State "socialism" or Communism at a Harvard University conference on co-operative housing. Flanders is a member of the Senate sub-committee which toured Europe. He described the co-operative movement as "a valuable adjunct to U. S. economy."

Leo N. Goodman, director of the CIO Housing Committee, and Pres. J. William Belanger of the Massachusetts Industrial Union Council were among sponsors of the meeting.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Fair Employment Practices Commission S. 1728 HR 4453	Bars discrimination in industry based on race, creed or color; provides penalties for job bias.	Senate bill on calendar, may come up next month. House supporters seeking to get bill on floor for debate.	Write, wire Senators, Congressmen to support and seek earliest possible vote.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S. 2246 HR 6618	Provides for long-term, low-interest U. S. loans to co-ops for building moderate-cost housing projects, etc.	Senate Banking Committee has completed hearings; House hearings now in progress.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to give bill full support.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors benefits, etc., under social security. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Senate Finance Comm. now holding hearings. CIO to ask further improvements in House bill.	Ask Senators to try to strengthen HR 6000 over present provisions.
Federal Aid To Education S. 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. Has been stuck in House Labor Comm. for months.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to OK Senate bill.
Labor Extension Service Bill S. 110 HR 1380	Provides workers' education program in cooperation with schools, unions, Labor Dept.	Approved by Senate Labor Comm. House Labor Comm. is still studying bill.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to seek early passage.
Mundt-Ferguson Bill S. 2311	Bill endangers civil liberties, union rights — under guise of fighting subversive activities.	CIO opposed bill at hearings last year. Senate Judiciary Comm. may bring out revised bill.	Ask Senators to oppose bill as dangerous to civil rights.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

WEEKLY PUBLICATION
of the
CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00
A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., FEBRUARY 13, 1950 82 No. 7

THE STRONGEST BOND OF HUMAN SYMPATHY OUTSIDE OF THE FAMILY RELATION SHOULD BE ONE UNITING ALL WORKING PEOPLE OF ALL NATIONS AND TONGUES AND KINDREDS

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

UOPWA Loses Its Suit To Prevent Hearings

A LEGAL attempt by the United Office and Professional Workers to stop the Natl. CIO from holding hearings on charges that it is Communist - dominated, and if guilty liable to expulsion, was lost last week.

Judge Burnita Shelton Matthews, in U. S. District Court at Washington, on Feb. 6 dismissed a UOPWA petition for a preliminary injunction restraining the CIO from proceeding with hearings and ousting the union if the evidence justified. Nine other international unions face similar charges.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray said the CIO is "gratified" with Judge Matthews' decision.

"Judge Matthews' ruling fully sustains the validity of the constitutional amendment adopted at the last CIO convention barring Communist-dominated unions from continued affiliation with the CIO. The judge's opinion likewise confirms the procedures followed by the CIO in connection with current investigations against certain affiliates charged with Communist domination."

Further hearings were held in National CIO headquarters on Feb. 6 on the charges against the UOPWA and the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. Hearings have been completed on charges against the United Public Workers and the Food and Tobacco Workers. Still awaiting hearings are the Longshoremen and Warehousemen, Marine Cooks and Stewards, Furniture Workers, American Communications Association, Fishermen, and Fur and Leather Workers.

Brewery Union Security Won

Expanded security benefits affecting 10,000 brewery workers and their families were won in recent negotiations between the CIO Brewery Workers and the Brewers Board of Trade in New York City, William Greenstein, secretary of the union's joint board, announced last week.

Both employes and their families will receive life insurance, accident and sickness benefits, and hospital insurance, with the premiums paid by the employers. Previously, these benefits covered only employes.

Mich., Big S. F. Local Want UFW To Stay CIO

IMPORTANT new support for Pres. Morris Pizer in his fight to keep the United Furniture Workers in the CIO was reported last week from two widely scattered fronts in the nation-wide battle against the Communists.

In San Francisco, Calif., the 1200 members of Local 262, in separate meetings for day and night shift workers, voted unanimously to back Pizer and other pro-CIO leaders in the conflict with Communist party liners. They indorsed his declaration of policy, which had been rejected by the left wing-dominated UFW general executive board, and voted to affiliate with the National UFW Rank and File Committee for the CIO, organized recently to take the pro-CIOers' stand before the membership.

The union's Michigan District Council, at a meeting in Ionia, Mich., unanimously adopted a resolution indorsing Pizer's stand. Local representatives attending the meeting determined to join the rank and file committee and pledged financial support.

The big San Francisco local has long been one of the pro-CIO bulwarks in the UFW. At the membership meetings Pres. Ralph Nuckols explained the campaign for CIO policy within the international and GEB Member Fred Stefan reported on the last board meeting. The resolution to support Pizer was introduced by Recording Secy. Tony Scardaci.

The local named Nuckols, Stefan and Vice Pres. Sylvio Ferrogiaro to membership on the National UFW Rank and File Committee for CIO, which is headed by Thomas Binnall, Gardner, Mass.

Delegates at Ionia were advised that locals representing more than 70% of the membership have already passed resolutions indorsing Pizer and the rank and file committee and the position they are taking, and that the figure probably will be 90% when the international convention is held in June.

It also was announced that thus far every local in the union's Midwestern Region which was acted on sticking with CIO has voted support for Pizer's position, and that not one has indorsed the anti-CIO faction within the union.

Speakers included Jack Hochstadt, of New York, secretary of the rank and file committee, and William Gilbert, of Chicago. Gilbert, formerly Midwest director, was ousted by Organization Dir. Ernest Marsh, who is opposed to Pizer, but later was placed back on the staff by the Illinois and Wisconsin districts. District Pres. William Wieczorak presided.

Hochstadt last month topped a pro-CIO slate of candidates which was swept into office by a landslide vote in Local 76, New York.

Red Caps At Bat For Passenger

CIO redcaps went to bat through their union recently for railroad passengers who use four of the country's largest terminals.

Pres. Willard S. Townsend of the CIO Transport Service Employes, and Leon M. Despres, counsel for the union, protested before the Interstate Commerce Commission against increasing the price for carrying a suitcase from 15c to 25c at terminals in Cincinnati, Columbus, Indianapolis and St. Louis. Union members, Townsend pointed out, are on salary and will derive nothing from the price hike.

GM Electrical Division Vote Ordered For Feb. 28 by NLRB

MORE THAN 28,000 General Motors, Electrical Division, workers will vote in an NLRB election Feb. 28 to determine their collective bargaining agent.

Their choice will be between the new International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, expelled from the CIO last fall on a charge that it was Communist dominated.

The locals involved will be: Local 801, Frigidaire, Dayton, O., 14,500 members; Local 755, Delco, Dayton, 7000; Local 717, Packard, Warren, O., 3500; Local 509, Delco Appliances, Rochester, N. Y., 3000; Local 416, Delco-Remy, New Brunswick, N. J., 400.

THE ELECTION comes almost four months after IUE-CIO petitioned the NLRB for an election among GM workers. In the interim, both the NLRB and the UE used every conceivable means to delay, or, in the case of UE, avert, an election, IUE leaders charge.

UE, in December, went into federal court to seek an injunction against hearings in the GM case. Its attorneys, once they failed in that move, used every delaying tactic possible to prolong the hearings.

While UE, in an attempt to convince the workers it was for quick elections, publicly asked for them, its representatives used completely opposite tactics in the hearing sessions, according to Benjamin Sigal, IUE-CIO attorney.

Dayton has served as the headquarters for the IUE-CIO campaign in GM. There, the two large locals have been pro-CIO for several years. Robert Elsner is president of 801 and E. J. Kraft holds the same position at 755.

William Snoots, secretary of the administrative committee, IUE-CIO, is a member of Local 755. Running on a CIO platform, he was elected president of UE District 7 (state of Ohio) before the expulsion.

The other three locals also have a record of consistent support of CIO policy. Sid Sayers is president of 717, Frank Murray of 509 and Harold K. Merrill of 416. All held the jobs under UE.

In its Canadian district, No. 5, IUE-CIO last week won another NLRB victory over UE, taking a 19-1 triumph at Copper Wire Products, Guelph, Ont.

Unemployment Is Highest In Eight Years

EMPLOYMENT declined by 1,609,000 in January to send the number of the nation's jobless up to 4,480,000—the largest since September, 1941, Secy. of Commerce Sawyer reported last week.

The report was based on a Census Bureau survey made the second week in January. It showed that 56,947,000 people were still working and that another 1,408,000 were in the armed forces.

Sawyer tried to gloss over the situation by stressing the fact that bad weather had cut into farm and construction employment, and the added fact that many of the vanished jobs consisted of Christmas openings.

He took comfort because industrial employment "did not appear to be seriously affected" compared with a year ago, when cutbacks accounted for a larger part of the January job slump.

IN TESTIMONY before the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report less than a month ago, Everett N. Kassalow, executive secretary of the CIO Full Employment Committee, said that in 55 of the 100 major U. S. promotion centers 7% or more of the workers were unemployed.

(Now, in more than 33% of the centers, 12% or more of the workers are jobless. In addition, several million are working only part time.)

One of the contributing factors to increasing unemployment is the failure of industry to plow back some of its profits into expanded production which might be reflected in lowered prices and a consequent increased demand, Kassalow told the committee.

(In 1948 U. S. corporations distributed $7.9 billion in dividends. Profits were somewhat smaller last year, but the liquid cash position of industry was so strong that dividend distribution jumped to $8.4 billion.)

The CIO has warned frequently of increasing unemployment unless prices are cut or wages increased, and job opportunities expanded. It has long urged an expanded housing program, plans for development of resources, equitable taxes, an expanded social security program—more than one-third of all workers are uncovered by the present program—and a $1 per hour minimum wage if the country's economy is to stay healthy.

Food Prices Rise

The same week that the U. S. government reported a postwar high in unemploymnt, Dun & Bradstreet announced that its wholesale food price index was at its highest level since Sept. 13, 1949.

The index for the week ending Feb. 7 stood at $5.80, compared to $5.79 the previous week and $5.66 a year ago. On last Sept. 13 it peaked at $5.85. Dun & Bradstreet attributed the bulk of the increase to a rise in the price of beef.

MISS UTAH OF 1950 is Miss Joanne Hinand of Provo (r.), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hinand, also in the photo. Hinand is grievance committeeman of Provo Local 2701 at Geneva Steel. His glamorous daughter is 18, five feet, six and a half inches tall, weighs 122 pounds, is a student at Bringham Young University at Provo. Hope she'll be Miss America.

CARE Packs For Israel Offered

Leo Perlis, director of CIO's Community Services Committee, has urged local and International CIO unions to support the committee's drive for aid to Histadrut, the General Federation of Jewish Labor in Israel, by purchase of special Passover CARE packages.

"The enormous rate of immigration in recent months has aggravated Israel's economic situation and especially the plight of organized labor in the new state," Perlis said. He pointed out that Histadrut recently had received 100 CARE packages donated by CIO-CSC for needy Israel trade unionists.

Like other CARE packages for Israel, the special Passover package is priced at $10. Orders for the packages are now being received at CARE headquarters, 20 Broad St., New York, N. Y., and through CIO unions throughout the country.

CARE guarantees delivery of the package during the month of March, in time for the Passover holidays, beginning April 1.

Lawrenson Is Upheld By NMU Members

Rank and file members of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union have voted not to suspend Vice-Pres. Jack Lawrenson from office pending a referendum vote by the general membership.

The action was taken in New York and rejected a recommendation of a 15-man trial board. Lawrenson was charged with misfeasance and malfeasance in connection with disorders last year at NMU headquarters.

Steel Union Gives $500,000 To Needy Miners

CIO Steelworkers have sent a gift of $500,000 "to assist needy miners and their families in their struggle against the coal operators."

After conducting a telegraphic poll of the Steelworkers executive board, USA-CIO Pres. Philip Murray sent the half-million dollar check to John Owens, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America.

At the same time Murray appealed to all locals of the million-member steel workers union to send additional funds to help the coal miners.

"The need is great. Your support should be wholesome," Murray told the steel membership.

In his letter to UMW Sec.-Treas. Owens, Murray said:

"I am requesting our affiliated local unions to lend every degree of financial and moral support to the mine workers and their families by making contributions which, I trust, will be helpful in bringing ultimate victory to the United Mine Workers of America."

IN MID-JANUARY Murray had vigorously assailed action by NLRB General Counsel Robert Denham, who filed injunction proceedings against the mine union.

At that time, the CIO president charged that "Denham is challenging the legitimate rights and interests of all of organized labor.

"I have instructed the general counsel of the CIO to lend all possible assistance to the legal staff of the United Mine Workers in support of the basic labor principles involved and in opposition to the proceedings instituted by Denham."

The injunction was handed down Feb. 9.

Since that time, two efforts to resume collective bargaining between the operators and miners have ended in failure. A Taft-Hartley fact-finding board, operating under that law's "national emergency" provisions, has been appointed, and an 80-day injunction may be sought this week.

The union is seeking increases in wages, more substantial welfare fund contributions by employers, and continuance of a number of provisions of the old contract. For several months a large proportion of the miners have been working a three-day work week or less.

MURRAY, in his letter to the Steelworkers' locals, emphasized the "dire need of the mine workers and their families."

"It is imperative, therefore, that our union and its members give to the United Mine Workers of America the fullest measure of support in their valiant struggle against these powerful interests," Murray wrote.

"The war which is being waged against their union can be directed against your own and all other unions by the same combinations of wealth when they deem it expedient to do so."

Thus, the steel union president went on, "it is of the utmost importance that you and our local unions give prompt consideration to this appeal."

Under the steel union constitution, such gifts are sent to the international headquarters and relayed to the beneficiary.

Strikers Stand Firm in Face of Chrysler's Ad Campaign

AS THE strike against the Chrysler Corp. entered its third week, 89,000 CIO Auto Workers stood firm in their campaign for a genuine, foolproof, lasting and guaranteed pension plan.

UAW and Chrysler officials have held two meetings with state and federal conciliators since the strike began with little or no progress reported.

Special meetings of the UAW Chrysler negotiating committee and the Chrysler UAW Conference were held last week to draft recommendations to the company.

(The contract between the union and the company would not ordinarily be open, except for economic provisions, until Aug. 1, 1950. However, a clause in the contract provides that the whole contract is automatically reopened if a strike occurs.)

CONTRACT proposals which the negotiating committee and the national conference will seek will cover such subjects as seniority, grievance procedure, union security and wage inequities.

To meet strike needs, an assessment of $1 a week on all working members of the union, which had been voted by the UAW executive committee, was levied Feb. 9 and will continue for 12 weeks.

And to hit at the strikers' morale, the Chrysler Corp. bought full-page newspaper advertisements which sought to convince not only the strikers but the general public that the company's pension offer is "as good as any."

"The Chrysler offer has been designed to look attractive in the front display windows," UAW Pres. Walter Reuther said, "but the jokers in the eligibility rules hidden in the back room would deny thousands of Chrysler workers with long years of continuous service any pension benefits.

"Chrysler workers who need and are entitled to security in their old age know that the corporation's pension offer is rigged with these jokers to deny them guaranteed pension benefits.

"The 3-cent an hour, cut-rate Chrysler pension won't pay for the kind of sound pension program these workers need and deserve."

REUTHER said that the union does not seek control of a "kitty" or pension fund, as the corporation has charged. He pointed out that company executives know that it is absolutely impossible, under the union's proposal, for UAW to "control" pension funds.

"The company is well aware," Reuther said, "that the union did propose a joint board of arbitration, upon which the union and the company would be equally represented together with a mutually agreed - upon impartial chairman to cast the deciding vote in case of a deadlock."

Chrysler UAW Dir. Norman Matthews said the company charge of union control of a "kitty" is a deliberate smokescreen to hide Chrysler's real motives in forcing the strike upon its workers.

"The simple facts," Matthews declared, "are that Chrysler is not willing to give its workers the economic concessions which other corporations have granted through collective bargaining. The Chrysler company does not want to establish a pension program based upon an actuarially sound trust fund which alone can guarantee the payment of pension benefits."

CIO Educators Study Programs

Union teachers from three CIO affiliates put their heads together last week on a project to improve workers' education projects.

They got together at Pawling, N. Y.—where Tom Dewey also maintains a farm—to talk over ways and means of making union school projects more interesting and valuable to the membership.

Sponsoring the project was the CIO Dept. of Education and Research, in cooperation with the education sections of the United Auto Workers, the Textile Workers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. On hand were George Guernsey of the CIO Education Dept.; Larry Rogin, textile; Robert Levin, clothing; Brendan Sexton, auto union; and about 10 education staff people from each union.

It was the first such get-together of education staffs under CIO auspices.

Telephone Strike Deadline Postponed

THE CIO Communications Workers' Executive Board, in response to an urgent request by Federal Mediator Cyrus S. Ching, last week postponed for 16 days the threatened nationwide strike against the Bell Telephone System.

CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne anounced the postponement 24 hours before the union-set strike deadline "in accordance with Ching's request for more time to bring about a peaceful settlement of the telephone wage dispute." The new deadline is Feb. 24 at 6 a.m. in each time zone.

Beirne had accused the Bell System of "trying to settle the telephone wage dispute in the newspapers with a batch of phony statistics based on small, selected groups of workers and through a personal smear campaign.

"This technique is not conducive to good collective bargaining relations. It doesn't help prevent strikes."

After the strike postponement, Beirne said that the union had asked the Federal Communications Commission and 48 state regulatory bodies to investigate the wave on "anti-union advertising" which has been placed in daily newspapers throughout the country.

CWA also asked the rate-making bodies to rule on whether this advertising is a "properly allowable operating expense to be paid for by the phone-using public."

Beirne said that the union was not requesting the commissions to decide the strike issue. "We are, though," he said, "asking that a ruling be made on whether advertising aimed specifically at prevention of wage improvement in the telephone industry is a properly allowable operating expense to be paid for by the telephone-using public."

Telephone Workers in "sunny" (no 'ad'), southern California, employed by the Associated Telephone Co., voted overwhelmingly last week for CWA in an NLRB election. Results: CWA, 1916; IBEW, 694; no union, 209.

"Telephone companies have obtained annual rate increases since the war totaling $348 million," he declared. "It is high time rate-making bodies call a halt to the Bell System's campaign to jack up rates, while at the same time spending much of the money they get from the higher rates to put on high pressure anti-union advertising campaigns."

Beirne called on Bell management to "sit down at the bargaining table with the union and to do some real collective bargaining. If this is done, the issues can be settled by Feb. 24 and there will be no need for a strike."

IN NEW YORK, CWA Div. 6 Pres. Ernest Weaver, head of 11,000 Western Electric installers, looked upon the delay as little more than an armed truce.

"The effect of the postponement has been to make the company tougher and more smug in its attitude," he said. "It is less willing than ever to get down to the issues involved."

Weaver said he had "no doubts" but that the company would "take full advantage of the lull to propagandize employes in every way possible." He expressed skepticism about the possibility of the company accepting the findings of a fact-finding board, if one were established.

PRES. ERNEST WEAVER of Div. 6, CIO Communications Workers, looks skeptically at a message from Federal Mediator Cyrus S. Ching asking postponement of the scheduled nation-wide Bell Telephone strike set for Feb. 8. Weaver said he felt nothing could be gained by delaying the strike. Shown with him (l. to r.) are Thomas R. Steutel, Commissioner of the Federal Mediation Service; Vice Pres. M. W. Gray of CWA Div. 6; and Yolanda Dioguardi, secretary to CWA officials. The CWA board later postponed the strike until Feb. 24.

Prejudice Is Like A Cancer

It Gnaws At The Vitals Of Democracy And Often Causes Men To Make A Mockery Of Civil Liberties

By ALLAN L. SWIM

PERHAPS it was only a minor incident but it illustrated one of the nation's major problems—the problem of prejudice.

A junior high school teacher in a Washington, D. C., suburb told her class a group of students from New York City planned to visit their school.

"They'd like to spend the night in our homes and get better acquainted with us," she said. "Will all of you who can take care of a guest or two raise your hands?"

Hands shot up all over the room.

"I think I'd better tell you that some of the boys and girls who are going to visit us are Jewish," she said. She called for a second showing of hands.

A few hands shot into the air quickly. A few more were raised slowly. And a number of pupils who had raised their hands the first time refrained from doing so the second time.

This incident occurred only a few miles from the "citadel of democracy"—the halls of Congress—and just outside the borders of our capital—a city that practices race segregation.

It occurred at the same time that a group of lawmakers were engaging in some fancy parliamentary footwork designed to keep Congress from even considering FEPC legislation.

AND IT OCCURRED during a period of history in which our nation finds itself greatly embarrassed every time it tries to sell the colored peoples of the world the idea that they should prefer our form of democracy to communism.

Should we blame the teacher? Should we blame her parents? Should the students be blamed?

Or should we blame it all on the type of teaching and behavior which over the years have planted the seeds of prejudice in too many minds?

Fighting for civil rights legislation is one thing and fighting prejudice is something else.

They're closely connected, it's true—and if there was no race and religious prejudice in our land we wouldn't need much of the legislation the "rights" advocates are pushing.

There would be no need for a FEPC, for example, if there was no such thing as job discrimination based on color and creed.

Perhaps that's merely pointing out the obvious. Maybe that's like saying it would be hot if it wasn't cold.

But it's something that should be said again and again—and it's something that should be given close attention by those who abhor discrimination.

Legislation obviously could remedy some of the abuses—but more than legislation is needed.

I FORMED a violent dislike for the Chinese people about the time I started to school, although I had never talked with an Oriental.

It took me years to overcome the feeling—and it didn't disappear entirely until I became fairly well acquainted with a Chinese merchant.

My prejudice was entirely without foundation—as most of them are. It made no sense whatsoever. It was based on misinformation—or on a lack of information.

And nobody—in school, church or elsewhere—took the trouble to tell me as a youngster that I shouldn't be prejudiced against the Chinese.

I don't recall having heard any of my teachers discuss tolerance or discrimination. Race relations was a taboo subject in my school. The Negro children of my town attended classes on "the other side of the tracks."

THOSE of us who profess to believe in democracy can do much—if we only will—to fight prejudice and the unhealthy social conditions which result from it.

It's a fight that can be waged nearly anywhere—in our apartment houses, in our neighborhoods, in our clubs, our unions, our churches and our schools.

The first step to be taken, of course, is to rid our own minds of prejudice and then to go to work on our families and friends.

Why not give it a trial?

After all, prejudice is a cancer which eats at the vitals of democracy.

GOPpledegook!

Not long ago the Republicans were sending up trial balloons which indicated the GOP battle-cry for 1950 might be "Down With the Welfare State."

At that time the GOPsters were making fiery speeches in opposition to something they called "statism."

Party big-wigs, however, got together in Washington last week and came up with a new slogan—"Liberty Against Socialism."

That obviously will be their campaign theme this year.

The implication, of course, is that the GOP is at least 100% for liberty and that the Truman Administration stands for something bad—something called socialism.

As part of its "liberty" program the GOP advocates—

"A continuation of the Taft-Hartley Law because it has restored equality between employer and employes. . . ."

The Republicans' new "platform" states that "the major domestic issue today is liberty against socialism. . . ."

It says that "basic American principles are threatened by the Administration's program for a planned economy modeled on the Socialist governments of Europe. . . ."

Maybe some of the stuff the GOP is trying to peddle in its "platform" would sound good if you didn't know what it meant.

Here's what it means:

The Republicans are opposed to the Fair Deal program which the CIO favors. It wants to have nothing to do with federal health insurance, rent control, the Brannan farm plan or developments like TVA.

"Gobbledegook" is a term used around Washington to describe the using of many conflicting words instead of a few simple ones. Give the term a slight twist and you have "GOPpledegook," which aptly describes the new GOP "platform."

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer
Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher
Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28 1925.

Vol. XIII February 13, 1950 No. 7

U. S. Seeks Facts On Women's Night Work

DO WOMEN work at night because they like to or because they have to do it?

Is it good for them? How many women are at work while the rest of us sleep? Is some legislative control needed, and, if so, what standards should be set? How essential is night work?

These are some of the questions considered in a new pamphlet on "Night Work for Women in Hotels and Restaurants," just issued by the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor. The study is based on an exploratory survey of night employment of women in these industries in three states—Connecticut, Georgia and Indiana.

The findings tend to illustrate the complexity of the problems encountered in a consideration of night work rather than to provide conclusive answers.

Restaurants and hotels were selected for the study because that is where some night work is a more or less permanent feature, and because they employ important numbers of women. Pressures to repeal or modify restrictions on night employment of women in restaurants have in recent years focused concern on this industry in particular.

ONE OF THE important factors noted in the findings is that long hours and night work are linked together in both the hotel and restaurant industries. Many of the women studied were working longer than 48 hours a week. A large majority of the hotel workers interviewed were found to be working six shifts a week. In one area, nearly a fourth of the women employed at night worked seven shifts.

Sound public policy with regard to night employment of women, the report indicates, must rest upon fuller understanding of present basic employment problems. A broad approach to the problem must include consideration both of appropriate legislation and of policies that lie outside the realm of legislation.

The development of better community services for the convenience of women, for example, would give them greater freedom to accept daytime employment.

Management Action Kills Safety Code Group

MANAGEMENT action has forced the Ohio Industrial Commission to dissolve the advisory committee on revision of factory safety codes.

Now the commission will take upon itself the task, as required by law.

For the past three years, a general advisory committee containing an equal number of labor and management representatives, has been discussing safety code revision. Most of the work has been done by a technical subcommittee, which periodically reported to the full group.

Management spokesmen repeatedly refused labor's request that technical experts assist the committee. Management recently refused to allow Roland P. Blake, principal safety engineer of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, to advise the committee. This created the impasse.

Secy.-Treas. Jacob Clayman of the Ohio CIO Council said: "This is crystal-clear proof that management representatives never had any intention of writing honest safety codes that would adequately protect the workers."

CIO representatives on the advisory committee have been Clayman; Robert Cousino, Auto Workers; Chester Hosmer, Steelworkers; and John Kumpel, Rubber Workers.

Substitute Bills Like Health Plan

DESPITE repeated claims that the national health insurance bill is "dead," its opponents continue to introduce substitutes. And each substitute is more like national health insurance than its predecessor.

That's the observation of Committee for the Nation's Health.

During the first few weeks of the current Congressional session, "more substitute proposals for the national health insurance bill have been made than during all of the last four years," CNH reports.

"All of these 1950 bills—or proposed bills—are health programs which (1) do not depend on the charity principle; (2) are national health bills, some with large federal powers; (3) are intended to cover a large proportion of the population, and (4) include members of both political parties among their sponsors.

"Thus the record shows," CNH concludes, "that despite the AMA's huge campaign of negation," the legislators recognize the need of a centralized program.

"There goes Mr. Let's-All-Work-Together."

They 'Settled Down' To 'Regular' Living

IT'S OFTEN said that the "unsung heroes" of the union movement are the wives of the organizers.

And it's also often said that a veteran organizer is like an old fire horse who can't remain in his stall when there's a blaze around.

Throughout the nation there is a number of women who'll agree heartily about both these points.

This is a story about one of them—and her family.

THE HUSBAND is an old campaigner who has worked in more cities than he can recall offhand.

He started organizing back in the days when "union skates" had to be physically tough to survive.

He moved around from one spot to another, frequently on no more than an hour's notice. Sometimes his wife moved with him. Sometimes she joined him a day or so later.

When the war began, the husband was working for a union that expanded rapidly under the impetus of increased armaments production.

The organizer stepped up his activities accordingly. Sometimes he was so busy he hardly knew whether he was coming or going.

He would be in New England one day and in the South the next. He got home when he could, which was seldom.

AFTER THE WAR ended, the organizer and his wife decided they were tired of living almost like Gypsies and that they should settle down.

Eventually he found the type of job he wanted—a good, steady job with regular hours and no traveling.

He would still be connected—indirectly—with the union movement but there would be no more of this business of handing out leaflets when the midnight shift changed.

No longer would he have to worry about getting cracked on the head by employer goons.

Ah, he was going to live like a man should—at home with his family. He felt good just to think about it.

THE ORGANIZER soon became an ex-organizer and moved to a city which wasn't famous for its hustle and bustle.

He bought a home—a nice, comfortable place not far from some of his wife's relatives.

At this point he was telling himself he had been a sap for years—running around the country like a madman, working his heart out for people who seemed never to fully appreciate the value of unions.

He was congratulating himself on his wise decision to lead a "normal" life.

And his wife felt that at last they were going to be "citizens"—people who became part of a community—people with roots.

THE EX-ORGANIZER and his wife moved into their new home and settled back to enjoy their new life.

Two nights later their telephone rang. The late Van A. Bittner, who had just been named director of the CIO Organizing Committee, was on the wire.

"Say," said Bittner, "we're just launching our Southern drive and I've got an important assignment for you. When can you report for work?"

Within a couple of days the new house had been sold—at a loss—and the ex-organizer was an organizer again.

And his wife was seated beside him in their car as they sped toward Dixie.

That was in the summer of 1946. The organizer is still on the job.

And he still threatens occasionally to lead a "normal" life. A. L. S.

Miss. Publisher Says CIO Helps Business Community

HODDING CARTER, Greenville, Miss., publisher and nationally known author, is one Dixie newspaperman who thinks the CIO's Southern organizing campaign has been a good thing.

He expressed his opinion of "Operation Dixie" in an interview recently at Greensboro, N. C., where he went for an address at the Women's College of the Univ. of North Carolina.

Carter told a simple story to illustrate the economic implications of unionism.

"As a publisher," he said, "I have to keep informed on advertising expenditures and other business barometers, particularly in cities in my region of a size comparable with my own town of Greenville." (Greenville has a population of about 35,000.)

CARTER said he had particularly watched Laurel, Miss., also in the 35,000 class, which four years ago had no labor organization but which today has 6500 CIO members. CIO union contracts have added more than $5 million to Laurel's annual payrolls.

"There is much more business activity in Laurel than in other cities of the same size in my area," Carter declared. "And particularly, I know there is more newspaper advertising carried in the local paper in Laurel than in these other cities."

Carter said he wished more labor union members would run for, and be supported for, public office, particularly on the state and local levels. "We need them," he said, "for a true representation by a cross-section of the community."

A foe of Federal fair employment practices legislation, Carter said democratic trade unionism, as practiced by the CIO, without discrimination because of race, creed or color, is accomplishing more toward abolishing segregation than can ever be gained by law.

Carter urged trade unionists to improve their advertising and public relations techniques and facilities. "Big business is getting its story before the public," he declared, "but labor, handicapped by lack of money for advertising, is not.

"What labor lacks and needs is large and powerful organs of public opinion."

IN HIS public address Carter ridiculed States Righters' cries of "Federal intervention."

"It was all right with the people in Mississippi for the federal government to 'intervene' with levees to prevent floods," he said. "Federal interference by establishing crop controls brought no protest."

He voiced approval of federal aid to education and called for further adjustment of freight rates to aid the South.

"A Marshall Plan for the South might be a good idea," he said, pointing out that the region "stands at the bottom of the list" in material things such as schools, industry and per capita income.

CARTER PRAISED recent Southern progress in improvement of farming methods, diversification of crops and the turning of wornout cotton lands into grain fields and pastures.

He noted a rapid increase in Negro registration and voting, prompted in part by outside pressure, and said they generally voted for men and measures that best benefited the public generally. "Civil rights legislation as a whole," he said, "can't help and won't hurt the region."

Carter praised Gov. Kerr Scott and Sen. Frank Graham as public office holders. He did not mention the State's other national legislators.

Conservative Or Liberal?

One of his friends once described Hodding Carter as "a man many people swear by—and a lot of people swear at." His implication was that those who knew Carter or knew about him weren't neutral in their judgment of him.

Carter is known in his own State as a liberal—and sometimes as a radical. In other sections he's often referred to as a conservative with a trend toward liberalism.

Advocates of stronger civil rights usually are sharply critical of his argument that the South must work out its own race problems without resort to new laws and without help or interference from other sections of the country.

Virginia IUC Head At Church Parley

The Methodist Church has appointed the Rev. Charles C. Webber, president of the Virginia State Industrial Union Council, as a delegate to the National Study Conference on the Church and Economic Life to be held Feb. 16-19 in Detroit.

The conference is sponsored by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Delegates representing more than 30 States and 28 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations will study a new Christian approach to economic problems.

Age Insurance Covers Too Few—And Inadequately

By D. ROCKWELL CLARK

YOU WORK all your life in a "covered" job, and you and your employer each pay the Federal government a tax of 1½% on the first $3000 of your yearly earnings.

You retire at 65, and receive a monthly tax-free pension check from the government, financed by the special taxes you and your employer have paid all those years. You also get a small check for each dependent.

This method was set up 12 years ago. Its full and formal name is the Old Age and Survivors' Insurance System, and it is a major part of the Social Security law.

It's full of holes. Congress is slowly getting around to patching some of them.

THE FIXED monthly payments to pensioners have been getting punier every year in relation to the cost of living.

It doesn't cover enough people, inadequate as it is, and the "covered" people aren't protected in enough ways.

LAST YEAR, spurred by CIO's big drive for pensions paid by private employers, the House finally passed a new Social Security bill (HR 6000), upping benefits by an average of 70% and covering 11 million more workers.

The Senate didn't act. Now the conservative Senate Finance Committee is holding hearings to decide whether it wants to approve the House bill and report it out to the Senate floor for action.

CIO witnesses will go before the committee Feb. 27 to give their reaction to HR 6000.

In a nutshell, they'll say HR 6000 is good as far as it goes, but they think it should go farther.

The chart above gives the story, as far as it can be reduced to such a simple form.

There are two important angles which cannot be shown on a chart. One is the definition of "average wage" and the other is what is meant by "fully insured."

Under the present law, your "average" wage is simply a mathematical average. Your total earnings in "covered" employment are divided by the number of months between the time you first went to work and the time you reached 65.

This means that if you are totally or temporarily disabled or unable to find a job in "covered" employment, your future insurance benefits drop. Also, your low earnings when you were learning your job are a drag against your later, higher income.

UNDER HR 6000, periods of total disability would not drag your average down.

The CIO says the "average" should simply be an average of what you made during your "best five consecutive years" in "covered" employment.

Suppose that you are now 65. In the past 20 years you have worked in a "covered" job for 15 years and been totally disabled for five years. You started out earning $100 a month but for the last 10 years you worked you made $400 each month.

Under the present law, your "average wage" would be about $150 a month. Under HR 6000, your "average" would be about $233. Under the CIO proposal your "average" would be $400. Under all three proposals, the benefits paid are based on the "average wage."

(Adoption of the CIO method of figuring the average would considerably increase benefits paid, even under present law.)

WHEN YOU STOP WORKING

Here is what your Social Security tax would bring you under present law, under HR 6000, and if CIO's proposals were adopted. The figures assume you are a "fully insured" worker and have been paying Social Security tax for 20 years.

	AT 65			BEFORE 65
"Average" wage	Single	Married: wife UNDER 65*	Married: wife OVER 65	If you're permanently disabled	If you're temporarily disabled	If you're unemployed
$100 mo.	Now: $30 HR 6000: $55 CIO: $60	Now: $30 HR 6000: $55 CIO: $80	Now: $45 HR 6000: $80 CIO: $80	Now: NOTHING	Now: NOTHING.	Present benefits depend on state laws: average $21 a week for not more than 22 weeks.
$150 mo.	Now: $36 HR 6000: $60.50 CIO: $72	Now: $36 HR 6000: $60.50 CIO: $126	Now: $54 HR 6000: $90.75 CIO: $108	HR 6000: Same as "old age" insurance, for head of family; NOTHING for dependents.	HR 6000: NOTHING.	HR 6000 proposes no change in this.
$200 mo.	Now: $42 HR 6000: $66 CIO: $84	Now: $42 HR 6000: $66 CIO: $126	Now: $63 HR 6000: $99 CIO: $126	CIO: Same as "old age" insurance, including payment for dependents.	CIO: National system, with weekly benefits ranging from 50% of earnings for single worker, up to 70% for 3 or more dependents: maximum of $45 a week.	CIO wants a national system with improved benefits.
$250 mo.	Now: $48 HR 6000: $71.50 CIO: $96	Now: $48 HR 6000: $71.50 CIO: $144	Now: $72 HR 6000: $107.25 CIO: $144
$300 mo.	Now: $48 HR 6000: $77 CIO: $108	Now: $48 HR 6000: $77 CIO: $162	Now: $72 HR 6000: $115.50 CIO: $162
$400 mo.	Now: $48 HR 6000: $77 CIO: $132	Now: $48 HR 6000: $77 CIO: $198	Now: $72 HR 6000: $115.50 CIO: $198

EXTRA EARNINGS; Now, you forfeit the ENTIRE payment if you earn more than $14.99 a month in covered employment after 65. HR 6000 allows extra earnings of $50 a month and for sums above $50 makes only a prorata deduction. CIO agrees, so does Administration.

Under the present law and HR 6000, the wife must be 65 before she can draw dependent benefits; CIO says this should be dropped to 60, and that women insured in their own right also should start collecting benefits at 60. Administration witnesses also favor this change.*

THE MATTER of what is meant by "fully insured" is vastly complicated. At present, to be "fully insured" so that you know you will get your Social Security payments at 65 even if you quit work tomorrow for good, you have to have worked approximately 10 years steadily, in a "covered" job.

If you shift around, as most people do, your total working time in "covered" jobs has to add up to about 10 years.

(If you work any time at all during any given three-month period you are "covered" for that three months, however, so that you actually could receive only four pay-checks a year and still keep your good standing with Social Security, so to speak.)

HR 6000 and CIO would both liberalize this provision; but in making it easier for everyone to get "fully insured" the system must operate so that the "late comers"—i. e., the people newly covered by proposed changes in the law—get their fair share of benefits, no more and no less. A good many millions of persons now nearing 65 would be brought under the law for the first time if HR 6000 passed, and even more would come in if Congress adopted the CIO proposal.

Many people now "fully insured," and millions of the newly insured, would be entitled to fantastically small benefits under the present law if it did not contain a provision stating that the least any fully insured beneficiary would receive is $10 a month. HR 6000 raises this minimum to $25, and the CIO would up it to $50.

The present law also sets a maximum family benefit of $85 a month, or 80% of the worker's "average" wage, or twice his primary benefit, whichever is LOWER. This is all the entire family can receive from Social Security no matter how many dependents are involved.

HR 6000 would raise this family maximum to $150 a month or 80% of the "average" wage, whichever is lower. The CIO plan would set it at 80% of the "average wage," with no dollar ceiling.

THE "SURVIVORS" feature of the present law also needs improvement. The law provides that widows and dependent children of fully insured workers receive a certain proportion of the benefits that would have been paid to the husband and father if he had lived to be 65. HR 6000 and CIO would liberalize these payments in two ways, by changing the proportion paid and by raising the primary benefits.

Now, the widow of a worker who had been in "covered" jobs for 20 years and had "averaged" $300 a month receives $36 a month plus $24 for the first child. She cannot get the full $24 for the second child, however, if she has two, because she runs into the $85 ceiling.

Under HR 6000 she would receive $57.75 a month plus $57.75 for the first child and $38.50 each for others, up to the $150 ceiling. Under the CIO proposal she would get $81.00 a month plus $81.00 for the first child plus additional amounts for the other children, up to a maximum of $240 a month.

(And of course the "average" wage might be higher under HR 6000 and almost certainly would be under the CIO proposal, because of CIO's "best-five-years" method of calculation.)

SEPARATE from the "Social Security" system but considered in the same bill is the question of direct relief to the aged. The Social Security benefits are earned; the relief program is jointly financed by the states and the federal treasury and the money, such as it is, goes to the most needy whether they have worked in covered jobs or not.

The Federal government puts up part of this money and the states the rest. At present, relief checks for the aged average $42 a month compared with an average of $25 for Social Security benefits; the Social Security payments are so low that 10% of those who receive them are also on direct relief.

CIO is interested in taking people off the relief rolls and hence is concentrating its efforts on bettering the Social Security system and broadening its coverage.

CIO is also pulling for a uniform system of unemployment compensation, managed the same way in each state, with a schedule of minimum benefits.

THE CIO technicians in the field of Social Security met Feb. 3 to work out details for submission to the full Social Security Committee, which was scheduled to meet Feb. 13. Originally, CIO witnesses were to appear Feb. 16 and 17 before the Senate group, but their appearance has been postponed.

Members of the technicians' group are: Mrs. Katherine Ellickson, CIO Research Dept.; Paul Sifton, a Washington representative for the CIO Auto Workers; Harry Becker, Director of Social Security Dept., UAW-CIO; John Edelman, Washington representative for the Textile Workers; Kenneth Kramer, TWUA Director of Insurance and Health, and Sylvia Gottlieb, Communications Workers.

TWUA Pres. Emil Rieve is chairman of the CIO Social Security Committee and will present the CIO case on Capitol Hill.

Other committee members are: Secy.-Treas. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers; Secy.-Treas. Emil Mazey of the Auto Workers; Vice Pres. Joseph Childs of the Rubber Workers; Pres. Irving Simon of Retail, Wholesale; Vice Pres. John Yancey of Transport Service; CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne, and Secy.-Treas. Jacob Clayman of the Ohio CIO Council.

Retired Textile Worker Loves Beef But Hasn't Eaten Any For A Year

CONGRESS has been talking about improving the Social Security law for just about a year, now.

Last March, a former member of the CIO Textile workers told the House Ways and Means Committee just how he was making out on Social Security insurance.

"Every time we would get a dollar ahead, something would happen to take it," said 73-year-old George F. Lewey of Danville, Va., explaining to the committee how it was he had not been able to put anything by. He and his wife were living on $52.09 Social Security a month, with the rest of a $1900 hospital bill to pay, and an annual tax bill of $150 on their small frame house.

"And," Lewey continued, "we have to take care of my wife's 90-year-old mother. We cannot keep her at home because her mind comes and goes. But we clothe her, we send her a lot of stuff and take her a lot of stuff and she has to have somebody over her all the time."

WHAT HAVE the Leweys done since last March, while Congress fiddled?

He spends most of his time at home, "keeping things straight." The Leweys have retreated into small quarters in order to house four roomers who together bring in $13.80 a week. (Taking in roomers is OK under the present law because it is not "covered employment"—the Leweys can do this and still keep their $52.09.) The elderly mother is still alive, and fortunately all three are in good health "because if we got sick, we'd have to borrow."

Lewey says he has to skimp on many things—"principally eats"—to keep his family together. He has looked for a job that would pay enough to make it worthwhile, but hasn't been able to find anything.

"I'd do anything, too," he says. "The only money that goes into the bank is to prepare for the tax bill. Then it comes out. If we run into any crisis whatsoever I'll have to cash in my one remaining little insurance policy—and you don't get anything that way."

Lewey loves the taste of beef but hasn't eaten any in over a year.

Clamor For Denham's Removal Becomes Roar

By GERVASE N. LOVE

IT CAN'T be very nice to be Robert N. Denham these days.

On the surface, things don't look bad at all. But the office (complete with shower) that the general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board occupies in Washington isn't the entire United States.

Solidly built as the office is, it can't keep out the rising chorus from the guys back home that Pres. Truman find someone else for Denham's job.

That's Denham's position. It's nothing new. The clamor started months ago — last summer, in fact. It has been intensified in the last few weeks because of his speeches, such as that calling on employers in a New York address to haul the NLRB into court whenever they don't like one of its decisions. Denham is supposed to defend the NLRB when its rulings are attacked.

ONE OF THE earliest cries came from the Communications Workers of America, then a brand new member of the CIO family. At their convention last summer the delegates called upon Pres. Truman to remove Denham from office "because of his inability to remain impartial and an obvious leaning toward management in his decisions."

CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne renewed that request a month ago after Denham's New York speech.

"A man who openly espouses the cause of management in labor disputes," said Beirne, "does not belong in a position like Denham's."

The Oil Workers likewise were pioneers in the demand for Denham's ouster, and they're still demanding that some one who will give labor an even break—it wants nothing more—be named to succeed him.

Last August Pres. O. A. Knight of the Oil Workers called upon the President to fire Denham after the latter had refused to schedule hearings before the NLRB in the cases of 300 OWUI members fired by California oil companies.

In October an NLRB trial examiner set a pattern when he recommended that 40 of the workers be reinstated by the Standard Oil Co. of California. Denham belatedly went into action and informed the union that he had ordered California regional directors to issue charges of unfair labor practices in cases involving 253 additional men.

In December, Knight pleaded with Pres. Truman to appoint a special general counsel to handle another case involving the discharge of about 800 OWUI members by the Union Oil Co. of California after a strike. Denham had refused to act.

MORE recently the Intl. Oil Worker, official newspaper of the union, branded him "dictator of the NLRB" and declared he had again proved himself "biased, prejudiced and unfit to hold American public office."

His oath of office, the paper pointed out in an editorial, requires him to administer the law impartially, "but apparently Denham is attempting to convince the world that he hates labor unions." It cited another speech in which he attacked the AFL Teamsters Union and hinted it was a dangerous organization because of the power it could wield.

"It is not his duty to make speeches about the POSSIBLE offenses the Teamsters MIGHT commit," said the editorial. "But that seems to be Denham's way of doing things—finding all unions guilty before ever giving them a trial . . Find 'em guilty before they even do anything.

"As long as he holds office, Denham will be a shameful blotch on the proud American flag."

In an editorial in Advance, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers laid out Denham for his appeal to employers to take NLRB decisions against them to the courts. It said in part:

"Denham's bias against organized labor has been a long-known fact. His differences with the board likewise have been known. In his New York speech he stated bluntly that he felt the board was not tough enough in administering the Taft-Hartley anti-labor law.

"The Taft-Hartley law was enacted as a deliberate vehicle for crippling labor. Denham obviously feels that the law does not go far enough and prefers to bend it to his own use providing that the employer is the beneficiary.

"Under those conditions Denham is not a fit person for the job. Since he does not seem inclined to resign, he should, therefore, be removed without further ado. And the sooner the better."

Twice last week—or at least twice—the cry for his ouster came again. The executive council of the CIO Textile Workers unanimously passed a resolution asking for his discharge on the ground he has "thoroughly discredited the office he holds, and has demonstrated his utter unfitness to hold it."

THE EXECUTIVE council of the American Federation of Labor, at its midwinter meeting, also branded him unqualified to hold his job and asked for his dismissal.

A few weeks ago the CIO Auto Workers' executive board called for the removal of Denham from office.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray threw the full weight of his prestige behind the drive to rid the NLRB of Denham after the latter's New York speech. Murray said his statement "again demonstrated his anti-labor bias and his unfitness for office."

"This action is sufficient proof (if any additional proof is needed) that Denham is incapable of administering the important post of General Counsel of the board with the fairness and impartiality that office requires," he said.

"During the CIO Convention, I issued a statement calling upon President Truman to remove Denham. The President possesses ample power to take this action. This latest intemperate statement by the board's general counsel demonstrates that his removal is long overdue."

I-Break-Strikes Denham

ROBERT N. DENHAM, NLRB general counsel, not only breaks strikes but goes about the country bragging about it.

In a speech in Los Angeles on Feb. 6 he claimed credit for himself and the Taft-Hartley Act for forcing members of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union to end their walkout at three Carlsbad, N. M., potash mines and go back to work without attaining their goals.

He expressed much pleasure over the fact that the farmers will now get their fertilizer, which contains potash. He expressed no concern at all over the fact that the strikers were forced to return to their jobs at outmoded pay rates.

THE STRIKE started Nov. 19, 1949, when the operators of the potash mines refused a wage increase. The mines were shut down and pickets kept them shut.

"The matter went on and eventually came to our attention," Denham boasted. "About three weeks ago we obtained an injunction to prevent mass picketing or other interference with any of those persons who desired to go to work (maintenance men), or otherwise do business with the company.

"At first there wasn't a great rush to go back on the job, because the production workers were the strikers, but maintenance men returned immediately, and within 10 days or so production had been resumed, with potash coming out at about 50% of the normal rate.

"Many of the strikers had returned, and after the injunction had been in effect two weeks, the company advised the union and the strikers that a certain date would be the time when other persons would be hired to replace the striking production men. I was advised just before I left Washington that during that day the striking union had offered to return to work en masse if the company would just stop hiring replacements and would put those men who had been replaced on a preferential rehiring list.

"BY NOW, I take it, the mines are in full production. The injunction's efficacy was excellent. Potash is again being produced, and the farmers, solely because of the Taft-Hartley Act and its injunction provisions, stand a reasonable chance of getting their supplies of fertilizer again this year. Had there been no Taft-Hartley Act, and had the Wagner Act continued on the books as it was, the mines would still be closed unless, of course, the operators had surrendered to the union and met their demands."

Denham described the Taft-Hartley Act as "basically, the biggest step forward this nation has ever made in doing something to insure stability of labor relations."

ANYTHING DEAD, LIKE A SLAIN UNION, IS BOUND TO BE STABLE.

PAC Backs Roosevelt, Mrs. Helen Douglas

By WILLIAM MILLIS

"FOR VICTORY in '50, it's Helen Gahagan Douglas and James Roosevelt for CIO-PAC!"

Such was the major decision last week of the California Natl. CIO-PAC.

Meeting for two days in San Francisco, executive board and central committee members of the State PAC hammered out a program on trade union economic and political action issues to guide the state's 200,000 CIO members in the present interim period until a new California CIO Council is organized.

HERE IS A digest of major PAC decisions:

Full and unqualified indorsement of Mrs. Douglas for U. S. senator, because she provides the leadership necessary "to subdue and defeat the forces of reaction from both the extreme right and the extreme left."

Hearty support of James Roosevelt for governor on "his program of jobs and employment, housing, public health, civil rights, use of water resources and other major issues."

Indorsement of State Sen. George Miller, Jr. (D., Contra Costa) for lieutenant governor, and backing of eight candidates for Congress.

A call for all-out backing of the CIO Communications Workers, who face a possible national strike against the Bell System.

An appeal to all CIO locals for prompt and effective support of United Auto Workers Locals 230 and 844, now on strike against Chrysler Corp.

Support of Fair Deal "must" legislation, including Taft-Hartley repeal, in the 81st Congress.

Full backing to the Packinghouse Workers of America in the "Don't Buy Wilson" campaign.

AN APPEAL for effective fund raising, both through voluntary "PAC Dollar" drives for federal candidates and local union contributions for state and county candidates, to finance the fast-developing primary election campaign.

Condemnation of Gov. Warren's policy on unemployment, and organization of a statewide petition drive to force the jobless issue before the Legislature in March.

Condemnation of any U. S. moves to assist Franco Spain, and a request to National CIO—in line with decisions of the last CIO convention denouncing the totalitarian Madrid regime—to demand that the State Dept. maintain its "hands off" diplomatic policy toward Franco's fascist regime and continue to support the United Nations boycott of Franco.

PAC Pres. Joseph van Elsen, of UAW Local 560, Richmond, was chairman of the weekend meeting, while major reports were presented by State Dir. Morris Zusman and Secy.-Treas. John A. Despol.

HERE IS THE full list of congressional candidates endorsed by the state central committee of the California Natl. CIO-PAC:

Sixth District, Rep. George Miller, Jr.; 10th District, Artes Walker; 12th District, Stephen Zetterberg; 16th District, Mrs. Esther Murray; 17th District, Rep. Cecil King; 18th District, Rep. Clyde Doyle; 19th District, Rep. Chet Holifield; 21st District, Rep. Harry Sheppard.

(State PAC was guided in congressional indorsements by the recommendations of CIO local unions and of the Greater Los Angeles CIO Council. In other congressional districts, after investigation by CIO locals, recommendations will be determined by a poll of state central committee members.)

Four Hours To Vote, All Paid By Boss

CIO Textile Workers' local 1064, in Allentown, Pa., has put political action into a contract.

TWUA's new agreement with the International Felt Co. provides (a) a four-hour paid holiday for registration purposes and (b) a four-hour paid holiday on Election Day. The company has the option of staggering employment or closing the mill on these two days.

Court Gives FTC New Teeth

The U. S. Supreme Court gave the Federal Trade Commission some strong new teeth Feb. 6. Now the agency can force a corporation to supply facts and figures showing whether it is complying with a cease and desist order obtained by FTC in the courts.

FTC, which has the job of regulating business practices to protect competition and the public interest, had been defied by two salt manufacturers. Morton Salt Co. and International Salt Co. had refused to turn over detailed price and operation information. FTC needed the data to check whether the two companies were actually stopping practices banned by FTC as monopolistic.

The Supreme Court unanimously ruled that FTC was completely within its rights in demanding the report. Justice Robert Jackson declared that the Court on many occasions had ruled that "corporations can claim no equality with individuals in the enjoyment of privacy."

EARLY SCENE from the movie "Intruder in the Dust": Chick Mallison, acted by Claude Jarman, Jr., after a dousing in an icy pond, accepts the hospitality of Lucas Beauchamp (played by Juan Hernandez) the proud old Negro who refuses to take money from a guest. What happened here, later makes Chick undertake a desperate deed, driven by a feeling of indebtedness to Lucas.

EVERYONE IN THE STORE watches tensely as "uppity" Lucas Beauchamp selects his purchases, pretending he doesn't notice the resentful looks the white men give him. Setting of this fine movie, which shows the evils of race discrimination, is an actual small town in Mississippi. Some of the town's residents act in the picture, providing highly realistic atmosphere for the drama.

If You Have Eyes To See — And Ears To Hear

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

CHICK MALLISON was just an ordinary young boy who happened to live in a small town in Mississippi. That is, he was ordinary until something happened one day to change him.

The story begins when Chick falls into an icy pond and is taken home by Lucas Beauchamp, a dignified old Negro who lives on a plot of ground willed him by his former master.

Old Lucas makes Chick take off his wet clothes to be dried in front of the fire, feeds him and gives him the full hospitality of his home. Chick is much bothered by all this for it plants a conflict in his mind. Under the code by which he has been brought up, Chick feels he must show the Negro that he is an inferior who should act humbly.

BY TREATING Chick as a guest, Lucas somehow puts himself on an equal basis with the white boy. He is being "uppity." Chick tries to establish his superior position by pulling out some money to pay the Negro for what he has done. Old Lucas refuses it with dignity, telling the boy he is his guest. Chick petulantly throws the money on the floor and orders Lucas to pick it up.

Never for a moment losing his poise, Lucas calmly orders a young Negro boy to pick up the money and return it to Chick, who takes it shamefacedly and leaves. The old Negro has defeated him. He has broken the white man's code and he has done it by following another cherished code—hospitality to a guest. The unhappy Chick feels in his debt.

From this simple incident a story is unraveled that makes one of the finest and most exciting movies on the subject of race discrimination yet produced—"Intruder in the Dust." It is a new film released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, produced and directed superbly by Clarence Brown. The screen play by Ben Maddow is based on a novel by William Faulkner.

The movie in a way is a parable illustrating the all-important subject of civil rights, and at the same time it is a gripping mystery story that can hold its own with the finest of the suspense dramas.

Not that there is any preaching in the movie. Not a word about race hatred or injustice is mentioned. The film merely tells a fascinating and realistic story of what happened in one small Mississippi town, and how and why a fine old Negro who minded his own business and only wanted to live in peace and dignity, was nearly lynched for something he did not do.

Gowrie, a white man who hated Lucas for his "uppity" ways—he wouldn't grovel or bow humbly to the whites—is shot in the back shortly after he had brutally insulted the old Negro in the store where everybody present saw it. Lucas is seized and thrown in jail—helplessly trapped in a web woven out of the confirmed prejudices and injustices of whites against Negroes.

HE IS supposed to have the right to a lawyer. But the "liberal" attorney who comes reluctantly to see him takes for granted that the Negro is guilty. It does not even occur to him to ask Lucas about it. A white man has been shot in the back. The Negro who had cause to hate him has a gun with one bullet missing. The dead man's brother and father accuse Lucas of the shooting. It seemed simple enough to the lawyer. Of course Lucas was guilty, he reasoned.

The old Negro didn't even try to point out to the lawyer where the proof that he was innocent could be found. He knew the lawyer would not believe him.

The dead man had already been buried, without the sheriff or his men even thinking to remove the bullet to check it with Lucas' gun. So it is to the boy, Chick, who was sheltered and cared for in the Negro's home that Lucas turns.

Driven against his will by the feeling that he owes Lucas a debt and that the old Negro is not guilty, the boy visits him in jail and decides to do what the Negro asks—go secretly at night and dig up the body of the murdered man.

Old Miss Haversham, a respected white lady (excellently acted by Elizabeth Patterson) offers to help Chick. It is on this odd pair, and a youth drawn into the desperate undertaking in spite of his fright, that the fate of Lucas hangs. For those whose duty it is to see that the law operates justly have fallen down

One of the most exciting incidents in the picture takes place at the grave when Chick and the Negro boy finally dig down to the coffin and find that the body is missing.

Another is the tense scene at the jail where Miss Habersham sits placidly sewing as she blocks the door to keep the mob out. The men's strange mixed code makes it seem all right to them to lynch a Negro, but not to shove a white lady around.

ALTHOUGH people from miles around come to town to see the lynching, as though they were going to a circus, and although the lawyer, the sheriff and his assistants are blind to their duty and responsibility, there are really no villains in the story—except the real murderer.

It is the immoral code which denies the black man justice and leaves him outside the protection of the law that is evil—not the people. When it is all over, and everybody knows the murderer's identity, the people go home quietly, thoroughly ashamed of themselves.

If you want to see a highly enjoyable picture spendidly acted, don't miss "Intruder in the Dust." Claude Jarman, Jr., as Chick, and Juan Hernandez as old Lucas Beauchamp act their parts so realistically, you'll feel you've met them. There is no jarring note in any of the acting—no fake southern accents, no false and sickly sentimentality.

And if you want to find a sermon in the picture, it is entirely up to you.

High Court May Act

A case involving "Lost Boundaries," a movie about a doctor and his family who "passed" as white, may reach the U. S. Supreme Court. The case arose after the Atlanta, Ga., Board of Censors banned the film. The motion picture industry is claiming a violation of the First Amendment.

A CRUCIAL SCENE in "Intruder in the Dust," showing Lucas Beauchamp and the arrogant Gowrie who later is found shot in the back. Lucas is accused of the murder and threatened with lynching. Even his own lawyer believes him guilty.

Elizabeth Patterson as Miss Habersham, the staunch little old lady who sits calmly sewing while guarding the jail door from the lynch mob. "Go home! You ought to be ashamed of yourselves," she says, in one of the exciting scenes from "Intruder in the Dust."

Company-Paid Pension Is TWUA's No. 1 Goal

COMPANY-PAID pension plans for the nation's textile workers are the No. 1 goal of the CIO's Textile Workers in 1950, TWUA Pres. Emil Rieve announced last week.

This decision was voted unanimously by the union's international executive council at the concluding session of a four-day quarterly session in New York.

Rieve said that the council did not lay down a formula for the kind of pension plans to be sought, but instructed the union's insurance and research departments to prepare a written analysis of the various possibilities.

Union contracts in the major divisions of the textile industry—cotton-rayon and wool—will not expire until early 1951, Rieve declared, and therefore a definite formula need not be evolved until later this year.

THE UNION is now seeking a pension plan from the carpet and rug industry, Rieve said, and an embryo program has already been negotiated with the dyeing and finishing industry in the New York area. A number of one-company plans are also in effect in other textile divisions, but they might not prove applicable to the larger and more scattered cotton-rayon and woolen industries, he stated.

RIEVE HAS asked Secy. of State Acheson to investigate the continued high price of Australian wool, with a view to ending any "deliberate policies designed to victimize America."

Rieve released the text of a letter he sent to Acheson. In it he described the price of wool as having a serious effect on the competitive position of the woolen and worsted industry. He also noted "the presence in some 14 countries of transferable accounts of British sterling," which enable buyers from these countries to obtain wool with "cheap pounds" instead of dollars.

Rieve's letter concluded:

"We believe that these are matters of considerable moment and should be investigated in order not to permit the deliberate policies designed to victimize America by injuring permanently the American woolen and worsted industry. We hope that your investigation will point the way toward remedial action and to means for correcting any deliberate practices designed to keep the prices of raw wool at the current excessively high price."

N. Y. State Likely to Take Over Control of Residential Rents

New York State may take over control of residential rents from the Federal Government on May 1, according to reports in Albany.

A rent commission which has been studying the problem is said to be prepared to recommend this, with March 1, 1949, as the freezing date.

The date selected is two months prior to expiration of federal rent controls—an extension of which is now being sought in Congress—and was selected because temporary legislation confined to New York City expires at that time.

If enacted as planned, the new law would cover the entire state. Whether it would apply to areas decontrolled by the federal housing expediter was not clear.

In Virginia, the General Laws Committee of the House reported approval of a bill to end present rent controls. Army, Navy and Marine personnel joined with organized labor in fighting the bill in committee and are expected to continue the fight in the House itself.

Thousands of servicemen renting houses and apartments in the Washington and Hampton Roads areas and at Quantico would face sharp increases if controls are let down, the committee was told.

IN NEW ORLEANS the Area Rent Advisory Board after a stormy five-hour session "sincerely recommended, and earnestly requested," that controls be extended.

"We wish to inform Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods," said the resolution, "that there is still an urgent and undeniable need now and for some time to come for federal rent control in the New Orleans area because of the critical shortage of rental units particularly for those in the lower and middle income brackets, and we know that the housing situation in the New Orleans area has not yet been reasonably met."

Lucille Savoie, secretary of the CIO Textile Workers Joint Board in New Orleans, recently was named a member of the rent advisory body.

IN ST. LOUIS, Mo., a noisy effort to have controls ended was made by landlords who jammed a meeting of the Board of Aldermen, but with little effect. At its conclusion four aldermen came out flatly for continuation of controls and Mayor Joseph M. Darst said he still was opposed to decontrol.

One spokesman for the landlords admitted rental units were being withheld from the market until rents rise, and that any landlord who did not hold out "is a sap."

They said a survey by the Property Owners League showed a vacancy rate of about 3% and that hence controls were no longer necessary, but Oscar A. Ehrhardt, secretary of the St. Louis CIO Council, denounced the survey as "a bit fictitious" and accused the landlords of being unwilling to make a factual survey "of existing, available units."

One alderman said after the session that many of the units listed as vacant were in buildings about to be condemned to make way for a new super-highway.

Rent increases in the Martinsburg, W. Va., area were so excessive after the removal of controls that William DeChessi, Textile Workers' assistant regional director, has asked Woods for their restoration.

9,069 Vote For CIO In Month, NLRB Says

CIO unions polled 9069 votes to 8998 ballots for AFL unions in NLRB collective bargaining elections during December, the monthly NLRB report showed.

Unaffiliated unions received 8355 votes while 7235 workers preferred no union. A total of 33,657 votes was cast in 409 elections.

ACLU To Hold Annual Parley In New York

"THE ROUGH Road Ahead" will be the theme of the annual American Civil Liberties Union conference Feb. 2 at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City.

The one-day conference will be climaxed by an anniversary dinner in honor of retiring Dir. Roger N. Baldwin, who has served in that post since the organization was founded in 1920.

Speakers will include Sen. Lehman (D., N. Y.), Patrick M. Malin, new ACLU director; Thurgood Marshall, counsel for the Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Dr. Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., of Harvard Univ.; Prof. Henri Laugier, honorary president of the Intl. League for the Rights of Man and a general secretary of the United Nations, and Arthur Garfield Hays, ACTU counsel.

Following reports to the membership, the conference will be divided into four section meetings: Civil rights in trade unions, civil liberties on the international front, the government and civil rights, and Communists and the Bill of Rights.

The conference will be open to the public.

FTC Says 'Agency' Not Govt. Group

If some people think they have reason to suspect that a company calling itself "United States Travel Agency, Inc.," has absolutely no connection with the United States Government, they're so right, the Federal Trade Commission said.

The corporation and its president, John E. Smith, Jr., are engaged in private business as a travel and tourist agency, selling rail, bus, air and steamship tickets, hotel accommodations and incidental services, according to FTC.

The FTC issued a complaint which stated that the practice in which the corporation has engaged is "unfair and deceptive" and has diverted an undue amount of trade to the agency from its competitors. The company was given 20 days in which to answer.

Rubber Soles Cost 300 Their Jobs

The International Shoe Co. has announced it will close its sole leather department at St. Louis, employing 300, on June 15. The firm said increasing use of rubber for shoe soles forced the move. Asked whether the firm would find work for the 300 in its five other sole leather plants, the company head said he could not answer the question. The company has a contract with CIO Shoe Workers.

Race Bias Charged In Insurance Sales

Democratic legislators have warned the N. Y. State Senate that they may propose legislation for a state insurance fund unless insurance companies stop discriminating against Negroes. Sen. Alfred E. Santangelo, Manhattan, called for an investigation. He charged insurance firms have refused thousands of applications from Harlem residents and have systematically refused to renew policies when they expired.

Bridges Is Accused Of Insurance 'Sellout'

A SELLOUT of organized labor's long campaign to defeat the California insurance lobby and expand the state disability insurance program has been charged to Pres. Harry Bridges and officers of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, according to the California Edition of the CIO News.

The charge was made by Bill Buth, PAC chairman of ILWU Ship Clerks Local 34, San Francisco, in an open letter distributed along the waterfront there.

Buth denounced the ILWU officials for trying to drop disability insurance coverage of 12,000 West Coast longshoremen and ship clerks by the State Disability Insurance Plan for a private program he said would provide less protection at greater cost.

"This is a sellout to the very same big insurance interests who have been fighting our efforts to get our disability insurance increased," said Buth in his open letter.

"IF IT HAD NOT been for the insurance lobbies, we would be receiving $35 or $40 per week instead of the miserable $25 being paid—and you know it.

"By every trick in the bag, efforts have been made to make the membership think that the Private Plan is better than the State Plan. You know very well that it is not.

"You know that the average claim paid by the Private Plan is only $154.73 against $227.99 paid by the State Plan.

"You also know that the average claim in the Private Plan runs only about one-half as many days as the State Plan. They stand over us with their doctors and 'take away our check' as soon as the law will permit . . .

"Why this sellout? Isn't this just another attempt to create piecard jobs?

"Why ask the members to vote for a welfare plan before you or anyone else knows what the plan will be?

"Why ask the Longshoremen and Clerks to sign to transfer their State insurance without first explaining to them what they are signing?

"Why don't you make it known to them that this switch to the Private Plan will cost some of them as much as double what they now pay for the State Plan?"

THE PRIVATE plan originally was scheduled to become effective Feb. 1. It will not operate, however, before the second quarter, as the State requires a card check approval by 75% of the workers covered before it will relinquish coverage and allow a private firm to take over.

The ILWU dropped its wage and pension demands in negotiations last October and agreed to the joint contribution for social insurance. The CIO Steelworkers were striking for pensions at the time. Locals have approved the contract since then in order to get employer-paid life and hospital insurance.

All of organized labor in California is fighting to improve the present State act, but has been stymied by the insurance lobby. The State Disability Fund has a balance of $200 million. All of the surplus above a $100 million reserve was paid for by California workers, and it has accumulated because the insurance lobby has defeated every effort to increase benefits except for the recently effective hospitalization coverage.

Bethlehem Stockholders OK Pensions

BETHLEHEM Steel's stockholders last week voted overwhelmingly to approve the $100 a month pension plan accepted last November by the CIO Steelworkers in settling its strike against the firm.

At the same time, the stockholders turned down a proposal, by a similar large margin, to amend the pension plan by barring pensions in excess of $25,000 a year.

The stockholders' meeting, held in Wilmington, Del., was attended by some 20 stockholders representing more than 7 million shares of common and preferred stock in the final vote. Only slightly over 271,800 common and preferred shares together were voted against accepting the pension plan. The amendment was defeated by a vote of about 6½ million shares.

James Fuller, Hartford, Conn., holder of 15 shares of Bethlehem Steel stock, questioned the merit of the pension plan throughout the two and a half hour meeting, arguing that it offered nothing to the younger employes. He proposed that the entire plan be shelved for 30 days, while a poll of employes was taken to see if they would not prefer a straight 10-cent hourly wage increase.

"The word 'Jerk' certainly applies to you."

TWU States Case For 43,000 In N. Y. C.

AN arbitration award giving nearly 4000 members of the CIO Transport Workers in New York City a wage increase of 6c an hour was announced Feb. 7 as the union was completing, before a fact-finding board, its case for a 21-cent pay boost for 43,000 members employed by city-owned lines.

The arbitration award, representing $1,100,000 in back pay, ended a long-standing dispute between Local 100 and the Third Avenue Transit System, a privately-owned operation. It was handed down by Prof. Emanuel Stein of New York University after three months of hearings. It is binding on both parties but must be approved by Federal Judge Samuel H. Kaufman, because the company is in receivership.

THE WAGE increase is retroactive to July 1, 1949, and will be paid at the rate of $20 a month. Stein also ordered three-week vacations for employes with 10 years' or more service, and a contract clause barring strikes, lockouts, slowdowns or other concerted work stoppages during the life of the agreement, which will expire next Dec. 31.

Stein refused to grant severance pay, pension improvements, a guarantee for extra men, paid lunch periods, a night differential or payments for uniforms or working clothes.

"The granting of the 6c increase and the three-week vacation," observed TWU Pres. Michael J. Quill and Pres. Matthew Guinan of Local 100 "is definite evidence that, receivership or no receivership, workers must be paid a living wage and be granted decent conditions of work."

The bulk of the union case before the fact finding board, which was named by Mayor William O'Dwyer, was presented by General Counsel John F. O'Donnell.

In addition to the wage raise, the union is seeking a 40-hour week with 48 hours' pay, the establishment of new grievance machinery, abolition of a spy system and other improvements in working conditions.

PICTURE WITHIN PICTURE: John F. O'Donnell, attorney for the CIO Transport Workers, displays a photo to the Fact Finding Board named in the dispute between the union and the N. Y. City Board of Transportation. The displayed photo shows a surface track gang in Brooklyn washing in buckets of cold water on a street corner because they have no quarters or shack to use. Hearings were also enlivened by beefs against "beakies."

O'Donnell asked that the wage increase be made retroactive to July 1, 1949, the start of the city's current fiscal year. He showed that transit workers are paid less in New York than in 12 other major cities, several of them with municipally-operated systems, and that they get less than railroad employes and truck drivers in New York.

O'Donnell pointed out that the city makes ample provision for its policemen, firemen and teachers, with pay scales at the top of the list, and that most skilled and unskilled workers in the city are paid more than in other major cities.

He also cited the report of a Railway Labor Act emergency board created in October, 1948, which said that "40 basic working hours per week with time and a half for overtime is the prevailing practice in American industry."

ELLIS VAN RIPER, secretary-treasurer of Local 100, testified that grievance machinery has broken down. He suggested that supervisors on the intermediate level be given a course in handling day-to-day grievances, and that shop stewards meet with foremen and assistant supervisors to straighten out timecards disputes as they occur.

The Board of Transportation, which operates the system, issued a report just before the hearings opened indicating a 13c fare, instead of the present 10c, would be necessary if wages are increased.

"This is a cheap anti-labor attempt to agitate the public against the union through the phony threat of a 13c fare," declared Quill. "It is a clumsy attempt to influence the factfinding board."

He asserted that transit facilities in New York are a public service and that funds to maintain them must be obtained just as they are found to maintain police, fire and sanitation services.

"The fares don't have to be raised," he told the board at its opening session. "Let the real estate interests get off and walk. They have ridden on our backs long enough. Real estate has become great because of the subway system."

War on 'Beakies'

The labor movement has made some picturesque contributions to the American version of the King's English, and the CIO Transport Workers have done their share.

They have pinned the name "beakies" on the spies employed by the New York City Board of Transportation to do all the dirty little things to workers that such spies always do. The source of the name is pretty obvious and the "beakies," like their counterparts elsewhere, are held in great contempt. The union is seeking to end the system in current contract hearings before a fact-finding board.

Power Lobby Propaganda Is Debunked

ACCUSING the private power lobby of trying to keep the South "the economic problem No. 1 of America," Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.) refuted figures of the Edison Electric Institute on the cost of the Tennessee Valley Authority to the nation.

Backbone of the private power lobby and one of the biggest spenders of all the Washington lobbies, the Edison Institute has recently intensified its thrusts at TVA as part of its fight to keep a Columbia Valley bill from passing this session of Congress.

In a New York Times article Feb. 2, the Institute charged that TVA operations have resulted in a total loss of nearly $120 million since 1933. Speaking in the Senate, Kefauver tore the Institute figures to shreds with an analysis of TVA cost allocations.

THE TVA method, Kefauver pointed out, "has been reviewed by both the Federal Power Commission and the Corps of Engineers, both experts in this field," and neither agency seems to find fault with it.

Benefits received by the people of the U. S. under the TVA multipurpose system include "navigation, flood control, electric power, research, fertilizer program, work in the wildlife and fisheries field, and so forth," the Tennessee senator explained. "If we take the Edison Institute argument it means we must say that there is no value in navigation and flood control, and charge them off as zero."

People in the Tennessee Valley should pay twice as much for their electricity and carry the costs of the other services to the country at large, according to the Edison Institute bookkeeping.

Kefauver pointed out that Valley residents, who before TVA paid only 3% of the national income tax, are now paying 6%.

Bernstein Gets Post In Germany

Meyer Bernstein of the CIO Steelworkers research staff has been given an indefinite leave of absence to take a position as labor liaison representative and observer in the German Ruhr on the staff of the American Occupation Forces in Germany.

Bernstein, who has been with the Steelworkers since 1936, leaves this week for his new post. He will maintain contacts with German trade organizations in an effort to foster better relationships between these groups and democratic trade unions in other countries.

Bernstein will be associated with Harvey Brown, former president of the International Association of Machinists, who is labor adviser to U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy.

Bernstein has previously represented CIO in working with European labor groups under ECA and also with the labor exchange program of the military government in Germany.

108 Children Aided

The Society for Seamen's Children is now caring for 108 youngsters, according to a report to the CIO American Radio Association executive board.

Organizationally Speaking

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The Communications Workers of America-CIO have just rung up another great victory among workers of the Associated Telephone Company of Southern California. The results of the election were as follows: CWA-CIO 1916; IBEW-AFL 694; neither 209; void 72; challenged 3. Out of 3500 eligible to vote, 2894 votes were cast.

Congratulations to CWA-CIO Vice-Pres. John Crull who directed this victorious campaign. June McDonald and Earl Ludlow of the CWA staff are also to be congratulated. Other direct participants were Faye Dunbar, Louis Knecht and Lester Keaton, of Division 61, and W. A. Baker, president of Division 7. The above were ably assisted by Howard Lanning, Andy Anderson, Donald Barnet, Clarence Harris, Charles Tooley, Leo Pequignot, Eugene Bianchin, Lowell Mansfield, W. A. Shively and Bruce Blackmore. Congratulations are in order also to CIO Field Reps. Ben Stahl and Alex Blackman, and CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler for the splendid assistance they rendered the Telephone Workers in this campaign.

This victory follows last week's great victory in Ohio. These gains speak well for the leadership of CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne and his associate officers with whom the CIO is happy to be cooperating.

On to more victories!

CIO Reg. Dir. Robert Starnes reports that in a representation election at the Gulf States Creosoting Co., Meridian, Miss., the workers voted as follows: International Woodworkers of America-CIO 36; against 6; challenged 4.

CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin L. DeShetler reports that the United Steelworkers of America-CIO were victorious in a representation election at the Kayner Manufacture Co., Los Angeles. USA-CIO Reps. Balt Yanez and Scotty Allison were in charge of the campaign.

CIO Reg. Dir. William Taylor reports a UAW-CIO victory in a representation election at the Paducah Battery Co., Paducah, Ky., by a vote of UAW-CIO 82; IBEW-AFL 21.

Sam Eubanks, Executive Vice President, American Newspaper Guild-CIO reports that in a representation election covering the business, advertising and inside circulation employes of the Milwaukee Sentinel, the Guild defeated the AFL Office Workers Union by a vote of 80 to 55. The Guild already represented editorial and outside circulation departments so the new certification will give the Guild a full industrial unit covering the entire jurisdiction of the plant.

The writer has just returned from Puerto Rico, where he had the honor of presenting a charter to the trade unionists of Puerto Rico. The CIO was well received by the workers and the representatives of the liberal and progressive island government. These workers are happy to be attached to the CIO. It is now up to our movement to bring these Americans of Spanish descent and language better living standards and greater opportunities. Pres. J. S. Potofsky, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; John Brophy, Director of Industrial Union Councils-CIO, and the writer pledged the Puerto Rican workers every support and assistance of the CIO in achieving their goals.

Fired Vet Sues To Get Back Job

James Kutcher's loyalty to the U. S. government was likely taken for granted when he served in the Army during the last war.

When he lost both legs in the battle of St. Pietro, Italy, in 1943, they probably pinned some medals on him for loyalty to his country.

Today, however, the war is over.

The 37-year-old Newark, N. J., veteran was forced to file suit in Washington, D. C., on Feb. 9 in an attempt to regain his job with the Veterans Administration. He was fired last year because he admitted membership in the Socialist Workers Party. His suit claims that he was never given an opportunity to dispute the findings.

Kutcher named as defendants Veterans Administrator Carl Gray; Att. Gen. J. Howard McGrath; members of the Civil Service Commission and members of Pres. Truman's Loyalty Review Board.

His fight for reinstatement is backed by national CIO and other labor and liberal bodies.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

Tax Ax Tough on Widows, A Tap for Oil Tycoons

By NATHAN ROBERTSON

For Labor Press Association

THE GOVERNMENT taxes wealthy oil operators very gently. The same government taxes with harshness widows and other women who have to work to support their families.

The dramatic contrast demonstrates how selfish lobbies have more power in Congress than the people who elect Congressmen.

This fact is important for voters to remember as the House Ways and Means committee considers President Truman's proposals for tax reform. The Administration's reforms are good as far as they go, but they don't go far enough. They would remove some of the most lucrative loopholes through which the rich escape taxes, but would do little to remove inequities for widows and poor working women.

The special interest lobbies may be able to block the Truman reforms. They won't need to block reforms for the working women, because no one—no one with political power, at least—has asked for them.

AN OIL operator or a big oil corporation is permitted outrageous deductions from his profits before he calculates how much tax he must pay. He is allowed, first, to deduct all of his business expense, just as other businessmen do. Then he is allowed to deduct from his profit any expenses in developing new wells. Other businessmen are not allowed to deduct such expenses. They are considered capital investments and can only be deducted gradually over the life of the property.

BUT THAT'S not all: After deducting this year the expense of developing a new well, the oil man is then allowed to continue to deduct from his profit, for as many years as that oil well produces, 27½% of his gross income from that well. Theoretically this is to repay him for the capital investment in that well—despite the fact that he has already deducted it once in his income tax this year. In other words he is able to deduct the expenses of developing that well over and over again.

The net result of all these special privileges written into the tax laws at the behest of oil and gas industry lobbyists, is that oil and gas operators and big corporations in those industries are able to deduct from their income not only all of their current expenses of doing business, but up to half of the profit remaining after all business expenses have been deducted.

Here is the way it might work out for a big oil company, which enjoys today a net income of $100 million a year from pumping gas and oil. If the company this year invests $10 million in developing new oil wells, that $10 million can be deducted from this year's profits. In addition, the government allows it to deduct 27½% of its gross income up to 50% of its net as a special "depletion allowance" to cover—at least in theory—its capital investment. That capital investment may have long since been repaid, except for this year's $10 million. So the company deducts the 50% depletion allowance, or $50 million, plus the $10 million, or a total of $60 million in deductions. Thus the government pays 40% of the cost of developing those new wells.

NOW SUPPOSE the new oil well turns out $5 million worth of oil each year, on which the company makes a profit of $2 million after all expenses. That means that next year its net income, after all expenses, is $102 million. But the government allows it to deduct up to half of this net income from taxes as the special "depletion allowance." So the company has to pay taxes on only $51 million of profit, instead of paying on $102 as other businesses would have to do. The difference is about $20 million. For all oil and gas companies, the difference—or the special gift from the government—adds up to more than $400 million.

Now let's consider the case of a widow, left with two small children and an income of only $1600 a year—perhaps the widow of a GI. She finds she must go to work to support her family and gets a job as a nurse or stenographer. But in order to take a job she has to hire a helper to take care of the children and keep house during the day. That is a far more legitimate business expense than many of the deductions allowed the oil company.

Yet under the law that woman has to pay taxes on her whole gross income, and not just her net income after business expense. Let's say she makes $3000 a year and the help she hires to take care of the children costs her $1500 a year. Her net income is only $1500 a year. But she has to pay taxes on the entire $3000. She has the usual personal exemption of $600 for each member of her family, of course, but that barely covers the income she gets from her insurance, or from other sources.

SO THIS poor woman, struggling to raise a family on a total of about $3000 a year, net income, is treated by our present tax laws much more roughly than ordinary businessmen, and entirely differently from the rich oil operators who can deduct not only their current business expense, but also huge and fictitious depletion allowances.

Two Congressmen have recognized this injustice and propose doing something about it. They are Reps. Helen Gahagan Douglas (D. Calif.) and Kenneth Keating (R. N. Y.). But their bills have been pending for a long time without even a hearing. There will be no hearing for them unless organized labor or some other powerful group with an interest in working people gets angry and demands a hearing.

It's Easy To Duck The Income Tax Parade --Just Buy Yourself A Couple Of Oil Wells

BY DONALD WOODS
For Labor Press Association

A LIST of 10 unnamed individuals who escaped paying taxes on almost $50 million of income during a recent five-year period because of the gaping tax loopholes provided for oil and gas operators has been submitted to Congress by the Treasury. During the same years the government imposed income taxes on workers making as little as $15 a week.

The Treasury also has submitted a list of 20 unidentified corporations which used the same loopholes in 1947 to escape taxes on almost half a billion dollars of profits. Every year these corporations—most of them big oil, gas, and sulphur companies—use the same loopholes for similar privileges.

These were only two of many exhibits submitted to the House Ways and Means Committee by Thomas Lynch, Treasury general counsel, in an effort to get Congress at least partially to plug the depletion and other loopholes in taxes on gas, oil and sulphur companies.

BUT there is considerable doubt if Congress will do anything about it. Congressmen from the oil and gas states, backed by powerful lobbies and helped by such Republicans as Rep. Mason (R. Ill.), are fighting reform. Unless public opinion is aroused, there is little chance of Congress plugging the loopholes. Mason has been making big talk about plugging loopholes—chiefly loopholes he contends exist for the benefit of labor unions and cooperatives—but showed little sympathy with Treasury plans for plugging the oil depletion loophole, admittedly the biggest single joker in the tax laws.

The newspapers by and large ignored the Treasury's sensational figures. The Associated Press, for instance, put the lead of its story on a Treasury demand for taxes on businesses run by labor unions. There was no evidence that this is a big loophole. But to the AP, apparently, this was a bigger story than figures demonstrating that the oil, gas and sulphur companies are escaping more than $400 million in taxes every year through the oil depletion and other loopholes, or that 10 men had escaped taxes on nearly $40 million.

There was no hint of the identity of the 10 taxpayers. The Treasury got the figures from income tax returns, and under the law could not disclose their names. But its figures showed that these 10 men from 1943 to 1947 had incomes of about $62 million, of which $52.6 million came from oil and gas operations.

THEY were able to escape taxes on about $47 million during the five-year period, or an average of $4.7 million. Altogether they paid taxes of less than $14 million, or about 22% on their incomes at a time when wartime tax rates on million-dollar incomes ran as high as 80%.

One man made $10.5 million from oil and gas operations, plus nearly $4 million from other enterprises. His special privileges under the oil and gas loopholes permitted him to exclude virtually all of this income, so that during the five-year period he paid total income taxes of only $80,000, or about what other businessmen making $150,000 would have paid.

Two other men made about $6 million each during the five-year period and paid only $500,000 each in taxes. A fourth made $4.4 million and paid only $150,000.

The 20 corporations, all mineral corporations, made net profits in 1947 of $926 million. Special loopholes permitted them to duck taxes on about $441 million, on which most corporations would have had to pay the regular rate of 38%. As a result they had to pay only on $485 million and their total taxes were only 19% of their net income.

THE TREASURY also showed that most of the benefits from these oil, gas and sulphur loopholes go to the big companies, not the little wildcatters in whose name they were provided. In 1947 a total of 352 corporations got exemptions of $838.7 million, of which 90% were in excess of those allowed corporations in other fields. More than a half billion dollars worth of these special privileges were enjoyed by the big integrated corporations such as Standard Oil, and only $110 million went to the companies engaged only in mining oil.

President Truman has called these loopholes the most indefensible in the tax laws. But because of the strength of the oil lobby he has not even attempted to plug them. Instead, he is merely asking Congress to tighten them up to catch about half of the taxes that have been getting away from the Treasury.

'From Banquet Tables Comes Wail Of Oppressed Bosses'

THE DETROIT Board of Commerce was severely criticized in an editorial published on the front page of the Feb. 3 issue of the Detroit Labor News—official organ of the Detroit and Wayne County Federation of Labor (AFL)—for the contents of the full page advertisements in which it is attacking the Chrysler strikers and other labor groups.

Upon publication of the editorial, Dir. Norman Matthews, CIO United Auto Workers' Chrysler Dept., promptly wrote to Pres. Frank X. Martel of the Detroit and Wayne County Federation of Labor, expressing the appreciation of the Chrysler workers and the whole UAW-CIO for this exhibition of solidarity. The editorial, which was addressed to Vice Pres. Harvey Campbell of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce, concluded:

"HARVEY, your heart bleeds for the poor folks of Detroit because they are losing their wages during this strike.

"Well, we are bleeding too, Harvey, but we know why we are bleeding. It is because the workers are engaged in a fight to maintain that which their forefathers fought and died for. Thank God the automobile workers . . . have the courage to stand up to the industrial barons in the auto industry and demand their share of the products of that industry.

"The workers in uniform that were with George Washington at Valley Forge knew why they bled. The workers on strike know why they are suffering. And they know also why you are crying for the milk of human kindness. It is because industry and business is being hit in the pocketbook.

"Harvey, we join you at the wailing wall, while throughout the length and breadth of the land from the banquet tables comes the wail of the oppressed employers."

Virginia IUC Head At Church Parley

The Methodist Church has appointed the Rev. Charles C. Webber, president of the Virginia State Industrial Union Council, as a delegate to the National Study Conference on the Church and Economic Life to be held Feb. 16-19 in Detroit.

The conference is sponsored by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Delegates representing more than 30 States and 28 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations will study a new Christian approach to the economic problems of modern life.

PAC Buck A Nifty To Win Race in '50

"I'd like to meet up with that bird just once."

Dixiegops Delay Action On Co-op Housing

THE DIXIEGOPS on the Senate Banking Committee on Feb. 10 caught Administration Senators off base and put through a motion to postpone action on the President's middle-income housing bill for two weeks.

The motion ostensibly was made in order to give the Federal Reserve Board a chance to make a study of the possible "inflationary" effects of the measure on the national economy.

Its original target, however, was the cooperative housing section of the bill, which has been indorsed by labor and liberal groups throughout the country.

The cooperative section would allow the government to sell Treasury-guaranteed debentures on the private investment market and, with the proceeds, make long-term, low-interest loans to genuine housing cooperatives and other non-profit organizations aiming to build homes either for sale or for rental.

It has been estimated that, with the real estate speculator out of the picture and under the favorable interest rates proposed in the bill, accommodations similar to those now renting in the neighborhood of $90 a month would be available for $65 or less. The people who reap the extra $25 are objecting.

The motion to postpone action for a fortnight, made by Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), was preceded by a direct attack on the co-op section, made by Sen. John Bricker (R., O.), who moved to strike it from the bill entirely. This was defeated by a narrow margin. Sen. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) then asked for an "inflation" study on the co-ops. Fulbright's motion was amended by Sen. Ives (R., N. Y.) to include the entire bill in the study. Tobey then proposed his two-week deadline. The vote was not made public, but it was close.

Effect of the postponement will be to defer Senate action on the bill, of course. Also contained in the bill is authority to continue the Federal Housing Administration which otherwise would expire March 1. In the past, Congress has continued FHA by simple resolution and this may happen again. However, administration supporters had hoped to report the bill in one piece, perhaps thus rousing extra support for the co-op section.

Committee chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), and Sen. John Sparkman (D., Ala.), who chaired the sub-committee which just two days ago approved the bill by a 6-1 vote, were frankly surprised at the development. Maybank said that presumably Federal Reserve had already studied the bill, since the Budget Bureau already had approved it.

MEANWHILE, hearings before the House Banking and Currency Committee reached near-final stages.

John Green, president of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers and secretary of the National CIO Housing Committee, dramatically appealed to the committee to approve the bill, not only because middle-income groups are the "forgotten families" in the present housing program but because "you can't sell democracy with slogans."

"Certainly, the housing problem is one of the most glaring examples of the serious lag between what democracy promises on the one hand and what it practices on the other," Green said. "Here is a chance to close that gap."

He explained the difficulties that U. S. unionists have in explaining to their European counterparts why it is that this nation, physically untouched by the war, is lagging so far behind in housing.

(In spite of its record production of new housing in 1949, the U. S. was a poor fourth, building only seven new units per 1000 of population, compared with between 24 and 32 in Sweden, New Zealand and Canada.)

JOHN GREEN, CIO Shipbuilding Workers' President and Secretary of the National CIO Housing Committee, not only testified before the House Banking Committee Feb. 10 but presented the Senate with a petition from tenants of his own housing development, the Audubon cooperative in Camden, N. J. Shown here are Green, Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), and Dan Baskin, of the Bellmar Park co-op at Gloucester, N. J., who also brought a petition. The shipbuilding union sponsored both projects.

"NOTHING would help in strengthening the whole international force of freedom in its fight against totalitarianism more than if we could really do a good job on the housing front," Green said.

Furthermore, he added, good housing is at least one answer to the growing juvenile delinquency problem in this country. "If a child gets into trouble because he lacks decent housing, decent, wholesome recreational facilities and an opportunity for healthy expression, we are always willing to build new jails," Green said. "I say we should build fewer and fewer jails and more and more houses."

In the past several days, the House Committee has heard witnesses from the private lending agencies, all of them opposing the bill.

They advanced a variety of pious reasons, but none of them neglected to point out to the committee that the government was proposing to lend money to cooperatives at a lower interest rate and on longer terms than the mortgage bankers.

One witness, Oscar R. Kreutz of the National Savings & Loan League, tried to tell the committee that the U. S. was well ahead of the rest of the world in housing progress.

Turned out, however, that he had drawn up figures comparing new housing construction in the U. S. and Europe in the years 1939-47.

Cleveland OK's, Congress Stalls on FEPC

The Cleveland City Council by a 25 to 7 vote has enacted a local fair employment practices ordinance which replaces a "voluntary" plan that produced nothing but "some headway" after a year of intensive effort by its backers.

Passage of the ordinance was a clean-cut victory for the Citizens' Committee for Fair Employment Practices, a labor and liberal group, and the Democratic Party, which took over and pushed the measure through City Council while the Republicans were giving lip service. Mayor Thomas A. Burke backed the legislation.

The Chamber of Commerce, originally behind the voluntary plan, jumped on the FEPC bandwagon, a tacit admission that the voluntary effort had failed. It offered a couple of amendments acceptable to the Citizens' Committee and the measure was passed easily.

The "some headway" after the first year of the voluntary plan was reported by those who favored it and who had spent thousands of dollars on literature, advertising, radio time and trolley cards.

THE ORDINANCE makes unlawful, under penalty of a fine up to $100 and 10 days in jail, discrimination with regard to employment, hiring or union membership solely on the basis of race, creed, color or national origin.

Advertising relating to employment or membership cannot contain any reference to race, creed or color, and no job applicant can be asked about his race, creed, color, national origin or ancestry. Discrimination likewise is barred in all city contracts for public work.

Administration of the law will be in the hands of a new Community Relations Board consisting of the mayor, one member of City Council and five members representing industry, three representing labor and six representing the public. The board and the mayor will attempt to adjust all complaints before submitting them for prosecution.

Action on the FEPC measure was bogged down in Washington.

Feb. 8 was another Calendar Wednesday in the House and Chairman Lesinski (D. Mich.) of the Labor Committee again was all set to call for action on the bill which his committee approved weeks ago and which has been stuck in the Rules Committee. But the Civil Service and Banking Committee and the District Committee were ahead of the Labor Committee on the call list, and the legislative day was over before Lesinski had a chance to act.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed in Congress.	Keep writing to Senators, Representatives to force T-H repeal.
Fair Employment Practices Commission S. 1728 HR 4453	Bars discrimination in industry based on race, creed or color; provides penalties for job bias.	Senate bill on calendar, may come up next month. House supporters seeking to get bill on floor for debate.	Write, wire Senators, Congressmen to support and seek earliest possible vote.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S. 2246 HR 6618	Provides for long-term, low-interest U. S. loans to co-ops for building moderate-cost housing projects, etc.	Senate Banking Committee has completed hearings; House hearings started Jan. 30.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to give bill full support.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors benefits, etc., under social security. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Senate Finance Comm. now holding hearings. CIO to testify soon.	Ask Senators to try to strengthen HR 6000 over present provisions.
Federal Aid To Education S. 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. Has been stuck in House Labor Comm. for months.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to OK Senate bill.
Labor Extension Service Bill S. 110 HR 1380	Provides workers' education program in cooperation with schools, unions, Labor Dept.	Approved by Senate Labor Comm. House Labor Comm. is still studying bill.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to seek early passage.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00 A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., FEBRUARY 20, 1950 82 No. 8

CIO PRES. PHILIP MURRAY (right) tells newsmen at Washington conference about Executive Board action against four Communist-dominated unions as Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey (second from right) looks on. Session was held last week at National CIO headquarters.

The CIO Executive Board, meeting for three days last week, struck a sharp blow at Communist infiltration into American labor.

The Board also adopted a series of resolutions calling for quick action on the Fair Deal legislation program; pledging aid to hundreds of thousands of workers now on strike or facing strike action; and seeking to strengthen the peace and labor's ties with workers in other lands. Highlights of the Board's action:

- Expelled four unions as Communist-dominated: (1) Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; (2) United Office & Professional Workers; (3) Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers; (4) United Public Workers. The four unions have less than 100,000 members, large numbers of whom are expected to remain loyal to the CIO.
- Authorized CIO's officers to take steps to organize the industries in which the expelled unions have failed.
- Ratified withdrawal of charter from California CIO Council, on grounds it was Communist-dominated.
- Voiced full support to the strike of auto workers at Chrysler and to the strike of the United Mine Workers.
- Gave full CIO backing to the Communications Workers in their effort to win better conditions at Bell.
- Urged unions and their members to speed up political action work for the vital 1950 campaign.
- Called on Congress to pass Fair Deal program. CIO particularly urged action on Taft-Hartley repeal, FEPC, better minimum wage bill, improved tax program, middle-income housing, improved social security, and legalization of maritime hiring practices.
- Renewed demands for removal of NLRB General Counsel Denham and ending of injunctions in labor disputes.
- Pledged every effort to improve conditions for growing number of jobless workers, and to seek programs to end unemployment.
- Called for well-rounded international program to strengthen peace and aid peoples in Europe and under-developed areas; approved CIO's ties with the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions.
- Established new CIO International Committee, headed by Jacob S. Potofsky of the Clothing Workers.

Chrysler Strikers 'Hit Line' In Autos; CIO Pledges Aid

STRIKING CIO Auto Workers last week began the fourth week of the Chrysler walkout by throwing an auto picket line around two Detroit plants of the company.

A cavalcade of several hundred striker-driven autos formed a bumper-to-bumper blockade around the huge plants, completely blocking off entrances. The demonstration lasted two hours. Heretofore the walkout had been practically picketless.

Meanwhile, negotiations continued with little progress reported. Chrysler officials were studying a new set of union proposals submitted by the 125-man National UAW Chrysler Conference.

Ordinarily the contract would not be open on any issues except economic proposals — which includes pensions—until the contract expiration date, Aug. 1, 1950.

A contract clause provides, however, that in the event of a strike, the whole agreement is open to negotiations.

THE CIO Executive Board meeting in Washington last week leveled a blast at the stubborn attitude of the Chrysler Corp. in refusing to negotiate a settlement and pledged the "unstinted backing of all CIO unions to assist the UAW in carrying the strike to a victorious conclusion."

The board accused Chrysler of refusing, after seven months of bargaining, to negotiate a settlement based on the recommendations of the steel fact-finding board or to follow the pattern set by the Ford Motor Co. in the auto industry.

UAW officials indicated that the present attitude of the company is not surprising in view of the fact that one of the company negotiators is Herman Weckler, vice president and general manager.

Veteran UAW members remember Weckler well. Back in 1937 he was an uncomfortable witness before the LaFollette Committee which was investigating the activities of an organization hired by the Chrysler Corp. to make reports on workers seeking to form a union. The name of private detective agency was Corporations Auxiliary, Inc.

PRESIDENTS of three CIO Auto Workers' locals in Indiana participated in the radio program, "Chrysler Reports," which is broadcast over UAW's FM Detroit station, WDET. Here Guy Nunn interviews (l. to r.) Floyd Abston, Local 371, New Castle, Ind.; Robert Stine, Local 685, Kokomo, Ind.; and John Sterneman, Local 705, Evansville, Ind.

900 On Strike 4 Months Over Firing of Brothers

ALTHOUGH somewhat overshadowed by the four-week-old Chrysler strike, 900 CIO Auto Workers at the Detroit plant of Gar Wood Industries who walked out Nov. 19 last year, are determined to stay out until two dismissed workers, Brown and Lloyd Dian, brothers, are reinstated with full back pay.

The strike began, according to UAW Reg. 1 Dir. Michael F. Lacey, when the two were fired as a result of a dispute over working conditions. The other workers promptly walked out in protest. Gar Wood manufactures marine engines at the struck plant.

Shortly afterwards, the company offered to modify its original action and offered instead of dismissal, a three-month disciplinary layoff.

WHEN THE workers refused this offer, the company then proposed a one-month disciplinary layoff for the two but that was also turned down.

The union insists that both be returned to work immediately and the issues then arbitrated. The company has twice refused.

Meanwhile the two brothers were again ruled eligible for unemployment compensation benefits by the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission. A second ruling was necessary because the company appealed an earlier decision in their favor.

LACEY HAILED the ruling as "emphasizing again the fact that the Gar Wood employes were forced on strike by the arbitrary conduct of the company in wilfully violating written agreements with the union.

"We hope the public will note that this development again reflects the union's efforts to be fair and reasonable throughout this dispute. We have offered to arbitrate, but Gar Wood has refused. We accepted a proposed strike settlement offered by state mediators, but again the company refused.

"It is this kind of an attitude on the part of the company that has compelled Local 250's membership to stick it out all these months in order to win an honorable settlement."

'Unstinted Backing of All CIO Unions' Is Pledged UAW in Chrysler Strike

THE CIO Executive Board pledged the "unstinted backing of all CIO unions" to the members of the Auto Workers on strike against the Chrysler Corp. The text of the resolution follows:

WHEREAS, (1) 90,000 employes of the Chrysler Corporation, represented by the UAW-CIO, have been on strike for three weeks in an effort to win a pension plan and medical and hospital plan consistent with the gains won in other industries;

(2) The Chrysler Corporation stubbornly refused after seven months of bargaining, to negotiate a settlement based on the recommendaions of the Steel Fact-Finding Board appointd by President Truman, or to follow the pattern set by the Ford Motor Company in the auto industry;

(3) Chrysler Corporation officials still refuse, as the strike enters its fourth week, to bargain in good faith on the basis of the afore-mentioned patterns—but demand instead that the workers accept an unsound pension proposal worth only 3c per hour with no financial guarantees of its security and no voice for the union in its administration;

(4) The volume of profit enjoyed by Chrysler Corporation in recent years is ample to finance a funded and actuarially sound pension plan that would insure the benefits payable to retiring Chrysler workers;

(5) The Chrysler workers are justified in making a demand for a pension plan meeting the 10c per hour pattern already established, because this amount is needed to make it sound enough to carry the cost of liquidating past service credits and insuring benefits through funding; and

(6) The solidarity of the Chrysler workers in support of their demands deserves the whole-hearted moral and financial support of th entire labor movement in America.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED:

That the Congress of Industrial Organizations, speaking for millions of organized workers in basic American industries, salutes the Chrysler workers for their determined fight for economic security, and pledges the unstinted backing of all CIO unions to assist the UAW-CIO in carrying the Chrysler strike to a victorious conclusion.

3 Out Of 10 Jobless Are Ineligible For Benefits

THE CIO Full Employment Committee, in a resolution indorsed by the CIO Executive Board at its meeting last week, called upon all CIO councils and community service committees to give the jobless vigorous representation before public and private agencies concerned with them.

"We call for the enactment of the basic CIO platform," the resolution said, "including an expanded housing program, resource development plans, a more equitable tax structure, $1 minimum wage, and an expanded social security program to help insure the long-run growth and stability of our economy.

"Unemployment compensation and public assistance remain the first line of defense for the unemployed and they should be immediately improved by federal legislation to extend coverage, increase benefits and extend the duration of payments."

THE RESOLUTION noted that nearly five million workers are now unemployed, a postwar high, and that several million additional are working part time.

"Under the inadequate system of unemployment compensation," it pointed out, "more than three out of every 10 workers are not even eligible for benefits. Furthermore, in the third quarter report of 1949 the Council of Economic Advisers reports that a half-million people exhausted their rights to further benefits.

Food Price Index Up 6 More Points

The Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index rose still higher last week — six more points to $5.86, the highest since the $5.89 registered Aug. 16, 1949.

The previous week the index rose only 1c, from $5.79 to $5.80. The index is compiled by adding the wholesale prices per pound of 31 foods commonly used. Increases in it are normally reflected later in higher retail prics.

Even when workers are eligible for unemployment insurance payments, the present weekly average of $21 is far too small to cover even the bare necessities of life.

"Thousands of unemployed workers are thus caught between prices that are still at inflationary levels and an inadequate unemployment compensation program."

The CIO also called for a farm policy geared to maximum consumption through lower prices, increased aid to economically stricken areas, a public works program, and a special office for affairs of the unemployed in the U. S. Dept. of Labor.

"The entire nation suffers as a result of unemployment," the resolution said. "By the same token the entire nation can benefit from the increased flow of goods and services stemming from a successful full employment program."

CCL Plans Federation Of Unemployed Workers

THE CANADIAN Congress of Labour is planning to organize jobless workers into an organization to be known as the National Federation of Unemployed Workers.

CCL Secy.-Treas Pat Conroy said the plans for the formation of local unions of jobless workers have been sent to some 50 labor councils affiliated with the Congress. A national office has been set up in Toronto.

Joseph MacKenzie of Toronto, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor and a member of the CCL executive committee, had been appointed NFUW national director. MacKenzie was formerly Canadian director of the CIO Rubber Workers and has broad experience in Canadian trade unionism.

Sam Baron, Canadian director for the CIO Textile Workers Union, has been named to head the NFUW planning committee.

A committee will be appointed by each council to work with the officers elected by the members. Charters will be issued by the NFUW's national office, and a national convention will be called as soon as possible after the locals are established, Conroy said.

The CCL's action was taken to meet the present serious unemployment situation in the Dominion. Some 300,000 workers, about 7% of the labor force, are reported unemployed, with the trend still continuing downward.

Conroy said the first function of the locals of unemployed would be to try to get jobs for their members, either with private business or in public projects. If it is found impossible to locate jobs, the NFUW hopes to formulate policies calling for a decent living standard for the unemployed.

Murray Supports Red Cross Campaign

CIO Pres. Philip Murray has urged support of CIO members and their families for the American Red Cross Drive which begins throughout the nation March 1.

"Again this year, as in years past, I should like to call the attention of the American people generally and to the members of the CIO particularly, the noble aims and objectives of the American National Red Cross," Murray said.

"It goes without saying that the number of services the Red Cross will be able to perform will be in direct proportion to the amount of money raised."

27 Win Back Jobs, $16,000 Back Pay

"It was a long fight but 27 jobs and $16,000 are worth fighting for," said Secy. Joe Clark of the California Council of the CIO Woodworkers in reporting an IWA victory in an eight-month battle with the Oroville, Cal. Lumber Co.

As a result of a Natl. Labor Relations Board order, 27 IWA strikers have been reinstated to their jobs with full seniority rights and will receive $16,000 in back pay.

NLRB charges were filed after the IWA crew went on strike last May and the firm signed up a group belonging to the AFL Carpenters and Joiners.

Ban On Hiring Halls Aids Commies—Curran

By GERVASE N. LOVE

THE Supreme Court of the United States, in all its power and might, last week fostered the return of the crimp joint and shanghaiing as the standard of hiring in the nation's maritime industry.

By refusing to review a lower court decision which used the Taft-Hartley act to outlaw the union hiring hall, the Supreme Court in effect ordered abandonment of the order which had been brought into the industry by organized labor. In effect it sponsored restoration of the notorious hiring masters who formerly recruited crews for the U. S. merchant marine through saloons and bawdy houses, knockout drops and brass knuckles.

"This will give the Commies a field day on the waterfront," commented Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO National Maritime Union.

The comment came when Curran was advised of the Supreme Court action as he left the White House after a conference with President Truman.

"In this case," he said, "the Taft-Hartley act has done a greater service to Communism than anything on the waterfront. We don't get any help when we try to clean up an industry."

THE ruling the Supreme Court refused to review was made by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York at the behest of the National Labor Relations Board in a case involving hiring practices on the Great Lakes. The NLRB contended the union hiring hall is illegal because of asserted discrimination between union members and non-union men.

The hiring hall is used by most unions in the industry, both CIO and AFL. Under it, the unemployed seamen signs on at the bottom of a hiring list. Jobs are filled from the top of the list. Thus the man longest out of work gets the first job. If the union can't supply a man, the employer can hire anyone he wishes.

Curran also issued a formal statement which was indorsed by the CIO Executive Board, in session at the time. The board pledged the entire support of CIO to the NMU "as well as every other maritime, CIO, AFL and independent, in their fight to preserve orderly hiring practices and to prevent a return to the vicious malpractices of the past."

PROTEST: Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union (l.) and Pres. John Green of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers leave the White House after urging President Truman to halt transfer of merchant vessels to foreign registry.

"The action of the Supreme Court," said Curran, "is a menacing blow to the stability of our American maritime industry.

"The NMU is filing immediately a petition for rehearing of this important case. We are convinced that the gravity of the situation makes imperative a full hearing.

"Whatever the outcome of the case in the courts, the NMU and its members, as well as every other maritime union, CIO, AFL and independent, are determined that there shall be no return to the vicious hiring malpractices of the past."

THE scores of labor-management experts who have studied operations of the NMU hiring system, said Curran, have "almost unanimously" praised it. He said that NMU members, "better than anyone else, know the rotten, corrupt and biased methods of hiring which have been wiped out by the NMU and other maritime unions."

"Anyone who knows American seamen," he went on, "is well aware that they have no intention of permitting a return to the corruption of the past. They have no stomach for the shapeup, for shanghaiing, for bribery, for petty favoritism as a method of staffing the crews of the American merchant marine."

Curran predicted that the Communists will "hail" the decision because they know the chaos, bitterness and disillusionment that may follow and will seek to capitalize on it for their own ends. But responsible, democratic unions, he pledged, "will not permit them to use the decision or to disrupt legitimate unionism and provoke irresponsible action."

He blamed the decision on the Taft-Hartley act.

"The organized maritime workers of America will not let their gains be snatched away by this evil law," he said.

"They will fight more vigorously than ever for repeal of Taft-Hartley as this session of Congress. They fight for adoption of the Magnuson-Lesinski bill to restore the legal status of accepted, proven maritime hiring practices.

"Justice is on the side of the seamen and the other workers of the waterfront."

The Magnuson-Lesinski bill, which has been introduced in both houses of Congress, would legalize hiring halls as they have been operated in the past. Sen. Murray (D., Mont.) chairman of a Senate labor study subcommittee, said he was "sure" his group would look into the situation. The hiring hall system, he said, "has worked satisfactorily and it seems to me it ought to be continued." He appeared dubious, however, of the chances of the Magnuson-Lesinski bill passing at this session

The Supreme Court ruling was handed down on Feb. 13. The following day Irving Rogosin, NLRB trial examiner, ruled that hiring halls operated by the CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards before a strike in 1948 were illegal, and that the union violated T-H by agreeing to contracts continuing them. However, he ruled, the union did not strike illegally to secure continuation of the provision in the new contract.

Request For T-H Repeal Renewed

THE CIO Executive Board at its meeting last week twice called for the repeal of the increasingly oppressive Taft-Hartley act.

In one resolution it rededicated the CIO "to the unfinished task of repeal of the Taft-Hartley act and re-enactment of the original Wagner act with improving amendments," and demanded that Congress "heed the will of the people" and wipe T-H off the statute books now.

In the other, directed against "the oppressive evil of government by injunction," it called for T-H repeal and restoration of the Norris-LaGuardia Anti-Injunction act to its original effectiveness.

The Thomas-Lesinski bills were offered by the Truman administration at the first session of the 81st Congress. The CIO urged their passage at that time without crippling amendments.

"Throughout the debate on these bills," the board resolution said, "we expressed the firm conviction that the use of injunction is neither effective as a means of bringing about labor-management peace nor sound as an instrument of public policy in a democratic society."

Sen. Taft (R., O.), co-author of the Taft-Hartley act, offered amendments the resolution said "represent merely sops to labor" and as Taft himself declared, the final version by virtue of the amendments "preserved the basic principles" of T-H. The amended bill was defeated.

"The CIO is still determined," said the resolution, "as it has been in the past two and one-half years, to secure the removal of that unjust law from the statute books and there will be no slackening of our efforts to this end. Our position throughout has been that we will press forward not only for the repeal of the Taft-Hartley act but for our ultimate objective: improvements in the Wagner act to furnish additional and much-needed protection to labor's basic rights and to insure fairness and equity in our federal labor policy.

"It should be obvious to all that constructive labor-management relations cannot long be continued in the highly uncertain and demonstrably unsatisfactory status imposed by the Taft-Hartley act."

The other resolution recounted organized labor's half-century long struggle against the injunction and noted the "great strides forward" made when Congress passed the Norris-LaGuardia act and many states adopted similar legislation.

"Since the passage of the Taft-Hartley act," the resolution recited, "we have witnessed the revival of government-by-injunction on an enormous scale.

"On a federal level reactionary employers are enjoying a field day as a result of the repressive injunction provisions of the Taft-Hartley act. NLRB General Counsel (Robert N.) Denham has acted as the all too willing front for these employers in obtaining Taft-Hartley injunctions.

The injunction issued in his complaint against the United Mine Workers of America is the most recent example of the use of the Taft-Hartley act to repress unions. The Taft-Hartley act, furthermore, stipulates for the use of injunctions in the case of national emergencies. It is under this section that a second injunction against the United Mine Workers was issued.

"There can be no question, as stated by U. S. Circuit Judge Charles Clark, that the Taft-Hartley act 'puts the federal courts far into the business of terminating strikes.'"

CIO Board Says 'Denham's Removal Is Long Overdue'

THE CIO Executive Board at its meeting last week joined the swelling throng of those demanding that President Truman oust Robert N. Denham as general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board.

So did the executive board of the Minnesota State CIO Council, the Duluth (Minn.) CIO Council and the AFL Chicago Federation of Labor—all within the previous few days.

The CIO Executive Board's resolution pointed out that CIO Pres. Philip Murray on several occasions has called upon Truman to remove Denham, and declared it "fully supports President Murray in his request."

It denounced Denham for his recent attacks on NLRB members in speeches before employer groups in which he urged them to appeal to the courts any board decisions they might not like. It also rapped the "anti-labor bias and prejudice" he demonstrated in seeking an injunction against the United Mine Workers' strike.

"DENHAM'S unseemly attacks on the NLRB," said the resolution, "arise from the fact that the board in a few cases has demonstrated some degree of independence and has disagreed with Denham's biased and prejudiced interpretations of the Taft-Hartley act.

"The time has come when such conduct in a vital governmental post can no longer be tolerated. Denham's removal from office in the interest of good government is long overdue.

"The Executive Board of the CIO calls upon President Truman to remove Robert N. Denham as General Counsel of the NLRB. He is a member of the Executive Branch of the government and the Chief Executive has the power to remove him."

DENHAM'S waning prestige took another tumble when an NLRB trial examiner ruled on Feb. 13 that the head of the NLRB legal department was wrong when he complained that the CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards engaged in an illegal strike back in 1948.

The examiner, Irving Rogosin, in his intermediate report held that the hiring hall clause in the union's contract with the Pacific American Shipowners Association was illegal, but that the union had not illegally insisted upon continuation of the clause.

In his findings of fact Rogosin said that the union in negotiations insisted upon the old clause, which provided for the closed shop, until Aug. 30, 1948, when it accepted the employers' proposal for "a provision on 'employment' mutually satisfactory."

"At the very least," he said, "the union's acceptance of this proposal was evidence of a willingness to negotiate with respect to hiring provisions which would conform to the (Taft-Hartley) act."

The following day, Rogosin continued, the union offered a hiring plan which "expressly excluded" union membership as a basis for preference in hiring. The employers would have had to continue to obtain crews through the hiring hall, but "this requirement alone would not have rendered the hiring provisions illegal, if administered without discrimination."

The strike started Sept. 2, 1948.

"The undersigned has concluded," Rogosin wrote in his report, "that the objective sought to be obtained, apart from the union's economic demands, was a lawful hiring arrangement based on the union's proposal of Aug. 31."

CIO Again Moves Against Reds

Executive Board Orders Four Unions Ousted—But There Is Much To Be Done Before Anti-Commie Drive Is Complete

By ALLAN L. SWIM

FOUR UNIONS which were in the CIO early last week are now out or on their way out as a result of Executive Board action.

One was expelled last week. Three others were ordered expelled as of March 1. The charge against them was that they were Communist dominated.

This brought to six the number of unions against which the CIO has taken decisive action because they chose to follow the Communist Party line in preference to CIO policy. Two unions were ousted at the last CIO convention.

Six more unions face Communist domination charges and they will be dealt with later. One of the six—the Furniture Workers—is making an effort to "clean house." The other five continue to follow the same old line.

NOBODY WHO attended the CIO convention last November should have had the slightest doubt about the type of action the Executive Board would take.

Leaders of the CIO and a majority of convention delegates made it quite clear that they were fed up—completely fed up—with the activities of the Communists.

And the delegates made it quite clear, too, that they expected the Board to oust unions found guilty of adhering to the Moscow line.

The Board has acted.

It has acted in accordance with a convention mandate and in the best interests of the CIO and the nation.

Another blow—and an important one—has been struck at that group of crackpots which jumps collectively every time Stalin says "frog."

THE CIO's housecleaning job is far from complete—and months probably will be required to complete it.

Charges against six unions are still pending. It will take considerable time for hearings to be held and for the Board to act on recommendations of the hearing committees.

Any or all of the six unions may go into court seeking injunctions in an effort to prevent explusion.

The big job, is to free American workers from Communist domination—not merely to oust Red unions from the CIO.

As has been demonstrated in the electrical industry, the party-liners don't intend to give up easily. They undoubtedly will use every trick in the bag in an effort to wield their waning power as long as possible.

If they follow the pattern established by the ousted United Electrical Workers, the NLRB and the courts will be busy for a long time handling cases involving the CIO and former CIO unions.

THE AMERICAN Communist Party— a direct arm of the Russian group which has been hurling insults at, and waging "cold" war against the U. S.—knows it will be sneered at by comrades throughout the world if it loses its foothold in the U. S. labor movement.

And it is rapidly losing that foothold.

The party has been thoroughly discredited, insofar as the vast majority of U. S. unionists is concerned.

The voice of its stooges in the CIO has dropped to a weak whisper.

Unfortunately, there are still small groups of non-Communist unionists who have been unwilling to act decisively against their Commie leaders.

There are other small groups which to date have been unable to free themselves from the Red snare although they have tried.

LAST NOVEMBER the CIO created and set in motion machinery designed to free the organization of Communist influences.

That machinery has been operating as rapidly as circumstances permitted.

It could be speeded up considerably if every non-Communist CIO member in the nation would put a bit of extra effort into the drive against the Reds.

Those campaigns in the shops, in the local unions, in the city and state industrial union councils are just as important as the campaign being waged nationally by Philip Murray and other CIO leaders.

The quicker the job is completed the better. Let's all pitch in and get it over with as soon as possible.

Silly Reasoning

There's a ridiculous rumor making the rounds. It goes this way:

"The unions would rather have the Taft-Hartley Act as a political issue for the 1950 elections than to get rid of the law now. That's why there's no big drive for repeal of the act."

That's a silly reason.

T-H will be a major issue in the 1950 elcetions because the longer labor lives under T-H the more fed up it gets with the law.

The unions fought enactment of the law. They didn't like it before it was passed. They like it less the longer they see it operate. They made a real fight for its repeal—a fight that failed, temporarily.

They didn't give up the battle. They merely shifted emphasis. They decided to fight on two fronts instead of one.

On Front No. 1, the unions are seeking to get the present Congress to repeal T-H.

On Front No. 2, they're engaging in political activity designed to get the type of Congress that will repeal T-H—if the present one doesn't do the job.

But we don't know of a single union which wouldn't trade a good issue in the fall campaigns for repeal of T-H today.

Let's make no mistake about that.

And don't let any of the "experts" who write for the daily papers and the magazines sell you the line that "labor has found after operating under the Taft-Hartley Act that it isn't nearly as bad as they said it would be when unions were fighting its enactment."

World Changes, Not Memphis Cops

By BOB CHRISTOFFERSON

MEMPHIS POLICE are still hard on pickets—and newspapermen!

I've heard about what used to happen to union people and newspapermen in Boss Crump's town. Take it from me, those things still happen!

I came to Memphis from Birmingham Feb. 14, as a CIO publicity man to help in the strike by the United Steelworkers against the American Snuff Co.,

Ten minutes after being taken out to the picket line by USA District Director Bill Crawford I ran into trouble with the Memphis police. They grabbed a film holder and film from me after stopping me from taking pictures of a woman picket who had been arrested.

The woman had been placed in a squad car after officers had arrested her, allegedly for cursing strikebreakers. I walked up to the side of the car to photograph her. Just as I snapped the picture, a burly police lieutenant came up behind me and grabbed my camera.

HOLDING on to it, I protested he couldn't do that to me, that I had a right to take the picture. He told me I couldn't take it and started walking me and the camera across the street to a police inspector.

When we got there, I removed the loaded film holder from the camera and started to hand it to Crawford. The police lieutenant grabbed it and put it in his pocket. I protested that the holder contained two pictures made in Birmingham and that I didn't want them ruined by improper handling.

I had more film, but without the holder the camera was of no use. Crawford and I left the picket line to drive in to town to purchase another holder, and while we were gone police arrested 12 more women pickets and loaded them into a waiting patrol wagon.

Crawford and I called on Police Chief Claude Armour at his office in City Hall that afternoon to ask for the equipment.

We asked him why the police interfered when I took the picture. He gave these reasons:

1. His officers took the equipment "to protect ourselves" because they felt the picture was taken to "embarrass" the police department by making the police appear as "strikebreakers."

2. The equipment was taken in order to "protect" the prisoner in their custody from publicity.

3. Police don't care how many pictures are made of them, but they don't permit pictures of prisoners in their custody.

The chief admitted I had broken no law, but said there were "certain rules" they followed in "protecting prisoners."

Asked about taking pictures of officers arresting pickets and loading them into the patrol wagon, the chief said police would not try to prohibit that if the photographer did not "run up and try to take a picture of the prisoners inside the wagon."

ARMOUR SAID the police were just trying to do their duty, and both the union and the company accused them of partiality.

Crawford pointed out that a woman commercial photographer hired by the company had not been molested, although she had been taking pictures of squad cars, arrests and other scenes at the picket line. Armour said the difference was that she had not gone right up to a police car to take pictures but had been taking pictures "at a distance."

The lieutenant who stopped us told the chief at that point that he would have stopped the company's photographer had she attempted to take a picture as I did.

After debating with himself about it, the chief gave me my equipment back.

The police lieutenant who took my film holder told me later that I'd have to quit taking pictures in Memphis until after I got a "photographer's license." When I took this matter up with the police chief he said there was no such thing as a "photographer's license" in Memphis.

DESPITE his statement that police are trying to do their duty without partiality, Memphis CIO members take a different view of their activities in connection with the strike.

The day after police grabbed my camera equipment, the executive board of the Memphis CIO Council heard a report from a committee named to investigate incidents that have occurred during the strike, and adopted a statement that declared the strikers have not received fair play

The statement asserted that police have arrested pickets on flimsy excuses but have failed to arrest strikebreakers when there was ample evidence to justify arrests.

"Now don't take this layoff so hard, Jamieson. After all, you do want to see a younger man get a start in life."

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer

Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher

Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII February 20, 1950 No. 8

He Staged A Quick And Convincing Election

HE WAS A trade unionist of the "old school" and he didn't like to deal with what he called "legal technicalities."

He usually did his record keeping on the backs of old envelopes, and getting him to make a written report was a major accomplishment.

He thought the Wagner Act was a wonderful thing until he learned that it would require him to deal in "legal technicalities" and engage in elections.

"To heck with it," he said. "Those elections are a lot of bother. There are simpler ways of showing the boss a majority of his employes want to have a union."

THIS UNIONIST, a field representative whom we shall call Hank, soon found himself all tangled up in what he considered useless red tape.

His union was using the procedures set up by the National Labor Relations Board and was insisting that he do likewise.

Finally—and reluctantly—he learned how to file a petition for NLRB certification, how to seek a consent election, a card check "and all that other crazy stuff" that went with modernized management-labor relations.

But he didn't like it.

He would argue and cajole and do anything else he could think of to avoid going through the formality of an election.

"It seems useless to me to go through all that monkey business when you know the plant is organized and the guys really want a union," he would say.

A NEW PLANT employing about 100 production workers moved into Hank's town and Hank soon started talking unionism to the employes.

He learned, to his delight, that more than half of production force had belonged to unions and that he had a couple of "red hot" volunteer organizers among them.

In a couple of weeks about 80% of the men had signed union application cards. Within the next two or three weeks the percentage jumped to about 96.

Hank went to the manager's office, introduced himself and said, "I've got more than 95% of the fellows out in the plant signed up. I'd like for you to recognize the union and then set down soon and begin negotiating with us."

THE PLANT manager, courteously but firmly, told Hank that he wouldn't deal with the union until he was convinced that it represented a majority of the employes.

Hank knew that the manager's next step would be to ask for NLRB certification through the somewhat lengthy election procedure.

Hank jumped up from his chair suddenly, flashed a big smile and said, "Say, I've got a bright idea about getting this thing settled without a lot of argument and delay. I've got to run along now. I'll see you tomorrow."

Hank shook hands with the manager—then briskly walked out of the office, leaving a bewildered man behind him.

HANK RETURNED the next day, still in a jovial mood, and told the manager, "If all you want is real proof that the union represents a majority of your employes I can provide it in a couple of minutes."

He took the manager by the arm and led him from his office to the production room. In his deep, loud voice he shouted:

"Gentlemen, we're going to have a new type of election here today. Every man who's in favor of my union will leave the plant, walk across the street, sit down on the curb for one minute, return to his job and work like hell the rest of the day so we won't be accused of interfering with production.

Every worker in the plant—not just 96%—walked out! In a few minutes they were all back at their machines.

"You win," said the manager. A. L. S.

FOUR DOWN . . . !

Another 80th Congress Economic H-Bomb — Murray

ELECTION OF another Congress such as came into control in 1946 would be an "economic H-Bomb" for the United States, CIO President Philip Murray told the Executive Board in a fiery off-the-cuff speech preceding action on a resolution of support to the CIO Political Action Committee.

Murray reviewed the actions of the 80th "worst" Congress, including passage of the Taft-Hartley law. He pointed out that the reactionary majority in that Congress was elected by far less than a majority of the voters and urged all CIO affiliates to get every member registered and to the polls.

HE DERIDED those who say that labor has a purge list of Congressmen. There is a lot of talk about labor being against this candidate or that candidate and going out to "get" him, Murray said.

Actually, it is not important whether this or that individual Congressman or political party is elected. What labor is for is a liberal, forward-looking Congress, and what it is against is reactionary thinking on Capitol Hill. Labor will work for candidates who back the liberal program and will try to defeat those who do not.

The resolution, adopted unanimously, declared that "the issue is not loose charges of 'socialism.' It is progress or reaction."

The Board instructed PAC to redouble its efforts to mobilize the political forces of labor "and all other groups with similar aims and aspirations" for the 1950 campaign, and called on all CIO affiliates to "give without stint of their energies and physical and financial resources to the election of candidates pledged to a program of progress."

THE BOARD "declares its faith in the wisdom and good judgment of the American people and expresses the belief that reaction wins only when a majority of the people neglect their duties of citizenship and fail to vote," the resolution continued.

"The Board therefore declares that the primary political action duty of all CIO affiliates is the registration to vote of each of their members, their families and their neighbors, and it directs all CIO affiliates to take immediate steps to secure this 100% registration.

"It further directs (1) intensification of the program of informing all voters on the issues before them and of the records of the candidates on those issues, and (2) a maximum effort on election day to insure that all registered voters cast their ballots.

"The 1950 political campaign has begun. It is a call to good citizenship for each member of the CIO."

The CIO-PAC Executive Board held a dinner meeting Feb. 15 to work over details of the campaign.

Unexpected But Welcome Guest

As the CIO-PAC Executive Board was getting ready to start its dinner meeting at a Washington hotel, Feb. 14, a handsome young-appearing man came up and joined the group, nodding recognition here and there and looking extremely affable.

"Hello Phil," he said to CIO Pres. Murray. "Hope I'm in the right place."

"Well," Murray replied, smiling, "I doubt if you are, but we'd be glad to have you stay with us."

"I'd probably have a better time here than I would where I'm supposed to be," the gentleman replied, "but I'm afraid they might miss me." With which he took his polite departure.

It was Eric Johnson, former President of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and now "czar" of the movie industry.

During the labor-management conference of 1946, he had made a number of friends among the labor leaders present, and on several occasions had differed with the other management representatives to the point where one disgruntled C. of C. member commented: "Eric should get over on the labor side of the table—he doesn't belong with us."

'No Strike' Law Stays

Bills seeking repeal of the New York state law setting up penalties for public employes who strike were killed by the labor committee of the Assembly. The law, known as the Condon-Waslin act, was enacted four years ago as a result of a teachers' strike in Buffalo.

4 CP-Dominated Unions Expelled; Mine, Mill Now, 3 Others March 1st

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

THEY had heard the charges, and the supporting statements, and the defense.

And last week, members of the CIO Executive Board brought in their decision on four national unions.

The verdict, voted overwhelmingly by the CIO Board: "Guilty," by reason of consistent, unwavering support of the policies of the Communist Party.

The decision: Expulsion from the ranks of the CIO.

For the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, the verdict took effect at once.

For the Public Workers, the Office & Professional Workers, the Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers, the expulsion takes effect March 1, as a result of procedures involved in efforts by the unions to enjoin the CIO.

The reports—brought to the Board by two separate committees—found the same pattern of day-by-day Communist control dominating all four unions.

1. MINE-MILL: "The committee therefore concludes not only that the policies of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union follow the Communist Party line, but also that they follow that line because the Communist Party is in direct control of the union's leadership, and dictates to that leadership the policies it shall adopt."

2. OFFICE & PROFESSIONAL WORKERS: "The policies and activities of the UOWPA followed and continue to follow exactly, without deviation, the program of the Communist Party. . . . Never in the history of the UOPWA has any policy ever been adopted which in any way runs counter to the policies of the Communist Party, or to the interests of the Soviet Union, as those interests are reflected in the program of the Communist Party."

3. FOOD, TOBACCO & AGRICULTURAL WORKERS: "It is abundantly clear that the FTA consistently follows the Communist Party line. The record is plain that wherever the needs of the Communist Party and the Soviet Union dictate, the leadership of the FTA is always willing to sacrifice the needs of the workers in that industry and organized labor in America as a whole."

4. UNITED PUBLIC WORKERS: "On the basis of all the evidence presented to it, the committee unanimously concludes that the policies and activities of the UPWA are consistently directed toward the achievement of the program and the purposes of the Communist Party rather than the objectives and policies set forth in the CIO Constitution. . . .

"The UPWA has never adopted any policy which in any way ran counter to the policies of the Communist Party."

THE REPORTS offered a unique study of Communist policy by leading American trade unionists.

As the committee said in the UOPWA case, "since the charge against the UOPWA was that it pursues the program and purposes of the Communist Party, the committee was necessarily required to give consideration to the policies of the Communist Party."

CIO To Organize Four Jurisdictions

No announcement has yet been made as to what steps will be taken by CIO in the jurisdictions left vacant by the expulsion of the four unions.

But CIO Pres. Murray told news reporters that plans will soon be made public. The Board has authorized CIO's executive officers to take necessary actions for organization of those jurisdictions.

The basic thesis of that party, the committee said, is the creation of revolution and the "dictatorship of the proletariat," presumably as steps toward a "new order of society."

"Because of this basic thesis," the report said, "Communist philosophy has always been predicated upon the use of trade unions as an instrument of Communist policy and as a weapon by which the party could organize the working classes and bring nearer the revolution from which the dictatorship of the party would emerge."

The committee noted a famous remark by Lenin, father of the Russian revolution and the writer of much Communist theory:

"It is necessary to agree to any and every sacrifice . . . to resort to all sorts of devices, maneuvers and illegal methods, to evasion and subterfuge, in order to penetrate the trade unions, to remain in them, and to carry on Communist work in them at all costs."

IN THE last 15 years, the committee went on, Communist Party policies have gone through six major phases in the United States, and every shift has been designed to strengthen the position of the Soviet Union in its relations with real or fancied aggressors.

At various times, the Communist Party supported "collective security" and opposed fascism in every form; allied, through the Soviet-Nazi pact, with Hitler's brand of fascism; opposed American aid to the democracies, and then quickly called for an American declaration of war following the invasion of Russia; devoted itself to cooperation between capital and labor, in war and peace; and opposed almost every policy of the American government.

"Throughout this curious history," the CIO committee commented, "the Communist Party never ceased to claim that it made its decisions on the basis of a genuine appraisal of the interests of the American people and of American labor. Those claims were, of course, false."

Against those twists and turns of the Communist line, which were formulated to serve the best interests of the Soviet government, the CIO committee measured up the policies of the four accused unions.

THE CIO committees found a continuous and exact parallel between Communist policies and the policies of the four unions.

The United Office & Professional Workers, in 1938 and earlier, "expressed fervent support for Roosevelt's anti-aggression program"—but, after the Stalin-Hitler pact, the union sharply reversed its field.

"The union not only opposed involvement in the war, it opposed lend-lease, it opposed aid to Britain, and in general, took the position that American labor's problems were at home and that what happened abroad was of no significance."

But after the invasion of Russia by the Nazi military machine, the "UOPWA again shifted its field. Through its newspaper, it called briskly and with no uncertainty for 'full aid to Britain and Soviet Russia.'" By the spring of 1942, the UOPWA had opened a "full-fledged, all-out propaganda demand for the immediate opening up of a second front."

When the Big Three reached agreements on many wartime problems at the Teheran Conference, the UOPWA "was most vociferous in denouncing any signs of labor militancy." Its president, the CIO group recalled, "commented favorably on Harry Bridges' proposal that labor continue its no-strike pledge into the post-war period."

But by 1946, the union had decided that "America's foreign policy was just a reflection of the fact that 'big business is driving toward war.'

". . . The union's general post-war position was the same as that of the Communist Party and it remains the same today," the CIO committee said. ". . . The union's position at the present time, as regards the CIO, is, as is the Communist Party's, one of violent and destructive opposition."

How explain the "vitriolic attack upon the CIO" by the union and the inconsistent "desire to remain within the CIO"?

The CIO report said the only explanation was a series of articles by the Communists' labor director criticizing the ousted United Electrical Workers for having "abandoned the fight against the CIO," and urging other left-wing unions to use the hearings to attack the national organization.

"The history of this union, when compared with the history of the Communist Party . . . shows beyond a doubt that the present coincidence of the program of the Communist Party and of the UOPWA is . . . the result of devotion by this union to the over-all purposes of the Communist Party rather than the objectives of the CIO."

IT WAS the same story, with little variation, in the cases of the other three unions.

The Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers, during the war, supported national service legislation—which the CIO opposed.

As the CIO committee noted, "legislation of this character to bring about forced labor is abhorrent to those whose sole allegiance is to American trade union principles."

In the post-war era, FTA opposed the Marshall Plan, the Truman Administration and the CIO in line with Communist policy declarations.

Actions such as these have kept the officers busy, but the FTA wasted away. In two years its membership—as reflected by dues payments to the CIO—dropped 50%.

The evidence convinced the committee that FTA's charter from the CIO had "fallen into the control of a group devoted entirely to the principles of the Communist Party, and opposed to the constitution and democratic objectives of CIO."

To keep them in the organization would permit that leadership "to continue to betray the workers in the interests of alien loyalties under the protection of the good name of the CIO." And so the committee recommended expulsion.

(See partial text, this page)

THE MINE-MILL story unfolded along similar lines.

In the case of that union, the committee had studied not only the evidence of union publications and convention proceedings, but heard the story, from former leading officials of the union—who since have broken with the Communists.

That Communist domination, the committee said, has proven the ruin of an old, established union with a great fighting tradition. Mine-Mill is the direct descendant of the old Western Federation of Miners, but the present Mine-Mill leadership "has cast aside that heritage and has sold the union down the river of subservience to the Communist Party."

The Mine-Mill leadership not only follows the Communist line, the committee added, "but it does so in response to a carefully organized mechanism by which the decisions of the Communist Party are translated into Mine-Mill policy."

Mine-Mill's crisis is nothing new, the CIO group pointed out. Recalling a 1947 revolt by democratic workers against the Mine-Mill Communist clique, the committee recalled that CIO had advised those workers not to secede and to end any activities that would "tend to disrupt or injure the union's activities."

At the same time, the CIO had called on the union leadership to "remove the Communist Party influence which had led to the revolt." But the union leadership refused to act.

And now Mine-Mill has a membership of 44,000 in a jurisdiction estimated at over 150,000 workers.

Mine-Mill's leadership "refused to return to the principles of American unionism," the committee added, "and they have persisted in their devotion to the alien doctrines of the Communist Party. They and they alone are responsible for the union's present plight."

THE United Public Workers—the fourth union expelled by the Board—was found like the others to follow closely the line of the Communist Party and to follow policies contrary to CIO's objectives.

UPW was the product of a merger in 1946 between the United Federal Workers and the State, County & Municipal Workers. Since that time the UPW has lost most of its membership among employes on Uncle Sam's payroll.

Summary Of CIO Moves

Here's a quick summary of CIO moves against Communist-dominated unions.

1. Nov. 2, 1949: CIO amended constitution to provide expulsion of Communist-dominated unions; expelled United Electrical and Farm Equipment unions.

2. Nov. 5, 1949: Charges of Communist domination filed against 10 unions at CIO Executive Board meeting in Cleveland.

3. Nov. 5, 1949: Pres. Murray names three committees to hear charges, evidence and testimony against accused unions.

4. Dec. 19, 1949-Feb 6, 1950: Two CIO committees hear cases involving four unions.

5. Feb. 15-16: CIO Executive Board gets recommendations from committees urging expulsion of four unions on basis of proven Communist domination.

6, Feb. 15: Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers expelled, effective at once.

7. Feb. 15: United Office & Professional Workers and Food Tobacco & Agricultural Workers expelled, effective March 1.

8. Feb. 16: United Public Workers expelled, effective March 1.

Hearings in cases of other six unions not yet scheduled, but will probably be held during coming months. These unions are: American Communications Association, Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, Marine Cooks & Stewards, Intl. Fishermen, Intl. Fur & Leather Workers, United Furniture Workers.

CIO Probers F

Here is the story of Communist Party control of a union—the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

It's a story spelled out in detail by "men who were there" and who told their story to the CIO Committee investigating charges of Communist domination of Mine-Mill.

Here's a summary of that eye-witness story as the Committee reported it on Feb. 15 to the CIO Executive Board:

THE SHOCKING character of the direct control by the Communist Party of the leadership of this union (Mine-Mill) and, through them, of the union itself, was further brought home to the committee by direct testimony showing in detail the exact manner in which the policies of the union are dictated by the Communist Party.

This testimony was given to the committee by Homer Wilson and Kenneth Eckert. Mr. Wilson was a member of the union for 10 years. He was a member of its international executive board and at one time was vice-president.

Mr. Eckert is a former member of the union's executive board and a former member of the Communist Party. He had attended the Lenin School in Moscow and served in Mine-Mill as one of the members of the Communist Party steering committee which determined, in consultation with

Trial Committees Say Ousted Unions Sought To Transfer Blame To CIO

REPORTS by CIO hearing committees showed clearly that the four expelled unions had offered little defense against charges of Communist domination.

In general, the union leaders upheld their policies; but principally they tried to blame the CIO for moving against them.

Here are some of the committees' comments:

On Mine-Mill: "The only defense of the leaders of Mine-Mill has been epithet, vilification and confusion. . . . False claims of autonomy cannot justify adherence to the foreign policy of the Soviet Union and betrayal of the interest of American workingmen."

On Food & Tobacco: "In its brief . . . the union states as its defense that the real issues of the trial are whether the policies of FTA were based on the will of the membership and whether they advanced the economic, social and political interests of FTA. . . .

"The defense . . . refused to come to issue with the sole question this Committee had before it—whether the activities of the union were consistently directed toward the achievement of the program and policies of the Communist Party rather than the objectives of the CIO."

On Public Workers: "The defense offered was of no value whatsoever because it was in no way directed to the truth or falsity of the charge, or the evidence introduced in support thereof. . . .

"The UPWA was not sincerely attempting to disprove the charges. It was attempting only to entrap the committee and to make a false record which it could use to attack the committee and the CIO."

On Office & Professional: "The UOPWA's notion of a proper defense in these proceedings was an attack upon the CIO. . . . The hearing was called a 'trial' and was denounced as 'rigged'. . . . Instead of answering the charges, the UOPWA's president read a statement which constituted a denunciation of the CIO."

THE CIO COMMITTEES, for their part, stated the issues clearly. In the Mine-Mill report, as an example, the CIO group hit sharply at the cry of "autonomy" which was used by that and other unions as a blanket defense.

"The false cry of freedom to criticize cannot justify the Communist tactics of systematic character assassination against the national CIO, its officers and all affiliated unions who oppose the policies of the Communist Party," the report said.

It noted that Mine-Mill leaders had offered "a recital of the many instances in which the false charge of Communism had been made against genuine, progressive American trade unions.

"THE COMMITTEE knows that the charge of communism is often falsely made. It is convinced that the use of such a false charge against American labor is deplorable. In short, the committee is against the smearing of honest American trade unionism by those who see communism in everything progressive and forward-looking.

"But abhorrence of false and malicious charges of communism does not require that the committee reject evidence that this union's leadership is in fact controlled by the Communist Party, that it is not an honest American union leadership, that it devotes itself to the achievement, not of the American progressive aims of the CIO, but of the purposes of the Communist Party.

"And such evidence was submitted to the committee and was not denied by the union."

The same committee ,acting against "loose assertions," denied that the hearings are designed to destroy the "autonomy" of CIO affiliates or to "impose political uniformity" on them.

"The charge is not aimed at affiliates which honestly differ with CIO policies," the group said. "At our last convention . . . it was made abundantly clear that there is room enough in the CIO for honest difference of opinion."

But it said, there's no room in CIO or any other voluntary association "for an affiliate whose policies over a period of time contravene and tend to undermine the fundamental objectives of the organization."

—From the IUE-CIO News

These Committees Made Reports On Trials

Reports on the Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers and the Mine Mill & Smelter Workers were brought to the board by a committee headed by Pres. Jacob Potofsky of the clothing workers. Other committee members: Pres. Joseph Curran, maritime union, and Sec.-Treas. Emil Mazey, auto workers.

Case of the Public Workers was heard by Pres. Emil Rieve of textile, Pres. Harry Sayre of the paper workers, and Pres. Joseph Beirne of the communications workers. Rieve, Sayre and Pres. Wagner of the Gas Coke and Chemical Workers conducted the UOPWA hearing.

When the merger went into effect, the federal group represented about one-third of the union. At present, because of losses in membership, federal workers comprise only about 11% of UPW's membership.

The merged union quickly started off on the wrong foot, the committee pointed out. At its 1946 convention, a foreign affairs resolution critical of the U. S. government was passed—according to a report in the Washington Post—out of its regular order on the agenda. The reason for special treatment, the story said, was a request from George Morris, Communist Daily Worker reporter, to liven up an otherwise dull day.

"IN THE period following the 1946 convention and continuing up to the present moment, the UPW has never repudiated the basic pro-Soviet position exhibited at its first convention under its new name."

At the CIO hearings, the committee recalled, "the nature of the defense offered by the UPW was extremely persuasive evidence that the UPW had no defense to offer."

...und Mine, Mill Policies Determined By Communist Leaders

Communist leaders, the policies which the union leadership would adopt for the union.

Both Wilson and Eckert made it perfectly clear to the committee that the fact that this union followed the Communist Party was not accidental. It was the result of complete domination of the union's leadership by the party.

The party group within the union had a systematic working apparatus for making its decisions and for translating those decisions into union policy.

At the top there was a party steering committee of four members. This committee, of which Eckert and Maurice Travis, now secretary-treasurer of the union, were members, determined Communist policy within the union. They did this in consultation with the leaders of the Communist Party. Meetings were frequently held with Communist Party leaders such as William Z. Foster, the chairman of the party; Eugene Dennis, its general secretary; John Williamson, its labor secretary; and Gil Green, its Illinois director. In addition, there was a regular envoy from the Communist Party who was designated as liaison man between Mine-Mill and the party.

AT MEETINGS of this steering committee, which was sometimes enlarged to include such persons as the union's research director and the editor of its newspaper, the policies to be adopted by Mine-Mill were determined by these Communist leaders.

Their decisions were then brought to the so-called "Progressive Caucus" of the union, which contained all of the Communist and pro-Communist leaders of the union. All anti-Communists in the union were excluded from this caucus. The Communist decisions were invariably adopted by the caucus and were then brought before the official bodies of the union and adopted as union policy.

This was the transmission belt by which the decisions of the Communist Party leaders became decisions of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

BOTH ECKERT and Wilson testified in detail to the control which this Communist Party machinery exercises over the affairs of the union.

Such matters as who should be the officers of the union, or whether the 1947 report of the CIO Investigating Committee should be accepted, or whether the union should comply with the Taft-Hartley Act, were first decided by the Communist Party steering committee, then transmitted to the "Progressive Caucus," and finally presented to the union's executive board or its membership for approval.

The membership, of course, had a theoretical veto power. But the party's control of the union's newspaper, control of its organizational staff and control of its leadership, enabled the Communist Party to conceal its dictation of union policy and thus to maintain power over union affairs.

The right of the union membership to control policy, given lip service to by the leadership, was thus frustrated.

The membership had no voice, for instance, in the decision of Reid Robinson to resign as president—a decision made by the Communist Party for party reasons.

It had no control over the appointment of Maurice Travis, a newcomer to the union, as executive assistant to Pres. Robinson, an appointment dictated by the Communist Party for its own purposes. The membership had no control over the appointment of organizers, and approximately 90% of the union's staff are members of the Communist Party.

THE CAREER of Maurice Travis affords a good example of the role of the Communist Party within the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union. Travis was a steelworker. He was expelled from a local of the United Steelworkers of America as a Communist disrupter in 1941. Shortly thereafter, he was placed by the Communist Party on the staff of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

After less than two years with the union, he was chosen by the party to be executive assistant to the president. Later, he became vice-president and, by virtue of Reid Robinson's resignation in 1947, president of the union.

The party, however, decided that his Communist affiliation was too well known for him to function effectively as president. Accordingly, the Communist Party steering committee determined to support for the presidency a candidate who was not known as a Communist follower but who could be relied upon to go along with party decisions.

John Clark was selected as such a man. And, in accordance with this decision, Clark was elected and now serves as president, and Travis as secretary-treasurer.

THE TESTIMONY of Eckert and Wilson was not contradicted. Although it seemed clear to the committee from the documentary proof that Mine-Mill follows the Communist Party line, the committee was nevertheless shocked and outraged by the direct testimony that the union's policies were determined in secret meetings with high officials of the Communist Party prior to their submission to the union's governing bodies and to the membership.

Eckert and Wilson named names, places and dates. Their testimony was not general in character—but specifically described the meetings of the secret Communist apparatus which runs the union.

The committee was most anxious, therefore, for the union leaders, whose activities were so damningly described in their testimony, to submit an answer to it.

But, despite the committee's repeated invitation, they refused to do so.

Improved Social Security Laws Urged

By D. ROCKWELL CLARK

"THE ENTIRE nation is indebted to the strikers in steel, auto and other industries who through their sacrifices have contributed so much to the cause of economic security."

So said the CIO Executive Board on Jan. 14 in a resolution calling for an all-out effort to strenthen Social Security laws at this session of Congress.

"This progress not only aids those directly involved, but gives a tremendous impetus to the passage of adequate Social Security laws," the resolution continued.

Witnesses will present the CIO position at hearings before the Senate Finance Committee starting Feb. 27. The Committee is considering HR 6000, which passed the House in the closing days of the first session.

HR 6000 is a considerable improvement over the present inadequate laws, the CIO Social Security Committee has found, but it should go further.

Chief differences between the CIO position and the provisions of HR 6000 are:

Coverage: HR 6000 extends coverage of the old-age pension system to another 11 million workers, but this still excludes a large proportion of the working force; CIO believes coverage should and can be extended to every U. S. citizen who works.

Benefits: HR 6000 would raise old-age benefits an average of 70%; CIO, by using a different basis for computing benefits, would raise them 100% or more.

(The Social Security Committee at its Feb. 13 meeting decided that the "average wage," on which benefits are paid, should be based on the worker's earnings in the highest quarters of each of his "five best years," or the five most recent years. Under present law the workers loses twice because of periods of sickness or unemployment, since periods of no pay or extremely low pay drag down the "average" on which the benefits are calculated. HR 6000 leaves periods of total disability out of the calculations of "average wage," but does nothing about temporary disability or unemployment.)

Retirement age: CIO believes that the retirement age for women should be lowered to 60 from its present 65. Under present law, a "fully insured" man of 65 can draw primary benefits, but must wait till his wife also has attained 65 before she can draw dependent benefits, which works a further unnecessary hardship on elderly couples. Three out of five men of 65 are married to women of 60 or younger, according to one set of figures. HR 6000 makes no change in the present set-up.

Survivors: Under the present law, the widow of a "fully insured" worker receives 75% of the benefit he would have been entitled to had he lived, plus 50% for each dependent, up to a stated maximum. Under HR 6000, she would receive 75% plus 75% for the first child and 50% for other children, up to a higher maximum. CIO says she should get 100% of what her husband would have been entitled to receive, plus 75% for each dependent, up to a much higher maximum than provided either in present law or in HR 6000.

Permanent disability: Under present law, a permanently disabled worker is not entitled to ANY payments until he reaches 65, even if he has "fully insured" status. HR 6000 would grant him the same benefits he would receive if he had reached 65, but would give nothing for his dependents. CIO would grant full insurance for both the worker and his dependents.

Temporary disability: Neither the present system nor HR 6000 makes any provision for payments for temporary disability. CIO believes a system should be worked out, and has indorsed the proposals made in the Administration bill presented to the House.

Minimum and maximum payments: The present law provides that no beneficiary of the old-age pension system may receive less than $10 a month. HR 6000 raises this to $25, CIO to $50. The complicated methods of maximum payments result in a low figure at present and a somewhat higher one under HR 6000. CIO sets a simple maximum of 80% of the worker's average wage.

"Extra benefits": A particularly cruel section of the present law provides that if a retired worker earns more than $14.99 a month in "covered" employment he sacrifices the entire benefit for that month. HR 6000 raises this to $50 and then makes only a pro-rata deduction in monthly pension checks, with no deduction at all for workers over 75 years of age. CIO agrees.

Another phase of the present social security laws has to do with direct public relief of the aged. Under this, the federal government and the states each contribute part of a fund, administered by the states, which goes to help out the destitute.

"No matter how much better we make the social insurance laws," the Board resolution stated, "many Americans will have to rely on public aid on the basis of need to help them in emergencies. This last resort must be adequate to help all needy persons, not just the aged, the blind, and dependent children, as at present. HR 6000 should be amended to provide federal matching grants for general relief also."

THE BOARD also adopted a recommendation of the Social Security Committee calling for a national minimum standard for the states to meet in setting up unemployment compensation systems.

"With unemployment now close to five million, Congress must make plans to replace the insufficient protection written into state laws," the resolution continued. "Benefits must be raised substantially, and duration extended, so that able-bodied men and women who cannot find jobs are not abandoned to public or private charity.

"The program for federal standards again recommended by President Truman would be a valuable interim step. It should be accompanied by re-insurance grants to states whose funds are running low, and by adequate appropriations for the federal and state employe security agencies."

The CIO proposals were worked out by the Social Security Committee with the aid and advice of a group of technicians.

MEMBERS of the technicians' group are: Mrs. Katherine Ellickson, CIO Research Dept.; Paul Sifton, a Washington representative for the CIO Auto Workers; Harry Becker, Director of Social Security Dept., UAW-CIO; John Edelman, Washington representative for the Textile Workers; Kenneth Kramer, TWUA Director of Insurance and Health, and Sylvia Gottlieb, Communications Workers.

TWUA Pres. Emil Rieve is chairman of the CIO Social Security Committee and will present the CIO case on Capitol Hill.

Other committee members are: Secy.-Treas. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers; Secy.-Treas. Emil Mazey of the Auto Workers; Vice Pres. Joseph Childs of the Rubber Workers; Pres. Irving Simon of Retail, Wholesale; Vice Pres. John Yancey of Transport Service; CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne, and Secy.-Treas. Jacob Clayman of the Ohio CIO Council.

Old Couple Need $143 A Month

Just how much too small are present Social Security payments?

In 1946, the Federal Security Agency drew up "minimum budgets" for elderly couples living in several cities. In Boston, where living expenses were about at the midpoint, the minimum was $121 a month.

The "richest" group of Social Security beneficiaries were falling behind this minimum at the rate of $668 a year, and that was when price control was still in effect. The "poorest" were missing this standard of minimum decency by the staggering total of $1300 a year.

Since then, the cost of the same items in the minimum budget has risen, in Boston, to $143.33 a month, while Social Security payments have stayed in the same place, so the gap is even wider.

The minimum budget allows nothing for sickness, charity, or travel outside the city, sets aside a little for rent, assumes major reliance on low-cost foods, and, in effect, lets each aged man buy an overcoat every eight years and his wife have one new house dress every two years.

HE SITS AND READS, he goes to the doctor, and he worries. This is the life of Arthur Emerick, 68-year-old retired member of Goodrich local 5 of the CIO Rubber Workers. His total income is $58.14 a month in Security benefits. It's not enough.

'How Can Missus And I Live On $58.14 A Month?'

ARTHUR Emerick, 68 years old, and his elderly wife, live in Akron, O., in "a home we are trying to own." Until three years ago, he worked for the Goodrich Rubber Co., and was a member of Goodrich Local 5 of the CIO Rubber Workers.

When he retired he received $852 in severance pay, and he and his wife started drawing a total of $58.14 a month in old age insurance under the Social Security law.

"Now here are cold facts," he soberly told the House Ways and Means Committee last year when the group was hearing testimony about Social Security amendments. "My taxes run me about $80 a year. When June 1 comes I will get notice of my taxes. I am a year and a half in arrears on June 1.

"My coal bill runs me $130 a year last winter, and we did not have any winter. My utilities run from $9 to $10 a month. That is not counting my living.

"If somebody can tell me how the Missus and I can live and pay those bills on $58.14 a month, I am willing to listen . . . I do not know that I can say anything else."

Emerick, who suffers from an asthmatic heart, said that his two sons, between them, were piecing out support for the parents. "But they have families and expenses of their own," he said.

His health was good until about five years ago, but now, besides the asthma which affects his heart, he has high blood pressure.

There are now 11 million persons in this country, who have attained the age of 65 or over. In 1900 there were only three million. In another 30 years, if present trends continue, there will be 22 million persons over 65 in the U. S. How are they to live?

At the moment, Emerick's position is sadly typical. Millions of elderly couples are in straits just like his, or worse. At least 10% have been forced onto direct public charity, which means passing the hateful "means test," as often as not, and surrendering title to whatever small bit of property they do own; vast additional numbers are helplessly dependent on their children and feel it is a poor reward for the kids.

CIO feels the answer lies in (a) adequate, company-financed insurance plans, to supplement (b) a universal Social Security pension system.

Under CIO's schedule of benefits, as proposed to the Senate Finance committee, Emerick would be receiving between $108 and $126 a month for himself and his wife—even if his "average wage" were computed on the present basis. And if his "average wage" were re-calculated according to the CIO formula, he would get more.

2 Firms Accused Of Misbranding Fabrics

The Federal Trade Commission has issued a complaint charging Goodall-Sanford Inc., of Sanford, Me., and its subsidary, Goodall Fabrics, Inc., of New York City, with violation of the Wool Products Labeling Act in connection with the sale of fabrics.

Fabrics sold by the firms, the complaints alleges, were misbranded in that they did not have affixed to them a tag, label or other mark showing the percentage of respective fibers present in the products.

The company also is accused of failing to identify the manufacturer or reseller as required under the Wool Act.

Navy 'Stool Pigeon' Clause Lambasted

Charles La Follette, national director of Americans for Democratic Action, has protested the Navy's loyalty oath, which requires applicants to swear they are not members of any organization on the Attorney General's subversive list.

LaFollette pointed out that the "stool pigeon" clause, asking that Navy personnel attending meetings of such organizations identify others by name and address, is an imitation of Communist devices. "In our opinion," he said, "the Navy Department is leading the nation down a dangerous path by insisting on making 'informers' of the youths under its control."

OWIU Wins Vested Rights in Pensions

THE CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union has negotiated a tentative pension agreement with Sinclair Oil Corp., which gives an employe with 10 years' service a vested right to the company's contribution to the fund.

The agreement covers more than 10,000 Sinclair employes scattered throughout the nation east of the Continental Divide. Contracts between OWIU and Sinclair have in many past cases been pattern-fixers for the entire oil industry.

An employe of 10 years' service will be guaranteed a vested right to 50% of company's contributions the amount increasing thereafter at 5% a year to reach 100% at the end of 20 years. If the employe leaves or is fired, he does not lose the equity he has built up.

Other outstanding features of the pact are that a strike or lockout shall not impair an employe's pension rights and that an employe retiring at 65 with 20 years' service will be guaranteed a minimum of $125 a month, including social security benefits.

THE CONTRACT also provides that an employe may be laid off as many as 365 days without losing his service continuity in calculating pensions. 100% annuity rights shall and will be received by an employe disabled after 15 years' service.

Other features of the pact are retirement of an employe on a pension earlier than 65 when mutually agreed to by him and the company, a smaller pension after 15 years' service on retirement at 65.

Pensions will be jointly financed, with participation voluntary. However, Sinclair workers have been contributing to their pensions for years—and the old plan is inferior to the new one.

TENTATIVE agreement also was reached on a jointly-financed sick benefit plan.

In addition to five weeks at full pay and 25 weeks at half pay for sick leave now paid, employes will get 58 to 62% of their full pay beyond the old maximum leave, up to 52 weeks.

Hospital charges will be paid at a rate of $8 a day for employes; $6 a day for their dependents, and hospital social service charges will be paid in an amount equal to 10 times the daily benefit.

Surgical fees will be paid up to $225 for employes and $180 for dependents. Provision also is made for payment of maternity benefits of $50 to $150 for employes and dependents, and for doctor's calls at the rate of $3 a day up to a maximum of $93 per illness.

Each employe will receive a $1000 accidental death insurance policy.

The agreement is contingent on: Ratification by the rank and file of the OWIU members affected; passage by Congress of HR 6000, increasing social security benefits.

PENSION PLAN providing minimum of $125 monthly at age 65 after 20 years' service was agreed upon by CIO Oil Workers and two subsidiaries of Sinclair Oil Corp. It was worked out in two months of bargaining by the negotiators, shown above as they finished. In foreground Ralph B. Jones (l.), Sinclair industrial relations director, shakes hands with OWIU Intl. Rep. R. L. Clark while Daniel T. Pierce, assistant to Sinclair president, puts his hand on theirs. In background are (l. to r.) C. J. Allen, of Sinclair, and John Cordwell, Chester Pa.; W. B. Nelson, Houston, Tex., and George H. Hoffman, Hammond, Ill., all of OWIU.

CIO Supports More Liberal DP Measure

ENCOURAGEMENT to Senators seeking liberalization of the Displaced Persons bill was given by the CIO last week.

"We call upon the Senate to carry forward," said Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director, in a statement, "the American tradition of equity, justice and recognition of human dignity by passing the substitute Displaced Persons bill offered by Sen. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and his colleagues.

"The CIO has strongly urged and worked for liberalization of the Displaced Persons act of 1948. We have vigorously opposed the restrictions and the discriminatory nature of that act.

"During the first session of the 81st Congress, the CIO gave full support to the Celler bill. We were gratified when the House passed it by an overwhelming majority. That bill indicated our willingness as a nation to fulfill our obligation to the people of the world and our deep concern for the humanitarian needs of the displaced persons themselves."

WHEN THE Celler bill reached the Senate Judiciary committee it was effectively bottled up by Sen. McCarran (D., Nev.), the chairman, until the closing days of the session. Then it emerged with changes that emasculated it. The Senate, dissatisfied, returned it to the committee with instructions to report back on Jan. 25, 1950. This was done, but it was still close to the bill the committee offered at the first session. Some committee members here opposed to it voted for it nonetheless to get it on the floor.

Sens. Kilgore, Graham (D., N. C), and Ferguson (R., Mich), filed a minority report and offered a substitute which closely parallels the original Celler bill.

Sens. Kefauver (D., Tenn.) and Magnuson (D., Wash.) associated themselves with the minority in a statement of their own. Sens. O'Conor (D., Md.), and Wiley (R., Wisc.), issued another statement which also called for a more liberal bill.

Truman Defended Against Attack Of Former Adviser

PRESIDENT Truman read aloud, before his top economic and political assistants, and the Council of Economic Advisers, every word of his 1950 economic report to Congress before he approved the document.

This was revealed by Council Member John D. Clark, replying to an attack on Truman and the council in Collier's magazine by Dr. Edwin Nourse, former council chairman.

Nourse, besides attacking the whole idea of the Employment act, claimed that the council had never had so much as an hour to talk economic policy with the President.

"The impression he leaves of the attitude of the President towards the work of the council is so erroneous that I want to tell of my own personal experience," Clark said.

The 1950 session with Truman lasted 2¼ hours, and the President encouraged comments from his advisers and staff. He observed that there are no yes-men on the White House staff."

Clark also told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee in reply to needling questions by Sen. Donnell (R., Mo.) that the economic report, drafted under the requirements of the Employment act of 1946, was the subject of a lengthy session of the top assistants to the President and the two members of the Council before it was discused with Truman. He said:

"No President will ever give attention more intense and more extended than President Truman gives to the work of the Council and to its proposals. If Mr. Nourse did not know how to exploit that attitude to have a process set up under which more adequate attention to our reports would be given, of course it's very unfortunate, and I can understand the spirit of frustration that developed in him."

Clark insisted that the points of view represented by Leon Keyserling and himself were "far too complicated" to fit the Nourse characterizations in the Collier's piece.

Originally, Clark had appeared to answer questions about a bill to plug the merger loophole in the anti-trust laws, approved by the House and now in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Clark said that closing the loophole would be a good idea, and insisted that any attempt to make exceptions in re-drafting this section of the anti-trust law would weaken it, while covering only a few legitimate cases of hardship. (LPA)

CIO, AFL Join ITU In Fight On NLRB Ruling

The AFL and the CIO joined the Intl. Typographical Union, an AFL affiliate, in requesting the Natl. Labor Relations Board to reconsider part of the crippling order it issued against the ITU last fall. The NLRB ruled the ITU violated the Taft-Hartley act by trying to force a closed shop on newspaper publishers

Miners Supported, Operators Flayed

THE COAL operators were charged with failing to bargain in good faith with the Union of the miners in a resolution passed by the CIO Executive Board which pledged "full support" to the strikers.

The CIO Steelworkers two weeks ago sent a check for $500,000 to aid needy miners. The resolution stated:

THE COAL miners of America are locked in economic warfare with the coal operators in a struggle to win some measure of security for themselves and their families.

All American labor owes a great debt to the coal miners for the long and gallant fight they have conducted to improve the working conditions and living standards of all workers. The miners pioneered in the historic fight to organize the great mass production industries and to win for the millions of workers in those industries the benefits of collective bargaining.

The present demands of the mine workers are rooted in justice and equity. In this most hazardous of industries, the long roll call for crippled and killed miners—martyrs to the greed of the operators and the financial overloads of the coal industry—give eloquent testimony to the urgent necessity for the relief for which the miners are fighting.

MEANWHILE, THE coal operators, who shun the dangers and hazards of the coal pits to sit safely in their comfortable offices, show their contemptuous disregard for the welfare of the nation and of their employes by arrogantly and stubbornly denying the just demands of the miners.

The coal operators have not bargained in good faith with the Miners Union but instead are relying upon the cruel and oppressive provisions of the iniquitous Taft-Hartley Act in an effort to frustrate and to prevent a fair and equitable settlement with the United Mine Workers. Injunctions, however, will not mine coal and the striking coal miners who are loyal to their union and to the cause of organized labor will not submit to the arbitrary will of the coal operators.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED:

We extend to the striking coal miners the complete solidarity of the whole CIO membership and we pledge our full support to their righteous and heroic struggle against the united power of entrenched industrial and financial interests.

NEW MEMBER of New Orleans Area Rent Advisory Board is Lucille Savoie (l.), executive secretary of the New Orleans Joint Board of the CIO Textile Workers Union. On her first day as a member representing the public she had to vote on a resolution urging extension of rent controls. Naturally, she voted for it. Shown with her is Mrs. A. C. Seavey, housewife and clubwoman, named as a tenant board representative.

Maryland 'Loyalty' Law OK'd

THE ONCE Free State of Maryland is back under the yoke of the notorious Ober Subversive Activities act.

A potential danger to union members, the law was reinstated last week when the Maryland Court of Appeals upset a ruling by Circuit Court Judge Joseph Sherbow in Baltimore that it is unconstitutional. Foes of the law immediately filed notice of appeal to a higher court.

The high court did not hold that the law is constitutional. It took the position that the act's opponents, who include the CIO in Maryland, "were crying before they were really hurt," and that it would not rule on constitutionality until a specific case was before it.

The act is scheduled to go before the voters in a referendum next November. Intensive activity by labor and liberals quickly produced petitions signed by some 15,000 voters instead of the 10,000 signatures required

"If the present act is approved by the voters and an accused is convicted under it," said the Court of Appeals ruling, "it will be time enough to consider the act in application to particular circumstances and a particular defendant."

Frank Bender, president of the Maryland Industrial Union Council, said a drive to line up CIO members in opposition to the bill, if it goes as far as the referendum, has been under way for some time and will be intensified as a result of the ruling. He forecast, however, that the Supreme Court will outlaw it

Chief Justice Ogle Marbury in a minority opinion concurred with the majority, but maintained that the court should have acted on the constitutionality of certain sections of the act.

The law was drafted by a commission headed by Frank B. Ober, Baltimore lawyer, and passed both houses of the Legislature in March, 1949, with one dissenting vote. On April 3 another law was passed, making the act emergency legislation and thus effective the day it was signed—April 22. On April 27 a test suit was filed by a small group of liberals, and on May 18 the Maryland Communist Party filed another.

The act provides jail terms up to 20 years and fines up to $20,000 for knowingly advocating any act intending to overthrow the government by force; up to five years and $5000 for knowingly being a member of a "subversive organization;" for a special assistant attorney general to coordinate investigations into "subversive organizations" by county grand juries, and that loyalty oaths be taken by all employes of the state and subdivisions, except laborers, and all candidates for public office.

The Washington Post summed up objections to the law.

"It is a blunderbuss law," the newspaper said editorially, "which in the process of getting at real subversives would imperil many innocent citizens—some of them of unorthodox opinions, some of them mere members of labor unions in disfavor who are trying to hold onto their jobs.

"The ruling merely increases the importance of full public discussion of the law in all its ugly implications before the people vote this fall."

Taxpayer Shouldn't 'Help Pay For Mailing Ads Telling Him He Has Halitosis'

THE HOUSE has just approved a bill boosting some postal rates, but Big Business will continue to get its subsidies by the mailbagful.

The mailbags will be a little lighter under the new bill, which still has to get through the Senate, but they'll be bulky enough to keep the Post Office Dept. operating at a deficit of more then $400 million a year. As it was, about $131 million was lopped off the $550 written in red ink on the department's books each year.

The second class mail rates, on such things as as magazines, newspapers, and small mail order catalogues, were increased by about 50% for publications with more than 5000 circulation which are aimed at earning a profit for their owners. This latter proviso, incidentally, excludes labor publications, except those which are privately owned, from the new higher rates, as they are not published for profit.

DURING DEBATE Rep. Biemiller (D., Wis.), hit at newspapers, magazine and mail order firms which berate a welfare state for the people but want one for themselves in the form of mail subsidies. He sought greater cuts for small firms in these categories than for the giants.

"The present postal rate structure is part of a sub-rosa corporate welfare state for some of the people who spend most of their time yelping about such necessary items as price supports for farmers," he declared.

"We must cut the subsidies to large publishers and give the newspapers and magazines of less than 50,000 circulation a break. We'll save money and help maintain the diversity of opinion on the local level which is so important to a democracy.

"The original purpose of our postal rate structure was to help disseminate worthwhile reading matter to everyone possible. It was never contemplated that the Amrican taxpayer would help pay for the cost of mailing advertisements which tell him he has halitosis."

ANOTHER SECTION of the bill would make it necessary to put a 2c stamp, instead of 1c, on the postal card next summer's vacationers will send Aunt Minnie and Uncle Herman from Mud Beach or Mt. Zilch.

That, however, is not a case of socking the vacationer alone. More than 90% of all postcards that went through the mails last year were sent by commercial and business firms for commercial purposes.

No change was made in the 3c rate for letters. Fourth class rates for larger catalogues, books and parcel post were increased an average of 1c a package, and the third class bulk mailing rate was boosted from 1c to 1½c.

The bill now goes to the Senate for action.

CIO Offers Balanced Tax Plan

A broad federal tax program, aimed at easing the burden on low-income individuals and small firms and shifting it to the wealthy and the high-profit corporations, was adopted by the CIO Executive Board at its meeting last week.

It outlined 11 points as the CIO's guiding principles for a sound tax structure and urged that Congress give them serious consideration in drawing up a new revenue bill. The points were:

1 In periods of full employment and production, federal revenue should be sufficiently high to balance the budget and retire part of the debt, without jeopardizing needed welfare expenditures for housing, education, social security, etc.

2 Any changes in the tax structure should point toward developing a more progressive tax structure and not a more regressive structure, as did the Revenue Act of 1948.

3 At present any tax bill passed by Congress should produce a net gain in revenue.

4 Personal individual income tax exemptions should be raised now, looking forward to the establishment of levels of exemption which permit the maintenance of a minimum standard of living for a family of four. A five-year carry-over provision for the unused portion of exemptions should be enacted.

5 The infamous regressive provision contained in the Revenue Act of 1948 permitting the filing of separate income tax returns by married couples should be repealed.

6 All excise taxes not regulatory in character should be repealed. As a first step and as revenue permits, those excises should be eliminated which (a) have the broadest application and bear most onerously on low income groups, and (b) interfere with the sales of consumer goods items.

7 Many existing tax loopholes should be closed. In this category are:

Life insurance companies; special depletion allowances for oil, gas, metals and mineral companies; charitable trusts; capital gains, and tax exempt securities of state and federal governments.

8 Loopholes in the estate and gift tax structure should be closed by:

Integrating the two taxes; reducing and combining the exemptions permitted; repealing the provision in the 1948 act for splitting property for estate and gift tax purposes, and requiring that estates cannot be passed from generation to generation without tax.

9 Give tax relief to small business by lowering the graduated tax upon their incomes up to $50,000.

10 Enactment of an undistributed profits provision which gets at increasing taxes upon corporations and distribution of retained earnings.

11 In order to equalize the burden and the incidence of our present tax structure, an excess profits tax should be enacted.

The 11 points were developed in detail before the House Ways and Means Committee on Feb. 14 by Stanley Ruttenberg, CIO research director, and Solomon Barkin, research director of the Textile Workers, who also appeared on behalf of the CIO.

IUE-CIO Routs UE in Largest NLRB Test

THE LARGEST NLRB election held in the electrical, radio and machine industry this year gave the IUE-CIO a better than two to one victory on Feb. 15 in Minneapolis.

Employes of General Mills electrical division cast 507 ballots for IUE; 223 for UE; and 11 for "no union." It was the first NLRB election in the industry in Minneapolis this year, and the IUE victory meant the downfall of another UE stronghold in the midwest.

A bitterly fought pre-election campaign produced a flood of rumor-mongering leaflets and pamphlets by UE and also the importation of Farm Equipment Workers organizers. Among the UE hirelings assigned to the General Mills campaign were Tony DeMaio, UE District 11 president, his brother Ernest DeMaio, UE international representative, both of whom have Communist records extending back more than a decade.

A pre-election IUE membership meeting on Feb. 12 heard addresses by Albin Hartnett, assistant to James B. Carey, chairman of the IUE administrative committee; Fullerton Fulton, CIO regional director; James Gildea, secretary to Carey; Robert Wishart, member of the IUE administrative committee; Lou Ervin, IUE field director for the Twin Cities area, and St. Clair Beeman, head of the IUE organizing committee at General Mills.

HARTNETT TOLD the audience that the UE's claims to have set wage patterns in major industries was "historical hokum that CIO leaders in steel, in auto and other fields have exploded a thousand times."

"The only pattern set by UE was when it stabbed the auto workers in the back by signing a backdoor agreement with General Motors for a wage hike lower than the GM workers were striking for," he declared.

Hartnett particularly assailed the UE propaganda which reproduced a telegram from President Roosevelt during the war praising the electrical workers' production record.

"That's egotism gone mad," he asserted, "when Matles and Emspak and the other Communist dervishes imagine that Roosevelt was congratulating them. FDR was congratulating the rank-and-file workers who had set the production records—certainly not Matles and Emspak who were reviling Roosevelt as a warmonger and traitor up to the very day Hitler invaded Russia. It's an outright sacrilege for these totalitarians to invoke the name of such a great democrat as Franklin Roosevelt."

The IUE has petitioned for elections in six other Minneapolis shops covering about 1000 workers in Local 1139.

Gas Price 'Steal' Hit

The CIO again last week stepped into the fight against the Kerr bill, which would open the way to a $10 billion mark-up of prices on known natural gas reserves. Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director, on Feb. 15, sent telegrams to all Senators, asking them to vote against the bill. It would prevent the Federal Power Commission from regulating prices charged in the field for gas.

MORE THAN 30 PICKETS representing the CIO Marine Engineers Beneficial Association and three other maritime unions march in front of the offices of the Maritime Commission in Washington, D. C., to protest the transfer of six American tankers to Panamanian registry. The five-man commission voted four to one to allow the Natl. Bulk Carriers Corp. to make the transfer, with Commissioner Raymond McKeough the sole dissenter.

Strike Deadline Soon Here, Bell Informed

"FEB. 24 ISN'T so far away," Pres. Joseph Beirne of the CIO Communications Workers last week warned Bell Telephone management.

A strike against the company originally was set for Feb. 6 but delayed until Feb. 24 by last minute action of CWA'c executive Board.

Federal Mediator Cyrus S. Ching had requested the postponement and when the latter date was announced by the union, he urged all parties to enter into intensive bargaining sessions and report to him by Feb. 20.

Beirne said there has been little or no progress made since postponement and accused AT&T and its associated companies of "continued refusal to face issues" and "with trying to provoke a nationwide telephone strike Feb. 24."

"We have our sleeves rolled up," he said. "As in 1947, it may take a strike to get the company to settle down to business."

A few days after Beirne issued his warning, the CIO Executive Board called on all CIO affiliates and agencies "for moral and financial support" for CWA in the event of a strike.

The board in a resolution lambasted the stalling attitude of AT&T and its various companies. The resolution stated:

"Throughout negotiations which have gone on since last fall with the Bell Telephone System, the various companies have pursued a policy of incitement to strike. There has been stalling and twisting in bargaining.

"The facts have been distorted in high pressure newspaper advertising campaigns. The company has made absolutely no concessions to the union but instead has insisted that the deplorable wages and working conditions in the telephone industry remain as they are.

"The situation shaping up in the industry is not just a challenge to CWA—it is a challenge to the entire CIO. This, the largest corporation in the world, seeks to show itself more powerful than America itself. The entire resources of the CIO must be marshalled to meet this challenge."

BEIRNE SAID THE union is "up against a stone wall" in dealing with the company.

"We have proposed settlement of the disputed items through peaceful, orderly and impartial arbitration," he said. "The company has rejected the offer. They evidently prefer war to peace, chaos to orderly settlement."

As justification for one of the union's proposals—a shorter work week, Beirne pointed to recent figures on reduced employment in the industry and at the same time cited the increase in the number of telephones in service.

According to Beirne, employment in the Bell System dropped during the first nine months of last year from 546,723 to 527,056, thereby eliminating 19,667 jobs during the nine month period.

During the same nine month period, he said, Bell System telephones in service increased by 1,486,090—from 31,364,493 to 32,850,583.

"Tying these two facts together," he said, "more phones in service, fewer workers and we must come to the conclusion that there is need for a shorter work week in the telephone industry."

HARDEST HIT group, he said, is the switchboard operators. They will also be hardest hit in the future, he added.

"We estimate that 100,000 of the present 250,000 operators will be out of a job within the next three years," Beirne declared. "Drastic steps must be taken immediately to compensate for this condition."

In addition to the shorter work week, the union has asked an increase in basic wages, shortening of the present eight-year apprentice periods, narrowing of geographical wage differentials, an improved pension plan, better vacations and paid time for voting.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

Committees Still Stall On Co-op Housing Bill

WHILE THE Senate and House Banking Committees fiddled and the real estate lobby burned, the "middle-income" housing bill continued to gain popular support last week.

The House Banking Committee was supposed to report the bill out Feb. 16, but went over to Feb. 17. At its executive session Feb. 17 it postponed action till Feb. 21. The Senate Banking Committee earlier had ducked action on the measure by calling for a Federal Reserve Board study of its possible inflationary effects.

On Feb. 16, up came the Federal Reserve Board answer, from Board Chairman McCabe, who soberly told the Senate group that the program might actually bring deflationary effects on the housing industry, and advised Congress to watch its step carefully from that point of view!

McCabe said the Federal Reserve Board had reservations about the bill as now written, principally because of the low interest rates which would be offered on loans to housing cooperatives under the proposal. (The bill spells out no definite interest rate but it has been assumed that the rate would be around 3% as compared to 4½% or higher now being paid on other types of housing loans.)

So the inflationary-deflationary argument ended in a draw.

THE BILL would establish a federal corporation which would make long-term, low-interest loans to genuine housing cooperatives and non-profit trusts. Money for the loans would be raised by sale on the private investment market of government-guaranteed debentures.

It has been estimated that savings inherent in the cooperative approach would average 25%. Naturally, the people who would make the extra 25% are kicking.

The Senate Banking Sub-committee, which reported out the bill by a six-to-one vote, said in its report, made public last week, that monthly payments on a two-bedroom $8000 house built under an FHA loan would be $25 a month higher than those on an identical house built under the co-op proposal.

The committee said furthermore that additional savings of up to $1000 could be made on building expense by leaving out such standard items as the sponsor's profit, inflated land values, and the payment to the builder of "architects' fees" for work not actually performed.

The CIO Executive Board passed a resolution of strong support for the bill, stating that the real estate interests "seek federal aid for themselves but try to deny it to those who would produce more adequate housing at lower costs."

CIO is joining with the AFL and the independent Machinists' union in sponsoring a National Conference on Middle Income Housing, to be held Feb. 23 and 24 in Washington.

Wage-Hour Law Exemptions Blasted By Board

MANY OF THE workers least able to defend themselves against exploitation by sweatshop employers have been removed from the protection of the law under the amendments to the Wage-Hour act which went into effect Jan. 25, the CIO Executive Board said last week.

The action was taken "under pressure from well-organized special interest lobbies," the CIO statement declared.

While noting that the increase in the minimum wage to 75c an hour had produced some beneficial effects in various sections of the country, the board criticized the removal of a large number of workers from protection of the minimum wage and overtime provision of the act as "cruel and utterly indefensible from any economic or social standpoint."

The Labor Dept.'s Wage and Hour Division was criticized for the "sweeping character of the exemptions now being granted to certain groups of employers" by the so-called "learners" regulations it is now issuing.

Some of the permanent and temporary regulations which have been granted to such industries as hosiery, cigars, gloves, independent telephones, knit wear and others permit sub-standard rates as low as 55c an hour for employes classed as "learners."

The statement said that evidence presented at hearings held by the Wage-Hour Division for the textile industry showed that no "learner" exemptions whatever were needed and that none have been issued. The same situation exists in other consumer goods industries, which were, like textiles, notoriously low-wage industries until only a few years ago, according to the board.

"The fact that such industries do not require 'learner' exemptions," the CIO resolution stated, "is sufficient proof that any industry can adjust itself to paying the flat 75c minimum."

It urged that new regulations be issued "which will have the effect of wiping out within the next few months all deviations from the standard 75c rate."

The board instructed the CIO's Legislative Dept. to draft at once and seek to have introduced in this session of Congress additional amendments to the wage-hour law which will broaden its coverage as far as legally possible, and establish a minimum of not less than $1 an hour.

Organizationally Speaking

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Expulsion of four international unions convicted of following the Communist Party line rather than CIO policy confronts our entire organization with an immediate problem. These unions were not only guilty of this charge but were guilty of gross failure to serve the best interest of the working people they purported to represent.

The CIO cannot and will not abandon these people. Immediate steps will be taken not only to keep within the CIO those who have been CIO members but to organize—really organize—the jurisdiction formally covered by the defunct Mine, Mill, and Smelter Workers; Food, Tobacco, and Agricultural Workers; United Office and Professional Workers, and the United Public Workers.

A further word about the Public Workers. They left the Executive Board meeting before the board could pass upon them and before any discussion. Immediately upon leaving they issued a prepared mimeograph statement to the press stating there was nothing more for them to do but withdraw from the CIO. This is evidence that they fully recognized the things of which they were guilty.

Every loyal CIO member, whether rank-and-file, local officer or staff member, will be expected to do his part in contributing to the constructive work necessary to rebuild.

We have every reason to believe that the Communist Party and its sympathizers will intensify the viciousness of their shameful and degrading attacks upon the CIO which has cast out them and their odious philosophy.

Fascists and communists are enemies of democracy. We must meet their attacks and battle them back on every front. We must work as we never worked before to build and strengthen the democratic institutions of the CIO.

CIO Reg. Dir. George DeNucci reports that in a union shop election at the Curtiss-Wright Corp., Columbus, O., the workers voted 528 to 190 for Local 927 UAW-CIO. Intl. Rep. Waldo Sneary was in charge. In a union shop election at the Permanente Metal (Kaiser) Co., Newark, O., the workers voted 214 to 18 for the United Steelworkers-CIO. Field Rep. Harry Mayfield handled the election.

CIO Reg. Dir. F. J. Michel reports that in a union shop election at Clarvan, Inc., Milwaukee, Wisc., the vote was as follows: for Playthings, Novelty & Jewelry Workers-CIO 129; No 12, Intl. Rep. Walter Ignatowicz and CIO Field Rep. Walter C. DeBussey participated in this election.

A. T. Stephens, Director of Organization, United Packinghouse Workers, reports that the UPWA-CIO won an election at the Hofman Packing Co., Syracuse, N. Y., the vote being UPWA 18; against 6.

CIO Reg. Dir. Joseph Walsh reports that as a result of a card check, the Textile Workers Union became collective bargaining agent for employees of the Altamont Knitting Mills, Inc., Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Approximately 75 employees are in the unit. TWUA-CIO Reps. Sam Fiore and Joseph Killian were in charge of the campaign.

CIO Reg. Dir. Robert Starnes reports that in a union shop election at the Kieckhefer Container Corp., New Orleans, La., the vote was 41 to 4 for the United Paperworkers of America, Local 710.

Adolph Germer, Director of Organization, IWA-CIO, reports that in a representation election at the Atlas Plywood Corp., Munising, Mich., the IWA-CIO was victorious over the AFL by a vote of 63 to 54. IWA-CIO Rep. Walter Young was in charge of the campaign.

CIO Reg. Dir. James Leary reports that the Textile Workers won a union shop election at the H. & H. Bag Co., Kansas City, Mo., by a unanimous vote. TWUA-CIO Rep. Howard Berge was in charge of the campaign.

Shoe Trade Group Flayed

The CIO United Shoe Workers union last week accused the Natl. Shoe Manufacturers Association of attempting to evade the 75c minimum wage by its demand for a 57½c hourly rate for so-called "learners."

Pres. William E. Thornton and Secy-Treas. James J. Mitchell of the union declared that the shoe industry has never had a "learner" system, and needs none now. The two officers will testify at hearings scheduled by the Wage-Hour Administration to resume this week.

"The request for 'learner' rates in the shoe industry," the officers stated, "is a fraudulent attempt to evade the intent of the Wage-Hour law and is completely unprecedented by the practice of the industry."

The union stated that imposition of a falsely-termed "learner rate" would sabotage standards now in present contract terms, many of which now call for starting rates ranging from 60 to 70c an hour or more in contrast to the 57½c "learner" rate now sought.

CIO: Make Campaign Promise On FEPC Good

THE CIO Executive Board called on Congress to enact the FEPC bill, which was characterized as affecting more people more fundamentally than any other civil right measure pending in Congress.

The text of the resolution follows:

The preservation of civil liberties is the highest duty of every government, federal, state, or local. Wherever the law enforcement measures and the authority of government are unused or inadequate to discharge this primary function of government, this authority must be strengthened.

Recognizing these facts, President Truman created the President's Committee on Civil Rights on Dec. 5, 1946, with the responsibility of preparing recommendations for more effective means and procedures for the protection of the civil rights of the people of the United States.

The findings and recommendations of this Committee, in the form of the report, "To Secure These Rights," will rank in history as a charter for human dignity and freedom. With courage and devotion to these principles, the President has steadily moved forward in implementing them. He has requested each succeeding Congress to translate this report into legislative reality. He has implemented this report by executive orders.

The CIO unreservedly supports President Truman's Civil Rights Program. We are determined to secure the adoption of these recommendations on the federal and state level.

Despite the fact that the promise of anti-discrimination legislation has been a vote-catcher for both the Republican and Democratic parties for many years, now we are faced with the glaring reality that no federal civil rights law has been enacted since 1875.

It has remained to the states to atone for this failure. In 1949 alone, 32 states and municipalities enacted anti-bias laws, a number far greater than in any previous year in the past century. It is now time for the federal Congress to make good its campaign promises for civil rights legislation by enacting civil rights legislation.

Of all the civil right bills now pending in Congress, none affects so many people, none is so fundamental, as the FEPC bill, to prohibit discrimination in employment; for the right to work—to seek and hold employment on the basis of equality—is the right to survive as an independent, self-respecting person.

Therefore, while enactment of the entire Civil Rights Program is urgent, first priority must be given to FEPC—to assure all Americans an equal opportunity to make a living—and a life.

Now, therefore, be it resolved:

That the CIO Executive Board, meeting in Washington, D. C., on Feb. 14, 1950, urges that Congress discharge its solemn commitment to the people of America by enacting HR 4453 and S 1728, which would translate the principle of FEPC into legislative reality.

Be it further resolved that: We urge that each member of Congress genuinely interested in the passage of the FEPC bill be present on the floor of the House of Representatives each Wednesday, in order to vote against dispensing with the "calendar Wednesday" procedure and to vote against the motion to adjourn made to forestall consideration of FEPC.

Be it further resolved that: We urge that the Speaker of the House recognize Chairman Lesinski of the House Labor and Education Committee on the next Monday that committee chairmen can be recognized to bring up bills under the 21-day rule, in order that the House of Representatives may vote on the FEPC bill, HR 4453.

Be it finally resolved that: We urge that the leadership in the Senate schedule debate immediately on S 1728.

FEPC Proponents Hopeful Bill Will Pass

THE DIGNITY of democracy in action was lowered toward the vanishing point in the House on Feb. 15 by Southern Democrats who again reached deep into the Communist bag of parliamentary tricks to block consideration of the Fair Employment Practices Committee bill. Their bag now appears so empty a showdown seems likely some time this week.

Feb. 15 was another Calendar Wednesday—a day on which the chairman of any committee can call for action on a bill approved by his committee but tied up by the Rules Committee. The committees are called up alphabetically, and first on last Wednesday's list was the District Committee. Next in order is the Education and Labor Committee, which long ago cleared the FEPC bill for action.

The longer the Southerners could keep bills from the District Committee off the floor, the longer would action be delayed on FEPC.

SO FOR FOUR solid hours they filibustered as only they and the Communists can do, against, of all things, a bill to grant a congressional charter to the Girl Scouts. Not that they had anything against the Girl Scouts; it was merely one way of gunning for FEPC.

In the four hours they forced eight roll calls by noting lack of a quorum or by offering motions that usually are non-controversial and passed without discussion. Each roll call required about 30 minutes—and as soon as it was over the Southerners dashed for the corridors and cloakrooms so their floor strategists again could note that not enough Congressmen were on hand to constitute a majority.

Finally Speaker Rayburn clamped down. He outshouted Rep. Colmer (D., Miss.) and W. Smith (D., Va.), who were demanding recognition so they could move for more roll calls, and recognized Rep. McMillan (D., S.C.), chairman of the District Committee and one of the Southerners active in the fight to keep his own bills from being acted upon.

McMillan reluctantly called up his Girl Scouts measure. After all the fuss, the bill was passed unanimously.

The FEPC bill then came close to being sidetracked for the rest of the session. That would have been its fate had it been brought up and not gone to a vote before adjournment.

The House was asked for its unanimous consent to postpone action until next week. Rep. Sutton (D., Tenn.), objected. Rep. McCormack, (D., Mass.), House majority leader, promptly offered a motion to adjourn, which took priority over all other motions. It was passed.

So Feb. 22 may have a new historical significance. That's the date of the next Calendar Wednesday and likewise George Washington's birthday. By tradition Washington's Farewell Address is read in the House on that date. The Southerners have agreed NOT to filibuster against that.

AND WHEN THE reading is completed, Rep. Lesinski (R., Mich.), chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, will be first on the list of committee chairmen. Those favoring FEPC are increasingly confident it will pass. And even its enemies, or at least some of them, are privately conceding defeat once the bill gets to a vote.

FEPC proponents, leaving no possibility to chance, tried another tactic to get the bill before the House. Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.), of the Rules Committee called his committee together Feb. 16 to try and give the bill clearance. Previously the committee had turned in a 6 to 6 tie under circumstances that left approval open to further consideration.

When his committee convened Sabath called for an open vote. Reps. Smith and Herter (R., Mass.), protested, so the room was cleared. The vote was announced as another 6 to 6 tie.

It was only a few minutes, of course, before reporters knew how the members had voted. The tally:

For approval: Sabath, Herter, Madden (D., Ind.), McSweeney (D., O.), Delaney (D., N.Y.), and Clarence J. Brown (R., O.)

Against approval: Smith, Colmer, Cox (D., Ga.), Lyle (D., Tex.), Allen (R., Ill.) and Wadsworth (R., N.Y.)

Board Backs UN, ICFTU

THE CIO EXECUTIVE Board last week passed resolutions urging support for the United Nations effort to achieve world security, indorsement of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, and condemnation of the spread of fascism in South America and Spain.

Foremost was a declaration in support of the U. S. government's attempt through the United Nations and its associated agencies to achieve world security.

"The UN must be supported despite the present disappointments in its functioning as it offers the machinery to develop an orderly world out of ultra-nationalist chaos," the resolution declared.

Active support of the newly formed International Confederation of Free Trade Unions was pledged by the Board. CIO affiliation with it was approved.

"We are convinced that this organization of free and democratic trade unions can serve to advance the interests of workers throughout the world," the resolution said. "It will provide a rallying point for genuine trade unionism and give encouragement and help to a number of our brother groups which are organizationally weak."

THE BOARD HIT the rapid spread of military and dictatorial regimes in South America which has resulted, it said, in the loss of democratic liberties for the inhabitants of some of these countries.

The Executive Board also went on record opposing the granting of any assistance to Spain until such time as democracy and full trade union rights have been restored

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed in Congress.	Keep writing to Senators, Representatives to force T-H repeal.
Fair Employment Practices Commission S. 1728 HR 4453	Bars discrimination in industry based on race, creed or color; provides penalties for job bias.	Senate bill on calendar, may come up next month. House supporters seeking to get bill on floor for debate.	Write, wire Senators, Congressmen to support and seek earliest possible vote.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S. 2246 HR 6618	Provides for long-term, low-interest U. S. loans to co-ops for building moderate-cost housing projects, etc.	Senate Banking Committee has completed hearings; House hearings started Jan. 30.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to give bill full support.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors benefits, etc., under social security. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Senate Finance Comm. now holding hearings. CIO to testify Feb. 27, asking further changes.	Ask Senators to try to strengthen HR 6000 over present provisions.
Federal Aid To Education S. 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. Has been stuck in House Labor Comm. for months.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to OK Senate bill.
Labor Extension Service Bill S. 110 HR 1380	Provides workers' education program in cooperation with schools, unions, Labor Dept.	Approved by Senate Labor Comm. House Labor Comm. is still studying bill.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to seek early passage.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

Aid Israel —CIO, AFL

AID FOR THE Republic of Israel, surrounded by hostile and re-arming neighbors, has been sought by the presidents of the CIO and the AFL.

In an almost unprecedented move, CIO Pres. Murray and AFL Pres. Green called together on President Truman at the White House to seek help for the young democratic Jewish state.

They told the President of their concern over repeated reports of heavy shipments of arms, money and training staffs by the British government to Egypt, Syria and other mid-eastern countries.

"We are convinced that the objectives of this drive towards militarism is a second war against the state of Israel," the two labor heads said in a joint statement.

They called on Pres. Truman to urge the British government to stop supplying the Arab governments "with instruments of aggressive warfare obviously designed for use against Israel."

At the same time they asked that Israel be permitted to buy arms in the U. S. Murray and Green also urged new loans to Israel to help it cope with its "manifold problems."

The President referred their request to the State Dept.

The joint statement was endorsed by the CIO Board last week.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION
of the
CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00
A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., FEBRUARY 27, 1950 82 No. 9

PROGRESS OR DISASTER? That is the question which the world faces now — since perfection of a devastating H-bomb is likely in the not too distant future. (Above) A worker at Oak Ridge—where many of the employes are members of the CIO Chemical Workers—is operating a machine to prepare for shipment a bottle of radio-isotopes to be used in the treatment of cancer. (Right) Fumes and smoke accompany the explosion over Hiroshima of the atom bomb, which was made at Oak Ridge and other plants in the United States. Atomic energy for peace or destruction? (See story on Page 2.)

CIO's Newest IUC Is In Puerto Rico

CIO Vice Pres. Haywood, Pres. Potofsky of the Clothing Workers and Councils Dir. Brophy have returned from Puerto Rico where they presented an IUC charter to the General Confederation of Labor. Turn to Page 6-7 for the story of what they found there—complete with pictures.

H-Bomb Civilization's 'Years Are Numbered'

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

HYDROGEN bombs offer "no guarantee of security or salvation" for America or the world.

Instead—the CIO has informed Sec. of State Dean Acheson—our government must continue to pledge full faith to the United Nations and to strive "actively and constantly to achieve genuine disarmament throughout the world."

In so promoting a stabilized peace, rising living standards and strengthened democracy, the United States will truly gain the respect of common people in all sections of the globe.

CIO's views were presented to the Secretary of State at a private luncheon a day after the meeting of the CIO Executive Board. Attending the session were CIO Pres. Murray; Chairman Jacob Potofsky of the CIO's new International Committee; and Michael Ross, CIO director of international affairs.

In renewing its plea for efforts to end the world-wide armaments race, the CIO leaders declared in a statement that:

"A world civilization which rests on the hydrogen bomb or any other type of weapon is a civilization whose years are numbered. Without genuine understanding among all mankind, lasting peace is impossible."

The CIO statement acknowledged that in the present state of world relations, the U. S. government is "justified" in proceeding with construction of the hydrogen bomb and other weapons.

But mankind's hopes lie not in mass destruction, the CIO leaders told Secy. Acheson. They voiced hope that "search for peace among governments and peoples will be continued unrelentingly."

In that search, they added, the United Nations can serve as the "best medium for developing an orderly world out of the current chaos of jealous and exaggerated nationalism."

As a step toward developing policies that will promote peace, democracy and betttr living conditions, the CIO offered the nation's top foreign affairs spokesman an eight-point program. Highlights of the CIO program:

1. Rapid speed-up of the Point Four program to aid undeveloped areas. Point Four, the CIO said, "if it is handled with imagination and foresight, can prove to be one of democracy's most effective answers to the propaganda of economic delusion preached by totalitarians everywhere."

2. Civilian control of atomic energy, research and development—with stress on programs to make atomic benefits available to people everywhere.

3. Resistance to "appeasement" of either fascists or communists which would involve a sacrifice of our democratic traditions.

The CIO leaders re-affirmed the Executive Board's "uncompromising and unconditional opposition" to all forms of dictatorship—fascist, communist or Spanish Falangist. They opposed sending an ambassador to Spain or of taking other steps which would be interpreted by the Spanish people as "approval of the inhuman Franco regime."

4. "Every possible step to aid the people of Israel." The CIO statement backed up the declaration of Pres. Murray and AFL Pres. Green issued when they met jointly with Pres. Truman on Feb. 10. They called on the U. S. to "use its influences" to halt British military assistance to feudal Arab states, which Israel leaders feel may produce a war against them.

They urged that Israel be permitted to buy arms in America for its own defense. And the CIO called for another loan to Israel to help speed building of this "remarkable bastion of democracy and enlightened 20th century economic progress in the Middle East."

5. Economic and political assistance to the democratic peoples of Latin-America.

The CIO pointed out that reactionary dictators now control five Latin-American nations, and their influence is spreading.

In Latin-America, they said, "cherished institutions of democracy—such as freedom of the press, speech and association, and other basic civil rights—are vanishing."

Puerto Rico—whose principal labor movement recently affiliated with the CIO—is being closely studied by people throughout Central and South America, the CIO told Sec. Acheson. Latin-American peoples are watching "our every move in Puerto Rico to determine in their own minds the real meaning of American aid and friendship."

Puerto Rico should be given sizeable and immediate economic help so that it may improve its industry, schools, health and welfare services, the CIO said.

Establishment of a labor school in connection with the University of Puerto Rico was strongly urged by the CIO, since "the labor movement of Latin-America is sorely handicapped by insufficient funds, lack of technical knowledge and continuing oppressions."

Such a school would help Latin-American labor unions to function effectively as a "basic factor in the Latin-American democratic movement."

6. Investigation and correction of reported abuses in the program by which migrant workers—most of them farm laborers—are brought to this country from Central America

7. Appointment of Spanish-speaking labor staff members to U. S. embassies throughout Latin-America.

At present, the CIO declared—on the basis of a recent survey of conditions south of the Rio Grande—American embassies in those countries "are failing to reach or to maintain a sympathetic contact" with union movements there.

8. Increased labor representation on U. S. agencies dealing with international problems.

Such a step, the CIO said, "will provide immediate, constructive benefits" for people in this country and abroad.

The statement presented to Acheson noted that the CIO is a charter member of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

The CIO, it added, is strengthening its fraternal ties with other non-Communist labor movements throughout the world and expects to play "increasingly effective roles of assistance and cooperation" with labor groups in other nations.

Count Radio Tubes Before Buying—FTC

The Federal Trade Commission says that even if the sign on the radio you are thinking of buying says the set has 12 tubes, the prospective customer would do well to take the top off the set and count the tubes himself.

This method should be used, the Commission says, especially if the set has been made by Setchell Carlson Inc., a St. Paul, Minn. concern.

The company has been ordered by FTC to stop misrepresenting the number of tubes in the radio receiving sets it manufactures and sells.

Does Taft Make Us Listen To Radio?

Sen. Robert A. Taft has been denounced by the National Citizens' Committee Against Forced Listening, which charges he is a substantial stockholder in Transit Radio, Inc. This is the concern that broadcasts "news" and music to buses and streetcars in about 20 cities, including Cincinnati and Washington, D. C.

The Citizens' Committee charges that working people who ride buses and streetcars in Ohio cities will thus be forced to hear "news" slanted in Taft's favor, during his campaign for another term in the Senate.

CIO Committee Sees Jobless Increasing This Year

DECLINES in investment, foreign trade and farm income point to lower levels of economic activity and more unemployment in 1950 than in 1949, according to the CIO Full Employment Committee.

Its conclusions were contained in a report on economic conditions and outlook prepared for the CIO Executive Board.

"The postwar boom came to a halt in 1949," the report said.

"Employment and production were once more at high levels, but they were below the 1948 mark.

"The outlook for 1950 is for further decline, as unemployment is rising, income is dipping, and the general picture is one of easing further away from full employment. Distribution of the veterans' insurance dividends and business's need to rebuild inventories may reduce this fall, but it will probably be more clearly evident by the latter part of 1950.

"FOR three or four years the pent-up investment needs of industry, the wartime accumulated savings of many consumers, and the great export markets furnished that extra strength which held up the full employment economy. By the end of 1949, however, a great part of the main force of these elements had been spent; and no substitute was forthcoming.

"The nation's failure to lay the groundwork for a high consumption economy during these postwar years made the decline inevitable. It is, of course, remotely possible that a new armament boom may once more furnish a temporary stimulant which will take up the employment and production slack.

"Nevertheless, the task of expanding consumption to provide a firmer and more lasting underpinning for full employment and sound economic growth will remain."

WHILE employment remained high in 1949, unemployment increased, the committee found. With civilian employment averaging 58.7 million, there were fewer jobs than in 1948. Added to the labor force were 700,000 recruits, making an increase in unemployment of 1.4 million during the year.

Secy. of Commerce Sawyer reported a few weeks ago that employment declined by 1,609,000 in January to send the number of jobless up to 4,480,000—the largest since September, 1941.

Other factors the committee found contributing to decline were:

Lower real production of goods and services in 1949 compared to 1948; a decline in disposable income after it had reached a peak early in the year; a moderate dip in profits, though they continued at levels far surpassing prewar and wartime highs; an increase in the liquid reserves of corporations—idle cash that means fewer jobs and lower national income; dividends were higher than in 1948 despite lower profits and are likely to continue as high if not higher in 1950; a sharp drop in the level of investments in 1949 and indication, based on announced plans, of a further sharp drop this year.

The committee also listed these other factors causing decreased employment:

Decline in housing construction in 1950, based on forecasts by the industry itself; continuation of the drop in farm income and spending, and a further decline in exports.

On the favorable side is a probable increase in government spending, but this will be offset somewhat by higher social security taxes, the commitee said.

"The probability of a large federal budget in years to come and the large body of social and economic legislation which has been put on the statute books in the last 15 years made it unlikely that any sharp or sudden break can or will occur in our economy," the committee concluded.

"The recession of 1949, for example, was cushioned by such measures as unemployment insurance, the farm support program and the flexible credit policies of the Federal Reserve system.

THE PROBLEM of economic growth consistent with a growing population and the achievement of full employment still remains.

"To take up the slack that is appearing in the economy, it is clear that we must move towards the high-consumption level economy which both the President and the Council of Economic Advisers have deemed the only sound road for full employment.

"Obvious policies to improve consumption are lower consumer prices, wage increases wherever possible, an improved social security system, and a tax system which bears down less heavily on the lower income families.

"We must also develop measures to funnel back into the income and investment stream the vast cash reserves which industry and upper income groups are accumulating. In this way we can expand our production facilities and meet the need for an ever growing economy.

"Only by moving forward can we satisfy the needs of our growing population, and continue in a position of world economic leadership."

Members of the Full Employment Committee are CIO Pres. Philip Murray, chairman; Pres. Emil Rieve, Textile Workers, administrative chairman; Pres. Walter P. Reuther, Auto Workers; Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky, Clothing Workers; Pres. L. S. Buckmaster, Rubber Workers, and Everett M. Kassalow, executive secretary.

"Would you ask the Senator if he would yield to NBC for 30 seconds for station identification?"

House Passes Toothless FEPC

THE HOUSE at 3:30 a.m. last Thursday, after an afternoon and night of humiliating antics and brutal legislative buffoonery, voted to kick out President Truman's Fair Employment Practices Commission bill and offered the nation a worthless, watered-down "educational" substitute.

The vote came after 15 legislative hours — they could not be called hours of debate—that had started at noon on Feb. 22, the birthday of George Washington.

Rep. Lesinski

It was marked by the defection of most of the Republican congressmen who had given lip service to their party's FEPC campaign promises into the Dixiecrat camp, a shift that spelled defeat for the high hopes of the enemies of racial and religious discrimination and intolerance.

But even the fact that a vote was taken constituted sort of a minor triumph for the FEPC proponents. For six years they have been trying to get an FEPC bill to the floor for action. In previous years Southern Democrats had managed to kill the bills in committee.

THE BILL sponsored by the Administration, blocked in the Rules Committee, came up after tortuous delays under the "Calendar Wednesday" procedure. On Calendar Wednesday the chairman of any committee which has approved a bill stymied by the Rules Committee can call for House action on it.

The procedure has not been used for several years until it was revived earlier in the session by the FEPC forces. Under it House committees are called alphabetically. After several Wednesdays of filibustering by Southern Democrats who used the same tactics the Communists often use at union meetings and conventions, and still more of the same last Wednesday, the House Education and Labor Committee was reached.

Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) asked for action on the bill the committee had approved. It would set up a commission with strong enforcement powers to prevent job discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin. The CIO supported it.

Then the House went into its marathon session. Two substitutes were offered as the measure threaded its cautious way through a crush of parliamentary technicalities aimed at blocking any action whatsoever.

ONE, introduced by Rep. McConnell (R. Pa.), laid down national policy against job discrimination because of race, creed, color, sex or disability. It created a five-man commission, the members to be paid $12,500 a year, which would "end" discrimination by conducting studies, making plans, distributing information and educational matter, investigating individual cases of alleged discrimination and making recommendations, and studying discrimination in the federal government and making recommendations to Congress for stopping it. The commission would have no enforcement powers.

The second substitute, sponsored by Rep. Hays (D., Ark.), was substantially the same, but was even weaker.

The bleary-eyed and hoarse legislators, just before adjourning, in one final roll call vote of an apparently endless series ballotted to substitute the McConnell bill for the Administration bill by 221 to 178.

Voting for the substitute were 117 Democrats and 104 Republicans. Against it were ranged 128 Democrats, 49 Republicans and one American Laborite. On earlier parliamentary votes, where no record was taken, an even greater number of Republicans went along with the Dixiecrats.

THEN THE House adjourned. It met again at noon Feb. 23 and first rejected a move to send the puny substitute back to the Labor Committee for "further consideration" by a 177 to 239 vote.

That job done, it proceeded to chop up the campaign platforms of both major parties by passing finally the McConnell bill, 241 to 176. The pro-FEPC faction split.

The vote for the bill included 116 Democrats and 124 Republicans, while 134 Democrats, 42 Republicans and one American-Laborite cast their ballots against it. Four Democrats and one Republican were paired each way.

The House thereupon quit work for the day and went home to catch up on its sleep—and, perhaps, hide its collective face in shame.

SUPPORTERS of FEPC made no effort to hide their disappointment. Rep. Powell (D., N. Y.), sponsor of the defeated bill, described the substitute as "worthless" and the House action as "a fraud, a shame and a hypocrisy."

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in a formal statement asserted that the McConnell bill "is completely meaningless insofar as it claims to be legislation capable of correcting discrimination in employment."

Sen. Humphrey (D., Minn.), who led the successful Democratic National Convention fight for a meaningful FEPC platform plank, branded the McConnell bill "unsatisfactory."

"The bill that we'll fight for," he said, "is the McGrath bill that came out of the (Senate Labor) committee—with enforcement powers.

"I believe passage of the House bill will at least help us to break a filibuster. To that extent it's helpful. But to be meaningful, the bill should have power to enforce decisions."

A LETTER from the CIO signed by Nathan E. Cowan, director of the Legislative Department, asking support of FEPC, was on the desk of a selected list of Congressmen making up more than a majority on Wednesday morning before the House settled down to business.

"Experience of the past several weeks has shown that the obstructionists will attempt to forestall House consideration of FEPC by all possible parliamentary maneuvers," he wrote. "It is imperative, therefore, that every supporter of FEPC legislation be present in the House, that he remain on the floor throughout the entire session to preserve a quorum, that he vote against motions to adjourn made only for the purpose of preventing consideration of the FEPC bill, and that he give every possible assistance to bringing it to a vote before adjournment for the day."

G. N. L.

Civil Rights Backer Named Truman Aid

One of the authors of President Truman's controversial civil rights program has been promoted to a job as administrative assistant to the President. He is Stephen J. Spingarn, son of one of the founders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who was sworn in Feb. 15. He replaced Charles S. Murphy, now special counsel to the President.

Phila. FEPC Find Job Bias Decrease

In its first annual report, the Philadelphia Fair Employment Practices Commission announced that job discrimination is on the decrease. Industrialists are finding that "employment on merit and ability is a sound basis for profitable business operation," stated FEPC Chairman Robert J. Callagan. The commission was established by City Council in March, 1948, after a vigorous campaign by organized labor, the ADA and other civic groups.

Letter Changes Name

Chester Wright's Labor Letter is now to be known as John Herling's Labor Letter, it was announced. Herling has been editor of the Letter for the past two and half years and is the sole owner.

Vote on Substituting GOP Measure for FEPC Bill

Here's one of the crucial civil rights votes of the 81st Congress—the acceptance by the House of a GOP toothless substitute for the Administration's labor-supported FEPC bill. Rep. McConnell's (R. Pa.) substitute was adopted 221-178, on Feb. 23. One hundred four Republicans joined with 117 Southern Democrats to approve the meaningless substitute bill. One hundred twenty-eight Democrats, 49 Republicans and one American Labor Party member voted against the substitute. However, on many informal unrecorded votes, practically all Republicans voted together to weaken chances of effective FEPC. Votes against the GOP substitute bill are marked R; votes for the substitute bill are marked W. A. indicates absent; Z indicates paired right; X indicates paired wrong.

ALA.—Andrews (D) W
Battle (D) W
Boykin (D) W
de Graffenreid (D) W
Elliott (D) W
Grant (D) W
Hobbs (D) W
Jones (D) W
Rains (D) W

ARIZ.—Murdock (D) W
Patten (D) W

ARK.—Gathings (D) W
Harris (D) W
Hays (D) W
Mills (D) W
Norrell (D) W
Tackett (D) W
Trimble (D) W

CAL.—Allen (R) W
Anderson (R) W
Bramblett (R) W
Douglas (D) R
Doyle (D) R
Engle (D) W
Havenner (D) R
Hinshaw (R) W
Holifield (D) R
Jackson (R) W
Johnson (R) W
King (D) R
McDonough (R) W
McKinnon (D) R
Miller (D) R
Nixon (R) W
Phillips (R) W
Poulson (R) W
Scudder (R) W
Sheppard (D) R
Shelley (D) R
Werdel (R) W
White (D) W

COLO.—Aspinall (D) R
Carroll (D) R
Hill (R) W
Marsalis (D) R

CONN.—Lodge (R) R
McGuire (D) R
Patterson (R) R
Ribicoff (D) R
Sadlak (R) R
Woodhouse (D) R

DEL.—Boggs (R) R

FLA.—Bennett (D) W
Herlong (D) W
Peterson (D) W
Rogers (D) W
Sikes (D) A
Smathers (D) A

GA.—Brown (D) W
Camp (D) W
Cox (D) W
Davis (D) W
Lanham (D) W
Pace (D) W
Preston (D) W
Vinson (D) W
Wheeler (D) W
Wood (D) W

IDA.—Sanborn (R) W
White (D) R

ILL.—Allen (R) W
Arends (R) A
Bishop (R) R
Buckley (D) R
Chesney (D) R
Chiperfield (R) W
Church (R) W
Dawson (D) R
Gordon (D) R
Hoffman (R) R
Jenison (R) W
Jonas (R) W
Linehan (D) R
Mack (D) R
Mason (R) A
McMillen (R) A
O'Brien (D) R
O'Hara (D) R
Price (D) R
Reed (R) W
Sabath (D) R
Simpson (R) W
Velde (R) W
Vursell (R) W
Yates (D) R

IND.—Crook (D) R
Denton (D) R
Halleck (R) W
Harden (R) A
Harvey (R) W
Jacobs (D) R
Kruse (D) W
Madden (D) R
Noland (D) R
Walsh (D) R
Wilson (R) W

IOWA—
Cunningham (R) R
Dolliver (R) W
Gross (R) R
Hoeven (R) W
Jensen (R) W
LeCompte (R) W
Martin (R) W
Talle (R) W

KAN.—Cole (R) W
Hope (R) W
Meyer (R) W
Rees (R) W
Scrivner (R) W
Smith (R) W

KY.—Bates (D) W
Chelf (D) W
Gregory (D) W
Golden (R) W
Morton (R) W
Perkins (D) R
Spence (D) A
Underwood (D) W
Whitaker (D) A

LA.—Allen (D) X
Boggs (D) W
Brooks (D) W
Hebert (D) W
Larcade (D) W
Morrison (D) W
Passman (D) W
Willis (D) W

ME.—Fellows (R) W
Hale (R) W
Nelson (R) W

MD.—Beall (R) W
Bolton (D) W
Fallon (D) W
Garmatz (D) R
Miller (R) W
Sasscer (D) W

MASS.—Donohue (D) R
Furcolo (D) R
Goodwin (R) W
Herter (R) R
Heselton (R) R
Kennedy (D) R
Lane (D) R
Martin (R) W
McCormack (D) R
Nicholson (R) W
Philbin (D) R
Rogers (R) R
Wigglesworth (R) R

MICH.—Bennett (R) W
Blackney (R) W
Crawford (R) W
Dingell (D) R
Dondero (R) W
Engel (R) R
Ford (R) W
Hoffman (R) W
Lesinski (D) R
Michener (R) W
O'Brien (D) R
Potter (R) R
Rabaut (D) R
Sadowski (D) Z
Shafer (R) W
Wolcott (R) A
Woodruff (R) A

MINN.—Andersen (R) W
Andresen (R) W
Blatnik (D) R
Hagen (R) W
Judd (R) R
Marshall (D) A
McCarthy (D) R
O'Hara (R) W
Wier (D) R

MISS.—Abernethy (D) W
Colmer (D) W
Rankin (D) W
Whitten (D) W
Whittington (D) W
Williams (D) W
Winstead (D) W

MO.—Bolling (D) R
Cannon (D) R
Carnahan (D) R
Cristopher (D) W
Irving (D) R
Jones (D) X
Karst (D) R
Karsten (D) R
Magee (D) W
Moulder (D) R
Short (R) W
Sullivan (D) R
Welch (D) R

MONT.—D'Ewart (R) W
Mansfield (D) R

NEB.—Curtis (R) W
Miller (R) W
O'Sullivan (D) R
Stefan (R) W

NEV.—Baring (D) R

N.H.—Cotton (R) W
Merrow (R) W

N.J.—Addonizio (D) R
Auchincloss (R) W
Canfield (R) R
Case (R) R
Eaton (R) A
Hand (R) R
Hart (D) R
Howell (D) R
Kean (R) R
Norton (D) R
Rodino (D) R
Towe (R) W
Widnall (R) W
Wolverton (R) R

N.M.—Fernandez (D) W
Miles (D) W

N.Y.—Buckley (D) R
Byrne (D) R
Celler (D) R
Clemente (D) R
Cole (R) W
Coudert (R) R
Davies (D) Z
Delaney (D) R
Dollinger (D) R
Gamble (R) R
Gorski (D) R
Gwinn (R) W
Hall, E. A. (R) R
Hall, L. W. (R) R
Heffernan (D) R
Heller (D) R
Javits (R) R
Kearney (R) R
Keating (R) R
Kelly (D) R
Keogh (D) R
Kilburn (R) W
Klein (D) R
Latham (R) R
LeFevre (R) W
Lynch (D) R
Macy (R) Z
Marcantonio (ALP) R
McGrath (D) R
Multer (D) R
Murphy (D) R
O'Toole (D) R
Pfeifer, J. L. (D) R
Pfeiffer, W. L. (R) R
Powell (D) R
Quinn (D) R
Reed (R) W
Riehlman (R) R
Rooney (D) R
Roosevelt (D) R
St. George (R) W
Taber (R) W
Tauriello (D) R
Taylor (R) R
Wadsworth (R) X

N.C.—Barden (D) W
Bonner (D) W
Bulwinkle (D) A
Carlyle (D) W
Chatham (D) A
Cooley (D) W
Deane (D) W
Doughton (D) W
Durham (D) W
Jones (D) W
Kerr (D) W
Redden (D) W

N.D.—Burdick (R) R
Lemke (R) R

OHIO—Bolton (R) R
Breen (D) R
Brehm (R) Z
Brown (R) W
Burke (D) R
Clevenger (R) W
Crosser (D) R
Elston (R) W
Feighan (D) R
Hays (D) R
Huber (D) R
Jenkins (R) W
Kirwan (D) R
McCulloch (R) W
McGregor (R) R
McSweeney (D) R
Polk (D) R
Secrest (D) R
Smith (R) A
Vorys (R) R
Wagner (D) R
Weichel (R) W
Young (D) R

OKLA.—Albert (D) W
Gilmer (D) X
Monroney (D) W
Morris (D) W
Steed (D) W
Stigler (D) W
Wickersham (D) W
Wilson (D) W

ORE.—Angell (R) R
Ellsworth (R) W
Norblad (R) A
Stockman (R) W

PA.—Barrett (D) R
Buchanan (D) R
Cavalcante (D) R
Chudoff (D) R
Corbett (R) R
Dague (R) W
Davenport (D) R
Eberharter (D) R
Fenton (R) W
Flood (D) R
Fulton (R) R
Gavin (R) W
Gillete (R) X
Graham (R) W
Granahan (D) R
Green (D) R
James (R) W
Kearns (R) W
Kelley (D) R
Kunkel (R) R
Lichtewalter (R) W
Lind (D) R
McConnell (R) W
Morgan (D) R
O'Neill (D) R
Rhodes (D) R
Rich (R) A
Saylor (R) R
Scott, Hardie (R) R
Scott, Hugh (R) R
Simpson (R) W
Van Zandt (R) X
Walter (D) R

R.I.—Fogarty (D) R
Forand (D) R

S.C.—Bryson (D) W
Hare (D) W
McMillan (D) W
Richards (D) W
Rivers (D) W
Sims (D) W

S.D.—Case (R) W
Lovre (R) W

TENN.—Cooper (D) W
Davis (D) W
Evins (D) W
Frazier (D) W
Gore (D) W
Jennings (R) W
Murray (D) W
Phillips (R) W
Priest (D) W
Sutton (D) W

TEX.—Beckworth (D) W
Bentsen (D) W
Burleson (D) W
Combs (D) W
Fisher (D) W
Gossett (D) W
Kilday (D) W
Lucas (D) W
Lyle (D) W
Mahon (D) W
Patman (D) A
Pickett (D) W
Poage (D) W
Rayburn (D) Speaker
Regan (D) W
Teague (D) W
Thomas (D) A
Thompson (D) W
Thornberry (D) W
Wilson (D) W
Worley (D) W

UTAH—Bosone (D) R
Granger (D) R

VT.—Plumley (R) A

VA.—Abbitt (D) W
Burton (D) W
Fugate (D) W
Gary (D) W
Hardy (D) W
Harrison (D) W
Smith (D) W
Stanley (D) W

WASH.—Holmes (R) R
Horan (R) W
Jackson (D) R
Mack (R) R
Mitchell (D) R
Tollefson (R) R

W.Va.—Bailey (D) R
Burnside (D) R
Hedrick (D) Z
Kee (D) R
Ramsay (D) R
Staggers (D) R

WIS.—Biemiller (D) R
Byrnes (R) W
Davis (R) W
Hull (R) R
Keefe (R) W
Murray (R) W
O'Konski (R) R
Smith (R) Z
Withrow (R) R
Zablocki (D) R

WYO.—Barrett (R) W

It's A Big Job—An Important Job

1950 Elections Offer Opportunity For Liberalizing Congress — Or For Permitting Swing To Reaction

By ALLAN L. SWIM

THERE WAS a time—not so many years ago—when many candidates were elected to public office because they possessed charming personalities.

"I'm going to vote for Mr. Jones; he's such a nice man," Mrs. Smith used to say—and she and Mr. Smith cast their ballots for Jones.

Sometimes the Smiths knew what the Joneses stood for—and sometimes they didn't.

Then along came an organization known as the CIO Political Action Committee, which started changing things.

PAC wasn't concerned about the table manners and the winning smiles of those seeking public office. It was concerned with the record of candidates—the manner in which they voted and the things for which they stood.

PAC made the "voting guide" a national institution—and made millions of Americans conscious of the need for keeping an eye on the activities of lawmakers.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE for the average person to begin to measure the impact that PAC has made on the United States.

It is doubtful that the AFL's League for Political Education would have been created had not PAC broken the ground in the political activities field.

PAC certainly can take some credit for the fact that a number of publications now publish periodic voting records.

And PAC can point to various parts of the country and say, "We helped establish a greater measure of democracy here."

There are few officeholders or candidates in any of our industrial states who make major decisions without at first giving consideration to the possible reaction of PAC.

This goes for magistrates as well as Congressmen.

Yet, in a way, PAC is more of an idea—or an ideal—than it is a close-knit organization.

It functions principally on voluntary contributions and most of its decisions are made by rank-and-file union members throughout the country.

THE 1950 elections are extremely important from the standpoint of labor—and that means PAC has a big job on its hands.

Perhaps it would be more accurate to say that union members have a big job on their hands and that it's fortunate that they have PAC groups through which they can pool their resources and coordinate their activities.

Either way you look at it, the job is big and it's important.

Powerful forces of reaction have found it possible all too frequently to make big gains in the off-year elections because there is no Presidential campaign to arouse public interest.

Neither the labor movement nor the nation as a whole can afford a swing toward reaction in 1950. That's why PAC is stepping up its activities.

That's why it's important for CIO members to make their contributions as soon as possible to PAC.

That's why it's important that CIO members qualify themselves as voters.

BOTH of the major parties have made their positions clear by recent "declarations of principle."

The Republicans trotted out a new "scare" slogan designed to convince the public that a vote for the Democrats is a vote for socialism. It went on record as favoring continuation of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Democrats, on the other hand, continued their advocacy of the Fair Deal and outlined a program closely paralleling that of the CIO.

There should be little doubt as to how the average CIO member lines up as between the two parties.

But it's not quite that simple.

There's the problem of those who call themselves Democrats and vote like Republicans. And many of these Dixiecrats will win or lose in the primaries—not in the general elections.

Then, too, there are those running for office in districts which contain few union members.

LEADERS OF PAC believe that 1950 offers a good opportunity to continue the liberalization of Congress which began back in 1948.

They believe it is possible for labor and other liberal forces to make real gains in Congress this year.

But they're not kidding themselves.

They know that no amount of planning, no amount of speechmaking on their part will get the job done unless they get the wholehearted cooperation of CIO members throughout the country.

They're asking for such cooperation now. They're asking that the officers of every union in the CIO—national, district and local—get in there and pitch.

They're asking, too, that all members join in the campaign.

And all they're asking is that unionists behave like good citizens.

FEPC Sell-Out

It was George Washington's birthday—the anniversary of the birth of the man who led the nation's first fight for liberty, freedom and justice.

Washington's Farewell Address was read—and then the House of Representatives engaged in lengthy maneuvers which at times resembled a three-ring circus.

The Dixiecrats did the expected. They fought vigorously against the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill which was up for consideration.

About 100 members of the political party which often claims its ideals stem directly from Abraham Lincoln—the Great Emancipator—joined forces with the Southern Democrats.

When the long session finally ended, the Dixiegops had extracted the teeth from the FEPC measure and replaced it with a weak, virtually meaningless substitute.

Both major political parties—with the Dixiecrats dissenting—had pledged themselves long ago to work for improved civil rights.

And everybody who knew anything about the situation was fully aware of the fact that FEPC legislation was at the top of the list of things needed to strengthen civil liberties.

The fact that they called their shots in advance by announcing their intention to fight FEPC doesn't excuse the behavior of the Dixiecrats.

But at least they were more honest than the Republicans who joined with them.

What happened in the House on Washington's birthday should make voters in this year's Congressional elections say "hooey!" to a lot of our "civil rights" advocates.

Lincoln Quoted To Debunk GOP

CHARLES W. Ervin, veteran member of the staff of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers' paper, Advance, apparently has done a bit of research to answer the Republican congressional campaign slogan, "Liberty Against Socialism."

At any rate, Ervin came upon a quotation from a speech by Abraham Lincoln, the first Republican to be elected president, which causes the slogan to appear silly.

In Nicolay and Hay's Complete Works of Lincoln, the Great Emancipator is quoted as saying at the Sanitary Fair at Baltimore, Md., on April 18, 1864:

"THE WORLD has never had a good definition of the word liberty, and the American people, just now, are much in want of one. We all declare for liberty; but in using the same word we do not all mean the same thing.

"With some the word liberty may mean for each man to do as he pleases with himself and the product of his labor; while with others the same word may mean for some men to do as they please with other men, and the product of other men's labor.

"Here are two, not only different, but incompatible things, called by the same name, liberty. And it follows that each of the things is, by the respective parties, called by two different and incompatible names—liberty and tyranny.

"The shepherd drives the wolf from the sheep's throat, for which the sheep thanks the shepherd as his liberator, while the wolf denounces him for the same act, as the destroyer of liberty, especially as the sheep was a black one.

"Plainly the sheep and the wolf are not agreed upon a definition of the word liberty; and precisely the same difference prevails today among us human creatures, even in the North, and all professing to love liberty."

Murray, Green To Aid Jewish Appeal

CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. William Green have been apointed co-chairmen of the labor division of the national Christian committee of the 1950 United Jewish Appeal, the committee chairman, Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. (D.L.N.Y.), has announced.

They will head a group of trade union officials who will seek the support of organized labor for the appeal, whose goal has been set at $272,455,800. The beneficiary agencies are the United Palestine Appeal, the Joint Distribution Committee and the United Service for New Americans.

In accepting the appointments, both Murray and Green called attention to the needs of Jews throughout the world and urged widespread support of the campaign.

Conn. Labor Organizes To Assist Unemployed

Publication of the first issue of the Connecticut Citizen, devoted to the problems of the unemployed and the need for a special session of the Legislature to extend the number of weeks of unemployment compensation benefits, has been undertaken by the United Labor Committee of Connecticut.

The committee was formed last month by the Connecticut CIO Council, Connecticut Federation of Labor, AFL; International Association of Machinists, United Mine Workers and the railroad brotherhoods.

It has organized 25 distribution centers from which more than 3000 persons went out to distribute the Connecticut Citizen at factories, shopping areas and house to house in a statewide campaign urging people to call upon Republican state leaders to "work out with Gov. Bowles a plan for a special session on extending unemployment compensation benefits."

"Must be his new foreman."

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer
Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher
Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII February 27, 1950 No. 9

His Fine Speech Was Complete Phony

A COUPLE of veteran labor reporters were bending their elbows and swapping yarns at the bar one evening.

Finally their conversation swung around to the use of labor spies, wire tapping and dictaphones.

Each story told seemed a bit better than the previous one—and just before the session broke up one of them spun the following yarn.

A NUMBER of years ago a CIO representative went to a Southern city in which the unions had made little headway.

He knew that he faced a tough job, so he moved carefully and cautiously. He made as many friends as he could among the workers and looked the situation over generally before making his first real move.

He was determined that the first union he helped establish would be a model one. He didn't want his initial campaign to backfire.

He finally decided that a group in a comparatively small plant was "ripe" for organization and he started signing them up.

THE ORGANIZER didn't push too hard. He played each of his cards carefully and got volunteer organizers from inside the plant to handle most of the membership solicitation.

Eventually a majority of the workers joined the union—but he wasn't convinced they'd make a real fight if one became necessary.

To his surprise, the employer acted friendly when approached and asked to recognize the union as bargaining agent for his employes.

"Of course, we'll have to have an NLRB election," the employer said.

The election was held and the union received about 80% of the votes.

CONTRACT negotiations opened a short time later—and the employer and his lawyer said "no" to every request of the union.

They were perfectly willing to sign a contract providing for continuation of existing conditions—but that was all.

The employer was willing to continue negotiations "as long as you union fellows want to talk" but he refused to budge from his original "no."

Union leaders decided to whip up a bit of strike sentiment but didn't get very far. They knew this but the employer didn't.

And that seemed to be about the only thing about their operations that he didn't know.

ONE EVENING the CIO representative got a telephone call at his home from a local electrician.

"Maybe I'm sticking my nose into something that isn't my business," he said, "but I thought I should tell you that I installed a microphone under the table up in that room where you fellows hold your strategy meetings."

The CIO man became angry, then chuckled. Then he got on the phone and called a strategy session for the next evening.

As the meeting opened the CIO representative handed each person attending a slip of paper on which was typed:

"This room is wired for sound. The boss will know everything that happens here tonight. Don't pay any attention to what I say because I'm going to make one of the phoniest speeches on record."

Then the CIO man made a fiery talk in which he "revealed" that in a "secret" strike ballot 96% of the workers had voted to walk out of the plant two days following the meeting (although no such vote had been taken).

At negotiations the next afternoon a nervous employer suddenly decided it would be a good idea to agree to a decent contract.

A.L.S.

ANOTHER FOUL BALL!

FDR: Wire Tapping Worst 'Instrument of Oppression'

An editorial in the Washington Post uncovers what is called "a gross distortion" of the intent of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt on wire-tapping:

A curious fiction has gained currency that the wire tapping in which the Federal Bureau of Investigation has engaged is somehow sanctified and made legal by an authorization said to have been given by the late President Roosevelt in 1941. Attorney General McGrath said some six weeks ago, when the FBI came in for vigorous criticism in connection with its wire-tapping activities in the Coplon case, that "there has been no new policy or procedure since the initial policy was stated by President Roosevelt."

The latest resort to this justification is contained in a letter addresed to President Truman by Charles O. Blaisdell, president, Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI, Inc., which is reproduced in the Congressional Record.

"In recent weeks the FBI has been criticized for the use of wire taps in the conduct of espionage investigations. Many of these critics have left the erroneous impression with the general public that the FBI has been engaged in the unauthorized use of wire taps. This is not a fact.

"The Attorney General of the United States has very recently stated that the FBI uses wire taps in national defense and kidnaping cases and then only upon his authorization. This policy was approved by the late President Roosevelt in 1941 and has been followed consistently by the Attorneys General since that time."

Apart from the obvious consideration that no President may authorize what Congress has specifically forbidden by law, this amounts to a gross distortion of Mr. Roosevelt's plain intent.

Mr. Roosevelt's expression of opinion—it was no more than that—was contained in a letter dated February 21, 1941, to Thomas H. Eliot, then a member of Congress, who had solicited his views on a bill introduced in the House to legalize wire tapping by an employe of any executive department having investigatory functions. The President replied:

"I have read the bill and I have no hesitation in saying that it goes entirely too far . . . The use of wire tapping to aid law-enforcement officers raises squarely the most delicate problem in the field of democratic statesmanship. It is more than desirable, it is necessary, that criminals be detected and prosecuted as vigilantly as possible. It is more necessary that the citizens of a democracy be protected in their rights of privacy from unwarranted snooping. As an instrument for oppression of free citizens, I can think of none worse than indiscriminate wire tapping . . .

"There is, however, one field in which, given the conditions in the world today, wire taping is very much in the public interest . . . I have no compunction in saying that wire tapping should be used against those persons, not citizens of the United States, and those few citizens who are traitors to their country, who today are engaged in espionage or sabotage against the United States . . . There is only one domestic crime which ought possibly to be included; that is kidnapping."

There is no rational way to construe this letter as an indorsement of wire tapping in violation of the law. It is an indorsement only of a proposed amendment of the law. It conveys a clear recognition, moreover, that the law then in existence forbade wire tapping. Congress declined to adopt the proposed amendment. Wire tapping by FBI agents or by anyone else remains, then, as Judge Ryan called it in the Coplon case, illegal. And only Congress can legalize it.

Membership Facts On Homeless Unions

The four unions expelled recently by the CIO had done a mighty poor job of organizing the unorganized.

Here's the membership of the four unions as indicated by per capita tax payments to the national CIO:

1. Mine Mill—about 44,000.
2. Office & Professional Workers—about 12,000.
3. Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers—about 22,500.
4. Public Workers—about 14,000.

Food Prices Take Dip From Six-Months' High

The wholesale food price index went down—for a change—last week after hitting a six-month high the previous week.

Dun & Bradstreet set the figure at $5.83, compared to $5.86 for the week ended Feb. 14 and $5.80 for the week ended Feb. 7. Prices on a dozen of the 31 foods used for the index dropped on wholesale markets during the week, including basic products like flour, sugar, coffee and livestock.

It is 73 in Midwinter For Members of CIO's Newest IUC in Puerto Rico

By GERVASE N. LOVE

THREE top CIO officials hopped into a plane in Miami early this month and flew over 1000 miles of blue Atlantic to what many people regard as the most interesting spot in Latin-America —Puerto Rico.

There, in this beautiful island where the people are pulling themselves up by their own "Operation Bootstrap" from the grimmest of grim poverty, where the fertility of the people is greater than that of the land, where democracy actually is at work in a manner unknown elsewhere in that vast area south of the border, they welcomed into the CIO the 100,000 members of the Confederacion General de Trabajadores—the General Confederation of Workers of Puerto Rico.

On Feb. 5, before several hundred enthusiastic members of the unions that make up the CGT, CIO Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood, who also is CIO director of organization, presented the newest industrial union charter of affiliation to CGT Pres. Tomas Mendez Mejias.

Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, in his role as chairman of the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee, as the principal speaker, formally welcomed Puerto Rico's largest organization of workers into the CIO. John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils, told the members of the newest council what affiliation means to them and to the CIO.

The distinguished guests included Commissioner of Labor Fernando Sierra Berdecia, Puerto Rico's counterpart of the U. S. Secretary of Labor.

The northeast trade wind that acts as an air conditioner for this sub-tropical island kept the temperature at a balmy midwinter 73 degrees as the presentation ceremony opened with Haywood and Mejias stepping to the microphone. Beside them stood Berdecia and Ernesto Ramos Antonini, CGT secretary of foreign relations. In the background on the stage Brophy, Potofsky and members of the CGT executive board looked on.

"WITH THIS CHARTER we welcome you into the great family of the CIO," Haywood said.

"We are prepared to render you every possible service. We consider you a highly important factor in approaching all Latin-American workers because of your language bond, and thus in advancing and protecting the democratic process, raising standards and improving the living conditions of all workers in the Western Hemisphere. Together we can demonstrate that trade unionism can be built solidly in the Spanish-speaking areas and used to strengthen democracy in this hemisphere.

"The standard of living for the workers of Puerto Rico must be raised—and we will work with you to help you raise it—so that you and your people can have the opportunities that every American is entitled to.

"It will take organization, education and perseverance, but with determination it can be accomplished. An understanding of your problems by your fellow-Americans in the CIO is necessary, and you must understand our problems. Together we will strengthen democracy and together we will fight totalitarianism."

MEJIAS THANKED the CIO for the charter and pledged that the CGT will fight with renewed vigor against sweatshop wages in Puerto Rico lest mainland standards be undermined, and against making it a refuge for runaway firms seeking to exploit Puerto Rican workers.

"The CGT stands firm with the CIO," he added, "in the fight against totalitarianism of all sorts, Communist or Fascist."

POTOFSKY brought the newcomers to CIO the fraternal greetings of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and of their six million brothers on the mainland.

"The presentation of the charter to the CGT," he said, "marks the beginning of organic unity between the workers of the mainland and the workers of Puerto Rico, and through you also a closer relationship with Latin-American labor on the hemisphere.

"Affiliation means we join you in the struggle to abolish poverty, discrimination, and to achieve an ever-increasing standard of living.

"Affiliation means that we join hands in a continuing effort to translate our policy of no discrimination and equal opportunity for all in a concrete manner so that the citizens of Puerto Rico will have the same benefits of organization as we are struggling to attain for the workers of the mainland. CIO will lend its good offices to you and your government in the fight for 'Operation Bootstrap' so that you may achieve full employment and greater security.

"Affiliation means that you have become a leader in the fight for the freedom of our way of life and the preservation of our democratic institutions."

PUERTO RICO, discovered by Christopher Columbus in 1492 on his second voyage, had Ponce de Leon, he who searched for the Fountain of Youth in Florida, as its first governor. He is buried in the San Juan Cathedral.

From 1508, when he assumed command, until the United States defeated Spain in 1898—490 years—it was a colony of Spain, and the people had no voice in their own government. Under the United States there was a gradual lessening of colonial rule until 1948, when the people for the first time elected their own governor—Luis Munos Marin, founder and head of the powerful Popular Party, who took office on Jan. 2, 1949.

The ACW president warned his audience to be "vigilant and alert" lest Puerto Ricans lose their democratic rights to a junta, usually military, such as has seized control of many other Latin-American states.

He lauded Gov. Marin as "one of the hemisphere's great statesmen in the tradition of Presidents Roosevelt and Truman—he is bold and liberal."

"We of the CIO will be glad," Potofsky went on, "to offer our cooperation to your government and the CGT in your efforts to establish an all-year-round economy, to abolish your unemployed, to create more purchasing power.

"I am confident that your affiliation with the CIO will promote the welfare of the people of the island as it has on the mainland; and that it will implement the Good Neighbor policy of the United States as promoting democracy, good will and prosperity for all throughout Latin America.

"Let me admonish you to follow the constructive policies of CIO, to adhere to contracts, to assume a role of leadership in the community, and to be above reproach in the handling of union affairs."

BROPHY DESCRIBED the rise and spread of trade unionism in the last few decades as the outstanding social phenomenon of recent times. Its principal tools, he pointed out, are collective bargaining and legislative action.

"What are the advantages of affiliation of the CGT with the CIO?" he asked.

"First, there is advice and cooperation

CHARTER OF AFFILIATION is presented by CIO Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood (standing at right) to Pres. Tomas Mendez Mejias, of the General Confederation of Workers (CGT) of Puerto Rico, which has 100,000 members. Standing at left is Ernesto Ramos Antonini, CGT secretary of foreign relations and counsel, and also speaker of the Puerto Rican House of Delegates. Behind Haywood is Fernando Sierra Berdecia, the U. S. island's right are (left to r trial union councils who is also presid Union. The cerem Juan. CIO and C and democracy m

DeNucci Assigned To Puerto Rico

George DeNuccio, CIO regional director at Columbus, O., will shift his operations to Puerto Rico next month.

A member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, De Nuccio will do liaison work between the CIO and its Puerto Rico affiliate, the General Confederation of Workers (CGT).

Besides studying the problems of the CGT and how the CIO can best help, he will seek to determine how the CIO can aid "Operation Bootstrap," Puerto Rico's version of the New Deal.

"Operation Bootstrap" is a dynamic social and economic movement headed by Gov. Luis Munoz Marin, supported by the CGT and implemented politically by the Popular Party, aimed at providing more and better jobs, Puerto Rico's greatest need. Its program includes industrial expansion, introduction of new industries, overhauling of agriculture, higher wages, health services and better education.

Most CGT Members In Sugar Industry

A majority of the 100,000 members of the Puerto Rican General Confederation of Labor-CIO work in the sugar industry—the island's largest—but a substantial number are scattered through virtually all of the other industries being developed in its economic upsurge. These include transportation, textiles, construction trades, cement, fertilizers, chemicals and glass.

Pres. Tomas Mendez Marin is a veteran trade unionist who long has been in the forefront of the often thankless task of organizing the island's underpaid workers. Ernesto Ramos Antonini, CGT secretary of foreign relations and counsel, is also speaker of the island House of Representatives and an important political figure. The other officers are Vice Pres. Pedro Vega Berrios, president of the Sugar Workers Union, and Armando Rivero, secretary-general.

Just for the record, Communism has not made enough headway in Puerto Rico to be even a nuisance to the labor movement.

CIO DELEGATION that visited Puerto Rico to present a charter to the CGT also visited a sugar mill at Guanica, in the southern part of the island, and attended a meeting of Local 6, Sugar Workers Union, as seen above.

ommissioner of Labor, while seated at nt) John Brophy, CIO director of indus- nd CGT Vice Pres. Pedro Vega Berrios, t of the Puerto Rican Sugar Workers y took place in a radio theatre in San will work together to make unionism e effective throughout Latin America.

from the CIO in the basic fields of organiz- ing and collective bargaining.

"Second, on the political and legislative front the CIO can intercede with the Fed- eral Government on the congressional and administrative level.

"Third, Puerto Rico through the CIO can be a base and center for the flow of trade union action and educational influence for hemispheral unity. The CIO through CGT must help the cause of free trade unionism in the western hemisphere—free from gov- ernment control, free from political parties, free from control of conspiratorial groups either Fascist or Communist.

"The full benefit of the national CIO economic, social and legislative program should be applied to Puerto Rico as an integral part of the American economic unit.

"This means complete economic freedom on a par with any state in the markets of the mainland. The basic product of the island, sugar, should not be discriminated against. A better balance of Puerto Rico's economy is an imperative need if full em- ployment is to be obtained. The obligation under the Federal Full Employment Act to aid in this endeavor rests upon the U. S. Congress."

THE CHARTER presentation was the cli- max of a week of activity for the CIO visitors that had many highlights.

They started out by touring the San Juan slum areas, once regarded as among the world's worst, and then inspected housing developments which are replacing them. They visited also the plants of the govern- ment-sponsored Puerto Rico Industrial De- velopment Co. in the San Juan area.

On trips they inspected the profit-sharing farms of the Puerto Rico Land Authority at Arecibo, where the workers share in the farm's earnings, and at Guanica, in the southern part of the island, they visited a sugar mill and attended a meeting of Local Sugar Workers Union.

They were guests at a number of social affairs, including one at which Gov. Marin and Senora Marin were host and hostess, Department of Labor luncheon, a recep- tion held by the House of Representatives and another in the San Juan City Hall offered by Senora Felisa Rincon de Gautier, the only woman city manager in Latin America. They attended so many, in fact, that they gave a reception themselves.

And—lucky fellows—they spent a day at Luquillo Beach and el Yungue, a summer resort.

Operation Bootstrap Spells 'Better Life'

THE DAY of the siesta has been ban- ished from Puerto Rico.

How can one sleep, even under the palms, with pneumatic hammers and ce- ment mixers, the whirr of machinery and the rumble of loaded trucks making an infernal din?

Manana has taken on a new meaning. Once it amounted to putting off until to- morrow (which never came) a task that ought to be done today. Now it means doing today what normally would be done to- morrow.

Apologetic and often shamefaced main- landers sometimes referred to Puerto Rico as the United States' poorhouse. It's still a long way from Easy St., but it's pulling itself up there by—Operation Bootstrap.

"Operation Bootstrap" is the greatest thing that's happened in Latin-America since the O'Higginses and the Bolivars threw off the mouldering yoke of Spain a century ago. It is a demonstration that democracy can be put to work by 2,200,000 hungry, un- educated, sickly people on an overcrowded island without great natural resources, and with less money than their federal govern- ment spends in an hour, make themselves less hungry, better educated and healthier.

And best of all, it is a demonstration that the absolute hopelessness that once stalked through life with every Latin-American save a wealthy and ruthless few can be banished —just as Puerto Rico is banishing it.

"OPERATION BOOTSTRAP" is Puerto Rico's version of the New Deal. It is a planned development of the island's weak agriculture, semi-colonial economy to pro- vide a better life for its people.

To understand it one has to know a few facts about the island. One of these is that it is an integral part of the United States, an "organized but unincorporated" territory by virtue of the Jones Act of 1917.

Its people are American citizens. They are represented in Congress by a delegate with- out a vote.

The island is one of the most crowded areas on the face of the earth. Its 2,200,000 people jam themselves into 243 square miles —spread over a rectangle 100 miles long and 35 miles wide—at the rate of 645 persons per square mile.

But the mountains occupy 75% of the island and only a few fertile valleys can be farmed. Most of the cultivation is crowded into the coastal plain that lies between the heights and the Atlantic on the north or the Caribbean on the south—narrow, fertile strips that run from two to 13 miles in width.

THE RESULT is that Puerto Rico hasn't been able to grow enough food to feed itself for many years. And, paradoxically, it had nothing to export for cash with which to buy food except—food and food products. It had no minerals and few finished prod- ucts. It has been hungry and penniless.

So the insular government would have enough money to keep in operation, Con- gress allowed it to keep all federal taxes collected on the island, and also gave it an appropriation each year, but it was still hungry and perpetually broke.

Sugar is the big crop, sugar and its by- products. Five years ago cane was grown on 35% of the island's crop land; today the percentage is probably a little less. In 1946 sugar-based exports accounted for 60% of the total. They were worth $115 million, while all other exports had a value of $77.

Sugar is the largest employer, giving jobs to 130,000 to 140,000 workers in the growing and another 13,000 to 15,000 in the process- ing. But it is a seasonal crop—and employ- ment drops to one-third or less of those figures for six months of the year.

With so many people and so few jobs, the competition for employment drove wage rates to fantastically low figures. In 1934- 1935, just as the New Deal was getting started on the mainland, sugar workers aver- aged less than 11 cents an hour on the plan- tations, and coffee growers paid only half that!

Aristocrats indeed were those lucky enough to have jobs in fertilizer mills. They averaged 25½ cents an hour. There were no sugar refineries then, but the molasses fac- tory employe earned 12.2 cents, while the coffee roaster was paid 11.9 cents.

The federal government provided pallia- tive relief appropriations, but little or noth- ing was done to attack the basic problem —unemployment in an overpopulated area. So the Puerto Ricans decided to do some- thing themselves.

FORMAL WELCOME into CIO was ex- tended the new Puerto Rican brothers by Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky, of the Amal- gamated Clothing Workers, chairman of the CIO Latin-American Affairs Com- mittee.

Spearhead of the attack on poverty was a young political figure named Luis Munoz Marin. He organized the Popular Party. With the help of the General Confederation of Labor—CIO (CGT) and the liberals his party won a majority in the Legislature.

But in 1941 it succeeded in passing a minimum wage act which applies to all workers of every description in all indus- tries except government employes and do- mestics. Since then it has added an annual $20 million to the island's payrolls in 15 industries—10% of the 1939 national income.

It has passed a labor relations act to pro- mote the growth of trade unionism and collective bargaining, established a conciliation and voluntary arbitration service, in- stituted an apprenticeship program, voca- tional guidance, industrial schools, time and a half or double time for overtime, an in- dustrialization program and government- owned factories which lead in establishing wage rates in their fields. Land was bought for profit-sharing sugar growing programs.

IN 1947, THE ISLAND'S political setup was changed by amendments to the Jones Act. The people could now elect their own gov- ernor for the first time since the Spaniards began moving in in numbers in 1508.

In 1948 the first election under the new rules was held. Marin, supported by labor, was elected Governor by a large majority, and the Popular Party swept all contests for seats in the Legislature. The victors took office Jan. 2, 1949. "Operation Boot- strap" promptly moved into high gear.

So—

Last August the sugar field worker who was making a little less than 11c in 1939 was earning 39.5c. The sugar processor out- side of the refining industry was making 59.9c. The coffee plantation hand was mak- ing 18.5c, the coffee roaster 31.6c and the fertilizer worker 67.2c.

The new average hourly rates aren't par- ticularly impressive to mainland CIO mem- bers, but percentagewise they represent in- creases from 100% up. The same story holds true in other industries, and the increases run up to nearly 400%.

The Government Development Bank, with a capital of but $20.5 million, has grown enough over the few years to help solve the financial problems of governmental units.

The Industrial Development Co., a gov- ernment agency, has started factories in many fields. Its cement workers are paid a minimum of 75c an hour—and it's a mini- mum, not a going rate for the whole opera- tion. It opened a glass plant when bottles for Puerto Rican rum could not be imported during the war; now it exports bottles to other Latin-American states. It has textile mills, factories for the processing of bagasse (waste left over after sugar refining) and others.

THE SLUMS OF San Juan, among the world's worst, have been tackled. Some of the worst hovels, crowded against one another, with three and four persons per room and no sanitary facilities, have been torn down, and a start has been made on low-cost housing, as in the San Jose de- velopment. Shacks in better condition were moved to where they could be tied in with sewage and water systems.

Untold thousands of children to whom a decent meal was a rarity are getting school lunches through the insular government. New schools are being built and old ones expanded. New colleges have been built, and the emphasis has been shifted from cul- tural and academic training to vocational training.

The sugar industry, hampered by quota restrictions, is being reorganized. Crop di- versification is being practiced as well as preached, coffee growing is being revived and more food is being imported. Not only are wages increasing, but the number of part-time jobs is lessening, and the average worker's take-home pay at the end of the year reflects the true change better than the rates themselves.

AND DURING THIS time Puerto Rico's credit has improved steadily. Her bud- get is balanced and her securities are eagerly sought in the mainland money markets.

That the job is far from done Gov. Marin agrees as readily as the humblest worker on the island. It's a job that the CIO, by granting a charter to the CGT, has taken upon itself to help him finish.

SO WELCOME did the islanders make the CIO representatives that three of them gave a reception (above) in San Juan's Condado Hotel as a "thank you" gesture. About 200 representatives of labor and government attended.

Board OK's Ouster Of Cal. Council

REVOCATION of the charter of the California State Industrial Union Council by CIO Pres. Philip Murray was approved by the CIO Executive Board as officers of the Communist-dominated former affiliate sought to fight a delaying action in the courts.

The Executive Board, which also approved and affirmed the report of the committee that held hearings and recommended expulsion, ordered a new charter issued in the name of the CIO California Industrial Union Council. It likewise approved Murray's appointment of CIO Rep. Richard T. Leonard, a former vice president of the Auto Workers, as administrator, and the naming of a committee of 22 representatives of international unions to advise him.

The old council's charter was lifted on the ground it was a front for the Commies and violently opposed CIO policy.

Bjorne Halling, president, and James Daugherty, secretary-treasurer of the defunct body, had proclaimed that the charter revocation would be appealed to the Executive Board meeting. No such appeal was made, however.

Instead the left wing faction went into Superior Court in San Francisco and obtained a temporary injunction to restrain the CIO and Leonard from revoking the charter—which had already been done—and from interfering with the council's operations. They sought to have the restraining order made effective pending a trial. Leonard in turn obtained an order barring the old council from disposing of its funds or properties pending a trial. The issues are still being fought out.

Biz Editor Says Distinction Between Union Leaders And Members Is 'Not Valid'

THAT STUFF about union "dictators" who rule with an iron hand, and the poor members whom the Taft-Hartley act was to rescue, is strictly the bunk. And it's a management man who says so. He told that, and more, to 1500 business men who attended a three-day personnel conference of the American Management Association at Chicago.

He's Merlyn S. Pitzele, labor editor of Business Week, which right after the reelection of Truman admitted the Taft-Hartley act went too far, but changed its tune later to say T-H didn't go far enough.

Pitzele spoke on "Main Currents of Union Politics." And these are the points he made:

1 The distinction made by men like Taft and Stassen between union leaders and union members is "not valid," because "leadership is neither more nor less radical than the majority of those who follow it." Leaders and members keep in step "by a process of constant interaction, of influencing and being influenced." If management makes "sharp distinctions betwen the unions and the men who lead them, we shall shortly find ourselves up a blind alley."

2 Union politics is only in part the creation of union leadership. Leaders can encourage some political tendencies, and discourage others, "but the union leadership cannot for long pursue a political line which is repugnant without losing the position of leadership." He used the CIO Auto Workers as an example, compared the UAW to a ship, with Reuther as captain, and said Reuther can speed the ship up or slow it down, "but unless he is prepared to accommodate himself to that ship's direction, he'd better get a row boat, because he's going to get thrown off."

3 The Americanism which makes the union member aggressive and militant in behalf of what he considers his rights "makes him the despair of the Communists," so that even where the Communists are in the saddle, they must keep the rank and file deceived "because the philosophy of Communism is anathema to all but a fraction of American people, whether they be farmers, housewives, or wage earners."

4 Employers who make deals with Commie-led unions will lose out in the long run.

5 The idea that the miners are the creatures of John L. Lewis is "a gross error" and it is the other way around.

6 By and large an employer gets just about what he deserves in the kind of union he deals with. "If he has been a good employer, intelligent, fair, sensitive to the needs of his employes as human beings, the chances are he has a pretty good, a pretty reasonable union with which to deal."

7 The employers' notion that all labor leaders are simply power hungry is an error.

8 "At the bar of public opinion, in the minds of those not involved in the union-management competition, the idea that a strong union movement is necessary in America to do a better job of looking after workers' interests than employers will or can —that idea has very broad support." (LPA)

U.S. Medical Costs Higher Than Britain's

BRITAIN is being driven toward ruin by the terrific costs of its National Health Service under which everybody can get any medical care needed.

Some form of this statement is being repeated again and again these days. Is it true?

A study just released by the Committee for the Nation's Health answers with a firm no. A comparison of costs of medical care under the British Health Service with the costs of medical care in the United States, it states, shows that we spend nearly three times as much per capita as the British.

- The average per capita cost for the nearly 48 million persons covered by the British Health Service is about $21. Total cost is about $1 billion.
- Our per capita medical care comes to $62. The annual total for our 150 million population is now around $9.3 billions.

The report points out that our national income is much larger than Britain's, even when figured on a per capita basis. Oddly enough, the total expenditures for medical care amount to 4% of the gross national income in both the United States and Britain.

The report was prepared by the Committee on Research in Medical Economics, Inc., Michael M. Davis, chairman. Figures in the report, from British government sources, have been converted from pounds into dollars at the ratio of $2.80 to a pound.

Revolt Against FTA Grows In West

A MASS MOVEMENT of rank-and-file members to get out of the Communist-dominated Food and Tobacco Workers and to stick with CIO began developing swiftly as:

1. The 500-member Local 64 in San Diego, Calif., climaxed a dramatic meeting by voting to withdraw from FTA, stay in CIO and petition National CIO for a separate local industrial union charter.

2. Local 306 in Phoenix, Ariz., voted unanimously to stay in CIO, two days before FTA's expulsion by the National CIO Executive Board for following "every zig and zag" in the Communist Party line.

3. Indications grew that the huge, 6000-member Local 78, which covers three states, was soon to break with FTA and go CIO.

4. Irwin L. DeShetler, Southern California CIO regional director, has named full-time representatives to work with Local 78 rank-and-filers and aid them in staying with CIO. He appointed James Spangler, CIO field representative, who will work with Tex Bell, former Phoenix FTA district president.

These swift-breaking developments came as CIO mobilized to assure CIO affiliation and representation to members of FTA and three other unions ousted because they placed Commie politics ahead of trade unionism.

Meantime, some 250 members of the Yuma-Imperial District of Local 78, meeting in Yuma, Ariz., were expressing determination to get out of FTA.

Rank-and-filers invited DeShetler to attend the Yuma meeting and gave him unlimited time to tell them CIO's position. DeShetler announced the assignment of Spangler as full-time representative to work with Local 78 members to aid them in staying in CIO.

Reuther Calls For Parley Of Labor, Farmers, Industry

"LABOR LOOKS to the church for real ethical leadership in the problems that beset our age," Walter Reuther told 455 churchmen and laymen at a luncheon opening the second annual conference on "The Church and Economic Life."

The conference was called by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ of America. Reuther, president of the CIO Auto Workers, called for a "moral equivalent" to the hydrogen bomb. He urged a voluntary conference of labor, management and farm leaders to deal with the entire range of national problems.

"Free men everywhere are searching for a workable, democratic system of human welfare," he said. "This conference should grapple honestly with the universal hunger for freedom and security." A conference such as he proposed, said Reuther, "should determine what we do about unemployment, food surpluses, the FEPC, and civil rights. It must not be just window dressing."

IN CALLING for the moral equivalent for the hydrogen bomb, Reuther said, "We have achieved the know-how to destroy the world, but we have not achieved that sense of moral responsibility to translate that know-how into achievement for peace."

Pres. George Harrison, president of the AFL Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, said organized religion and labor have much in common, since both acknowledge that "social justice is conducive to good morals."

OTHERS AT the conference included: Victor Reuther, UAW, chairman of a panel on "Freedom of Enterprise and Social Controls"; Tilford Dudley, Congregational Christian Church, assistant director, CIO-PAC; Stanley Ruttenberg, director, CIO Dept. of Education and Research; Frank McCulloch, Congregational Christian Church, aide to Sen. Paul Douglas (D., Ill.); Ted Silvey, Young Men's Christian Association, executive assistant to ECA labor advisers; Prof. Kermit Eby, Univ. of Chicago, Church of the Brethren, former CIO research director; Tom Downs, Michigan CIO legislative representative and chairman of the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission, Detroit Council of Churches.

Also present were Robert Scott, secretary, Michigan Federation of Labor, Michigan Council of Churches; Ted S. Ogar, Protestant Episcopal Church, editor, Michigan CIO News; Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, Evangelical and Reformed Church, national board, Americans for Democratic Action; Joseph Fichter, Columbus, O., Methodist, president of the pro-Brannan plan Ohio Grange.

Dr. Arthur Flemming, chairman of the Federal Council's Department of the Church and Economic Life, stressed that the delegates come together "not as representatives of their respective economic viewpoints, but as active church members examining economic problems in the light of the Christian gospel."

Truman Still Urges Civil Rights Program

An appeal to the third annual conference of the Natl. Civil Liberties Clearing House to get behind his civil rights program was voiced by President Truman in a message to the delegates of 75 national organizations meeting in Washington Feb. 23 and 24.

"We must continue to urge," Truman said, "that the legislation now before the Congress 'to secure these rights' be enacted into law without delay. The available evidence indicates that a majority of the American people stand with us and that they are in accord with the proposition that our statute books should adequately reflect our everyday obedience to the great commands of the Constitution."

Organizations taking part in the conference include, besides CIO and AFL, American Civil Liberties Union, Natl. Farmers Union, Southern Regional Council, Americans for Democratic Action, and many others.

Martin Foresees New Intl. Anti-Red Newsmens' Group

A NEW international anti-Communist organization of union newspapermen will be established before the year is out, Harry Martin, president of the CIO Newspaper Guild, predicted in an exclusive interview with LPA. The Commie-dominated International Order of Journalists has been steadily disintegrating.

Martin said that American, British, Dutch, Belgian and Scandinavian newspapermen may hold preliminary meetings this spring to lay the groundwork for an international Congress of Journalists.

He declared that any resulting permanent organization probably would work within the framework of the new International Confederation of Free Trade Unions as the long-established International Transport Workers Federation already is doing.

Disintegration of the IOJ has come about through withdrawal of newspapermen's unions in anti-Communist countries, Martin said. Among those who have pulled out are the Guild, the British National Union of Journalists, and journalists' unions of The Netherlands, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Australia, Greece and Austria.

SPOKESMEN at IOJ headquarters behind the Iron Curtain in Prague, Czechoslovakia, attribute disintegration of the IOJ to Martin himself, who is ECA Information Director in Europe with headquarters in Paris, as well as labor adviser to Averell Harriman, top ECA officer abroad. In an indirect attack on the Marshall Plan, the Communists say the IOJ is being broken up by the "Martin Plan."

Martin has been in this country briefly for conferences with ECA officials in Washington and to attend a meeting of the Newspaper Guild's international executive board in New York. He said the chief function of a new newspaperman's international would be conducting the battle in the United Nations and its subsidiary organizations for free speech and freedom of the press around the world.

The need for such an organized group is pointed up by the tabling of the international free speech treaty, although the UN's Declaration of Human Rights, now in effect, has strong free speech sections.

Asked about the success of the Marshall Plan, Martin said that under the plan's stimulus European production is a year and perhaps two years ahead of what was originally hoped for. How European products can be sold in the world market has become a bigger problem than getting the wheel's turning, he said.

ACLU Establishes Baldwin Foundation

The establishment of a foundation to encourage and support the study of civil liberties by college students here and abroad has been announced by the American Civil Liberties Union. The foundation, to be called the Roger N. Baldwin Civil Liberties Foundation in honor of the retired director of ACLU, will award scholarships for special study in international civil liberties problems. Foundation lectures will be given by outstanding specialists in the area of human rights.

Knight Joins Brannan In Backing Farm Plan

PRES. O. A. Knight of the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union joined Agriculture Secy. Charles Brannan in advocating the Brannan Plan before an audience of 4000 at the Natl. Farm Institute at Des Moines, Iowa.

Brannan and Pres. Allan Kline of the American Farm Bureau engaged in a heated debate over the merits of the plan which brought cheers and boos from the spectators.

Brannan lambasted Kline for his support of the current farm price support bill, which has resulted in the costly potato surplus. The Farm Bureau actively supported this program, which forces the government to purchase surplus potatoes at a fixed price, but leaves the government helpless to limit production.

The potato purchase program has cost the taxpayers $300 million in each of the past two years. Under Brannan's plan, potato production payments (the difference between a fair price to the farmers and the lowest market price for consumers) would have cost less than $25,000,000, according to Brannan.

"Do you think it fair to your own members," Brannan asked the Farm Bureau president, "to be openly favoring still lower price supports for farmers in the harsh hope of forcing some of them out of business, so that farming can be more profitable for those big-scale operators with larger cash reserves who are able to survive?"

THE Brannan-Kline debate is expected to have repercussions right up to next November's elections. Kline, a Republican, has always counted on Iowa farmers as his political base, but in 1948 they deserted him and sent Sen. Guy Gillette (D. Iowa) to Washington. In Iowa and other midwest states, success of the Democrats in winning crucial Congressional seats may depend on farmer-union cooperation based in large part on support of the Brannan Plan.

"Farm income and income of industrial workers rise and fall together," said Knight, who is a CIO vice president. Knight said that organized labor supports measures specifically designed to benefit farmers, who are consumers of industrial products.

He stressed union support of the Brannan Plan. "How much better this is than the present policy of pricing potential consumers completely out of the grocery store," he said. Labor's objective is "to create an economy of abundance for all and a democratic and peaceful world," he added.

"WE OF THE labor movement do not profess to be agricultural experts," Knight said, "yet we do have certain definite ideas and suggestions as to the type of program which should be devised to assist farmers in solving their economic problems.

"A flexible system of production payments for each crop could be established to encourage production of the corps in greatest need.

"Under the Brannan Plan, the government instead of buying the perishable crop itself, would permit the product to seek its own price level in the local market. Then to protect the farmer, the government would pay him the difference between the average price for which the commodity sold in the market and the support price which constitutes the production guarantee for that commodity," Knight declared.

"At the close of the year 1949, there were over 3½ million unemployed. That figure has now risen to 4½ million. These workers are unemployed because potential consumers of their production at present are unable to purchase that production."

Texas Farmers Union Wants T-H Repeal

A state convention of the Farmers Union at Amarillo, Tex., voted to join labor in its battle for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Recognizing the economic interdependency of farm and city workers, delegates drew up a resolution scoring T-H as "a detriment to the welfare of the general public," and championed labor's right to bargain collectively. The convention also indorsed the Brannan Plan, the National Health Plan and government assistance to the aged and needy. Jeff Hickman, secretary of Texas State CIO Council, was among the convention speakers.

MASKED BALL: More than 10,000 crowded into the Milwaukee Auditorium for the traditional Brewers Masked Ball and Carnival, sponsored by Brewery Workers Local 8. The two costumes on the left were so complete that the wearers were never identified. On the right, Jessie Smars took advantage of the occasion to advertise the Amalgamated Clothing Workers union label. (LPA)

U. S. Asks Court To Repudiate 'Separate But Equal' Doctrine

THE federal government, in an amicus curiae brief filed by Solicitor Gen. Perlman in the Sweatt and McLaurin cases, urged the U. S. Supreme Court to repudiate "the separate but equal" doctrine.

The basis of the request for repudiation is that the doctrine is "an unwarranted deviation from the principle of equality under the law which the 14th Amendment explicitly incorporated in the fundamental charter of this country."

The two cases were sponsored by the Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"Under the Constitution," stated the Justice Dept.'s brief, "every agency of government, federal and state, must treat our people as Americans, and not as members of particular groups divided according to race, color, religion, or national ancestry . . . If the Constitution is construed to permit the enforced segregation of Negroes, there would be no constitutional barrier against singling out other groups in the community and subjecting them to the same kind of discrimination."

Perlman asserted that the case of Heman Sweatt, denied admission to the University of Texas law school because of his race, and that of G. W. McLaurin, attending the University of Oklahoma graduate school on a segregated basis, "are significant because they test the vitality and strength of the democratic ideals to which the United States is dedicated."

Charging that these two are not isolated cases of discrimination but relate to practices engaged in by the states, the brief states that decisions in these cases may "have large influence on determining whether the foundations of our society shall continue to be undermined by the existence and acceptance of racial discriminations having the sanction of law."

Herblock, Poston Win Broun Award

THE HEYWOOD Broun Award for the first time has been given to two men—Ted Poston, New York Post reporter, and Herbert Block (Herblock), Washington Post cartoonist. Each gets $500 and a citation from the CIO Newspaper Guild, for the most outstanding journalistic achievements of 1949 "in the spirit of Heywood Broun," founder and first president of the ANG.

Poston was honored for his courageous coverage of a Florida rape trial, in which two Negro youths were sentenced to death and a third to a life term. Poston, a Negro, was forced to run for his life with another reporter and two Negro attorneys who defended the accused youths, and escaped a lynching party only after a breakneck 40-mile flight over back country roads at night.

Herblock was honored for the general excellence and effectiveness of his cartoons. The judges decided he invariably fought for the people's causes and did so in the manner, if not the medium, of columnist Broun. Herblock won a special Guild prize two years ago, and a Pulitzer prize in 1942. He is 40, has been with the Post since 1945.

Poston, 43, has been with the New York Post since 1939, worked for the Office of War Information during the war. He asked for the Florida assignment, and twice his editors said no. He insisted, and his editors gave in. Poston's stories told what happens to a Negro in the South if the whites decide he is a rape suspect. Poston's reports brought this obscure case to the attention of the Justice Dept., and the FBI entered the case. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has filed an appeal, and is ready to carry the fight to the Supreme Court, since the youths were convicted on flimsy evidence. (LPA)

Imports' Effects Probed

The House Education and Labor Committee has set up a subcommittee headed by Rep. Tom Steed (D., Okla.) to investigate foreign imports and their effect on unemployment. Other members are Reps. Burke (D. O.), Bailey (D. W. Va.), McConnell (R. Pa.), and Smith (R. Kan.).

New International Committee Named for Foreign Relations

CREATION of a new International Committee to handle CIO's increasingly close relations with union groups in other nations was approved by the Executive Board at its recent meeting.

Chairman of the new committee is Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Michael Ross, CIO director of international affairs, will serve as secretary of the new group.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey are ex-officio members. Its other members are the nine CIO vice-presidents and Secy.-Treas. David J. McDonald of the United Steelworkers.

In approving formation of the new committee, the board also accepted a proposal by Pres. Murray that a number of other foreign affairs committees be abolished. These groups had been set up during the past few years to act as liaison with labor organizations in France, Italy, Great Britain, the Soviet Union and Israel.

MANY had been created during the war and have been relatively inactive during recent years.

"In view of the direct contacts now established with non-communist trade union groups in the ICFTU, it is my recommendation that such standing joint committees are no longer required and should be dropped," Murray said.

"If for any reason, particular relationships with any one national group on some particular occasion is required, a sub-committee can be appointed for this purpose."

The Latin-American Affairs Committee was kept as a subcommittee of the new group, with the same personnel as in the past.

N.J. Council Hits At Budget Plan

A proposed New Jersey budget that was balanced by hacking at appropriations for the labor, education and highway departments was bitterly attacked by Pres. Carl Holderman of the New Jersey State CIO Council, in a letter Feb. 21 to Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll and members of the Legislature's Appropriations Committee.

Holderman pointed out that a balanced budget could be attained without further reducing the already limited services the state gives its citizens by enacting the CIO tax program. This includes repeal of the cigaret sales tax and a corporate franchise tax based on net worth, and substitution of a 7% tax on the net profits exceeding $10,000 a year of all corporations doing business in the state.

"To each according to his needs."

Spirit Of '37 Reborn In Chrysler Strike

By MARY HEATON VORSE
For Labor Press Association

WHEN I GAVE the address of the CIO Auto Workers headquarters at Detroit, the taxi driver said, "That the place they tried to dynamite? There's always someone got it in for a union."

Up at headquarters, Clayton Fountain, who wrote "Union Guy" and is now with public relations in UAW, thought over where I had better go first in all the 10 far-flung Chrysler locals now on strike in the Detroit area. In all 21 locals in seven states and 89,000 people are on strike. "You better go down to Local 490 and see Betty," he decided.

As soon as you enter the UAW building, you feel the shadow of the attempted dynamiting and the two attempted murders of Walter and Victor Reuther. No unaccounted person runs in and out of the building, nor in any of the local unions.

Two Negro union members barred the door of Local 490. Then one said: "Oh, you're from headquarters. Betty's expecting you." Local 490 is in an old bank building and it was bought by the Chrysler Highland Park local. What once had been the bank lobby was full of union activity.

At a table to one side sat a group registering strikers. Men and women chatted in lively groups. Yet another door had to be unlocked, and there was big, handsome Betty Jaskierney, financial secretary and treasurer of Local 490. As much as one person can, Betty represents the spirit of the UAW.

FROM THE moment I went in behind the barred door, there it was—the old gay spirit of Pengelly Hall in Flint during the sitdown strikes of 1937. From the beginning the auto workers had a different kind of a union, young and fresh and vigorous and unhampered by tradition. It streamed out of the meetings in 1937 and it streams out of the meetings now.

In Betty's office there was always someone coming in, always someone asking a question. Now it was one of the maintenance crew, a fine-looking Negro woman; now a member of the flying squadron, a veteran of the 1937 strike, with the neat wine-colored oval patch on his sleeve, who wanted to know about oil coupons.

In between telephone calls, questions, visitors, all of which Betty met gay and unruffled, I learned that Local 490 has about 4500 members, nearly half of them women.

"But," said Betty, "Chrysler hasn't got around to giving them the most skilled positions yet, and they haven't given them to our Negro members either, though before the war they were only employed as janitors and furnace men." Betty is an ardent believer in equality of jobs for women and, if there hadn't been an FEPC, she would have invented it herself.

I ALSO learned that there is a strike strategy committee, an energetic recreation and education committee that puts on two entertainments a week and cooperates with other locals, a motor pool, a flying squadron and picket committee; there is always a flying squadron car either circling the plant or standing near by. Constant vigilance takes the place of a picket line, although 100 cars circled Jefferson and Kercheval on Feb. 15.

Born in Pittsburgh, Betty is a second generation auto worker and unionism is a part of her very bones. As things began to get really crowded in the office, "We can't talk here," Betty decided, "there is too much going on."

"They've asked you everything so far except where to have a baby," I said.

"Well, even for that I could tell them where to find out," said Betty. "They'd go to the couselors; this is their room."

The committee was meeting, so we went into the picket soup kitchen with Mr. Stanley, the head counselor, who explained that the immediate business is to screen relief cases and refer them to local welfare agencies. All counselors take a comprehensive course first. Counseling, which is now widely spread through the CIO, originated with the UAW.

SOON PICKETS came in from all over for an excellent dinner of corned beef and cabbage, coffee and doughnuts. There was something in the hall of good temper and fellowship and a lusty gaiety that I had known so well as part of UAW in 1937; something that one can call the spirit of a union and which Betty, with her good sense and her boundless vitality, represents.

When we came upstairs they were putting up a television donated by a tire company, and Betty was telling me about the union party to be held Saturday night. Yet as the fear of a mob shadowed Pengelly Hall, the memory of the attempted dynamiting was here in this union hall together with the tragedy that almost took the lives of two Reuthers.

From there I went to the Hotel Sheraton, where in the solarium the union negotiations were going on. There the pension dispute had been sidetracked temporarily, while the union presents new contract demands.

If the spirit of Local 490 is a sample of what's happening through the country in all of the other Chrysler locals, it bodes well for the outcome of the union's new contract.

Unfair Labor Practices Increase 132% In 1949 Under Taft-Hartley Act

DURING the debate preceding passage of the Taft-Hartley Act, labor predicted that instead of bringing labor peace, T-H would gum up the works. The annual report of the National Labor Relations Board, just released, proves the point.

The report is for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, the first full year of operation under T-H. It was the busiest year in the 14-year history of the NLRB, with 32,796 cases closed, compared with 14,456 cases in fiscal 1947, the last and busiest year under the Wagner act.

The five-member board issued formal decisions in 3365 cases, against 2054 in fiscal 1948, a jump of 64%. Complaints on unfair practices issued by the office of the General Counsel (Robert M. Denham) totaled 617, angainst 305 in fiscal 1948. Denham petitioned for 32 injunctions (21 in 1948)—all against labor organizations. He got 16, four were withdrawn or dismissed, six remained pending.

THE NLRB field staff conducted 20,720 elections, involving 2,341,456 employes. Of these, 15,074 involving 1,733,922 employes were union shop authorization elections. The unions won 14,581 of these, or 96.7%.

(At the estimated cost of 40c per vote, these elections cost Uncle Sam $693,568. The elections disproved the antilabor thesis that union workers, if only given a chance, would reject the idea of union security.)

During fiscal 1949 the NLRB conducted 5646 elections, involving 607,534 employes, on representation in collective bargaining. Of these the unions won 3939, or 71%. But of the 132 elections held as a result of petitions to decertify, the unions won only 50. Of the 157 representation elections held as a result of petitions filed by employers, the unions won 100.

That the T-H act gummed up the works is evident again in the figures on hearings held by trial examiners in unfair labor practice cases. They held hearings in 414 of such cases, an increase of 132% over fiscal 1948. They issued intermediate reports in 328 cases, an increase of 154% over fiscal 1948.

The board had to force 228 cases of resumption of collective bargaining, where the employer refused to bargain; the board had to disestablish unions dominated by employers in 38 cases; the board had to force employers in 778 cases to post notices promising to stop illegal practices.

Of the 5314 unfair labor practice cases filed during fiscal 1949, those against employers numbered 4154, or 78%, with charges of discrimination against union members the basis of 2863 cases; in 1070 cases, the charge was refusal to bargain; in 534 cases the charge was interfering in formation of a union, or dominating such an organization. (LPA)

2 Radio Stations Accused By UAW

The CIO Auto Workers has filed a formal complaint with the Federal Communications Commission against radio stations WWJ and WJR, Detroit. The union charges both stations refused to sell or give time to discuss the issues in the strike against Chrysler Corp. The union asked that license renewals of both stations be called up for hearings at once.

Negotiations between the union and the company were resumed Feb. 20 in Detroit, with UAW Pres. Walter Reuther present for the first time in a week. He had been in a hospital undergoing surgery on his right arm, crippled when he was shot April 20, 1948. The 89,000 Chrysler workers have been on strike since Jan. 23, because of the company's unsatisfactory pension offer.

Telephone Strike Postponed At HST's Request

THE CIO Communications Workers, in response to a request from President Truman, agreed to a 60-day postponement of the nation-wide strike against the Bell Telephone Co., originally scheduled for Feb. 24.

CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne, in a telegram to Truman announcing the workes' decision, said his organization was willing to take "one more step in our continuing effort to preserve industrial peace."

Beirne, while agreeing to the new truce, delivered a sharp attack against the "stalling" tactics of the company in negotiations and indicated that the strike might materialize 60 days from Feb. 24 if these tactics did not change.

"When a company nullifies bargaining through evasion, stalling techniques and misleading newspaper advertisements, when it indulges in vicious personal attacks on union leaders, refuses to make counter-proposals, and refuses to accept arbitration, what is there left for a union to do except strike?" Beirne asked.

Beirne said that the strike, if it had been called, would actually have taken 100,000 telephone workers off their jobs and estimated that another 150,000 would have cooperated in the strike by refusing to cross the picket lines. This could have effectively silenced the nation's telephone system.

The 12,000 telephone workers of the New Jersey Bell Co. were excluded from the general terms of the acceptance, Beirne said. The case involving this group is already "well along" in the use of New Jersey's mediation machinery.

"Because of the status of that dispute," he continued, "we would like it to remain in the hands of the state mediation service."

TWO HOURS' DETENTION in Shelby County, Tenn., jail didn't dampen the spirits of these 13 pickets at the Memphis plant of the American Snuff Co. where members of the CIO Steelworkers have been on strike since Jan. 13. The women were charged with blocking traffic and fined $25 each. Their cases are being appealed. Testimony showed that scabs' cars were blocking the streets. Shown on the courthouse steps, left to right, front row, are: Mrs. Alice Crump, Mrs. Della Dunbar, Mrs. Ida Griffin, Mrs. Belle Pennington; second row, Katie Shramek, Mrs. Martha Daniels, Dorothy Box, Mrs. Leola Raburn; third row, Sybil Gibson, Alice DeLacy, Mrs. Ora Cooper, Mrs. Georgia Brewer and Mrs. Bessie Hickey. Many of these women workers have been with the company 28 years or longer.

Meanwhile on Capitol Hill plans proceeded for a long-range investigation of industry-wide bargaining in AT&T's empire.

THE Senate Labor Committee has specifically authorized its labor-management subcommittee to look into how AT&T's tight control over its subsidiaries all over the country affects bargaining with CWA.

The annual AT&T stockholders report, released in New York City recently, gave new impetus to the wage and pension proposals of the union. AT&T Pres. LeRoy Wilson reported "outstanding progress last year and disclosed that AT&T's total assets rose to $10,775,234,113 at the year's end from $10,000,683,026 one year earlier.

The system's net income applicable to AT&T stock rose to $232,855,465 in 1949 from $224,415,868 in 1948.

Wilson, however, interjected a sombre note into the proceedings when he pointed out that the "sacred" $9 per share dividend AT&T has paid since 1923 decreased from $9.86 a share in 1948 to $9.70 last year.

The report showed 2,028,000 telephones were added to the system in 1949, bringing the total number in service to 33,388,000.

Virginia Is 7th State To End Rent Control

By WILLIAM WEISS

THE ELECTED representatives of the people in the State of Virginia last week pulled the rug out from under thousands of low- and middle-income families by voting to abolish rent controls throughout the state.

The measure sets June 10 as the effective date on which landlords may begin increasing rentals on residential dwellings.

The Old Dominion thus becomes the seventh state to alter or eliminate federal rent controls.

Nebraska and Texas were the first to decontrol. Alabama has voted to take the lid off rental property in May, and in Wisconsin, state laws will shortly be substituted for the federal barriers.

Utah and Arizona have done away with federal controls and in both states various districts have adopted local option as a form of landlord restraint.

In New York the state may take over control of residential rents from the U. S. on May 1, according to reports from Albany.

Federal controls are due to expire June 30, 1950, with hearings scheduled to begin April 1 before the House Banking and Currency Committee on whether they should be extended.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards, key organization in the real estate lobby, is expected to oppose continued controls vigorously.

THE Virginia General Assembly not only voted to lift federal controls but also repealed the Virginia Rent Act, which gave the governor discretionary powers to retain controls in designated areas after the current federal law expires.

That Byrd-machine-selected Governor Battle would sign the bill with alacrity was almost a foregone conclusion.

Delegate J. Maynard Magruder of Arlington County made a futile, almost single-handed attempt in the House to keep the densely populated rental districts of Arlington, Alexandria and Falls Church (adjoining Washington, D. C.) under state control until July 1, 1951.

Magruder's proposal, offered as an amendment to a Senate amendment repealing the state law, was smothered by a 75-11 vote.

HOUSING PROJECT with 1000 dwelling units of the type shown in architect's drawing above will be built in the new Chicago community for low and middle income class group sponsored by CIO Packinghouse Workers. With two and three bedrooms, they will sell on down payment of less than $1000 and monthly payments of no more than $75 monthly.

PRIOR to the House vote, the State Senate voted 29 to 5 to lift controls.

At that time Sen. Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington twice tried unsuccessfully to keep Arlington County, Warren County and the City of Danville under control.

He first proposed an amendment to the State-wide repealer for "local option" decontrol as permitted by federal law. It was killed by a voice vote.

The second proposal was an amendment to exempt the same areas from decontrol until July 1, 1952. He was ruled "out of order" on this one by Senate Pres. L. Preston Collins.

The Senate bill was sponsored by Delegate John B. Boatwright of Buckingham.

"In my community, rents are being decreased voluntarily," Sen. Andrew W. Clarke of Alexandria claimed during Senate debate.

He admitted that his action in supporting decontrol "may be my swan song."

Clarke, elected to represent the citizens of Alexandria, Fairfax and Prince William counties (all densely populated rental areas), said he felt the building of large housing projects in the northern part of the state will control local rentals by "the law of supply and demand."

Clarke said he has discovered vacancies in some apartment projects and in one instance a developer had reduced rents by 5% in the past two months.

(The writer would like to have Sen. Clarke point out the location of the reduced rental project. He is now paying $93 a month for a two-room apartment in Arlington. No children, no dogs, no pianos, no noise after 10 p. m. permitted!)

Sen. Frank S. Richeson of Richmond opposed an amendment to retain controls in that city, home of thousands of renters employed at the Dupont celanese plant and other industries.

He left no doubt about his feelings regarding the innumerable U. S. Government employes who occupy rental projects in Arlington, just across the Potomac from Washington.

"As for Arlington County," the senator said, "if our senior senator (Harry F. Byrd) could possibly succeed in cutting off the one or two million useless people on the federal payroll who are feeding at the public trough, Arlington would become a ghost town."

RICHESON'S wish may become to a degree a reality, according to Arlington County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan.

"Most of Arlington County's 65,000 rental population have fixed incomes, being government employes," he said. "They are just making it now and any increase in rent will work a hardship on them." He indicated some families would be forced to move from the area if rent increases were put into effect.

U. S. Navy Commander James Davis, in charge of the Marine base at Quantico, Va., termed Quantico "a scab on the fair face of Virginia" in testimony before the Virginia Assembly.

He said he was "shocked, appalled and sickened" by the "ruthlessness of property owners" in buying broken-down house trailers for $350 and renting them to Navy and Marine personnel for $50 a month.

UPWA Plans To Construct 1000 Homes

THE CIO United Packinghouse Workers has undertaken to break the back of the low-middle income class housing shortage in Chicago.

It will build 1000 dwellings for family living which will be available for a down payment of less than $1000 and monthly payments of no more than $75, UPWA Pres. Ralph Helstein announced on Feb. 20. The cost will be about $9200, the value about $12,000 because speculative profits will be eliminated.

A large portion of the homes will be reserved for the union's members, of whom there are about 25,000 in the Chicago area. The rest will be made available to other interested groups, Helstein said.

The development will be on 105 acres of vacant land at 47th St. and Cicero Ave. It will be complete with parks, playgrounds, a school and a shopping center, and in effect will be a virtually self-contained community.

The houses will be of the row type and will be laid out in a planned community pattern. They will have two or three bedrooms, and gas heat will be included in the monthly cost. Refrigerators, stoves and electric garbage disposal units will be provided. Each home will be individually owned by the resident, who will carry his own FHA mortgage.

THE PROJECT will be named Landis Village after the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis II, Chicago newspaper columnist noted for his interest in developing a housing program. He was a grandson of the late Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of organized baseball.

Helstein said the plan involved governmental bodies and private enterprise in addition to the union, which first began to think about it early last year. Harold E. Nielsen, UPWA Chicago district director, advised the Chicago Land Clearance Commission of the union's interest last October.

With the continued cooperation of federal agencies and the city and state, the first dwellings will be ready for occupancy in the summer of 1951, it is expected.

On the same day that Helstein announced the UPWA project, the National Association of Home Builders opened its annual convention in Chicago. The first thing members heard was a demand by the president, Rodney M. Lockwood, Detroit, for a congressional investigation of a housing co-op at Front Royal, Va., built by the Textile Workers Union, and another in a Washington, D. C., suburb.

An investigation, he claimed, would show cooperative housing to be a "dangerous financial risk" and should be undertaken before Congress acts on the middle income co-op housing bill now pending in the Senate. Lockwood made no mention of the building industry's failure to provide housing in this field.

OWIU History Near Completion

The official history of the CIO Oil Workers' Union written by Harvey O'Connor, the union's former publicity director, is nearing completion, and will be ready for sale at the OWIU convention opening Aug. 14 in Long Beach, Calif.

O'Connor, who was commissioned by the union's executive council to do the job, made a 14,000-mile tour of the oil country to talk to old-timers; checked trunks full of historical documents at the OWIU headquarters, CIO national office, and the AFL in Washington (for the part of the history when the union belonged to the AFL), and did other research at the Library of Congress.

O'Connor's book will consist of a 25,000-word general history of the OWIU, plus about 50,000 words on the history of individual locals. It will run to more than 250 pages, and will probably sell for not more than $2.50.

Organizationally Speaking

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The Government and Civic Employes Organizing Committee-CIO is now set up and will operate out of the Organizational Department's office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington, D. C. Anthony Federoff is Chairman of the Committee and Milton Murray is Secretary-Treasurer. Requests are now being received for charters and there is every indication that this new trade union, dedicated to the principles of democracy, will get a major portion of the public workers on city, county, state and federal levels. The union will serve the workers and their interests, not the interests of the Cominform.

A number of local unions of the expelled United Office and Professional Workers are requesting CIO charters, and for the time being will be taken into the CIO as local industrial unions. At a later date a new international union in this field will be established.

In the field formerly chartered to the Food, Tobacco and Agricultural union, whose officers also became followers of the Cominform, the United Packinghouse Workers, United Brewery Workers and Transport Service Workers will take over. The Packinghouse Workers will take over canning and packing; Brewery Workers will absorb the cereal workers; and the Transport Service Workers are already in the tobacco processing industry.

The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Local Unions will have an opportunity to affiliate with the United Steelworkers of America, and where a problem of jurisdiction arises between the Steelworkers and the Auto Workers, the problem will be worked out by the two organizations.

American trade unionists will not accept regimentation of the Communists or fascists, and will fight constantly to maintain and improve civil rights and freedoms.

Reg. Dir. George De Nucci, Columbus, Ohio, has been assigned to Puerto Rico to counsel with and assist our Puerto Rican brothers in every way to build a strong democratic trade union in Puerto Rico.

Perry Carpenter, President, Local No. 270, Utility Workers Union of America, reports that Local 270 won a union shop election at the Avon and Ashtabula Divisions of the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., Cleveland, Ohio. The vote was: 2502 for; 336 against; 9 challenged.

Reg. Dir. Fullerton Fulton reports that in a representation election held at the electrical division of General Mills, Minneapolis, Minn., the IUE-CIO defeated UE by a vote of 507 to 223. There were 11 no union votes.

Reg. Dir. Loren Houser reports that the United Paperworkers won a representation election at the Gay Games, Inc., Muncie, Ind., by a vote of UPW 56; no union 11. The campaign was handled by UPW-CIO Rep. George McGrew, along with Jack Reed and Pres. Leland Stiff of the Delaware County IUC.

Adolph Germer, Director of Organization, CIO Woodworkers, reports that in a representation election held at the Arkansas Oak Floor Plant, Pine Bluff, Ark., the workers voted as follows: IWA-CIO 150; no union 62.

Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler reports that the Oil Workers International Union-CIO Local 128, Long Beach, Calif., won representation and union shop elections at two new plants of the Rothschild Oil Co., Long Beach, Calif.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

Anti-Fair Deal Lobbies Spend Millions In '49

WASHINGTON'S lobbyists spent a record-breaking $7,969,710 last year—most of it designed to nudge Congress along highways and byways favored by big business and professional organizations.

Lobbyists' fees and expenditures, as registered with Congress for 1949, are up nearly $2 million from 1948 and $3 million from 1947.

The survey, made by Congressional Quarterly— a non-partisan information service—showed that the "labor lobby" spent $257,301—only about 3.2% of the total.

Big business groups—not including the powerful Natl. Association of Manufacturers which has been protesting the law—registered expenditures of $3,280,278. Professional groups spent $1,672,043; most of that figure represented the propaganda and lobbying of the American Medical Association against national health insurance.

The 11 biggest lobbying organizations spent a total of $2,965,826. Only two of them—the United World Federalists and the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons—were not representing special-profit drives.

Many of the organizations registered did not set down their total expenses but listed those amounts directly connected with legislative lobbying, Congressional Quarterly declared.

The American Medical Association led the list with $1,522,683 in its fight against the Fair Deal health insurance proposals.

THE reactionary Committee for Constitutional Government—dominated by publisher Frank Gannett of New York State—was described by Congressional Quarterly as "an active foe of New Deal and Fair Deal legislation" ever since Pres. Roosevelt tried to liberalize the Supreme Court in 1937. Its lobbying expense totaled $620,632.

Third biggest spender was the National Association of Electric Companies, with $388,883. That group has lobbied hard against all types of public power projects.

An organization which has waged a bitter fight against all forms of cooperatives—the National Tax Equity Association—reported spending $74,028 on "fringe" items alone.

The Natl. Coal Association, representing mine operators, spent $99,560; and the Southern States Industrial Council, which opposed a better wage-hour law, registered as laying out $94,873.

The real estate lobby, fighting rent control and government housing programs, laid out plenty of cash on the line. The Natl. Association of Real Estate Boards spent $138,600; the Natl. Association of Home Builders spent $71,942 for lobbying; and the Producers' Council, representing groups tied in with the home building industry, paid out $96,007.

The Tool Owners Union, Inc., an anti-labor outfit represented in Washington by former Rep. Fred Hartley (of Taft-Hartley), registered expenses of $43,906, with nearly half of that going to Hartley in the form of salary and expenses.

The U. S. Chamber of Commerce reported payments of $90,045 for lobbying purposes. It was joined by the Council of State Chambers of Commerce, which spent $56,300 on lobbying matters.

CIO's lobbying report listed expenses of $42,035, which did not include salaries of legislative representatives (who register separately). The AFL spent about $74,300, and three railroad labor groups together spent about $30,000.

What Eleven Biggest Lobby Groups Spent

Here's a list of 11 biggest lobby groups and what they spent in 1949:

1. American Medical Association	$1,522,683
2. Committee for Constitutional Government, Inc.	620,632
3. Natl. Association of Electric Companies	388,883
4. United World Federalists	291,672
5. Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons	222,809
6. Association of American Railroads	194,159
7. Natl. Small Businessmen's Association	192,070
8. Natl. Milk Producers Federation	178,161
9. Natl. Association of Real Estate Boards	138,600
10. Colorado River Association	115,120
11. Natl. Association of Margarine Manufacturers	101,037
Total, 11 biggest lobby groups	$2,965,826
Total, 256 organizations reported by Congressional Quarterly	$7,969,710
Total, labor organizations	$257,301

Two Decisions Against IUE May Aid Entire Fight on Reds

TWO FAR-reaching court decisions, which may serve as precedents in cases involving other unions expelled from the CIO, were handed down last week in favor of the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers-CIO.

The rulings, which were made by courts in Cleveland and Fort Wayne, Ind., were sharp rebuffs to attempts by the United Electrical Workers (independent) to tie up the funds and organization of IUE through legal maneuverings.

In Cleveland, the court declared that it was not only the right of IUE to disaffiliate from the UE but actually a duty and obligation. The court took official notice of the fact that several UE officers and international representatives have actively promoted the Communist Party and its line.

In Fort Wayne, Special Judge Robert Y. Keegan blasted UE with a permanent injunction restraining the Communist-controlled group from interfering in the affairs of IUE Local 901. The ruling found that more than $100,000 in the local's treasury belonged to the membership rather than to UE.

BOTH COURTS held that the compact between the membership and UE was based upon UE's affiliation with the CIO. Once that relationship had been broken by UE's expulsion from CIO, the compact became meaningless, according to the two judges.

Judge Keegan asserted in part that "the essential feature of the contract between Local 901 and the UE is the existence of an industrial trade union and that continues to exist despite the expulsion of the UE from the CIO, but this assumes that the local members were contracting with reference to any industrial trade union, whereas it seems apparent that it was political, financial, and numerical power and pull of the CIO that the local union wanted rather than the limited equivalents offered by the UE."

The court also found that "The overwhelming majority of those active in the local's affairs desire and intend to disaffiliate themselves from the UE cannot be seriously doubted."

This was an obvious reference to the fact that the membership of Local 901 voted to disaffiliate from UE and remain in CIO by a margin of 2036 to 117.

The Fort Wayne decision was even stronger in its repudiation of UE's attempts to fasten a restraining order on IUE Local 707 to prevent it from holding meetings and disbursing funds. The court pointed out that for many years the UE has boasted of its affiliation with CIO and the fact that this affiliation gave it additional economic strength and prestige.

The UE's relationship with CIO was an essential one to the welfare of union members, the court said, and the basic reason for Local 707 to affiliate with UE was the understanding that UE was a member of the family of CIO and would continue in that family.

IN EFFECT, the court laid the blame for UE's expulsion from the CIO squarely at the door of the UE, adding that at least one section of the UE constitution was rendered void by the expulsion. He agreed with the local's membership that continued affiliation with UE was meaningless once UE had become an "independent" union.

The Cleveland court ruled that the local's secession from UE was legal and valid as was the removal of its funds from UE control.

Chairman James B. Carey, of the IUE-CIO Administrative Committee, hailed the double-barrelled setback for UE as a major step toward ending the flood of harassing litigation with which UE has deluged local and federal courts throughout the country.

"These two court decisions," said Carey, "verify for once and for all the legality and moral correctness of IUE's severance from the politically corrupt and Kremlin-controlled UE. In addition, they expose the desperate and absurd tactics of UE in throwing its members' money down the drain on useless legal action designed to prevent the rank and file from making its own democratic determination of its bargaining agent.

"These court decisions are softening up blows. The complete knockout will come with the NLRB elections in General Motors, Westinghouse and General Electric."

Bill Too Easy On Unions?

A SPLIT among the anti-labor attorneys over how best to curb the unions made public before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee Feb. 21.

Ludwig Teller, New York lawyer and author, appeared to oppose the Robertson "anti-labor monopoly" bill.

The bill is defective, he warned, because "the anti-trust laws should be restricted to business restraints." Referring to the Robertson proposal, he said:

"The extension of anti-trust laws to labor unions and their activities cannot be the proper basis of a sound labor policy. The problems in the two fields are radically different."

To restrict unions he would add to the Taft-Hartley law provisions that would:

1. Outlaw national bargaining, including pattern bargaining on a national scale. He even urged "further study" of how to prohibit local union affiliates "from communicating with one another in furtherance of outlawed national bargaining."

2. Deprive the Natl. Labor Relations Board of the power to certify as bargaining representative an employers' association bargaining in an area wider than that of a local labor market.

3. Make unlawful "collusive bargaining" where its purpose "or effect" is to fix or regulate prices, to allocate markets, to restrict methods of production, to interfere with technological advance.

4. All actions made illegal should be subject to criminal penalties and civil damage suits.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed in Congress.	Keep writing to Senators, Representatives to force T-H repeal.
FEPC S. 1728 HR 4453	Senate bill would bar job discrimination based on race, creed or color, and provide penalties for violation.	House Dixiegops voted substitute bill without any enforcement teeth. Senate version faces filibuster.	Ask Senators to vote for S 1728 without weakening amendments, and to fight filibuster.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S. 2246 HR 6618	Provides for long-term, low-interest U. S. loans to co-ops for building moderate-cost housing projects, etc.	House Banking Committee has given O.K. Senate Banking Comm. action due soon.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to give bill full support.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors benefits, etc., under social security. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Senate Finance Comm. now holding hearings. CIO to testify Feb. 27, asking further changes.	Ask Senators to try to strengthen HR 6000 over present provisions.
Federal Aid To Education S. 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. Has been stuck in House Labor Comm. for months.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to OK Senate bill.
Labor Extension Service Bill S. 110 HR 1380	Provides workers' education program in cooperation with schools, unions, Labor Dept.	Approved by Senate Labor Comm. House Labor Comm. is still studying bill.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to seek early passage.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C. Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

WEEKLY PUBLICATION
of the
CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00
A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., MARCH 6, 1950 82 No. 10

CAUSE FOR CELEBRATION: Leaders and rank-and-file members of the CIO International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers celebrate the eight-to-one victory of the IUE over the United Electrical Workers at Electrical Division plants of General Motors. This photo was snapped at IUE campaign headquarters in a Dayton, O., hotel. Secy. William Snoots, of the IUE Administrative Committee, is on the telephone receiving additional victory reports. (See story on Page 3.)

PLAN GOVERNMENT WORKERS ORGANIZATION: CIO Vice-Pres. Allan S. Haywood confers on plans for CIO's new Government & Civic Employes Organizing Committee, which is preparing big organizational campaign throughout the nation. At left, Anthony Federoff, chairman of the new committee; at right, Milton Murray, its secretary-treasurer. Committee takes over jurisdiction of United Public Workers, expelled from CIO is for consistently following Communist policies. (Story on Pg. 3.)

Denham Defies NLRB Curb On Power, Threatens Suit

By GERVASE N. LOVE

General Counsel Robert N. Denham of the Natl. Labor Relations Board, who'll sue a union at the drop of a greasy old work cap, announced plans last week for hauling another kind of foe into court.

The lawsuit and injunction tycoon is going to do legal battle with the board itself, he declared, to find out who, or which, can do what.

The tizzy that has been going around for some time between the board and Denham went into another round when the board gave the general counsel what amounted to a public spanking by rescinding some of the authority it said had been delegated to him in 1947. The new order curtailed his hiring and firing authority, making his personnel appointments subject to its approval, and laid down new rules for court actions on board decisions.

THE BOARD had directed Denham in 1947 that "upon direction and in behalf of the board" he should seek court enforcement of its orders and resist appeals from its orders. The revised authorization directed him to act "in full accordance with the directions of the board." The plain implication is that he hasn't been.

A couple of days after the board order, Denham announced his "refusal to submit" to its attempt to "usurp" his authority and declared he would not abide by its "attempted" revision of the rules. The board, he asserted truculently, "is trying to exercise authority it does not possess."

While the board's order on personnel affected only regional directors and officers-in-charge of sub-regional offices, Denham said it carried a presumption that the board also has the power to exert similar control over other regional office personnel, including attorneys. The Taft-Hartley Act gives the general counsel "general supervision" over regional and sub-regional employes, but does not specify that he is to appoint them.

The dispute is expected to come to a head when a regional director is named for the Memphis, Tenn., regional office. The board says it wants to approve the appointee. Denham said he will not consult the board, and "I don't know what will happen."

It will require a "test case" in court to see who's boss, Denham said.

The Brewery Worker, official organ of the CIO Brewery Workers Union, has joined the long list of those demanding that President Truman fire Denham unless he quits.

The Brewery Worker said in part:

"Denham has now become the avowed spokesman for extreme reaction. He ought to resign. He is on borrowed time. Even Taft and his colleagues now admit they made a mistake in setting up Denham's job as an independent General Counsel. The bill to amend the Taft-Hartley Law which the Republicans introduced in the last Congress would have abolished Denham's job.

"Neither Republicans nor Democrats now believe that the Board's General Counsel should have the independent powers that Denham now has under Taft-Hartley. It is now agreed on all sides that the General Counsel should be stripped of his dictatorial powers and should be subordinate to and responsible to the Board. It is merely a question of time before this is enacted into law.

"Under these circumstances most people in Denham's position would step down gracefully or at least behave themselves. But Denham, knowing that his job is slated for extinction, becomes even more reckless and irresponsible in his utterances, conducts a smear campaign against the Board members and the Board staff, and is more determined than ever to put chains and shackles on organized labor."

Sizzling Mad

Thirty-three members of the CIO Oil Workers Local 210, Hammond, Ind., feel so strongly about Robert N. Denham that they signed a letter to President Truman warning him to oust the NLRB general counsel—or else.

"Mr. President," they wrote, "if you do not take steps to remove this blot on the name of Democracy from office, we, the undersigned, employes of Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. of East Chicago, Ind., voicing the opinion of our brother workers, resolve to vote straight Republican in 1950 and 1952."

Two of the signers, incidentally, live on Truman St., Hammond, Ind.

Louisiana CIO Says Firing Denham Would Serve Nation

THE LOUISIANA State CIO Council called on President Truman during its annual convention at New Orleans Feb. 25-26 to oust Robert N. Denham as general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board.

The convention, which also condemned Dixiecrats, Dixiegops, states righters and the National Association of Manufacturers as enemies of democracy and the American way of life, adopted as its own the anti-Denham resolution approved at the recent meeting of the national CIO executive board.

"The removal of said Robert N. Denham," it added, "would prove that the Administration has at heart the best interest of the nation and set to rest the propaganda that the administration is using Taft-Hartley as a political football and has made no real effort to have it repealed."

The resolution cited Denham's anti-labor record in office, his recent speeches whipping up sentiment against unions and NLRB members who disagree with him, and the bias and prejudice he exhibited in seeking an injunction against the United Mine Workers.

A HARD-HITTING political action resolution called upon all locals to set up PAC committees and undertake registration drives, and called upon the state to change registration laws to permit enrollment at convenient places, including union halls and places of employment, upon a permanent basis.

Other resolutions covered housing, social security, minimum wages, taxes, repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, organizing, state labor legislation, education, support of the Telephone Workers in their dispute with the Bell System and of the Packinghouse Workers in their fight against Wilson & Co., labor education and the union label.

The Rev. Vincent J. O'Connell, of Notre Dame Seminary, told the convention that no union member could vote for a Dixiecrat "without violating the principles of trade unionism and the policies of CIO." Mayor deLesseps S. Morrison of New Orleans urged the delegates to be proud of their union because "it has contributed to civic betterment, to welfare projects without stint and has played an important role in maintaining a stable economy in the community."

Other speakers included Martin Wagner, president of the CIO Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers; Fred C. Pieper, national CIO representative; William J. Rogers, Wage-Hour Division regional director; the Rev. Lewis J. Twomey, Loyola University, New Orleans; the Rev. A. L. Davis, president of the New Orleans Ministerial Alliance.

Antoine Songy was re-elected chairman (president) of the council; vice chairman Fritz Flebbe and treas. Paul G. Fourcade also were re-elected, and Edward Vedros was chosen secretary.

PHOTOGRAPHER PHOTOGRAPHED: A member of the CIO Newspaper Guild at Los Angeles where she has won laurels as a news camerawoman for the Daily News, Mrs. Helen Brush has invaded a new field. A soprano who has been studying voice for years, Mrs. Brush recently gave her first recital.

Progressive Party Slaps Russia—Lightly

THE PROGRESSIVE Party, balled and chained by the Commies, wrote history at its recent national convention in Chicago.

It slapped Soviet Russia, ever so gently, right on its red little wrist. Not once, but twice. (The left wrist, naturally.)

About 1200 delegates heard the demand of former Vice Pres. Henry A. Wallace, their candidate for president in 1948, that they must snip the Communist label off the party if it hopes to gain new support among the liberals. They didn't quite succeed, though they managed to loosen a couple of threads.

After a two-and-a-half hour floor fight apparently based on the feeling that Russia could do no wrong in any way at any time, the delegates adopted a foreign affairs section for its statement of policy that read:

"The Progressive Party recognizes that while the United States and the Soviet Union have both made mistakes in foreign policy, these two great countries can rise above their respective shortcomings to work together fruitfully for international peace and cooperation.

"We are not apologists for Russia, but in so saying we want it understood that our supreme objective is one world at peace, and to that end it is essential that an understanding be reached between the United States and the Soviet Union."

THE OTHER wrist-tapping was imposed over Israel. The Communists and their tools wanted a resolution casting doubt on the new nation's democracy, which is under attack by the Soviet and by American Communists. However, the so-called right wing forced passage of a statement that "hopes of true friends of Israel that the government would form a democratic republic have been realized," and that "Israel stands as an example of true democracy."

Wallace's keynote speech was concentrated almost entirely on foreign affairs. It went somewhat further in its criticism of Russia than the convention did. O. John Rogge, New York attorney, was greeted by alternating periods of dead silence as he criticized the Soviet and enthusiastic applause as he attacked the United States. One of the periods of silence came when he said:

"We shall not bend reason backward in order to attempt to justify the conduct of the Cominform countries toward Yugoslavia."

Another came when he asserted that the "bullying, threatening, coercion or unequal treatment" of a smaller nation by a large is a threat to peace "whether done by the United States, by Great Britain or by the Soviet Union."

FORMER REP. Charles M. LaFollette, national chairman of Americans for Democratic Action, in a statement urged that "no one should be fooled by the obvious attempts being made at the convention to whitewash the organization."

"The Wallace movement is still dominated by the same Communist party liners who have had control of it since its birth," he said.

"The Communists in the party have allowed the Progressives to say they are independent, but will not allow them to act independently. This is made clear in the party platform which condemns the Marshall Plan and other American measures to strengthen freedom against Soviet imperialism. The platform contains a milk-toast criticism of Russia, but you can be sure the Communists in the party regard this as an 'allowable deviation' to trap the unwary. This is just a renewed attempt of the Communists to form a phony united front."

Former Gov. Elmer Benson, of Minnesota, was re-elected national chairman. Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, a former CIO union expelled because of its strict adherence to the Communist party line, was replaced by Fred W. Stover, president of the Iowa Farmers Union, as one of two co-chairmen.

Senate to Vote On Kerr Gas Gyp Bill

Another round in the battle between the people and the utility interests is due to come up in the Senate this week.

Scheduled for debate and vote is the Kerr bill, which would seriously limit authority of the Federal Power Commission to regulate rates on interstate shipments of natural gas. Foes of the bill—including the CIO and other labor and consumer groups—have warned it will take millions of dollars a year out of consumers' pocketbooks through higher rates to the already prosperous natural gas industry.

IUE-CIO In 8 to 1 Victory Over UE at GM

LAST NOV. 28 Philip Murray stood on the platform of the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia, and declared:

"So far as I am concerned, those boys are through. Yes, I say to you, my friends, they are through, they are through and you are going to see to it that they are through in your industry—I know you are."

Murray was referring to the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers when he spoke those words to the organizational convention of the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, which had been chartered after the CIO expelled the old UE.

Last week, Murray's prophecy was coming through—in a big way. IUE-CIO swamped UE in NLRB elections in the five General Motors electrical division plants. The margin was more than eight to one.

Commented Murray: "This election proves—if proof were needed—that the Congress of Industrial Organizations reflected the will of the people when it expelled the UE last fall because it follows Communist policies rather than the wishes of its members.

"I wish to express particular congratulations to James B. Carey, administrative chairman of the IUE-CIO; to William Snoots, secretary of the IUE-CIO; and to Robert Elsner, E. J. Kraft, James Sayer, Frank Murray and Harold Merrill, presidents of the Five General Motors Electrical locals.

"I am sure that all of the family of CIO joins with me in hailing this great victory. I am positive that this Labor Board vote will lead IUE-CIO to more victories, both in representation elections and across the bargaining table.

"I congratulate the General Motors workers on their sound and meritorious electoral decision in favor of democratic, free trade unionism."

CAREY DECLARED the victory is more "than simply the beginning of the end of Communist control over the half-million men and women in the electrical, radio and machine industry."

"Wiping UE out of the first of the three big chains by a count of better than eight to one," he explained, "means that we have won more than one-third of the battle. We know that the workers in Westinghouse and General Electric are no more Communistic than those in GM and that they will repudiate Kremlin dictation over their economic lives as thoroughly as did the GM employes."

Carey pointed out that numerous congressional committees and the Atomic Energy Commission have at various times branded UE as Communist-dominated.

"For the past 10 years," he said, "UE has never deviated from the Communist Party line or offered a word of criticism of Soviet Russia's foreign or domestic policies.

"On the contrary, with every twist and somersault of the Communist line UE has twisted and somersaulted as though it were a shadow of the Communist Party.

"Because of the Communist Party's capture of UE, workers in our industry have been deprived of militant trade union representation. As a result their wage scales and contract benefits have fallen below the level of other major industries.

"UE's leaders have been too preoccupied with supporting a score or more of Communist fronts, the Wallace Third Party and other fantasies to win pension plans and pay increases such as have been achieved by the Steelworkers, Auto Workers and IUE. After 10 years UE hasn't even won a union shop in any of the major chains."

CAREY ALSO pointed out that the IUE-CIO and the United Auto Workers-CIO consummated an agreement—the first between electrical and auto workers—which calls for joint consultation on contract demands in GM and provides that neither union will sign a new contract without the sanction of the other.

The IUE won another major victory last week at the Wagner Electric plant in St. Louis, Mo. It defeated UE and the AFL Brotherhood of Electrical Workers among production and maintenance employes, and also won over UE among clerical workers.

Last fall the same local voted two to one for the leftists in district elections.

Tally By Locals

The tally by locals in the big IUE-CIO victory in the Electrical Division of General Motors was as follows:

Local	Division	City	Vote
801	Frigidaire	Dayton, O.	IUE	10,860	UE	1,416
755	Delco	Dayton, O.	IUE	5,098	UE	762
717	Packard	Warren, O.	IUE	3,273	UE	215
509	Delco	Rochester, N. Y.	IUE	1,639	UE	135
416	Delco Remy	New Brunswick, N. C.	IUE	297	UE	0

CIO Hits 'Discredited Thinking' in Robertson Bill

THEY claim they just want to regulate "labor monopolies." • What they really have in mind is to regulate every labor union, so it will be useless to workers for purposes of effective collective bargaining.

Old-time foes of unionism are using a Senate bill (S. 2912) to sound the drums against labor's bargaining practices. The bill, sponsored by conservative Sen. Robertson (D., Va.) is now the subject of hearings before a Senate Judiciary Committee in Washington.

But last week the Senators were warned that passage of the bill—designed to make labor subject to the anti-trust laws—"would create consequences truly disastrous not only to the American labor movement but also to the American economy as a whole."

Arthur Goldberg, CIO general counsel, charged that supporters of the Robertson bill want to break up the organizations through which labor "can come near equality in bargaining power to the giant corporations."

Behind the Robertson bill, Goldberg charged, stands the "outmoded and discredited economic thinking of half a century ago. This thinking regarded the labor of human beings as a commodity and therefore subject to the laws governing restraint of trade in commodities. . . .

"WHEN WE are dealing with labor, however, we are dealing with human beings—not with corporations and aggregations of business.

"The difference between the two is profound. Any so-called economic analysis which ignores that difference leads to false results."

If the law were to adopt the "erroneous theory" that human labor is simply a commodity, Goldberg warned, "any labor union or organization" would constitute a "restraint of trade" and the law would have to condemn all unions.

WHILE S. 2912 does not go that far, Goldberg said, it does seek to illegalize what it calls "unreasonable" restraints of trade.

"The difficulty with this kind of solution of a problem by definition is that it does not legislate. This bill does not tell us what trade unions or what trade union practices are 'bad' or 'unreasonable' and what trade unions or what trade union practices are 'good' and therefore 'reasonable.'

"It sets no guide. It has no standards. It contains no definitions. The whole matter is thrown into the laps of the courts, who are then, presumably, to look at each union and at each strike to determine whether it is 'reasonable or unreasonable.'

"And if the court finds that it is unreasonable, not only can the strike be enjoined and the men presumably ordered to go back to work, but the union and its members can be fined, and can be thrown into prison for having conducted an 'unreasonable' strike.

"This is not legislation. This is an abdication of the legislative functions."

Goldberg then charged that the issue, raised by supporters of the bill, of competition against 'monopoly' in labor unions is a "false one."

"Do the denouncers of labor monopoly really want to establish competition between laborers and destroy any organization of workers? . . . I hope there is nobody on this comitte who wants to set one coal miner against another in a cut-throat struggle to bring down the price of labor."

A CAREFUL study of the industries where there has been national or regional bargaining shows that such bargaining has "no tendency whatever toward increasing monopolistic, non-competitive price policies," he said.

". . . Does nationwide collective bargaining or national unionism give too much power to labor? I think the answer to that question, as a general question, is unqualifiedly NO. There is no evidence that in any major industry the financial strength or the bargaining power of a union is larger than the financial strength or the bargaining power of the employers. . . .

"CAN YOU compare the United Steelworkers of America, with assets of approximately $9 million, with a single corporation like the United States Steel Corp., with assets of two and a half billion dollars, and say that the union has overwhelming power? Of course not.

"Does this committee really think that it is necessary to break up the Steelworkers union into fragments so that the steel corporation will not be overpowered by the union in negotiations? Of course not."

CIO Sets Up Government Employees Organizing Unit

CIO SET OUT last week to build a strong and effective union of government workers.

Following expulsion of the small United Public Workers on grounds of Communist domination, CIO Pres. Philip Murray announced the new set-up—the Government and Civic Employes Organizing Committee—CIO.

Its chairman is Anthony J. Federoff, for many years CIO regional director in Pittsburgh and a veteran of several union organizing campaigns.

And Federoff made it clear, at a press conference in Washington, just where the new organization will stand:

"This is going to be a CIO-policy union," he said.

"It will conform itself to American trade union standards.

"No foreign ideologies will be condoned. This is going to be an American trade union movement composed of government and civic employes."

Federoff will direct the new committee in close cooperation with CIO Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood. Its headquarters will be in the CIO building at 718 Jackson Pl., N. W., in Washington.

IN ANNOUNCING the new organizing committee, Haywood made public a letter from Pres. Murray which authorized, at some future date, the calling of a convention to establish a new national union.

Meanwhile the Organizing Committee is directed to enroll employes of "federal, state, county, municipal and related governmental agencies."

The GCEOC, Pres. Murray said, will "undertake to represent and defend the interests of these employes in the realm of collective bargaining and legislative matters, in such manner as to afford them the protection and improvement to which they are entitled."

Milton Murray, former head of the Newspaper Guild and more recently a member of Vice-Pres. Haywood's organizing staff, is secretary-treasurer of the new government workers committee.

He predicted that the new organization will move fast to provide a home for members of the Public Workers who wish to remain in the CIO; for groups which left the Public Workers and moved temporarily into other CIO national unions; and for the great mass of government workers who have long sought democratic CIO unionism.

"We're not going to sit around passing resolutions," Secy-Treas. Murray said. "This union is going to work, and work hard, to organize and to bring protection to government workers throughout the country.

"There's a tremendous job to be done. The United Public Workers never did that job because it was more interested in passing Communist-line resolutions. What we're interested in is organizing and in collective bargaining."

THE ORGANIZING committee, as originally set up, is composed of six CIO officials and six representatives of government workers. But as the new union grows, additional spokesmen of the government employes will be added to the committee, Haywood said. Eventually, it will become a self-governing CIO union.

Federoff and Milton Murray told reporters that at least 12,000 members will serve as a nucleus for the organization. Some of these are in the Government Workers Union in Washington; in a temporary local of the Utility Workers in New York; and in various locals of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Other groups are coming into the new CIO organizing committee from the fast-vanishing ranks of the United Public Workers.

Several locals of guards in federal penitentiaries, and city and county groups in Minnesota, Michigan, West Virginia and Wisconsin will soon be affiliated with the Organizing Committee.

The Public Workers—expelled by the CIO because of Communist domination at the mid-February Executive Board meeting—is in the "process of disintegrating," Haywood said.

The CIO vice president predicted a big swing away from the Public Workers in the Canal Zone, where several thousand eligible members are employed. Many spokesmen for this group have already contacted the CIO and asked for aid, Haywood said.

Committee Members

HERE ARE members of the new Government & Civic Employees Organizing Committee set up by the CIO:

Anthony J. Federoff, chairman.

Milton Murray, secretary-treasurer.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice president.

David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer, United Steelworkers.

Joseph Fisher, president, Utility Workers.

Bernard Levinson, Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Harry Leet, Washington, D. C.

Patrick J. Brady, New York City.

John Evans, Pittsburgh, Pa.

William J. Ryan, Trenton N. J.

John Campbell, Atlanta, Ga.

John Easton, president, West Virginia CIO.

CIO's 'Swing To Right' A Myth

Commies Lie When They Say Organization Is Embracing Reaction—Position Is Still Left of Center

By ALLAN L. SWIM

THE PURPOSE of this column is to help explode the myth that the CIO has taken a "definite swing to the right."

The myth was created in the heat of battle and confusion surrounding the CIO's campaign to clean up or get rid of its Communist-dominated unions.

The Commies, naturally, have been doing everything possible to convey the idea that the CIO is not only swinging toward conservatism but is affectionately embracing reaction.

And editorial writers who would like to see the CIO display less militancy have let their enthusiasm run away with itself in writing about the "swing to the right."

The swing has been against Communists but not toward reaction.

THE ONLY noticeable change in CIO policy during recent years has been its abandonment of its tolerance of the Commies.

This came about simply because the Reds tried to use the CIO to carry out the dictates of the Russian government—dictates aimed at the destruction of the U. S.

And that didn't represent a swing to the right—because in many respects the Commies are as reactionary as the Chicago Tribune.

Let's look at the record in an effort to see the direction in which the CIO has been traveling.

The organization was a strong supporter of President Roosevelt and his New Deal program. (The Commies were both for and against FDR, depending on the party line at the time.)

The CIO has strongly supported the Fair Deal program of President Truman, which in a number of instances is more to the "left" than the New Deal.

DURING THE past year the Steelworkers and other CIO unions made a major contribution to the battle for improved social security.

Right now the organization is throwing increasing energy into a political action campaign designed to elect a more liberal Congress in 1950.

There has been no weakening of CIO's determination to get rid of the obnoxious Taft-Hartley Act.

The campaign of the CIO for improved civil rights has been stepped up.

One of the organization's major drives has been aimed at elimination of the housing "pinch" through low-income and middle-income housing and continuation of rent control.

The battle against increasing monopoly control on the part of Big Business has been continued.

And employers who have met with CIO negotiating committees have learned that the militancy which the Commies would falsely claim for their own is far from dead.

IF THE Communists represent the "left," then the CIO has swung to the "right" in foreign affairs.

But it's a curious "right." The CIO has followed a policy designed to bring economic recovery to the peoples of the world and to make possible the establishment of real democracy in every country.

It has bucked the totalitarian conquests of the Russians, the idea that people must submit to the police state and Commie efforts to make trade unions subservient to the state.

It has supported the European Recovery Program and President Truman's plans for providing technical assistance and other aid to "backward" nations.

The CIO has fought against recognition of Spain and against the growing power of rightist dictatorships below the Rio Grande.

TO PUT IT bluntly, talk of our "swing to the right" is just so much "hogwash!" Some of the useless trimmings that once were associated with the left are now missing.

The political picket line isn't employed by the organization. And responsible CIO leaders don't stage phony riots and employ violence in an effort to demonstrate that the poor proletariat is being trampled by the capitalists.

Sure, the CIO is more mature than it used to be. It has learned that making a lot of nasty noise doesn't mean getting an important job done.

But it hasn't swung to the right—not really. Its position is still left of center, but not to the extreme left.

And that's a good place for a labor organization to be.

Write Right Now!

There are many ways of killing a cat, and the real estate lobby—and its friends in Congress—are trying all of them.

Ever since the end of the war, rent control has had to run the gauntlet of crippling amendments, appropriation cuts, decontrol measures and sometimes half-hearted administration of the law itself.

It's clear that 1950 is going to be no exception to the rule.

The present rent control law, weak as it is, is due to expire June 30. Some of the real estate lobby's friends want to make certain there'll be nothing left to renew when the present law runs out.

That's about the only explanation of the action of the Senate Appropriations Committee in recommending a cut-off of all rent control operating funds.

Last year the rent control agency was given about $10 million less than needed. Congress told the agency to come back for more when the funds ran out.

The funds ran out; the agency came back—with a request for $3,600,000 to keep it going until June 30.

The Senate Appropriations Committee offered a measly handout—just enough to pay the terminal leave of its staff.

If the Senate accepts such nonsense from its Appropriations Committee, rent control will be dead. And just as certainly, rents will spiral upward for millions of families.

The Senate—and the House—had better hear quickly from the people on this all-important issue. A 3-cent stamp today may save you a $10 or $20 rent increase tomorrow.

Write—now—and tell your Senators and Congressmen you want rent control kept on the books—with sufficient funds to enforce the law.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer
Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher
Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII March 6, 1950 No. 10

Freedom Fighter vs. Brotherhood

BROTHERHOOD Week in Knoxville, Tenn., almost went sour.

Responsible was the so-called "Fighters for Freedom," an offshoot of the Committee for Constitutional Government, the outlet for the particular brand of extreme right-wing reaction sponsored by Frank Gannett, millionaire publisher with a chain of newspapers in the North.

The souring process resulted from right-wing thunder hurled Jove-like at Dr. Leon M. Birkhead, director of Friends of Democracy, who as Brotherhood Week speaker was scheduled to address the community-wide Round Table and the Kiwanis Club, and to talk in a city high school.

The FFF opened its attack by trying to pin a Communist label on Dr. Birkhead, a Unitarian clergyman who formerly was a Baptist minister, and is the author of several religious books.

DR. BIRKHEAD is one of the most effective enemies the Communists have in the United States, it is generally agreed. Few people know more of their activities than he, and fewer still have the documentary evidence he has compiled detailing their activities.

But he is just as vigorous and effective a foe of insanity on the right as of insanity on the left, and for that reason the FFF, as befitting a child of the Committee for Constitutional Government, used all sorts of pressure to keep him from speaking. In the forefront was J. F. Brownlow, local FFF leader. His letter to the Knoxville Journal, attacking Dr. Birkhead as a Communist sympathizer, was used as the basis for a Page 1 story.

Dr. Birkhead was flayed not only as a Communist or party liner, but as an enemy of religion, preachers and theological seminaries, and by innuendo was branded an atheist.

The Knoxville News-Sentinel, a Scripps-Howard paper, called upon Fred Woltman, a Scripps-Howard writer who in 1947 won the Pulitzer Prize for "reporting and exposing" Communism, for a report on Dr. Birkhead.

Woltman wrote a story the News-Sentinel printed in which he called "ridiculous" efforts to smear Dr. Birkhead as a Communist, fellow-traveler or sympathizer, "or even suggest it." He told how the Communists hate him as well as the National Conference of Christians and Jews, the sponsor of Brotherhood Week.

But the damage had been done. His speeches before the Kiwanis Club and in the city schools were cancelled by the timorous local sponsors. The Baptist Pastors' Conference effectively demanded that all city schools be closed to him.

The Round Table Conference, bolstered by a handful of local liberals, stood firm and heard him. His address was well received.

NLRB Examiner Upholds Guild

A National Labor Relations Board trial examiner has ordered the Denver Post to stop questioning its editorial employes about their membership in the CIO Denver Newspaper Guild and to quit its interference in the local's affairs.

He also found that Publisher Palmer Hoyt demoted Oscar Liden, a staff member since 1929, because of union activities, and recommended that Liden be restored to his former job with compensation for lost pay.

The examiner found that the Post "was represented on both sides of the bargaining table" because James Ashe, a Guild member who confessed serving as a management spy, was a member of a committee that negotiated a contract, urged policies favorable to management at union meetings and succeeded in averting a strike in February, 1948.

Services Bias Hit

A move to prohibit discrimination or segregation against Negroes in uniform was made recently by Rep. Dollinger (D. N. Y.) before the House Armed Services Committee considering President Truman's request for a three-year extension of the draft law beyond its June 25 expiration date.

Dollinger proposed an amendment "to safeguard potential Negro draftees from segregation and discrimination in the armed forces, and from Jim Crow abuses in public facilities and in interstate travel."

"That's the landlord collecting rents."

He Did The Job Without Aid

THIS IS A STORY that has no startling beginning and no smashing climax—the story of a man and a union.

Its hero, although he would never regard himself as one, is a fellow who moved from the Mid-West to a Southern state a number of years ago and got a job in an industrial plant.

He didn't like the way he and his fellow workers were treated by their employer and decided to do something about it.

What followed demonstrated that a man with perserverance can overcome great odds.

THE INDUSTRIAL plant was located in a "company" town—a town whose public officials, police force, schools, etc., were completely dominated by the plant owners and managers.

It employed more than 4000 production workers, almost all of whom had come from the surrounding territory.

So, in a way, it was a "giant" which our hero—whom we shall call Joe—decided to tackle.

He was ill equipped for the battle and knew it. He was young, inexperienced and from another part of the country. And he knew almost nothing about trade unions.

But he decided that what he and his fellow workers needed was a union.

He started out to establish one.

JOE BEGAN talking unionism, and some of his friends thought he had lost his mind. They knew he wouldn't be around long—that he would surely get fired.

Time passed and Joe was still on the payroll. He was still talking unionism. He made converts of some of his friends.

Finally Joe decided it was time to hold a meeting, and he attempted to rent a local hall. It belonged to the company and the company said "no."

Joe then used his own money to rent a small office which he intended to use as headquarters for the union. Only a few people were brave enough to enter it.

JOE SAVED his money and bought a mimeograph machine and a typewriter. He knew nothing about the operation of the former and little about the latter.

Within a short time, however, he had cut a stencil and turned out his first mimeographed leaflets. These he distributed at the plant gates—without any assistance.

Still Joe didn't get fired. By this time he had become a symbol of fearlessness—of progress—to the men in the plant and the management obviously figured his discharge would make a martyr of him.

Joe kept right on plugging — month after month. A year passed. Then two years.

Joe became somewhat expert at stencil cutting and leaflet designing. He became an "expert" on trade unionism.

He was no longer regarded as a crackpot but as a real leader.

WELL, THAT'S about all there is to the story except the fact that Joe finally established and won recognition for an independent union.

He became the union's president and later directed a campaign which resulted in the group affiliating with one of the larger CIO unions.

Joe is still in the South—working as an organizer for a union which constantly battles against the problems created by "company" towns.

They still talk about Joe in his old local union—and his photograph hangs on the wall of union headquarters. A.L.S.

Off To The Wild Blue Yonder?

Law Proposed To Stop Smearing By Congressmen

A RAY OF HOPE for Americans who have been smeared and attacked by members of Congress cloaked in their official immunity is held out in a plan proposed by Richard H. Paul and Philip Mandel, New York attorneys.

In an article in the New Republic, they suggest that Congress pass a law permitting those who feel they have been defamed to sue the government—not the congressmen themselves—under the already existing libel laws.

In addition to official vindication and financial balm for victims of congressional hysteria, the authors feel that in the long run Senators and Representatives would go off half-cocked less often if their plan were to be adopted.

The doctrine of legislative immunity is basically a sound one, they hold. Originally it was promulgated to protect the legislatures from the crown in the time of King Charles I of England, to assure them safety and free speech. The comparable provision in the U. S. Constitution is directly traceable to the English legislation, they write, and "rests on the reasonable assumption that legislators are most effective when unhampered by fears of monetary loss and by the demands of defending litigations arising out of their expressions of opinion. . . . It a democracy, legislators must have the right to speak freely and without fear."

But, they concede, some members of Congress abuse this privilege, and "congressional defamation" has become magnified by modern conditions.

"It is therefore important to recognize that the necessity for the Congressman to be immune does not require that the citizen be forced to suffer without remedy," they write. "The government can pay the price."

The Paul-Mandel proposal would not require that a congressman appear in court when anything he said resulted in a libel suit, and hence he would not be distracted from his legislative duties. They "assume" that the office of any congressman thus involved would cooperate with the Department of Justice by supplying evidence in support of what he had said.

"A congressman would, of course, be embarrassed when 12 good and true men found he had stated untruths," they say. "But we must assume that a responsible congressman would prefer to take this risk. The embarrassment of being proved wrong might supply the restraint now lacking.

"The proposed act cannot be regarded as a cure-all. . . . Yet the remedy of litigation is the best that society has devised in its long history, and it should be utilized to relieve the present helplessness of persons who have been defamed by congressmen. The number of such victims is not too small for concern.

"Moreover, the proposed act would have a significance broader than the remedy it would afford the persons defamed. It could be used to expose congressional smearers; but more important, it would deter them.

"By passing the act here advocated, Congress would show its insistence, against the present drift of events, upon the fullest possible protection of the citizen, in his relationships with government, and upon the fullest possible protection of his right to think and speak independently. The enactment of such a law might encourage our wisest voices to make themselves heard upon the issues which lie like land mines in the road ahead."

Murray Honored By AVC Planners

Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO was made an honorary member of the American Veterans Committee (AVC) by the organization's national planning committee at a meeting in Washington Feb. 26.

"Philip Murray realizes clearly that the interests of veterans and of labor are substantially the same," said Michael Straight, AVC national chairman. "We will always be grateful to him for his vigorous support of AVC, but even more we wish, through this honorary membership, to show our admiration for the fight he and the CIO are making in the cause of security for all citizens, civil rights and world peace. Philip Murray is one of the great champions of democracy."

Honorary membership in the AVC is something seldom bestowed. The only others are Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, of Chicago; Dr. Ralph Bunche, former United Nations representative in Palestine, and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

The AVC planning committee also endorsed the union label campaign of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing members and urged members to demand the label on their purchases.

SEN. FRANCIS MYERS confers in his picture-lined office with a group of CIO Textile Workers from his home state, Pennsylvania. They came to Washington to attend one of the series of legislative institutes conducted by their union. The blonde he is smiling at is Nathalie Panek, on the PAC staff in Philadelphia. Some of the textile workers shown here are employed in plants of the giant American Viscose Co. at Meadville and Marcus Hook; others work in smaller textile, carpet and rug, dye and print shops throughout the state. Visiting Congressmen was an important part of the institute.

SUPPERS at the institute usually star Segal of the TWUA Education Dept., w program, leads the singing of "Mammy Union Shop." At his left is Mrs. Maggie valuable aide in running the institutes; sion, ECA, and Pres. Willard Towns Service Employes. TWUA's song-book

From South, East, Midwest, New England, They Came To Learn About Government

Oh the mill was made out of marble,
The machines were made out of gold.
Nobody ever got tired
And nobody ever got old.
(From a Textile Workers' Song)

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

IT WAS JUST an ordinary hotel dining room but nice, with snow-white table cloths and flowers. In the center of the long main table sat two senators. On both sides of them and around the other tables joining the main table at right angles were 30 or so men and a woman or two.

The senators were Herbert Lehman of New York and Brien McMahon of Connecticut. Surrounding them were textile workers, mostly from the senators' home states, members of the CIO Textile Workers Union of America.

(They say it's hard for women textile workers to get away from home, for they have household duties which tie them down.)

Scattered here and there were also a few union officials and guests, some of them scheduled to speak.

Ben Segal of the TWUA's Education Dept., who was in charge of the program, arose and gazed thoughtfully around for a moment, the light from the chandelier sparkling on his glasses. Then he grinned shyly and introduced Sen. McMahon as the first dinner speaker.

Sen. McMahon had another engagement and had to hurry off after speaking. One of the pictures on this page shows him as he warmly greeted the textile workers from Connecticut and elsewhere, while Sen. Lehman, who spoke later, looked on.

A VERY SPECIAL occasion, this, and yet only one of a whole series of such suppers at which the textile workers had as their guests, a long list of senators, representatives, officials of various government agencies, union leaders, and other authorities on important issues of the day.

The suppers were simple affairs really—no drinks, no expensive food, but plenty of talk. And a lot of singing, sometimes with Joe Glazer of the TWUA Education Dept., strumming his guitar. The song, the chorus of which is quoted above, was a favorite. It has almost endless lively verses, with new ones added on whenever somebody has a bright idea for one.

'Remember '46'

One of the faithful standbys at the Textile Workers' Legislative Institutes was Rep. Cleveland Bailey (D., W. Va.) who could be depended upon to show up for a speech not only when West Virginians with potential votes were present, but on almost any occasion.

When the final supper of the Institute was held he was there, leaning back in his chair, sucking patiently on his pipe as he awaited his turn to speak. A half dozen other speakers preceded him, but when he was announced, Rep. Bailey's vigor seemed undiminished, despite the long wait.

"Are you aware that at the end of the last war, the skids were greased to do the same job on the labor unions that was done after World War II?" asked Rep. Bailey belligerently. "In 1946 you went to sleep at the switch. Now you've got some unfinished business to do." The Congressman warned the workers that they were still short a number of votes in the House and the Senate to repeal the Taft-Hartley law.

SIX OF THESE regional institutes were held, each lasting from a Sunday evening through Wednesday evening. The first two were held the second part of January, the remainder in February. The final one ended last week.

Nearly 200 textile workers, their numbers divided about evenly between the six groups, attended the institutes. The union members who came represented locals in a number of the nation's largest rayon, cotton and woolen mills, as well as dozens of smaller plants, including dye and print shops, carpet and rug factories and various textile mills employing anywhere from 20 to several hundred or more workers.

In the first group were Textile Workers from mills in Alabama and Virginia. The second group came from North and South Carolina; the third from Connecticut, Rhode Island and New York; the fourth from Pennsylvania and New Jersey; the fifth from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts; and the sixth from Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio.

These are a lot of states, and yet a surprising number of senators and representatives from a good part of them and also some additional states, came to supper as guests of the CIO Textile Workers or spoke to them at various meetings and conferences.

Not all of them had perfect voting records from the CIO's viewpoint, but a number of them did, and all had good or excellent records on the whole in support of progressive legislation. It was a tribute to the CIO's legislative activities that these busy men gave so generously of their time to cooperate with the textile workers' institute.

Here's the list, grouped by states represented in the six textile institutes, although one or two may have been inadvertently missed, as there were necessarily some shifts and last minute changes: (All Democrats unless otherwise designated.)

1. Alabama: Senators John Sparkman and Lister Hill and Rep. John Jones; Tennessee: Sen. Estes Kefauver.
2. North Carolina: Sen. Frank Graham, Rep. Charles Deane and Rep. Harold Cooley; South Carolina: Sen. Olin D. Johnston, Sen. Burnet Maybank and Rep. Hugo Sims.
3. Pennsylvania: Sen. Francis Myers, Rep. Harry Davenport, Rep. Francis Walter; New Jersey: Rep. Charles Howell, Rep. Gordon Canfield (Republican).
4. Connecticut: Sen. Brien McMahon, Rep. Chase Going Woodhouse; New York: Sen. Herbert Lehman, Rep. F. D. Roosevelt, Jr., Rep. Emanuel Celler, Rep. Jacob K. Javits (Republican); Rhode Island: Sen. Theodore Green, Rep. John Fogarty.
5. Massachusetts: Rep. Foster Furcolo; Vermont: Sen. George Aiken (Republican).
6. West Virginia: Sen. Matthew M. Neely, Rep. Cleveland Bailey, Rep. Harley O. Staggers and Rep. M. G. Burnside.

In addition to these senators and representatives from the main textile states, a number from other states also helped in making the Textile Workers institutes a success. They included Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Minn.; Sen. Paul Douglas and Rep. Sidney Yates, Ill.; Rep. Richard Bolling, Mo.; Rep. Ray Madden, Ind.; Rep. Carl Perkins, Ky.; Helen Gahagan Douglas, Calif., and Rep. Hugh Mitchell, Wash.

But it wasn't only from the lips of congressmen and senators that the textile unionists had a chance to hear discussions of important legislative issues. Heads o various government agencies and their as sistants also took time and pains to aid the institutes by speaking at supper and othe meetings and by offering the resources o their departments.

Secy. of Labor Maurice Tobin and Asst Secy. John Gibson met with each group stood patiently many times to have the pictures taken, gave many talks and an swered questions galore. Asst. Secys. Phi Kaiser and William Batt Jr., and othe Labor Dept. officials also addressed variou groups.

SPEAKERS from other government agen cies included Federal Security Adminis trator Oscar Ewing; Wilbur Cohen, Socia Security Board; Asst. Secy. of Interior G Girard Davidson; Under Secy. of Agricultur Al Loveland; Ted Silvey, labor division, ECA and many others.

Staff members of various congressiona committees and assistants to friendly sen ators and representatives, and a number o

ELECTED AS A SELECTMAN: Clarence E. Pollard, Stonington, Conn., president of his local and its PAC chairman, was elected in October, 1949, to a two-year term as selectman. He is a weaver at the American Velvet Co.; his duties as town selectman take only part of his time. Stonington (population about 14,000) has three selectmen. These officials have charge of the town's finances.

with singing. Ben s in charge of the ttle Baby Loves a rpelman, Ben's in-
Silvey, labor diviof the Transport smash hit.

TWO SENATORS meet at Textile Workers' supper: Sen. Brien McMahon of Connecticut (speaking) and Sen. Herbert Lehman of New York (seated next to Sen. McMahon) at the speakers' table during the institute for Textile Workers from the two Senators' home states and Rhode Island. Julius Edelstein, administrative assistant to Sen. Lehman, is the other man pictured. Both Senators were vigorously applauded.

TEXTILE WORKERS from West Virginia talk with Sen. Matthew Neely (third from right) at one of the series of suppers given in connection with the institutes held in Washington recently. Rep. Harley O. Staggers, also of West Virginia, another supper guest, is shown at extreme left. Bill Hager, on Neely's right, is president of the TWUA Local at the big American Viscose plant in Nitro, W. Va. Rep. Cleveland Bailey (D., W. Va.) not shown, was also at this supper.

ELECTED TO SCHOOL BOARD: Louis
apitulik, North Grosvenordale, Conn., orks in the sloshing department of a tton mill—where the yarn is prepared efore it goes to the loom. An active PAC and union member, Louis beat the ill boss in an election to fill the unexired term of a school board member ho died. Another TWUA member, eonard Hamil, is also on the board.

atl. CIO staff members, also gave talks on ecial subjects.

Jack Barbash, staff member of the Senate bor and Public Welfare Committee, ex-lained the national budget, and William eidy, consultant for the same committee, ussed health legislation. Milton Stew-secretary to Rep. Roosevelt, conducted ssion on the Federal Aid to Education

Y BOWLES, staff member, Senate Banking Committee, described Textron's so-ied charitable trusts. (This story, of parlar interest to the New England textile rkers, made national headlines in 1948
ter TWUA Pres. Emil Rieve called attenon to the threatened closing of the Tex-on plant in Nashua, N. H., and Sen. Charles bey (R., N. H.) held extensive hearings hich showed how Textron's president, yal Little, was manipulating "educational ndations" to provide investment funds.)

A feature of all institutes was a talk on opening Sunday night by Max Kampel-
, legislative counsel to Sen. Humphrey, on "How a Bill Goes Through Congress." This was followed by a session with TWUA Legislative Rep. John Edelman on issues before Congress today.

Bill Lavelle, asst. legislative director for the CIO, and Paul Sifton, Auto Workers legislative representative, each discussed current legislative issues at one of the Sunday night sessions.

The list of CIO officials who were called upon to speak at the TWUA institutes was naturally extensive.

The textile students also had a chance to meet some of their union's leading officials, who dropped in whenever they were in town for a day or two. There was Pres. Emil Rieve, Exec. Vice Pres. George Baldanzi, Education Dir. Larry Rogin (whose department was running the legislative institutes) and Research Dir. Al Barkan, among others.

And still the rich "resources" of the institutes were not exhausted. A number of authorities on matters of current interest to workers from outside organizations also came to speak before the groups: Robert Nathan, labor economist; Dewey Anderson, Public Affairs Committee; Mrs. Leon Keyserling and Fred Robbins, Committee for the Nation's Health; Chairman Joseph Rauh and Exec. Secy. James Loeb, Americans for Democratic Action; Angus MacDonald, Farmers Union; Leland Olds, exec. secy., Water Resources Planning Commission; Ella Roller, women's division, Democratic National Committee.

IT TAKES a lot of planning, rushing helter skelter, telephoning and last-minute changes to line up the big array of speakers and discussion leaders needed for the fast-moving, intensive course given at this legislative institute.

Maybe you think the textile workers were fed up with so much talk, but they really weren't. They ate it up and asked for more whenever they had a chance during question periods. They didn't have enough time to get all the answers to the local and national problems that came up—there was so much ground to cover, so much to see and learn, so much to cram into three days. But they loved it.

Now when they go to their union meetings, take part in PAC activity, talk over issues with their friends, families, and neighbors, they hope to remember some of the things they heard and observed during the intensive, tiring and exciting days in Washington.

And they know more about why the Taft-Hartley law is still on the books. To get rid of it will take a lot of hard work started long before election time to elect more liberals to Congress. Any one of them you might have talked to agreed about that.

John Brown Worked For 32c An Hour in '32; Now, For $1.38

THE DELEGATES to the Textile Workers Legislative Institutes were so busy rushing to see their congressmen, attending committee hearings, listening to talks and discussions that it was hard to stop the flight of one long enough to ask him about his job, his union work and his town. But a few were grabbed by the coat-tail long enough to tell something about themselves.

One was F. A. Michaels, secretary of the CIO Council in Huntsville, Ala., who has been with the union since 1934. He runs a thread twister at the Lincoln Mills, which makes duck cloth. It employs about 1200 workers and is owned by a Boston concern. Michaels was born about 180 miles from Huntsville and has lived in the area all his life, working in the mills since 1918.

John R. Brown works at the American Viscose plant in Roanoke, Va., as a brakeman in the shipping yard, where the products are shipped by truck and rail. He said about 225 of the 2300 workers employed in shipping were like himself, Negroes, all good union members.

In 1932, Brown recalled, he made 32c an hour and received only straight time for overtime work. Now he makes $1.38 an hour. The pride of Brown's life is his four children, the youngest 20, the oldest 26. Two of his daughters are teachers, and a son is now studying at the Univ. of Chicago for his Master's degree.

George Raymond said he worked in the research laboratory at the American Viscose plant in Marcus Hook, Pa. He is a shop steward and president of the Chester branch of the Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

AMONG THE New Englanders were John Ross and Delia Chapulis who work at American Woolen mills in Lawrence, Mass.

Gabrielle Gagnon, also in this group, has worked for 17 years at the Textron's plant in Nashua. Only about 1700 workers are left now where 3500 used to work. Gerard Boisclair also used to work at the Textron plant, but was laid off and now works at the Nashua Textile Co.,

IN THE sixth and final institute group was Fred W. Ayers, who has one of the most distinctive backgrounds of all the textile union's delegates to the institutes.

A weaver at Louisville (Ky.) Textiles, Inc., Ayres is studying for the ministry. He is in his senior year at the Southern Baptist Seminary and hopes to get his Master's Degree in May. He already has an A. B. from Furman College.

NORTH AND SOUTH CAROLINA Textile Workers grin for the cameraman as they have their picture taken with Sen. Frank Graham (center row, fifth from left), a friend of labor long before he was elected Senator from North Carolina. J. D. Greene, Jr., (front row, fourth from left) a weaver at the J. D. Julliard Co., was elected mayor of the mill town of Brookford, N. C., last November.

Not His First Bo

Senator McCarthy's 'Red Plot' Proves Flop

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

A ROOTIN'-TOOTIN', headline-hunting campaign by fast-talking Sen. Joe McCarthy (R., Wis.) ran into trouble last week. It bumped into some facts and was nearly demolished.

McCarthy—a consistent supporter of the Taft-Hartley Act—picked up some old files, glanced through them, and came up with the assertion that there are 81 Communists in key positions in the State Department.

He made one speech on the subject at Reno, Nevada, and then moved in for the big show at the U. S. Capital in Washington. Munching sandwiches to keep him going, the Wisconsin Senator spent six hours reading through his 81 "cases." He used no names, built up the mystery angle, and made the State Department sound like a well-staffed branch of the Kremlin Foreign Office.

In the Senate, speeches are "privileged" and the orator is immune from court action for his words. But the speech at Reno was unprivileged, and McCarthy played it cautiously.

He mentioned four names, but was careful to point out that he wasn't accusing anybody of being a Communist—a device to protect himself from possible libel suits.

At Reno the Senator mentioned the names of four persons typical of the batch of 81 he said he had in his possession.

Of the four, one had never worked at the State Dept.; two had not been employed there since 1946; and the fourth had been cleared of all charges after a grand jury had investigated his case.

SO McCARTHY'S "facts" didn't look like facts at all. And State Dept. officials, noting that all employes had been thoroughly investigated, said the other cases in the McCarthy collection wouldn't stand up any better.

One of McCarthy's biggest "cases," he told the Senate, was "Case No. 9." "Case No. 9," he said, formerly worked at the State Dept., is now a "speech-writer" at the White House, and both the individual and his wife were accused of being members of "Communist-front" organizations.

Three days later a White House assistant named David Lloyd called in reporters and said he guessed McCarthy must have been talking about him.

Lloyd, it turned out, is a 38-year-old government official who has been carefully checked and approved. A veteran of the old LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee, a descendant of a long line of Philadelphia Republicans and Democrats, Lloyd was a founding father of the strongly anti-Communist Americans for Democratic Action.

Twelve years ago Lloyd said he took out a membership in a Washington cooperative bookshop in order to buy books at a discount. When it turned out the bookshop looked like a red front, he left it in a hurry.

McCarthy made much of the fact that Lloyd has a "relative who has a financial interest in the Daily Worker."

The relative, Lloyd explained to reporters, was a great-aunt—regarded as the family political eccentric—who bought stock in the paper. She died in 1941—and Lloyd said family talk was that "Stalin killed her," a reference to her shock over the Stalin-Hitler pact of 1939.

The facts didn't make Lloyd look like a Communist—and State Department security officials said the rest of McCarthy's charges are just as vague and meaningless.

WASHINGTON observers look upon the McCarthy charges as part and parcel of the 1950 political campaign.

Public indignation over will-o'-the-wisp charges of communism in high places will help reactionary Republicans cover up their own sorry-looking legislative record, and may ease public clamor for action from the 81st Congress. The Dixiecrat-Republican record of obstruction is not likely to look very attractive to millions of voters.

Slippery political maneuvers are old stuff for the Wisconsin Senator.

Just last June he was sharply criticized by the Wisconsin Supreme Court for running for the Senate in 1946 while still a state court judge.

The Wisconsin high court said McCarthy's action was "in violation of the terms of the Constitution and laws of the state of Wisconsin and . . . violated his oath as a circuit judge and as an attorney at law."

Wisconsin lawyers at that time said it was bad precedent for a judge to be presiding in cases during the midst of a hot, controversial campaign involving many of the lawyers appearing in his court.

The Wisconsin court held McCarthy subject "to censure"; said he was "guilty of an infraction of the moral code" and in "clear disregard" of sections of the state constitution.

It wasn't the first time McCarthy had been censured by the state's high court.

In 1941 that same court, considering a case in which Judge McCarthy had destroyed some notes vital to the issue, called his action "highly improper." The court said destruction of the evidence left the inference that the notes contained material and facts "contrary to the position taken by the person destroying the evidence."

Now McCarthy—twice censured by the Wisconsin Supreme Court on matters of ethics—is playing around with other people's reputations.

He may wind up being censured again—if not in the courts, by the people of Wisconsin in the 1952 elections.

DELEGATES from CIO Pennsylvania Railroad locals held a conference on administrative procedures in connection with the CIO Shipbuilding Workers' wage policy conference in Philadelphia. John Lococo, delegate from Central Pennsylvania, is shown as he discussed one of the points that came up as some of the other delegates gave him the attention that speakers at union sessions always like to get. The joint meeting took the place of the convention which was changed from annual to biennial last year. The union also includes government employes who shift to CIO's Government and Civic Employes Organizing' Committee.

BROAD PROGRAM of economic and welfare contract improvements was developed by the CIO Shipbuilding Workers at their National Wage Conference in Philadelphia. Shown during a lull are seated (left to right) Ross D. Blood, secretary-treasurer of the union, and John Green, president; standing, Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice president and director of organization, and George Craig, CIO regional director in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Shipbuilding Union Sets Up Six-Point Wage Policy

A SIX-POINT wage policy aimed at higher pay, improved welfare standards and better working conditions was adopted by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers at a wage conference in Philadelphia on Feb. 25.

The policy resolution was passed in the form of instructions to the national officers and the general executive board. It provided that:

1 All employers of members be asked to meet or improve upon the pension, insurance and welfare program negotiated recently with Bethlehem Steel.

2 Failing this, that locals be instructed to obtain the equivalent as wage increases in current and forthcoming negotiations.

3 Other benefits obtained by some but not all locals, such as the 2c wage differential, be equalized.

4 The union seek improvements in the welfare program, a substantial wage increase and a shorter work day and work week without a pay cut in negotiations covering 1950.

5 Remedial legislation be sought for railroad workers giving them better retirement and pension laws.

6 Higher wages be sought for railroad workers which will raise them to the standards of other workers, and that the inequity on their overtime pay be eliminated.

The conference was ordered by the union's 14th national convention in March, 1949, which substituted biennial conventions for annual ones and ordered wage conferences in the alternate years.

Pres. John Green in his keynote address urged that Congress take steps to inject new life into the nation's moribund shipbuilding and repair industry. An up-to-date merchant marine is vital to the economic life of the country and to the effectiveness of its military defense, he asserted.

If the industry is permitted to languish and die, he warned, it could well be the precipitating factor in a national depression.

"Fifteen men and women," he pointed out, "are employed in associated industries, which make the things that go into the ships and which operate the ships, for every person employed in shipbuilding and ship repair."

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD, CIO vice president and director of organization, spoke to the delegates on their responsibility to their members at home and to the CIO.

"Men have died in this country that unions might live and their membership prosper," he reminded them. "This gives you a noble heritage and a sacred trust. Measure up to it. Carry your union and its program for gains forward."

The conference also laid plans for an organizing program in shipyards on the Gulf Coast, West Coast and inland waterways and on selected railroads, and for completing organization of yards and railroads already under contract.

Another resolution called for an educational program to develop more self-sufficiency and self-reliance in the locals.

The conference instructed the officers to set up machinery for the collection and transmittal of funds to the family of the late Edward J. Duffy, general executive board member and President of Local 39. Duffy was killed during a strike last October when the motorboat in which he was picketing the Todd Shipyard in Brooklyn, N.Y., was struck by a tug.

The conference indorsed U.S. Sen. Francis J. Myers (D. Pa.) for re-election.

In conjunction with the conference, delegates from Pennsylvania Railroad locals met to discuss collective bargaining and administrative problems.

CIO To Congress: 'Overhaul Social Security Now'

"IT IS NO part of our philosophy to win pensions for our members only, leaving the rest of the population to look out for itself," Emil Rieve, chairman of the CIO Social Security Committee, told the Senate Finance Committee on Feb. 27.

"We want adequate pensions for all," he said, "and we are convinced that our efforts are helping to get them."

The Senate committee is conducting hearings on HR 6000, a bill passed by the House last year which considerably amended and improved the present social security laws. CIO's position is that while HR 6000 is good as far as it goes, it needs considerable improvement in order to be adequate.

Rieve, who is a CIO vice president and the head of the Textile Workers, explained the CIO's position very simply.

There's no ceiling on our future, he said, if only we conduct our national affairs with "ordinary good sense."

Any ordinary good sense demands that we establish and safeguard the financial security of our aged, our widows, our permanently disabled, Rieve declared.

Aside from the humanitarian aspects, it's good sense from the economic point of view, he continued. There are now 11 million persons in the U. S. over the age of 65. The number is steadily increasing.

If all 11 million had an adequate income, relief rolls, which are a direct drain on the public purse, would drop, and at the same time the steady market for consumers' goods would help maintain full employment.

It is also good sense because it strengthens the cause of democracy, at home and abroad. "If we fail to provide a fair measure of security for the average worker, we strengthen the strongest argument for communism," Rieve said bluntly.

Only the Federal government can manage such a plan, Rieve said. And neither "flat-rate pensions for all" nor union-negotiated plans nor private insurance is an adequate substitute.

RIEVE dismissed the flat-rate pension idea in one pungent phrase. "That's not a pension, it's a parody," he said.

What the worker needs, he said, is an adequate pension, financed by his and his employer's taxes, which will bear a realistic relationship to his earning level and allow him flexibility of employment while he is working.

Private insurance is too expensive for the average worker. Union-negotiated plans, employer-financed, are good only while the worker remains with the same employer. Only a federal plan can fill the gap, at rates the worker can afford, Rieve said.

EMIL RIEVE
States CIO's Position

"This Congress is certainly going to pass some kind of social security legislation," he continued. "Now that you have undertaken the job, it is our hope that you will do it thoroughly. We urge you to adopt a program that will be adequate for some time to come, rather than to settle for the smallest possible degree of progress."

He quoted CIO Pres. Philip Murray: "The poorer the laws, the greater emphasis we will have to put on collective bargaining supplements . . . We are not afraid that Congress will do too much, but rather we fear it will do too little."

He described the opposition of the private insurance companies to HR 6000 as deplorable. "In the first place," he said, "we do not believe these companies have an inherent right to make money from the insecurity of our people. In the second place we believe that the federal plan encourages the purchase of supplementary insurance."

Rieve outlined in detail the CIO's position on various technical aspects of the present law and of HR 6000, paying particular attention to the disability section.

(For details on CIO's attitude, see CIO News for Feb. 6 and 13.)

CIO has proposed that the "average monthly wage," on which the pension benefits are based, should be calculated by taking an average of the worker's earnings in the best quarters of five consecutive years.

The present law bases payment on a straight mathematical average of total taxable wages, which means that periods of involuntary unemployment and inability to work count against the worker. HR 6000 says that periods of total disability should not drag down the average.

CIO agrees with this most emphatically, Rieve said, and also with another provision of HR 6000, which would allow a totally and permanently disabled worker to collect his benefits before the age of 65 if he had reached a fully insured status under the law at the time he became disabled.

Total and permanent disability is a "triple disaster," Rieve said. "A worker who becomes permanently and totally disabled loses in three ways.

"First, his income is cut off, often at the very peak of family obligations. Second, he is often saddled with medical costs which consume whatever savings he may have. And third, he is likely to lose his insured status under the social security laws and thereby be deprived of pension benefits when he reaches 65."

The Senate committee also heard AFL Pres. William Green state that "many unions in the AFL are waiting to see what Congress does this year with the amendments which are now before you. They cannot be expected to wait much longer . . . Many of them are in a strong position to bargain collectively for plans to meet their own individual problems."

Senate Unit Tries To End Rent Law By Stopping Funds

THE SENATE Appropriations Committee on Feb. 25 tried to force an early end to federal rent controls by cutting off further funds for enforcement.

The move had long been expected, as the opening gun in the annual Congress spring campaign to end rent control entirely.

(Laws such as the one establishing rent control have to pass Congress twice. First the proposal is authorized, then the money to carry it out is voted. For this reason a well-intentioned law sometimes flops for lack of funds.)

The present rent control law expires June 30, but Housing Expediter Tighe Woods was given about $10 million less than he asked for last year in order to enforce it. He stretched his appropriation as far as it would go, but in February was forced to ask Congress for $3,600,000 more in order to carry on until June 30.

The request went to the Senate Appropriations Committee, which turned it down cold, and substituted $2,600,000, which it said must be spent paying terminal leave to the agency's 4135 employes and for no other purpose. Furthermore, it must be spent by June 30.

Woods' office comments that if this goes into effect it would mean that rent control would fold up completely by the middle of April. And, ironically, the $2,600,000 approved by the committee for terminal leave pay isn't even enough for that purpose.

FRIENDS of rent control have promised, when the bill hits the Senate floor, to try to strike out the language forcing Woods to fire all his employes, and to try to make the Senate give him what he originally asked.

The House already has voted the full $3,600,000 which Woods requested, and administration leaders on that side of Capitol Hill were puzzled about the Senate committee's actions—they said.

Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking Committee, before whom will come the administration bill asking authority to extend rent controls for another year, said that if the Senate appropriation bill really was aimed at ending controls, "it seems just a little premature."

He said his committee planned to hold hearings on extension soon. "It at least deserves investigation," he said.

CHAIRMAN Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, who by coincidence is also on the Appropriations Committee, said he didn't think the group had voted to kill rent controls, and insisted that question is still open. He said the committee honestly thought that Woods had enough money left to carry on till June 30, and that the terminal pay funds were needed because the agency's operations were shrinking all the time as the states took over rent control.

Maybank said he would have objected vigorously if he had thought the Appropriations Committee was usurping the Banking Committee's functions. When the subject of extension comes before the Banking Committee, he said, it will be debated at length and on its merits.

Realtors Seek End of Curbs On Rentals In Cities, States

THE FIGHT over renewal of rent control, already shaping up on Capitol Hill, is also taking place at the state and local level.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards is telling its members to "roll out rental control by local decontrol."

"When a lot of the cities and towns start to get rid of rent control through local option, you can soon get state action," NAREB says in "Headlines," its newsletter. "Since the local option law was passed, 246 areas have been decontrolled, bringing the total of areas freed to 318. This is almost half the rental areas in the country."

(Actually, most of these decontrol actions have been ordered by the Office of the Housing Expediter, a fact which NAREB conveniently overlooks.)

Decontrol, if voted by a city council, cannot go into effect until approved by the state governor, under present laws.

NAREB also lists seven states "that have no federal rent control now." Of these, two—Arizona and Utah of the wide open spaces—were decontrolled by the OHE, and two more—Texas and Nebraska, also sparsely populated, were decontrolled by action of their state legislatures. In Virginia and Alabama, the legislatures have voted decontrol, but the controls do not go off until late spring.

The seventh state listed by NAREB—Wisconsin—has its own rent control law, which it substituted for the federal statute. It's weak and unsatisfactory, but better than nothing.

Lobby Seeks $500,000 To Fight Co-op Housing

THE "middle-income" housing bill, vigorously indorsed by organized labor, neared the show-down stage last week on both sides of Capitol Hill—and the alarmed real estate lobby dipped deeply into its various slush funds to try to prevent passage.

Chief target of the real estate boys—and chief attraction to the unions—is the cooperative housing feature of the bill.

Under this section, the government would sell fully guaranteed debentures on the private investment market and, with the proceeds, make long-term, low-interest loans to genuine cooperatives and non-profit trusts for the construction of sale or rental housing for the middle-income group, which includes most union members.

It has been reliably estimated that a well-managed co-op could effect a saving of at least 25% for owners or tenants. In other words, accommodations renting for $90 a month could be duplicated, or even improved upon, for a total monthly charge to renters or purchasers of $68 or less.

Mortgage bankers, real estate speculators, and even to some extent the Federal Reserve Board, object strenuously to the proposal. The first two groups resent the proposed low interest rate, which they claim private lenders cannot meet and still make a profit, and the disappearance of many opportunities for extra profit in building. The Federal Reserve Board cautiously says that the proposal could be deflationary in the highly unstable construction industry.

Both House and Senate Banking Committees reported the bill out favorably, though the Senate group weakened it somewhat.

Reaction was immediate. The National Association of Home Builders said it was raising a $500,000 "public relations" fund to fight the middle-income bill as a menace to "free enterprise." The outfit also will try to prevent cities from accepting federal funds under the recently adopted low-cost housing program.

One delegate to the NAHB convention said he didn't believe in being "wishy-washy."

"We ought to tell the public these things will hurt us in the pocketbook," he declared.

President Truman has put himself squarely on the record in favor of the measure. He told the Middle-Income Housing Conference last week that the bill "should be passed and put into effective operation as soon as possible."

Congress is under considerable pressure to act promptly on the bill, because in addition to the cooperative housing section it contains authority to continue the famous "FHA section 609", under which the government insures mortgages for private builders of rental dwellings. The authority to do this expired March 1 and the real estate lobby badly wants it continued.

Getreu Will Head NLRB at Atlanta

John C. Getreu has been named director of the 10th region of the National Labor Relations Board, succeeding Paul Styles, recently elevated to the five-man NLRB in Washington.

A native of Columbus, O., Getreu was president of the Columbus Federation of Labor before becoming an NLRB field examiner in 1942.

Stockholders Of U. S. Steel OK Pensions

SOME 400 stockholders representing ownership of 72% of the stock of U. S. Steel held the longest, liveliest and best-attended meeting in the corporation's history in the Union Club at Hoboken, N. J., Feb. 27.

About 5½ hours after the opening prayer by Joseph McGee, a lay reader (sandwiches, pie and coffee were served at a half-hour intermission), they beat down the opposition of a vigorous minority and approved the employe pension and insurance program recommended by management.

The program includes the pension and insurance plans negotiated by the CIO Steelworkers last fall.

Not all the opposition to management plans were centered upon that section negotiated with the union. Before obtaining approval, management had to beat down one motion putting a $12,000 annual ceiling on pensions and another requiring that employes paid $20,000 or more a year be required to pay 20% of the cost of the pension plan if they want to participate. Still another would have prevented management from executing any pension plans unless the stockholders approved them first.

The meeting was nearly as turbulent as some union meetings, especially those at which the Commies try to talk something to death. Speakers were so numerous that meeting rules were amended to limit each person to five minutes and not more than three speeches on the same subject. When debate got hotter everybody forgot about it. Some speakers, according to the New York Times, "appeared to be on both sides of the pension discussion."

Debate Opens On DP Bills

THE SENATE started debate last week on displaced persons legislation—one of the "musts" in Pres. Truman's legislative program.

In an unusual situation, the Senate finds itself with two legislative proposals on the same issue, both of them forwarded by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

One, sponsored by Sen. McCarran (D. Nev.), would keep on the books most of the language of the 80th Congress's DP Act.

The other—sponsored by Sen. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and a number of Senators from both parties—would increase the number of DP's allowed to enter the U.S. to 339,000 in the next three years.

McCARRAN has waged a bitter campaign against the DPs, and prevented action on the bill during the first session of the 81st Congress.

Sen. Kilgore, noting some past Congressional debates, predicted that the Senate air "would be blue with circumlocutions, charges, allegations, justifications, vigorous defenses, violent attacks—but when all the smoke has lifted, the issue simply remains: Do we want a fair and workable displaced persons law?"

CIO Pres. Murray, in a letter to Senators, called for early passage of the Kilgore measure. He said it is "preposterous" to say the small number of displaced persons entering the U.S. under "a humanitarian program like this" can injure labor standards or affect employment conditions.

NEW NLRB MEMBERS: Paul Styles, formerly in charge of the Atlanta, Ga., regional office of the Natl. Labor Relations Board (left), is sworn in as a member of the NLRB by Supreme Court Justice Hugo Block. Styles succeeds J. Copeland Gray, who was not reappointed to the board when his two-year term expired.

Rep. Helen Douglas Proposes $2.2 Billion For Work Relief

A BILL SETTING the stage for a two-front attack on unemployment was introduced in the House Feb. 27 by Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas (D. Cal.).

First of all, the measure sets up a program for direct and prompt handling of serious unemployment wherever and whenever it arises, and on the other front, it provides for a long-range program for development of resources and public works.

Rep. Douglas maintained that if the Economic Expansion bill, which she and other members of both branches of Congress sponsored in July, 1949, had been passed, "we would not be in the position that we are today of being unable to deal decisively with present areas of serious unemployment."

Her new bill contains many features of that legislation.

THE FIRST OF three sections authorizes the Secretary of Labor to make a detailed study of employment and unemployment, and certify to the President any area or industry in which special action is needed. Steps would be taken to channel U. S. contracts or loans to areas or industries certified as serious from the viewpoint of unemployment.

In addition, a $2.2 billion emergency reserve fund for urban and rural unemployment would be set up. It could be tapped for certified areas or industries when other federal, state or local funds were insufficient, and would be spent constructively to increase employment.

The second section sets forth a long-range program of resources development and public works projects on both a national and regional basis, including the development and maintenance "at all times of a large-scale shelf of plans for rural and urban projects." A state and local advance planning fund would be set up for non-interest loans to states and cities for developing blueprints and acquiring sites. A $100 million federal advance planning fund to assist federal agencies in the same way also would be established.

In addition, the Reconstruction Finance Corp. would be authorized to loan up to $1 billion to city and state governments to help finance resources development and public works projects.

In the third section, administration of the act is vested in the President, with the Council of Economic Advisers assisting and advising him.

Rep. Douglas cited her own state of California as illustrating the need for immediate action to combat unemployment.

The percentage of unemployed there in 1948 was twice the national average and increased by more than one-third in 1949. Had the same level been attained nationally, she said, the country would have had more than 5.8 million jobless workers last year.

Guild Brings 9 Charges

AN NLRB FIELD examiner has been assigned to investigate nine charges of unfair labor practices filed by striking members of the CIO Newspaper Guild against the Arkansas Gazette, Little Rock, Ark.

The editorial employes of the paper who have been on strike since Dec. 17 and the circulation workers who joined the walkout two days later, have accused the Little Rock daily of violation of three separate parts of the Taft-Hartley Act.

All but one of the nine charges relate to the action of the paper against its circulation employes when management discovered that they had organized themselves into a unit of the ANG.

When the strike was about four weeks old, Gazette executive editor, Harry S. Ashmore, announced that he would begin filling the jobs of the striking editorial Guildsmen with "high class" scabs.

There was much speculation as to what constitutes such an animal until CIO-PAC in Washington, D. C., came up with this definition.

"A 'high class' scab," PAC said in its weekly publication, "is a scab who shines his shoes before he kicks an old lady in the teeth."

New Cal. Council Meet Set For May

THE FOUNDING constitutional convention of the new CIO California Industrial Union Council will be held May 26-28 in a city to be announced later.

The decision to call the founding convention was made at a meeting of temporary officers and executive board members with the State CIO Advisory Committee named by CIO Pres. Philip Murray to assist Richard T. Leonard, national CIO representative and administrator of the old California Industrial Union Council.

The charter of the former council was revoked by Pres. Murray after a hearing on charges that it actively opposed national CIO policy, refused to comply with industrial union council regulations, followed the Communist Party line and interfered in the affairs of international unions. A court fight is under way.

AT THE SAME time Leonard issued a call for loyal CIO locals in the state to affiliate with the new council.

"One victory has been won," he said, "but the job of building that new council as an effective CIO organization is just beginning.

"There is no time to be lost. The CIO is determined to unite a democratic trade union force in California."

Temporary officers of the new council are Joseph Van Elsen, Auto Workers, president, and John Despol, Steelworkers, secretary-treasurer.

Strong CIO backing for rank and file members of the CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union against raids in the warehouse field by the AFL Teamsters Union was pledged by Tim Flynn, CIO Northern California regional director. Local 6 in San Francisco, representing 12,000 members, and Local 26, Los Angeles, are particular objects of Teamster attack. Most of the recently-elected business agents of Local 6 have deserted to the AFL affiliate.

Six thousand members of Local 6 took up the challenge at a meeting that jammed San Francisco's City Auditorium and pledged "all union funds" to defeat the Teamsters. The members also named 14 field representatives to replace the deserting business agents and elected a committee to meet with the CIO and another to proceed with contract negotiations.

Oil Workers Map Drive For Pensions, Shorter Week

A PENSION policy aimed at obtaining the broadest protection for members was laid down by the National Policy Committee of the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union at a meeting in Denver Feb. 27.

Three major points stand out in the program, which recommends a $100 minimum for non-contributory plans and $125 for contributory plans.

The committee as a basis called upon all locals and the international to work for improved social security legislation.

Secondly, in every plan negotiated with an employer, the committee urged that the employe's vested interests be protected. This would include his right to all money contributed by himself and to all contributed by the employer after the employe has given a specified number of years of service.

Pension rights must be protected by contract clause against any loss or damage in case of a strike or lockout.

THE OWIU recently negotiated a pension plan with the Sinclair Oil Corp. under which the employe has a permanent right to his own contributions and in case of quitting or layoff, a right to 50% of what the company has contributed on his behalf if he has had 10 years of service. This increases 5% a year to reach 100% after 20 years of service. In addition, pension rights are not affected by strike or lockout.

The policy committee also recommended that the union have a high degree of participation in any plan negotiated. It took no stand for or against either contributory or non-contributory plans but left the way open to the latter if they appear better on an over-all basis.

The committee did not establish a policy regarding wages—it will meet later on this point if necessary—but did resolve to fight for the return of the 36-hour week prevalent in the industry until World War II. The assistance of the federal government, which prompted an increase to 48 hours during the war, will be sought in chopping four hours off the present 40-hour week without loss of pay.

The move was decided upon as a step in combatting growing unemployment. Due principally to the importation of foreign oil, "there just isn't enough work to go around at the rate of 40 hours a man," the policy committee said.

British Plan Seduces AMA Investigators

A committee sponsored by the American Medical Association went to England recently to investigate the British health program—in the hope of turning up something that could be used against the U. S. national health program.

It backfired.

"The majority of the British people wanted it," said its report. "It has provided necessary medical attention for a majority group which previously did not receive adequate treatment; it has maintained hospitals which otherwise probably would have closed; it has kept medical schools going, provided them with high caliber faculties, and kept these schools and hospitals free from political influence."

Confusion Over Initials

It was a union of government workers—not packinghouse workers—which was recently ousted by the CIO Executive Board on charges that it consistently followed the Communist Party line in preference to CIO policy.

In reporting this fact the CIO news caused some confusion because it used the initials UPWA in describing the ousted union.

UPWA stands for United Public Workers of America, the union which was ousted, and for United Packinghouse Workers of America.

Out in the Mid-West some people got the idea that the CIO had acted against the Packinghouse Workers. The packing union, which follows CIO policy, was not involved in the recent hearings and Board actions.

Planned Recreation Aids Auto Strikers

By MARY HEATON VORSE
For Labor Press Association

RECREATION plays a big part in the current Chrysler strike of 89,000 CIO Auto Workers. No sooner was the strike called than the recreation department swung into action.

I met Olga M. Madar, UAW recreation director, at the Mardi Gras at Amalgamated Local 157 at Detroit. She is young, with a kind of vital good looks and an unbounded enthusiasm for the role which recreation should play in a union. The bad weather had failed to keep people away from the Mardi Gras.

Downstairs were refreshments, and a gay program was being put on by Local 174, big West Side local. There were dancing and other amusements upstairs. As I went upstairs to look in on the dancing, teen agers were streaming down to their special tables for sandwiches and soft drink. In spite of strikes and bad weather, UAW was having fun.

THERE WAS no need to improvise a recreation program when the Chrysler strike came, for the union already had a flourishing program.

The recreation department was set up in 1937 "to unite the union in leisure time activities and to offset the spider-to-fly technique of management, which has long sought to catch workers with enticing recreation programs." It took some doing, however, to get money appropriated for the fine setup of today.

Only last March did the Intl. Executive Board adopt a plan which turns $50,000 a year into the recreation office. Part of this sum is returned to regions having active programs. The program must also be partly self-supporting.

THE CHAIRMEN of individual locals are the core of the program. They are volunteers. The only paid recreation workers are in the big Ford local in Dearborn and Local 12 in Toledo. The Intl. Recreation Dept. has two professional paid workers, some part-time workers, and office help.

"All we had to do when the strike came," Olga Madar said, "was to swing into action. Each local decides on its own program, but there are many groups in the international they can call on. The Union Theater puts on skits, monologues and one-act plays. It also has variety numbers.

"The choral group is also ready for shows and union meetings. The film dept. has movies and projectors as well as operators; all the local has to do is to call Brother Herb Jackson.

"You saw Local 174 perform. The union members love that act and they are in demand all the time. We have made arrangements for table tennis, checkers, chess, and games of all sorts. Of course, we have cards for those who want them. We have contacted the neighborhood theaters, with good results."

OLGA MADAR told about the various community agencies ready to help in strike recreation. This is an eye-opener to an old-timer. In the old days not only was recreation improvised, but it never occurred to either the union or the authorities that community facilities could be used for striking workers. Now the community facilities available make a varied and imposing list.

CIO Man Named Civic Leader

CIO Regional Dir. Sam Sponseller in Cleveland was named as one of the city's 20 leading citizens in an "election" held among members of the news staff of the Cleveland News. The News' list also included Ohio Gov. Frank Lausche and Mayor Thomas A. Burke.

In a longer list of 86 leading citizens selected by the news staff were the names of the regional directors of three CIO unions in Cleveland—William J. Donovan, Steelworkers; Patrick J. O'Malley, Auto Workers; and Beryl Peppercorn, Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

TWU Strike Hampers American Airlines

AMERICAN Airlines, the nation's largest domestic air carrier, last week learned the hard way that it's difficult to operate airplanes without ground personnel when 4000 CIO Transport Workers maintenance and store employes in 34 cities walked off the job.

Although the airline had been hopeful of continuing full operation at least through the first day of the strike, it became evident early in the afternoon that flights had been reduced. A curtailed schedule was later announced.

A union representative in New York said the strike has been 100% effective since the first day, when 161 of 201 scheduled flights were cancelled.

The evening before the walkout began the company sent telegrams to all ground crew workers asking them to report for work as usual the next day and claiming that the strike was "illegal" because it would violate the provisions of the "Railway Labor Act" which calls for 30 day "cooling off" period.

UNION MEMBERS showed up next morning — but not for for work. They carried picket signs and immediately formed lines at all major airports used by American Airlines planes.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration immediately began a program of close inspection to see that any attempted operations by the company were in accordance with maintenance and safety standards.

The union is seeking a 20-cent hourly wage increase, a job security clause and a new method of allocating sub-contracting maintenance work.

The contact, which expired Dec. 31, 1949, provided hourly wages ranging from 82c an hour to $2.14 for various work classifications.

C. R. Smith, American Airlines president, said the wage demands were unjustified "in view of the declining cost of living."

James Horst, director of TWU's air transport division, said the strike would last "until the company gets wise."

Available Again!

IT'S A SIMPLE, little story. The demand was greater than the supply—so the supply was increased. Here's what happened:

The CIO Executive Board met Feb. 14-16, passed a number of important resolutions and expelled four unions on charges of following the Communist Party line in preference to CIO policy.

Stories about the Board's actions were carried in the Feb. 20 edition of the CIO News. The printer was instructed to run additional copies—enough to supply the anticipated demand.

CIO groups began ordering copies because they could be used effectively in organizational work. Soon the supply was gone.

The printer was instructed to put the plates back on the press and make another run. Copies now available will be sent out on a first-come-first-served basis.

The cost is only 1½c per copy for bulk shipments. They may be obtained by filling out and mailing in the coupon below.

CIO NEWS
718 Jackson Place, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

Enclosed find check for $——— for which please send ——copies of the Feb. 20 edition of the CIO News to:

Name .....

Street Address .....

City, Zone, State .....

N.J. Governor Seizes Phones

The New Jersey Bell Telephone system was taken over by the state last week as Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll sought to forestall a strike by the CIO Communications Workers.

His move was the latest in a series of state attempts to find a peace formula in the dispute betwen CWA Div. 55 and the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company. He has seizure power under the state Public Utility Anti-Strike law enacted during the 1947 telephone strike. The dispute now goes to arbitration by a five-man panel. The union and the company will each designate one person and the Governor will name three public members.

In Washington, meantime, Western Electric Co. and CWA negotiators resumed meetings with Federal Mediator Cyrus S. Ching. Previous negotiations had been broken off when the company refused to agree to Washington meetings with Ching and the union.

Chrysler Corp. 'Playing'

THE CIO AUTO Workers last week accused the Chrysler Corp. of "playing childish propaganda instead of bargaining." The strike against Chrysler is entering its seventh week, while negotiations are continuing.

UAW was referring to Chrysler's charge that UAW has made a total of 189 demands on the company during contract discussions.

"The corporation arrives at this figure," the union said, "by counting each one of the 52 inequities among the approximate 700 wage classifications and multiplying each proposal by four—apparently because we have four contracts.

"Actually there are only 78 clauses in the contract covering production workers. There are 10 basic demands made by the union."

UAW officials have announced that the union will pay the March Blue Cross and Blue Shield premiums for all Chrysler workers who carry that type of insurance coverage.

The action came after the corporation had refused to assure Blue Cross that it would make deferred collections from the workers after the strike is settled.

The premiums, amounting to an estimated $200,000, will be paid from the strike fund and workers will not be required to repay the money.

Organizationally Speaking

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The CIO has emerged victorious in four major battles within the past week. The new International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers scored two of these victories, one sweeping the GM elections, completely eliminating the discredited UE by an overall majority of 21,167 votes to 2528 votes. The other IUE victory was at the Wagner Electrical Co. plant, St. Louis, Mo. The other two victories were scored by the United Gas Coke and Chemical Workers, one at the Celotex Corp., Marrero, La., the other at the Greeneville, Tenn., Pet Milk plant.

The election results of the IUE victory at GM are as follows: Local 801, Dayton, O., IUE 10,860; UE 1416; no union 583. Local 755, Dayton, IUE 5098; UE 762; no union 418. Local 717, Warren, O,. IUE 3272; UE 215; no union 114. Local 509, Rochester, N. Y., IUE 1639; UE 135; no union 119. Local 416, New Brunswick, N. J., IUE 297; no union 6. At the Wagner plant in St. Louis, the IUE was victorious in three major units: production workers, IUE 2417; UE 1740; IBEW (Communist accommodator) 514; no union 15. Clerical workers: IUE 177; UE 22. Salaried workers; IUE 282; UE 52; no union 30. The IUE announces also a representation election victory at the American Television and Radio Corp., St. Paul, Minn., by a vote of 29 for IUE-CIO; 8 no union and 7 challenged.

Two decisive blows were struck against Dixiecrat Dannenberg in the major victories of the United Gas, Coke, and Chemical Workers. At Marrero, La., the UGCCW-CIO was victorious over the so-called "Southern union" by the following vote: UGCCWA-CIO 1111; "Southern Union" 915; no union 4. At the Greeneville Pet Milk plant 300 workers unanimously repudiated the duelist and voted to return to the UGCCWA-CIO.

Applications for charters are coming in steadily to the Government and Civic Employes Organizing Committee-CIO. A great start is being made by this organizing committee and presents a great opportunity for workers to join in building a free trade union whose officers and representatives represent the workers and not outside forces that seek to destroy democracy and establish a dictatorship. All indications are that the new committee will start out with an initial membership of 12,000 to 15,000.

Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union of America reports that the Pan American Flight Service and Maintenance Workers voted by large plurality to continue TWU-CIO as their bargaining representatives. The Federated Air Line Workers Union, Independent, whose officers are expelled TWU "left-wingers," was decisively beaten. Pan American workers at every major base in the United States, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Far East expressed their enthusiastic support for CIO policies and leadership.

CIO Reg. Dir. Ewald Sandner reports that in a representation election at the Walker-Turner Co., Plainfield, N. J., the workers voted unanimously in favor of the IUE-CIO. William Young, president of Local 435 IUE, was in charge of the campaign. He was assisted by CIO Field Rep. Jack Rosen.

CIO Reg. Dir. Michael Livoda reports that in a representation election at the Air Cleaner Co., Denver, Colo., the workers voted 48 to 14 in favor of UAW-CIO. A great deal of credit is due to UAW Reps. M. R. Lee and J. Steele.

A. T. Stephens, Director of Organizations, United Packinghouse Workers, reports that UPWA-CIO won a representation election at the Armour Co., St. Paul, Minn., by a vote of 20 for UPWA-CIO to 11 for the AFL Operating Engineers.

FTA, UOPWA Lose in Court

Federal District Judge Simon Rifkind, in New York City, has handed down an order dismissing the injunction petitions filed against CIO by the Food and Tobacco Workers, and the United Office and Professional Workers.

The two unions, together with the United Public Workers and the Mine, Mill and Smelters Workers were expelled last month by the CIO Executive Board after testimony indicated the officers of all four unions consistently followed the Communist Party line.

Murray: For Liberty, Support ERP

WILL AMERICA continue to fight for freedom and democracy in the world?

Or will it permit "the disappearance, country by country, of the free world behind the iron curtain of totalitarianism?"

That alternative faces our country and the world, CIO Pres. Philip Murray told members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week, and continuation of the European Recovery Program is essential for the cause of human liberty.

The CIO leader's statement urged a $2,950,000,000 appropriation to carry the ERP through its third year, starting July 1.

That near-three-billion dollar sum, he pointed out, is "a sound and necessary expenditure of American funds, not only in the interests of the United States but in the interests of the whole democratic world."

Murray's statement was read to the Senators by Michael Ross, CIO's director of international affairs. The committee had already heard from Sec. of State Dean Acheson and Administrator Paul Hoffmann of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

THE Administration's bill authorizes expenditures a trifle below the President's budget measure and considerably smaller than in years past. Economic recovery in Europe, stimulated by U.S. aid, has made possible the smaller expenditure.

"During these two years the Russian Communists have used their control over some groups of European workers in efforts to obstruct and sabotage European recovery.

"We in the CIO are happy to have been able to play our part, in cooperation with the trade union movements of western Europe, in countering and defeating these efforts."

Two years of ERP, Murray's statement pointed out, have built a solid groundwork of economic recovery in each country. Now, the European nations have the chance—and the economic necessity—to get closer cooperation among themselves.

"Provided that our government continues its assistance as planned until 1952, there is every reason to hope that the European nations will progress toward closer and closer forms of cooperation. Our CIO representatives abroad report evidence of the desire for this among their associates in the European labor movement."

SOVIET AND SOVIET satellite policies have been a major stumbling block on the road to recovery for the people of Europe, Murray charged. As the cold war has developed, he added, Western Europe has had to find new markets and new methods of getting economic balance.

"The democratic nations of Western Europe have associated themselves with the United States in refusing to appease the Soviet Union," Murray said.

'International Trade A Fundamental Part Of Full Employment In United States'

Here's Pres. Murray's suggestion on how America can help itself and the rest of the world to move toward economic advancement, as read to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Feb. 28:

THE EUROPEAN nations have shown that they have the will to move toward unity and to stand on their own feet. They must receive our help to continue their efforts toward the freeing of intra-European trade, the exchangeability of currencies and the movement of manpower.

But the United States must also do its part in our own country. Our first task, if the European nations are to succeed, is to maintain full employment in the United States.

If we allow the creeping paralysis of depression to lead to the cessation of our production and the drying up of our immense market, then European efforts will be of no avail.

Secondly, the CIO calls for a healthy, growing foreign trade which stimulates sales and business for every industry, and thus provides greater employment opportunities, in mining, manufacturing, shipping and allied services.

Our official CIO policy is for economic expansion and growth which will help maintain full employment and high prosperity, of which international trade is a fundamental part.

The United States, not only for its own sake, but in order to maintain and spread the economic basis of free institutions elsewhere, must create a stable and growing economy which provides high production, high employment, and increasing productivity at home.

Abroad, it has accepted the responsibility of helping other nations to increase their production and levels of living. This task involves enabling them to become independent of American aid, while at the same time they become more interdependent on each other.

In the end, it is necessary to create an interdependent world in which the United States is a partner, if the peoples of the earth are to be well enough served by free institutions so that they will not turn to authoritarian alternatives.

THIS REQUIRES adjustments on our part to the new facts of international life.

In the long run, if Europe is to be self-supporting, we must allow her to repay us for our aid. There is no way for Europe to do this except by sending us her goods and providing us with services.

If we maintain a fully functioning economic system here, it will not be difficult for us to make the necessary adjustments to enable European nations to do this. But the preparations must begin now.

The time when we are asking Europe to become self-supporting is the time for us to start planning the necessary adjustments which could then be mutually helpful instead of being harmful.

We must see our foreign policy, both political and economic, as a whole. Just as the intensification of the cold war has its economic results in European Recovery, so the progress of the Point Four program can produce its results in Europe. The building up of the under-developed areas can help to provide those alternative markets for West Europe, and lessen the impact of increased imports into the United States.

IT IS NOT the particular or sectional interests which are at stake. The alternatives are the preservation of freedom and democracy in the world or the disappearance country by country of the free world behind the iron curtain of totalitarianism.

It is for these reasons that we urge Congress to appropriate the $2,950,000,000 requested to carry out the purposes of the European Recovery Program.

We believe that this is a sound and necessary expenditure of American funds, not only in the interests of the United States, but in the interests of the whole democratic world.

Murray To Talk On Phila. Forum

CIO Pres. Murray will be a principal speaker at the Philadelphia Bulletin Forum on March 21.

Murray will take part in a discussion "Where is the Welfare State Leading us?" Other speakers in the round-table discussion will be Sen. Francis Myers, liberal Pennsylvania Democrat; Gov. James Duff (R.) of Pennsylvania; and Gwilym Price, head of Westinghouse Electric.

Murray will read a brief prepared talk, and then, with the other participants, engage in an open discussion for the remainder of the hour program.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed in Congress.	Keep writing to Senators, Representatives to force T-H repeal.
FEPC S. 1728 HR 4453	Senate bill would bar job discrimination based on race, creed or color, and provide penalties for violation.	House Dixiegops voted substitute bill without any enforcement teeth. Senate version faces filibuster.	Ask Senators to vote for S 1728 without weakening amendments, and to fight filibuster.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S. 2246 HR 6618	Provides for long-term, low-interest U. S. loans to co-ops for building moderate-cost housing projects, etc.	OK'd by House and Senate Banking Committees, due for floor action soon.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to give bill full support.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors benefits, etc., under social security. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Senate Finance Comm. now holding hearings. CIO has asked further improvements.	Ask Senators to try to strengthen HR 6000 over present provisions.
Federal Aid To Education S. 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. Has been stuck in House Labor Comm. for months.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to OK Senate bill.
ECA extension HR 7378	Renews Marshall Plan for another year; sets $2,950,000,000 ceiling on funds.	Senate Foreign Relations Comm. and House Foreign Affairs now considering. CIO has announced support.	Ask members of the two committees to approve it as drafted.
Kerr Bill S. 1498	Weakens Federal Power Commission authority to regulate interstate shipments of natural gas.	Passed House last session; on Senate calendar awaiting action.	Write your Senator, ask him to vote NO.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

Europe's $ Deficit Cut Almost In Two

THE "DOLLAR deficit" of Free Europe has been slashed by nearly half in slightly more than two years, thanks to the Marshall Plan, Pres. Harry Martin of the CIO Newspaper Guild reported in a speech broadcast by the CIO Auto Workers Station WFDR, Cleveland.

Martin is serving as chief of the Labor Information Office of the Economic Cooperation Administration and labor adviser to Ambassador-at-large Averell Harriman in Paris. His talk over the UAW station was in the nature of a report on Marshall Plan progress at the half-way mark. The plan expires in 1952.

After detailing increases in industrial and agricultural production in the Marshall Plan countries since 1947, Martin told how their combined trade deficit with the rest of the world, the difference between their exports and what they had to import, has been cut from $7½ billion in 1947 to a little more than $4 billion as of Feb., 1949.

"This is a phenomenal achievement," he declared. "It is positive proof of progress in the field of trade. It is a fact that every American should remember whenever he hears some Communist or some ultra-reactionary claim that the Marshall Plan has failed in its attack upon the problem of the dollar gap, as this deficit is often called.

"INSTEAD OF screaming negatively that the whole plan has failed because the European trade balance is still $4 billion in the red after two years of aid, these unthinking critics should acknowledge affirmatively that the recovery program has eliminated nearly $3½ billion from the deficit that existed at the beginning of the plan in 1947.

"And this reminds me of another fact that we Americans should always remember in connection with Communist attacks upon the ERP—or ECA, as it is officially called. This fact is that the Marshall Plan was never intended to solve ALL of Europe's problems.

"No sane person has ever thought that every single one of the European economic difficulties could or would be wiped out by 1952 under ANY kind of a plan.

"The goal of the ERP has been, rather, that all the MAJOR economic ailments shall be relieved to such an extent that after 1952 the patient can take care of himself without further emergency treatment from Uncle Sam. It is hoped, intended and believed—it has been hoped, intended and believed from the start—that the end of the program in 1952 will find such improvement in all categories that Europe can handle the rest of the job alone.

"THAT TRADE deficit, for instance — that 'dollar gap' — should continue to close in the coming two years, though perhaps somewhat more slowly than in the first two. By 1952 it will still exist, to be sure, but it will be whittled down to a size that these friendly Europeans can manage for themselves. It will be what is known in the high-flown world of finance as 'a manageable deficit,' which is exactly what we have in the United States."

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

$1.00 A YEAR

5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., MARCH 13, 1950 No. 11

STANHOPE, N.J.

You decontrolled this conty on Dec. 8, 49, and on Dec.15 th, 49 we had notices of rent increases ranging from 20% to 33 1/3%, we were given the choice of signing leases for this increase or vacate the apartment, in my case I must vacate by Feb. 1,1950. Our landlord, [redacted] c., was granted a substantial increase in June, 1948 of 20.8% which was to take care of any hardship they may have suffered. We do our own repairs and are supposed to get heat, two (2) weeks ago we had to appeal to the board of health because we didn't have heat or hot water, we also pay for janitor service we don't get. This has been going on for a long time.

RANSHAW, PA.

[illegible] notified that starting Feb 8.1950 my rent will be $75.00 instead of $17.00 which I have been paying. Now that rent control has been removed and that arrangement have been taken that if I dont pay the $75.00 I will be evicted

BEVERLEY HILLS, CALIF.

Dear Sir

What am I to do. My rent has been raised from $60.00 to $175.00 I cant pay this on my Husbands $60.00 a week salary and I cant find a place to move as rents are double every place I go. I am ill from worry. My land lord is very wealth Real Estate women [illegible]

OKLA. CITY, OKLA.

Please put the O.P.A. on again in Okla City. Our land lord has raised our rent from $45.00 to $65.00 and we cant pay it, We have [illegible]

HERMLEIGH, TEXAS

[illegible] say from a country hick that doesn't know what she's talking about; but I do know what I'm talking about and that is rent control, it is as bad now, if not worse, than when the war first started.

We are residents of Glens Falls, New York, Warren Co and on Jan.ist. we were decontroled and we got a notice from our landlord that we were to pay a 35% increase beginning Feb.1st. That means that we have been increased by 50 % in the last two years as we gave him a 15% increase last year. We are working people who have a difficult time paying a present rental. We have lived in a place without any improvements being made for over six years. What can we do? We'd like to add our protest to the many that are being made in this city.

We'd like to ask you to fight for the recontrol of rents in this city.

SHAMOKIN, PA.

[illegible] around Dec 15th. On Friday nite Dec. 29 1949 my landlord notified me that my rent was increased from $29.98 to $40.00 He could not even wait till the first!

JONESBORO, ARK.

We have been paying $13.50 per month, and our rent has been raised to $25.00 per month, effective Jan 1. 1950

These are very cheap 3 room houses with no front or back porches. We have no water on the inside just a hydrant on the outside No bath, and an outside flush toilet, but it doesn't flush strong enough to carry toilet tissue

SHAMOKIN, PA.

Dear Sir

My rent has been raised effective Feb. 1. 1950 from $20.10 to $35.00 which is a little more than a 44% increase.

I am a widow with 3 children and on "Mother's Assistance" and cannot afford such a increase.

I ask that you consider putting the Shamokin area back under rent control.

(Story on Page 3)

UMW Defense Pact, Loan Rejected

THE UNITED Steelworkers last week announced it will always offer help "for every necessary and worthy defense of organized labor."

Philip Murray, head of the union and of the CIO, also said "the same is true of the CIO and of all of its affiliated unions."

The views were expressed by Murray—acting in his capacity as president of the steel union—in a letter to Pres. John Lewis of the United Mine Workers (unaffiliated).

At the same time Murray said that a proposal by Lewis for establishment of a "mutual aid pact for common defense" had been considered by the USA-CIO executive board.

"It is the unanimous view of our Board, in which I join, that no useful purpose would be served by concluding any formal arrangement for such a pact," Murray said in his letter.

The proposal had come from Lewis in the course of a letter in which he returned, with thanks, an uncashed check for $500,000 given to the miners by the steel union during the recent coal mine strike. Lewis noted that it was an "appreciated gift" but added that "conditions did not permit the usage of this money."

In the same letter, Lewis suggested negotiations between the two unions—with others also perhaps joining in—for creation of the mutual aid plan.

Murray, in turning aside the proposal, declared:

"Please be assured that the United Steelworkers of America and its members stand ready at all times in the future, as indeed they have in the past, to assist the mine workers in their justifiable endeavors for economic betterment against the concentrated power of the coal industry . . .

"The United Steelworkers of America, in conjunction with the CIO, will always make its resources available, as it did in your recent struggle, for every necessary and worthy defense of organized labor.

"The same is true of the CIO and of all of its affiliated unions."

EARLIER in the week Lewis had offered a million-dollar "cash loan" from the miners to the CIO Auto Workers to help the strike of 90,000 members at Chrysler Corp.

UAW Pres. Walter Reuther, in his reply, noted that because of "generous contributions of UAW-CIO members in plants other than Chrysler and of organizations outside the UAW, we have not found it necessary to borrow money to support the strike and we do not anticipate that we shall."

"Accordingly, while we cannot accept your offer of a loan, we appreciate your interest and the expression of solidarity of your organization," Reuther continued.

"As has been our policy in the past, the international union is making substantial contributions to replenish the strike funds of local unions who in turn provide direct relief to strikers and their families within the limits of the funds available.

"WE SHALL be happy, of course, to accept on behalf of the Chrysler strikers and our union any outright contribution you or your organization may wish to make. Any such outright contribution will be immediately distributed to Chrysler local unions for direct relief to Chrysler strikers and their families."

A mine workers' union spokesman later "explained" to newsmen that the offer had been made in the form of a loan because of a constitutional ban on contributions—an explanation which failed to square with gifts made in the past.

It also left unclear how the miners' union would have financed its support of the defense fund which Lewis had proposed.

EIGHTY DELEGATES attended the first Pennsylvania Conference in Harrisburg Feb. 24-26, sponsored jointly by the Pennsylvania CIO Council and the CIO Department of Education and Research. Here panel members elected by groups of eight at a last-day luncheon meet for a final session to report on what they were going to do back home. Shown, left to right, are Joseph Kelley, CIO-IUE; James Flaherty, Steel; Theodore Wewer, Berks County Industrial Union Council; George T. Guernsey, CIO Associate director of education; Charles Ferguson, Delaware County IUC, and Richard K. White, Johnstown IUC. Other panel members not shown were James Norman, Peter Tornielli and George Kutska, all of the Steelworkers. The meeting was one of a series planned by the CIO.

Steel Closed Furnaces Late In Coal Strike

DIRE predictions as to the effect of the recent coal strike on the nation's economy failed to show on at least one major front. The steel industry maintained its high operating rate until a week before the settlement was announced.

In previous periods of coal shutdowns, the steel industry started curtailments almost immediately. Operations were usually reduced about 5% within two weeks, 10% to 15% the following week, 20% or more the third week and progressively more as the strike continued.

This time, however, the steel industry, pressed by a tremendous accumulation of orders, went through several weeks of the strike with its operations above 90% of capacity. The first important cutback was not made until the week before the strike ended.

The unusually large accumulation of coal at steel mills—a 60 to 80-day supply in some cases—permitted them to sustain production at a high rate for almost the whole duration of the strike. Toward the end supplies were below the usual "danger" line, but the industry continued to maintain high production.

ACW Donates $25,000 To Hillman Tool Fund

A contribution of $25,000 to the Sidney Hillman Tool Fund in Israel was announced last week by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The fund was set up to help rehabilitate refugees and turn them into skilled artisans.

Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky of the union said the fund "has kindled new hope for many refugees and displaced persons robbed of their skills by years of privation."

Alien Seamen Are Flown Here To Take Jobs Of NMU Members

A BALTIMORE, Md., incident has led 1450 members of the CIO Maritime Union, "beached" for lack of jobs in that city, to seek a congressional investigation of the transfer of American ships to foreign registries.

The NMU seamen staged a mass meeting to protest the manning of a new Olympic Oil Lines supertanker, "Olympic Flame," by 39 German sailors flown to the U. S. from Germany.

The 28,000-ton tanker was built by Bethlehem Steel's shipyards in Baltimore for Olympic, which operates several vessels under foreign flags.

NMU officers say the maneuver is a technique started prior to World War II whereby ship owners can operate at much lower cost under foreign registry because they are then not required to pay the wages prevailing and observe the working conditions won by the union American ships.

ONE MEMBER of the German crew, an able bodied seaman, indicated his shipping papers showed he would be paid $53.57 a month. The standard wage for that rating aboard a ship of U. S. registry is $226 a month.

John J. Smith, NMU Baltimore agent, said the Germans had been hired in their own union hiring halls.

"They were just trying to make a living like everyone else," he added. "They were hooked into this thing by the people in the steamship companies."

Olympic Oil Lines Pres. A. S. Onassis expressed surprise when informed of the Baltimore incident. He said four other new tankers built at the Bethlehem-Sparrows Point shipyard for his company left there manned by Greek seamen without encountering difficulty. He said the Germans were employed because not enough Greek seamen with "high pressure experience" were available.

AFTER 25 YEARS of service in Congress, Rep. Mary T. Norton (D. N. J.) announced Mar. 7 that she will resign at the close of this session because of ill health. Chairman of the House Labor committee for a decade, she refused even to serve as a member when former Rep. Hartley (R. N. J.), co-author of the Taft-Hartley Act, became its head in 1947.

OLYMPIC OIL Lines is a Panamanian corporation but the tankers were built for operation under the Honduran flag on charter to major oil companies. The Olympic Flame is to be chartered to the Texas Company.

The Baltimore event took place a few days after NMU Legislative Sec. Hoyt Haddock had appeared before a Senate Commerce Maritime subcommittee and urged Congress to require by law that all Government-financed aid to foreign countries be transported in U. S. flag vessels.

At the time Haddock said, "it is the government's duty to use only U. S. vessels in transporting government-financed cargoes."

THE UNION proposal however, would permit a maximum of 50% of the cargoes to be carried in foreign ships at the discretion of the Maritime Commission, but only after public hearings and under certain conditions.

Haddock declared that despite claims by Economic Cooperation Administration officials that requirements are being met, the present ECA law "lends itself too well to broad interpretation and loose administration."

The Baltimore incident is only one in a spreading wave of protest against the U. S. operators' practice of transferring registration of their vessels to foreign countries. NMU Pres. Joseph Curran has protested personally to President Truman. Members of unions in the industry have picketed Maritime Commission's offices. Strong protests have been made by other union spokesmen, in addition to Haddock, before congressional committees.

Marine Unions Meet to Back Hiring Halls

THE LEADERS of seven maritime unions representing the men who keep the American flag flying on the seven seas will meet in Washington Mar. 20 to carry their fight for legislation of hiring halls to Congress.

The meeting was called by Joseph Curran, president of the CIO Maritime Union, as a result of the recent U. S. Supreme Court decision which left effective a National Labor Relations Board ruling that the hiring hall is the equivalent of a closed shop and a violation of the Taft-Hartley Act.

It is probable that a sub-committee of the Senate Labor committee will be holding hearings during their meetings on the Magnuson-Lesinski Bill, which would legalize the hiring hall.

Union mariners say that if the hiring hall ban stands, it will turn the hiring standards of the industry back to the days of shanghaiing, crimp joints and other degrading practices wiped out by the spread of unionism in the industry. Curran claims that the NMU hiring hall is legal because it amounts to a preferential shop rather than a closed shop.

Unions to be represented at the conference, in addition to the NMU, are the American Radio Association and Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, both CIO; Seafarers International Union, Sailors Union of the Pacific and Masters Mates and Pilots, all AFL, and the unaffiliated Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders and Wipers Association.

Rent Control And Why We Need It

WHO NEEDS rent control? Nobody, according to the real estate lobby.

The landlords say rents won't go up much anyway, if controls are lifted, and on the other hand, lifting controls will bring new rental accommodations into the market in vast numbers and thus restore "competition" and bring down prices.

That's what they say. But what really happens has been demonstrated over and over again. It is implied in cold statistics like these: In San Francisco, the average rental charged for units still under control in Jan., 1950, was $44.42 a month, compared to an average of $82.50 for rental units in new houses not under control.

On a nation-wide basis the picture is even more exaggerated. For the 12 million units still under control, the median rental is between $32 and $33 a month. That means that more rent-controlled units are at this level than at any other. The nation-wide median rental for newly constructed rental properties is between $80 and $100 a month. There are only four areas in the entire country where anything at all is offered for less than $50.

It comes out even more coldly in studies of what has happened in places where controls have actually gone off. The nation-wide average increase for the 747 areas decontrolled since April 1 was 19%, according to the Office of the Housing Expediter, which administers the law. And the lower the original rental, the higher the percentage increase. For the lowest groups of all, the increases are around 50%, OHE says.

(The Senate Banking Committee in its 1949 rent control report put the figures a good deal higher. It said the average monthly rental for 41,205 newly built units in 1000 cities and towns was $109.38 a month, that more than 55% of all new apartments rented for at least $80, and that the average rental for 62,000 newly decontrolled rental units had jumped 60%.)

AND ALL these cold, inhuman statistical studies add something to this effect: "Of course, these are just averages. Instances have been reported of increases of 100% or more."

Faced with figures like these, the real estate lobbyists retreat to dollars. A 19% increase on a rental of $40 a month is "only" $7.70 a month, they say. The trouble with that is that the $40 rental is the one that is apt to get the 50% increase, not the 19%.

Finally, the lobbyists will tell you that rentals have already begun to come down in cities and towns where controls have been lifted. True. In Miami, a typical small apartment or house which brought $50 under controls is now renting for about $65, but those which had been leased at $200 are now down to $150.

ABOUT 1% of the population can even dream of renting a house for $150.

Then the real estate lobby will tell you that rent controls are "Un-American"—that any limitation on profits is Un-American.

By implication, the people that want rent controls are Un-American—they are trash, with a pinkish tinge.

Nobody knows what profit the average landlord makes now. Nobody knows who the average landlord is. In 1946, when such figures were available, the OPA guessed, carefully, that the net operating income from rental of large structures had increased 28% over 1939, and that the income from smaller buildings had gone up 43%. Since then, the rent control law has been extended three times, each time with more loopholes for the landlord.

But if nobody knows what the average landlord's net income is from rents, there is plenty of information about the average citizen.

The Bureau of the Census estimates that there were 38.5 million families and about 8 million single individuals in the U. S. in 1948. Of the families:

25.5 million were living on $4000 a year or less. This is about five out of every seven families.

17.5 million were living on $3000 a year or less.

9.6 million were living on $2000 a year or less.

4 million were living on $1000 a year or less.

ALSO IN 1948, one family out of every three in the U. S. spent more than it earned. The trend is continuing.

The Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report made a detailed study of the plight of the nearly 10 million families who were living on $2000 a year or less, including the 6.3 million who were living in cities or towns. They found that 2.3 million owned their own homes and the rest rented.

Only 360,000 paid rents of $40 a month or higher. The rest paid less. And the millions of renters whose total income was under $1000 had to spend half their total income for rent, at that.

The committee commented soberly:

"In the main, housing expenses account for a disproportionate share of the expenses of urban families with incomes of under $2000. In addition to being relatively too costly, a large share of the units are wholly inadequate in terms of physical condition, plumbing facilities, overcrowding and general environment."

In other words, they have to pay too much for terrible shelter.

The same is true for the families who make up to $4000 a year, though the housing is not quite so bad, the share of income devoted to rent is not quite so high.

Most of the lower-income families consist of more than two persons. A million and a half of them are living on social security payments averaging $25 a month per person, with no other source of income.

Another large group consists of widows and the 3.5 million totally disabled workers.

THE BIGGEST group of all, however, are working. The unions have pushed the living scale up so that the bulk of membership is hovering around the $3000 class—but one production worker in five makes $2000 a year or less and on this must support his family, bring up his children.

People who make "ideal budgets" for the American family state that they should have to pay no more than 20% of their income for shelter. All the above figures go to show that the top rental or mortgage payment that most families can afford is $66 a month, and that nearly one family in two should only pay $30.

What is available to rent or buy today for that little in monthly outgo?

Very little more than there was a year ago. The "vacancy rate" in rentals at that figure is just about zero. The new public low-cost housing program, providing for 810,000 new homes at an average rental of about $30 a month, is barely started; loans have been approved for 255,655 units but ground has been broken for only a handful.

Congress has not yet approved the "middle-income" housing bill, which will help out those who can afford to pay around $65 a month for shelter, and if it is approved, construction won't start in any amount until a year or so has passed.

All the landlords' pious statements to the contrary, the record so far proves that rents will soar if controls are lifted, and that properties renting at from $20 to $60 a month are the ones that will take the biggest increase.

The CIO believes a fairly administered federal rent control law is the only answer in the present situation. To press for renewal of rent control in a situation like this is about as un-American as apple pie.

'Impartial'

Here's how one branch of the real estate lobby conducts a "poll" of Congressional opinion about rent control:

The Property Owners' Association sent out postcards headed "Rent control is the most Communistic, radical, anti-American legislation ever foisted on the American people—barring none.

"Millions of good American income property owners want to know how you stand. Rent control is unnecessary except to perpetuate itself. Please check card and mail at once. Thanks."

The card then gave the legislator two choices of reply:

"I am for rent control and police state for everyone," or

"I am for true American rights and principles and against rent control."

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating DixieGOPs

'Third Of A Nation' Writes OHE In Panic

By D. ROCKWELL CLARK

"THANK GOD I don't have to answer for such stuff as robbing the needy," says a laboriously written letter to the Office of Housing Expediter from a small town in Tennessee.

The woman signed it "A poor family," and here is her story in her own words.

"We have a family of five children and my husband only makes $45 and our rent is already $20 a month and looking for a raise because we repaired the inside of our house here before it was fit to live in and now he says he's going to put the toilet in and raise again.

"He raised it two months ago from $13 to $20 so we don't know what's going to become of us . . . This house hasn't been painted in 25 years. Please if you get this I seen your name in this piece about rent so am trying to reach you. I don't dare sign my name for the one who owns this house is quite a big man here and if some way he was to get a hold of this we'd go out on our ear.

"We are at journey's end in money matters. These people own property and have been collecting rent double and three times the amount off their renters since about four years, writing receipts for 12 dollars and getting 25, and 9 dollars and getting 20 dollars.

"Thank God I don't have to answer for such stuff as robbing the needy. I'll hush—I don't know how or whether you'll get this or not but I sure do hope so —I'm praying to God you will.

A poor family."

THERE IS nothing OHE can do about it, because the town in question was decontrolled by local option and the governor approved.

"I am a widow" . . . "I have two children" . . . "We have been living on beans and eggs, no meat, and now the rent is going up" . . . "My husband has been told he has TB" . . . "I am sick from worry" . . . "We just can't afford it" . . . "We told the landlady we couldn't pay that much and she said 'You know what you can do'" . . . so the letters go, piling up a record of human misery.

The letters come in from the "upper middle" class, too. "What am I to do? My rent has been raised from $60 to $125 and we can't afford it on my husband's $60 a week. There is nothing around here to rent . . ."

Even the realtors feel it. "I am a realtor and know what I'm talking about. I'm in the business. Look up my record and you will see. You decontrolled this town because the local advisory board said to do it. I tell you I don't know where middle class people are supposed to live."

MINORITY members of local advisory boards write in—the ones who voted against the decontrol recommendation and were outnumbered. They tell how some of the hearings were conducted, with no tenant representatives present because no adequate publicity was given in advance. They analyze the "vacancy" figures presented by the landlords, showing that in some cases the high percentage of vacancies was arrived at by throwing in everything from uncompleted buildings to condemned shacks.

MOST OF the letters say, as this one did, "Please do not use my name."

These are isolated instances, say the real estate lobbyists.

Maybe. But OHE has some statistics on the overall picture. Overcharges by landlords since July, 1948: 127,514 charges found justified, $7,483,086 in refunds obtained. Evictions: 58,918 unjustified evictions halted. Cases where landlords stopped supplying essential services, such as heat: 134,698 such instances remedied. Overcharges in cases where properties were put on the market for the first time: 95,258 such rents found excessive, and reduced.

Rent Control Fight Starts In Congress

THE FIGHT over renewal of rent control has begun in Congress, and the landlords' lobby has come dangerously close to winning the first round.

The Senate on Mar. 9, by a vote of 44 to 28, cut in half the funds needed to enforce the federal rent law till June 30, when it expires, and voted $2,600,000 for terminal leave of some 2000 employes who will have to be fired starting about April 15.

The Office of the Housing Expediter had run out of money for enforcing the law and asked Congress for more. The Senate Appropriations committee refused to approve any more funds, granting only the terminal leave pay. If this had succeeded, all effective control would have stopped by April 15, OHE says. The compromise proposal forces OHE to cut its present staff of about 4000 in half.

Since the House approved the request in full, and attached no "rider" insisting on terminal leave pay, there is some hope that the House-Senate conferees will come up with something more satisfactory than the Senate version.

The Senate Banking Committee will start hearings April 24, on extending rent controls.

"Please hurry with the rent money, Mrs. Johnson, it's cold as an iceberg in here!"

'Loyalty' Legislation Extremely Dangerous

Could Be Used To Abridge Civil Rights, Needlessly Damage Individual Reputations And Harm Anti-Communist Groups

By ALLAN L. SWIM

SOME Congressmen and Senators keep playing around up on Capitol Hill with the ridiculous idea that they can enact "loyalty" legislation which will make the nation safe from Communism.

The President, who certainly is as aware as anybody of the Russian threat, hasn't asked for such legislation.

Neither has the Dept. of Justice, which has the task of dealing with subversives.

The CIO, which has been kicking the Commies where it hurts most, certainly doesn't favor any of the "loyalty" bills which have been proposed.

And neither does any of the other anti-Communist liberal organizations which believe in civil liberties.

SOME OF THE advocates of "loyalty" measures hint—or sometimes say openly—that new legislation is needed to deal with spies and plug up loopholes through which vital "defense" information is slipped to foreign powers.

If there is a need for such legislation, then it should be passed—immediately!

But measures like the old Mundt-Nixon Bill and the current Mundt-Ferguson Bill do not fit into this category.

Neither does the proposed amendment to the Scientific Foundation Bill — an amendment which would deny government scholarships to any persons who had at any time belonged to organizations which have been declared subversive by the attorney general.

The "loyalty" measures are not designed to bring about the capture and punishment of spies. For the most part, they do not deal with employes of the federal government.

The Mundt-Ferguson Bill's principal objective is to require the registration of Communist organizations, the making public of their membership lists and the labeling of their printed material as Red propaganda.

THOSE WHO ARE strongly opposed to the Communists (as we are) might say, without giving the matter careful consideration, that the Mundt-Ferguson measure would be a good thing.

It would force the Commies to stand up and be counted as Commies, so it might seem.

But would it?

If history teaches anything, then it's more likely that the measure would merely force the Communist Party underground.

And, furthermore, there are provisions of the measure which might easily be used to harm liberal non-Communist organizations and do irreparable damage to the reputations of innocent individuals.

Then, too, there's the matter of whether we're going to punish persons for their beliefs or for their actions. And that's an important matter.

JUDGING BY THE noise made by the House Un-American Activities Committee and its supporters, and by some of the legislation that has been proposed, the Commies are getting ready to take over America.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

The Communists have been taking a bad beating almost since the end of the war.

Their attempt to obtain real political power through the Progressive Party was a miserable failure.

Their attempt to convert the CIO into an instrument of Kremlin policy not only failed but resulted in the CIO launching an effective "housecleaning" campaign.

The Commies are rapidly losing their influence on the thinking of the nation's industrial workers. Their influence on government workers has almost completely disappeared.

The Communist Party and its various front organizations have been thoroughly discredited in the eyes of nearly all Americans.

And this has been done without "loyalty" legislation of the Mundt-Ferguson type.

THOSE WHO seemed inclined to favor "loyalty" legislation should ask themselves this pointed question:

"The Communists first, then what?"

We can't afford to set a precedent which might enable the political party in power at some future date to use "loyalty" as an excuse for cracking down on its political opposition.

We can't permit any governmental agency to sit in judgment of the type of thinking which constitutes subversion.

The money that would be spent insuring "loyalty" could be used with greater effectiveness in stamping out the breeding ground of disloyal isms.

Yes, it could be spent more wisely for slum clearance, for youth education, for elimination of racial discrimination, for improved health facilities and for other things designed to make our nation a better place to live—for all the people.

Over And Over Again

Our "theme song" for the next few months is going to be "Register and Vote" and we intend to "sing" it over and over again until it becomes as monotonous as "Mule Train" or "Chattanoogie Shoe Shine Boy."

Frankly, we're not concerned about whether our readers get somewhat bored with it—just as long as they heed our advice and get their fellow citizens to do likewise.

We hope that it becomes No. 1 on every CIO member's political hit parade and remains there. That's where it belongs.

The present Congress, although it has moved in the right direction on a number of important issues, has demonstrated it won't establish an outstanding record on Fair Deal type legislation.

The Dixiegops will see to that. The Republicans and some of the Southern Democrats have a coalition which keeps throwing monkey wrenches into the machinery when it is set in motion by the Administration.

The record shows that Congress was considerably liberalized in 1948. The record also shows that it wasn't liberalized enough.

The record is an important thing—because it will be used as the basis of CIO-PAC indorsements throughout the country. And it reveals whether a politician talks and votes alike or talks one way and votes another.

There is much at stake for labor in the 1950 elections—as there is in all elections. The job of liberalizing Congress can be stepped up—or Congress can swing toward reaction.

Sitting around and talking about the situation won't do much good—unless the talk is followed by "Register and Vote" action.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer
Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher
Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII March 13, 1950 No.11

Unemployment And Compensation Rise

THE RANKS of the jobless swelled to a nine-year peak in February with 4,684,000 men and women looking for work, the Census Bureau reported March 6.

The figure was the highest since Aug., 1941, when unemployment hit an immediate pre-war peak of 5,620,000. It was an increase in the bureau's figure of 204,000 since the January report.

The drop bears out the forecast of the CIO Full Employment Committee in the survey prepared for the recent meeting of the CIO Executive Board.

"The outlook for 1950 is for further decline," the committee said, "as unemployment is rising, income is dipping and the general picture is one of easing away from full employment.

"The nation's failure to lay the groundwork for a high consumption economy during these postwar years made the decline inevitable."

THE Census Bureau report also showed a decline in the number of part-time workers since Nov., 1949, when the last survey was made. Whereas an estimated 1,500,000 persons were working less than 35 hours a week in November, only about 1,000,000 were in this category in February, the bureau found. All of them want full-time work.

Secy. of Commerce Charles Sawyer said the decrease appeared to be due mainly to "a seasonal decrease in the labor force and not to any cutbacks in employment." Non-agricultural employment was practically the same as in January, but agricultural jobs were 770,000 fewer than in Feb., 1949.

Despite the rise in the number of jobless, employment increased by 6000 to 56,953,000. However, the civilian labor force rose by 210,000 persons to an an estimated total of 61,637,000. Most of the newcomers were midyear high school and college graduates.

Striking miners were not included among the jobless because they were not looking for work.

Meantime, the Bureau of Employment Security of the U. S. Dept. of Labor reported that January saw an all-time high of $186,383,000 in unemployment compensation paid by state agencies to jobless workers.

That amount was divided among more workers than had collected unemployment compensation in any previous month since the program was established—2,078,000 persons.

Robert C. Goodwin, director of the bureau, made two significant observations—that in addition to the recipients, there were thousands of unemployed workers whose compensation had run out, and that the duration of unemployment this year is higher than last. The CIO full employment program calls for not only an increase in the amount of compensation paid to a worker every week he is out of a job, but another increase in the number of weeks it shall be paid to him. It also proposes long-term planning to provide job opportunities when private industry can't or doesn't offer them.

IN A somewhat more hopeful vein, the bureau reported that the auto industry expects to increase employment by 34,000 persons by April. That would set the employment level at 650,000 workers in the industry. The forecast is based on a survey made before the Chrysler strike started.

The survey also showed that fewer people did more work to achieve the record production of 6,238,000 motor vehicles last year. Production was approximately 18% higher in 1949 than in 1948, the bureau said, but average employment in the industry sagged from 792,000 in 1948 to an estimated 770,000 in 1949.

Masaryk Praised By Murray on Centennial

A tribute to the late Thomas G. Masaryk, founder of the Czechoslovakian Republic in 1919, was voiced last week by CIO Pres. Murray on the centennial anniversary of the Czech democratic statesman's birth.

Noting that Masaryk's homeland is "once more under foreign domination," Murray voiced regret that "the social, political and human principles for which he stood have once again been suppressed in Czechoslovakia.

"C'mon, ante up another penny; I'm still paying 6c for candy bars."

Company Decided Not to Fire Them

IT WAS A simple little scheme and it worked like magic. That's why the company had used it several times.

A union organizing drive would start. The company would get the names of those active in union work. Then it would fire them.

It wasn't legal but it was effective.

A CIO organizer named Jim knew all about this little scheme when he arrived on the scene to launch another membership campaign.

So he acted accordingly.

JIM MOVED QUIETLY and slowly during the first three months he was in town and he was constantly bothered by the possibility that his "converts" would be fired.

He didn't pass out any leaflets at the plant gates. He attempted to hold no meetings.

Finally he found 10 men who were willing to stick their necks out and he appointed them local committeemen.

These 10 worked quietly, but the plant was a comparatively small one and soon everybody knew what they were doing.

"Well, it won't be long now before the company breaks up the union," workers told each other as they waited for the axe to fall.

Jim kept right on at his job because he knew the company's anti-union compaign followed a definite pattern. It wasn't time for him to use his "ace in the hole."

ONE MORNING in early June the company decided it was time to move. From then on things happened rapidly.

Supervisors and company "stooges" began their "talking campaign."

All over the plant they "carelessly" made remarks like the following:

"It won't seem like the same place around here after next Wednesday with old Joe gone. It's a shame he wasn't smart enough to keep his nose clean." (Joe, of course, was a committeeman.)

"Hank, I hear you're going to have a new partner on the job after next Wednesday. Don't ask me about it, but I've got the low-down."

"There's a rumor going around that 10 guys have been falling down on the job and that they're going to be fired next Wednesday."

WORKERS IN THE plant — including those who had joined the union—picked up the rumors and passed them along.

Within a few hours everybody in the place was convinced that the company was getting ready to crack down.

This information was soon relayed to Jim, who had been expecting it for some time.

"I don't believe they'll get by with it this time," Jim told one of the committeemen. "I've got a little scheme, too."

Then Jim started designing his "secret weapon." He used a paint brush and a sign board. Then he got in touch with a newspaper photographer and told him what he intended to do.

ON TUESDAY—the day before the firings were scheduled—Jim and his 10 committeemen appeared at the gates with some leaflets and a big sign.

The sign said, "We are CIO members. Tomorrow the ———— Co. will fire us. Remember this date." The date of the month also was lettered on the sign.

The committeemen posed with the sign as the photographer snapped pictures. They distributed the leaflets openly. The photographer snapped more pictures.

Soon Jim had all the evidence he would need if he had to take a case to the NLRB. The company soon learned about this.

Wednesday passed — and nobody was fired. Nobody was fired for union activity during the remainder of the drive.

The union won a NLRB election shortly thereafter. A. L. S.

NO SALE!

Union Cooperation Essential in Job Changes

MOST INDUSTRIAL workers don't like to have changes made on the particular job on which they are engaged.

Aside from the fact that it is quite human to resist an upset in the routine they are used to following, workers have some good reasons to be worried when the boss tells them that a new process, or material or changes in machine speeds, or reorganization of the work is going to be introduced.

They are afraid it may mean lower pay, an intolerable speed-up or even loss of their jobs—as it often does. Yet in this era of rapid technological improvements and inventions, industry is constantly making changes in materials, equipment and processes which mean serious readjustments for the workers on the job.

An examination of how this is working out as it concerns the relationship between the union and the company is reported in a recent study prepared by the Industrial Relations Section, Princeton University. It is called "Job Modifications under Collective Bargaining."

Close observers of industrial progress in the U. S. have long been worried about whether collective bargaining would act as a hindrance to technological change, the foreword notes.

"Can the American genius for invention and technical improvement flourish under arrangements where the workers affected by the application of methods, machinery, or materials have an effective voice in the control of change?" it asks.

Not only ignorance and fear of the consequences of change provoke opposition, states the study, but it also comes "from lack of participation or control in determining how change shall occur." It continued:

"It is fortunate for the American consumer that the same institution—the trade union—which can translate the workers fear of the adverse consequences of technological change into a powerful brake, can also, as an instrument of communication and participation, aid greatly in assuring willing and understanding adjustment.

"Under collective bargaining, job modifications are no longer the private preserve of the engineer and the time-study man. A blunt presentation of engineering data may transmit facts, but at the same time create such a fog of sudden fear and frustration that a reasonable adjustment may be delayed for months and attended by burdensome wage costs."

THE REPORT examines the joint experience of both companies and unions with the handling of job modifications caused by changing production methods. It presents a general survey of 24 companies and four detailed case studies of manufacturing concerns in the mass production industries, including automobiles, auto and aircraft parts, rubber, electrical equipment, steel fabrication, textiles and calculating machines.

The unions involved are principally those with which the 24 companies had dealings, consisting of five CIO and two unaffiliated unions. Craft unions were excluded to avoid the complications of jurisdiction and craft rules. The union material includes both interviews with top officials and particularly with local union officers in the plants concerned.

"Labor relations in the selected companies," the report states, "varied from open antagonism and lack of mutual respect between the parties to a condition of quite satisfactory working relationships. Most situations were between those extremes, a majority of the companies and unions reporting that, in general, their relations could be considered satisfactory.

"Before 1935 none of these companies bargained with an outside union. Six of the multi-plant firms now bargain on a company-wide basis."

The survey revealed that both management and union officials "emphasized in interviews that major technological changes, which create entirely new jobs, are generally from a labor relations viewpoint much easier to handle than the minor method changes, which result in a series of small alterations in a job over a period of time."

"Major changes often are introduced more or less simultaneously throughout the industry and become a principal concern of national union policy," the study found. "The minor changes, on the other hand, give rise to psychological problems that are of immediate and daily concern to the local union because the individual workers remain stationary while the job is modified.

"Work habits and routines are upset, usually piece rates are reduced or production standards increased, and the status of the job may decline relatively.

"The dispute and strike of the Ford automobile workers in the spring of 1949 over the meaning and application of production standards on the assembly line was only one prominent illustration of the human and economic aspects of the problem."

THE NATURE of the material, the report states, does not lend itself to drawing any definite, universally-valid conclusions, but only to some general observations. Among these is the observation that "engineers and economists are too prone to advocate a single answer to all situations that involve changes in job content."

Cartels, Monopolies Find Daily Papers Silent

Somehow or other, most daily newspapers pay little or no attention to stories breaking in Washington on the cartels and monopolies in which U. S. business and industry participates. Here are two significent articles dug up by the Labor Press Association which the country's newspapers generally "overlooked."

CHAIRMAN Celler of the House Monopoly Investigating Committee has submitted to the Federal Trade Commission for investigation testimony by one of its key officials indicating cartel deals between American export associations and foreign cartels are lawful.

Celler acted after testimony by Allen C. Phelps, who heads the FTC Export Trade Division and presumably is in charge of policing the export associations formed by American companies under the Webb-Pomerene law exempting them from the anti-trust laws.

Phelps shocked Celler by saying he felt that under the Webb-Pomerene law export associations could make cartel deals. He contended that was the purpose of Congress in passing the law.

Celler pointed out that the foreign policy of the U. S. was against cartels and quoted former Sen. Pomerene, one of the authors of the law, as saying it did not authorize divisions of territory abroad, which is one of the objects of cartels.

Phelps replied that the law seemed to say export associations were free to join in cartels—that the law put the interests of American exporters "above the interests of the foreign buyer or the foreign consumers."

Later John Stedman, an anti-trust official of the Justice Dept., testified the FTC had never applied the Webb-Pomerene's acts penalty of $100 against export associations which fail to report to the FTC. He said the FTC also had never issued a cease and desist order against an export association.

Phelps said he did not like to be put in the position of defending cartels, but he did not know what our foreign policy was in regard to cartels.

He contended American export associations had made only 15 cartel deals, and none was in effect today. Celler pointed out that a Federal Court recently convicted the alkali export association of belonging to such a cartel. Phelps said that cartel was formed in 1930 and only since 1940 has their legality been questioned.

ASKED WHY he had never referred any of the cartel deals to the Justice Dept. for prosecution, Phelps said the export association had always complied with law in filing reports with the FTC. Celler then read an FTC report charging the steel export association had failed to comply with the law in filing its cartel deal, and another denouncing a sulphur cartel deal.

Phelps said he did not "subscribe" to those reports by the agency which employs him. He contended the Webb-Pomerene law permitted any deals that did not affect competition in this country and he had found no evidence that those did.

"I take it you do not agree with the findings and recommendations of the FTC?" Celler asked.

"I do not agree with those particular conclusions which you read," the witness replied.

CELLER THEN read another FTC report charging that a cartel deal between American producers of phosphate and the foreign cartel gave the domestic producers "practically complete" protection against competition from abroad.

Celler said it was "very serious" for American exporters to be engaging in cartel deals when they were against our foreign policy. He quoted Winthrop G. Brown, director of the Office of International Trade Policy of the State Dept., as saying "it is an important part of U. S. economic foreign policy to press for the elimination of cartel arrangements which block the expansion of multilateral, competitive, international trade."

Phelps insisted again that so far as he knew there were no cartel deals today. He added: "At least we ask them every year in their annual report, and they have answered 'no'."

Phelps testified his division has only three to supervise 44 foreign trade associations and although it had asked the Budget Bureau repeatedly for more help, it had been denied.

Brown testified it would be "very undesirable and reprehensible" for American export associations to engage in cartel deals in view of our foreign policy. If such cartel deals were being made, he said, they should be broken up.

CHAIRMAN CELLER has presented to the House Monopoly Investigating Committee and the Justice Dept. evidence he believes indicates the four big American producers of typewriters are fixing prices and engaging in monopoly.

He gave the evidence to his committee during testimony by Robert R. Sher, spokesman for the Typewriter Manufacturers Export Association. This organization of the big four in the industry controls about 95% of the American market and handles foreign business in competition with foreign cartels. The "Big Four" are Underwood, Remington-Rand, L. C. Smith, and Royal.

Celler presented evidence that the big companies have been submitting virtually identical bids to the government on typewriters, while they are making tremendous profits on their business.

"The closeness of these figures," he said, "will require some very tall explaining."

Sher contended the companies could not vary much in their prices because the products were so much alike that buyers would swing to the lower priced product. Rep. Michener (R. Mich.) observed that if there was no price fixing agreement one company would drive the others out of business.

SHER, WHO used to be an anti-trust lawyer, replied that Michener was probably right "but that is one of the inevitable effects of competition."

Celler's figures showed that profits of the big four had run from 13.93% of invested capital to 37.26%. The latter would double the company's investment in less than three years.

These "unduly large profits," he said, evidenced high prices based on a "firm grip" on the competitive situation. Observers commented that with these profits, the price of typewriters could have been cut from 10 to 25% and still left the companies fair profits.

Sher opposed any strengthening of the Webb-Pomerene law which permits exporters to disregard the anti-trust laws in their foreign sales. He contended that American typewriter companies were efficient enough to compete abroad as long as there were no cartels or government restrictions on trade. He said they had exported about a third of their products until Hitler messed up world trade with his cartel deals.

HE ALSO testified that American producers did not need tariff protection and said imports were small despite the absence of tariff protection. His testimony was one of the strongest arguments ever presented to a congressional committee in favor of competition and free trade.

Questioning developed that Sher had, as a lawyer in the anti-trust division before the war, settled an anti-trust case against the typewriter companies in which they agreed to refrain from price fixing.

He denied that the export association facilitated price fixing domestically. Celler quickly produced figures on sales prices and profits, contending the evidence indicated there "may be collusive arrangements still going on between those companies."

Celler noted that the evidence showed the four companies had raised prices simultaneously in 1934 from $105 to $110 and in 1937 from $110 to $115.50.

Asked if the government had made any check to see whether the consent decree was being observed by the companies, Sher admitted he did not know of any. He admitted the Federal Trade Commission, which is charged with watching export agreements, had never checked the typewriter export association except to look over its minutes.

Oil Unions In Pension Campaign

LABOR unions representing more than 25,000 employes of Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. have joined forces to wage a co-operative drive for improved pensions.

In an unusual alignment of forces, representatives of CIO, AFL and independent unions announced the formation of the Tri-Party Policy Council to coordinate pension negotiations by the various unions with Socony-Vacuum management.

Announcement of the new alignment was made through headquarters in Denver of the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union, one of the participating unions.

Pres. O. A. Knight of the Oil Workers said the Tri-Party Policy Council was established after a series of joint meetings by representatives of the various unions.

Employes scattered from Maine to California and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf are represented by unions participating in the new council.

Included in the new alliance are not only employes of the parent Socony-Vacuum company, but also of various subsidiaries, including Magnolia, which operates extensively in the Southwest, and General Petroleum, which has large production and refining facilities in California.

R. L. Clark, of Quincy, Mass., a representative of the CIO Oil Workers, is chairman of the coordinating committee of the new council. The secretary is Andrew Wolfrum, Boston, of the New England Petroleum Union, an independent union.

Representing AFL unions on the council are D. E. Andrews, G. W. Crawley, G. T. Sinn and Joseph Hatzel, all of St. Louis.

Other representatives of independent unions are William Donahue, Paulsboro, N. J., Joe Pushcal, New York City, and William Feser, Olean, N. Y.

Other representatives of OWIU-CIO are Paul Anger, Beaumont, Tex., Patrick Coughlin, Hammond, Ind., and John Neeld, Torrance, Calif.

The Tri-Party Policy Council has drawn up specific goals to be sought in pension negotiations, but details of these and of negotiating methods were not revealed.

Socony-Vacuum is one of the largest oil companies in the U. S. Only Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey is larger; Standard Oil Co. of Indiana is about the same size.

Oleo Tax Bill Passed

FEDERAL taxes on oleomargarine, in effect for 64 years, are about ready for the graveyard.

The House last week, by a 262-106 vote, gave its OK to a final version of the oleo tax repeal bill. Then the Senate gave its approval, 59-20. President Truman's signature on the bill is expected shortly.

The bill, subject of long debate in both branches of Congress earlier in the session, was under discussion in a joint conference committee for several weeks. But the version finally approved moved quickly through the House—though not without last-minute for-the-record objections from dairy state Congressmen.

The bill removes the dime-a-pound tax on colored margarine—now selling in Washington for about 39c a pound. It also kills the quarter-of-a-cent tax on white margarine, as well as a series of license fees for manufacturers and distributors ranging between $6 and $600 a year.

Dairy state opponents won two compromise points: pats of margarine served in restaurants must be in triangular shape; and packages of margarine sold in stores must bear the name of the product in letters as big as any other word on the wrapper.

"Hey! Look at the specimen I found!"

New York Guildsmen Name Winners Of Page One Awards

THE ANNUAL Page One Awards of the CIO New York Newspaper Guild will be presented this year in 11 outstanding fields for "unusual contributions to social or cultural progress," Local Pres. J. Nelson Tuck has announced.

The awards are as follows:

Journalism, Meyer Berger, of the New York Times, for reporting the Unruh mass murders in Camden, N. J., and also for continued reporting of unusually high calibre over a period of years.

Public affairs, Judge and Mrs. J. Waities Waring, Charleston, S. C., for courage in defending Negro rights.

Science, Drs. Philip Hench and Edward Kendall for their work on cortisone.

Literature, John Hersey for his book, "The Wall."

Music, Fritz Kreisler.

Drama, "Cocktail Party" and its author, T. S. Eliot.

Musical comedy, Ray Bolger.

Motion Pictures, "All the King's Men."

Sports, Jackie Robinson, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, for sportsmanship of an unusually high order.

Radio, the program "Books on Trial."

Art, the Metropolitan Museum, New York, for its new policy of enlarged showings of contemporary art.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating Dixiegops

Messengers To Get 'Extra' Dime

THE Western Union telegraph monopoly has lost a bid to squeeze a dime an hour out of the pay of messenger boys.

The company sought to win special exemptions under the Wage-Hour law so it could pay its delivery boys 65c an hour—a dime under the 75c minimum provided by the law.

But last week Isabel Ferguson, a Wage-Hour hearing officer, recommended that the plea be denied. She indicated the company had offered no proof that jobs would be fewer if the nationwide telegraph company were forced to pay the extra dime.

CIO Pres. Murray hailed the Wage-Hour report as "highly gratifying."

"The efforts of the Western Union Telegraph Co. to continue to enjoy a subsidy—through payment of sub-standard wages—from this under-privileged class of employes, most of them minors, was entirely without moral or economic justification," Murray said.

"The federal Wage-Hour law minimum of 75c an hour is little enough, and Western Union's third attempt to escape the requirement of the law was properly thwarted."

Murray said he was pleased that CIO's active opposition to the telegraph company's petition helped preserve Wage-Hour law benefits for almost 9000 messengers.

Irving J. Levy, auto union counsel, represented CIO at the hearings last December and January. He charged that the company had clearly failed to show any justifiable reason for keeping the dime an hour from the boys.

NLRB Examiner Orders Union To Pay 'Stoolie'

For the first time under the Taft-Hartley law, a labor organization has been held solely liable for back pay of an employe declared illegally discharged.

An NLRB trial examiner ruled that the CIO Marine Cooks & Stewards Union, by instructing members to refuse to sail on a ship with a union-named "stool-pigeon," was guilty of violating the act.

He recommended that the union be required to cease the blacklisting of the alleged spy and ordered it to reimburse him for any wages he lost as a result of the union's action. In all previous cases involving back pay, either the employer or both employer and union have been held jointly liable.

In another case an NLRB trial examiner ruled that the retroactive application of a valid union shop clause is illegal

The examiner found that the New York Shipbuilding Corp., Camden, N. J., and CIO Shipbuilders Local 1 violated the act in the discharge of an employe who brought the charges on which the case was based. He was discharged for failure to pay dues for July, August and September, 1947, as part of a dispute over a fine.

The trial examiner declared that a union shop does not take effect until it is certified by the board and negotiated into an agreement. He found that these steps were not completed until Jan., 1948.

Real Estaters Buck, But Housing Bill Is Cleared For Floor Action

THE "MIDDLE INCOME" housing bill, which offers a chance to hundreds of thousands of American families of moderate means to own or rent high-quality homes at 25% or more below present prices, has cleared all preliminary Congressional hurdles and is ready for floor action.

The bill was scheduled to come before House and Senate on the same day—Tuesday, March 14.

Clearance was accomplished in record time and in spite of determined opposition by the real estate interests, private money-lenders and their representatives, who screamed "Socialism," pleaded forthcoming bankruptcy, and otherwise carried on in the same vein in which they previously opposed propositions they now espouse as their own.

From the very start, and long before the present session of Congress, CIO and AFL advocated government support of cooperative housing as the answer for millions of union members and their families.

The measure, as finally approved in slightly different forms by the House and Senate Banking Committees, would establish a government corporation which would sell debentures on the private investment market and, with the proceeds, make long-term, low-interest loans to bona fide cooperatives and non-profit trusts. Emphasis is on the "bona fide" aspects, to prevent the formation of phoney outfits seeking to reap profits. The loans would be amortized over a maximum period of 63 years, with the standard loan a 50-year one, and the interest rate has been estimated to be between 3¼ and 3½%.

The applying co-op would be able, if approved, to borrow 100% of funds needed for construction, with 3% in advance for planning and surveying, if necessary.

With all speculative profits out of the picture and with the savinge inherent in the type of loan and manner of operation, it has been estimated by the bill's sponsors that accommodations now costing owners or tenants around $90 can be duplicated or improved for around $65 a month.

These estimates were not contested by the real estate and banking spokesmen, who objected to the measure on other and vague grounds. In many instances, careful committee questioning drew from the witnesses admissions that they favored some form of government aid to cooperative houses but simply thought the proposed interest rates were unfairly low.

The bill had a rough time in the Dixiegop-ridden House Rules Committee before it came to the floor. The committee, which serves as House legislative "traffic cop," held two full days of hearings before it decided to vote, and then cleared the measure for floor action by a 6 to 5 vote, with one member, William M. Colmer (D., Miss.), absent.

Walter Reuther, chairman of the CIO Housing Committee and president of the CIO Auto Workers, wired Rep. Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.), chairman of the Rules Committee:

"On behalf of the whole membership of the CIO and for millions of middle-income families, I send heartiest congratulations on your valiant and successful effort to secure early action on the middle-income housing bill. Your leadership is inspiring."

In addition to the co-op feature, the bill carries authority for the Federal Housing Administration to continue issuing its famous "608" mortgage insurance to builders of rental apartments. FHA has almost run out of money for this purpose, and the banks, which lend the money which FHA insures, are anxious for action, as are the builders. The interest rate on an average FHA loan of this type is 4½%, but the builder has many opportunities to clear a profit at various stages of construction and is not prevented from taking a "quick profit" on rents after the building is completed.

ACW Members, Closed Out, Seek Own Shop

ONE OF THE oldest and strongest men's clothing manufacturers in Baltimore, Md., was closed last week—and some 1200 members of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers were wondering what came next.

Many of them had been employed by the firm for 25 to 30 years. Labor relations were ideal—there had not been a strike or even an arbitration case since the first union contract in 1932. There was no compelling reason for closing that anybody knew except managament — and management wasn't talking. Yet the plant had closed down, forever, at the end of business on Mar. 3, after 32 years of successful operation. The firm—Cohen, Goldman & Co.—has been in business for 61 years, and its brand names are well known. Its shops in Syracuse and Poughkeepsie, N. Y., were closed about six months ago.

The employes of the firm's two suit-coat plants and its pants shop in Baltimore were even more bewildered than the rest of the business community there. Many of them wept, according to Ulisse DeDominicis, manager of ACW's Baltimore Joint Board.

They asked him to write a letter to the company, to see if it would give them the plant and machinery and $500,000 in severance pay so they could go into business for themselves. While they were waiting for an answer from Manfred Goldman, president of the firm, a delegation headed by DeDominicis went to Washington and consulted with Sen. Tydings (D. Md.) on the possibility of getting contracts for service uniforms, which they made during the war.

"IN ALL HUMILITY," DeDominicis wrote Goldman, "we ask you to be magnanimous and give us the tools with which we may continue to work.

"We mean by this that if you have decided to dismantle your shops in Baltimore, the machinery and the equipment thus disposed of will be fit only for the junk shop, as you well know.

"But if you will grant us $500,000 as severance pay to the people of your Baltimore shops, this will be a little capital to work with, and perhaps we can run a form of cooperative shop whereby we will depend upon the help of all our tailors throughout the country to give us a few bundles to keep the shop in operation, and in that way keep body and soul together.

"We hope that this is not asking too much of you. It is done in a spirit of fair play and according to the great motto, 'Live and let live.' We hope that you will be moved by our extreme need, and that you will continue to be our good friend that you have been for many years."

DeDominicis reminded Goldman that "we of the Amalgamated Union feel that we have at all times given the best loyalty to your firm, the best of our friendship to you, and the best of our workmanship to your plant."

"These people, who for many years gave you the best that was in them," he went on, "are now crushed by the uncertainty of how they will get bread for tomorrow. I know that if you were around to see these grief-stricken people you would be profoundly moved.

"I want you to know that they have begged me to make this plea to you. They cannot believe that after so many years of loyal service to you, you would throw them out into the streets without any hope for security. They want me to plead with you that in deference to all the years of loyalty they gave to your firm, you now do something generous on their behalf."

NEW CIO UNION is born as Irving Abramson, CIO national representative in Eastern Region, presents Local Industrial Union Charter No. 1707 for the Community and Social Agencies Employes Union, New York, to Elizabeth Herring (left) and Hilda Siff, leaders in the fight in their field against the United Office & Professional Workers, expelled from the CIO as Communist-dominated. The local started life with 1200 members.

Arbitrators Tackle N. J. Bell Dispute

A FIVE-MAN arbitration board, including three public members appointed by Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll, will attempt this week to settle the dispute between the CIO Communications Workers and the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co.

The governor seized the telephone company's facilities 12 days ago to avert a strike of 12,000 operators. Under state law, seizure permitted him to establish the arbitration board.

He named Dr. William H. Martin, dean of the College of Agriculture, Rutgers University, as chairman. The other two public arbitrators are Dr. Arthur Lesser, Jr., associate professor of industrial management, Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, and Arthur Lewis, law professor at Rutgers.

William M. Dunn, assistant to CWA Pres. Joseph Beirne, will represent the union and Harold W. Lord, N. J. Bell assistant vice president, will speak for the company.

The board is faced with the task of considering union proposals for a $7 a day wage increase, a reduced work week and other improvements.

The N. J. seizure has been termed a "token affair" by A. T. Jones, CWA vice president. He noted that while a state-appointed administrator takes over the business, it continues to be run by top management and profits go undisturbed to stockholders. A decision of the arbitrators, while binding on both parties, may be contested in the courts.

"CWA does not believe that compulsory arbitration is a substitute for either the process of collective bargaining or of voluntary arbitration," Jones said.

"We can in no way agree in advance that the decisions of any state-appointed board of arbitration, acting under a compulsory law designed to limit the economic freedom of utility workers in the state of New Jersey, should necessarily affect the hundreds of thousands of other telephone workers represented by CWA throughout the country," he declared.

Church-Labor Group to Meet

Mutual problems of the church and the labor movement will be discussed at the annual conference of the Religion and Labor Foundation at Hotel Gibson in Cincinnati, O., Mar. 20-22.

Among subjects listed for discussion are:

"Full and fair employment, adequate education, social security, homes and health for all, and the repeal of laws that interfere with collective bargaining.

"The elimination of misunderstanding, prejudice and hatred among the faiths, races and branches of organized religion and labor, and the defense and expansion of civil liberty.

"The building of an economy of abundance and peace, planned for the good of all, which preserves personal freedom and relieves us of fear.

"A world-wide fellowship of religion and labor that will bind together into a true democracy all peoples who strive sincerely for justice and peace."

In Years Gone By—

Federal Troops Used Against Railroad Unions

By WILLIAM WEISS

THE NEXT time the newspaper in your home town refers to the members of your local union as a "bunch of agitators," don't feel too badly about it.

The editor, even though he may not like labor unions, will scarcely resort to the kind of language used by the ultra-proper New York Times in the July 26, 1877, issue.

In referring to railroad engineers, firemen, brakesmen and others on strike at the time, the paper, in a single edition, called the strikers "hoodlums, rabble, bummers, looters, blacklegs, thieves, tramps, ruffians, incendiaries, enemies of society, brigands, rapscallions, riff-raff, felons and idiots."

(It would be interesting to have a record of what the more reactionary papers called the strikers!)

As tough as organizing is today, with the Taft-Hartley club in the hands of employers, it is still a far cry from the historic struggles of the transportation Brotherhoods, now known as the "Big Four," to build their unions in the latter part of the 19th century.

In the 1860's men who chose railroading as a profession were considered men not afraid to die. And die they did, in the scalding steam from exploding boilers and under the wheels of switch engines and moving cars.

The work was so hazardous insurance companies of the day refused to consider railroad men as "acceptable risks." In order to give their families a degree of security, the railroaders formed "Brotherhoods" or "Beneficial Associations" to which they regularly paid "premiums" instead of "dues," as did other unionists.

THE MEN were not concerned in the early days with any idea of collective bargaining with the owners over wages and working conditions. Their initial action in binding together was purely for the purpose of assuring the welfare of their families in case of accidental death on the job.

It would seem logical that the railroad magnates of the era would have encouraged such action inasmuch as it relieved them of a responsibility they themselves should have assumed.

Such, however, was not the case. The Goulds, Vanderbilts and others saw in the efforts of the men to provide for the welfare of their families the seed which one day might ripen into demands for a collective bargaining contract.

They bided their time before trying to smash the railroad unions, and the process began when a series of spontaneous strikes was called in 1877 in protest against a 10% wage cut imposed on employes of all main lines in the country.

This strike was notable for the fact that for the first time in the nation's history armed federal troops were used as strikebreakers.

DESPITE THE use of state militias, the strikers had remained firm and had the tie-up of rail traffic almost complete until Rutherford B. Hayes, President of the U. S., stepped in on the side of the owners.

He decided that interference with train movements was not only an assault upon property but was also rebellion against the national government. He stated his intention of declaring martial law and sending federal troops to every strike center.

The strikers, faced with the prospect of opposing the U. S. Army, began to weaken—and by August America's first great general strike movement had collapsed.

IN THE 1894 Pullman strike at Chicago, the railroad workers really had the whole book thrown at them.

Nineteen locals of the American Railway Union had been quietly organized among 3,700 Pullman workers, following wage cuts of from 25 to 40% between September 1893 and May 1894.

When the company fired several union leaders who had conferred with Owner George Pullman over long-standing grievances, it was the spark which set off the explosion.

This strike was led by Eugene V. Debs, who had founded the American Railway Union one year earlier.

For three weeks all was quiet on the strike front. The pickets were passive and at regular intervals sent delegates to request the company to arbitrate. All union proposals were refused.

Finally as a gesture to force the company to mediate, the ARU ordered its members not to handle Pullman cars. At this point things began to happen. The Pullman company suddenly found an ardent ally in the General Managers Association, which consisted of executives of 24 railroads with terminals in Chicago.

This group ordered the immediate discharge of any employe who refused to switch Pullman cars, a move which apparently backfired because every time a switchman was fired for "cutting out" a Pullman, the other workers on his crew would quit in protest. Within four days all Pullmans were "dead" in Chicago and 11 railroad lines were at a standstill.

The Association retaliated by importing 2000 strikebreakers from Canada, whose job, among other duties, was to attach mail cars to trains made up of Pullmans and operate them. When the strikers "cut out" the Pullman, they were accused of hampering the movement of the mails. This maneuver caused the Association to wire President Grover Cleveland for federal troops. Over the protests of Illinois Gov. John P. Altgeld they were summarily dispatched.

Clashes began at once as the troops attempted to move trains. The spirit of the strikers would not be broken, however, and three-fourths of the roads out of Chicago remained paralyzed.

AN OMNIBUS injunction against the strikers accomplished what the Association strikebreakers and the Federal troops had failed to do.

Under terms of the injunction, picketing itself was a crime while the right of trial by jury was cancelled. The morale of the strikers was broken and the "Deb's rebellion" was overthrown.

Debs and three officers were indicted and convicted on a trumped-up "injury-to-property-of-expectancy" charge and were sentenced to jail terms. The Supreme Court later upheld the convictions.

Railroad workers saw their strike of 1922 broken by a combination of professional strikebreakers and a far-reaching injunction.

Despite their early setbacks, their broken strikes, their disappointments, the railroad unions finally became firmly established. They made a real contribution to the growth of the labor movement in the United States.

(Another story about the early struggles of American trade unions will appear soon in the CIO News.)

GE To End UE Pact, Heed IUE on Grievances

THE GENERAL Electric Co. on March 10 agreed to terminate its agreement with the staggering United Electrical & Radio Workers on April 1 and to permit CIO's International Union of Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers to represent its members in grievances until the representation dispute is terminated.

The agreement followed by a few days another between IUE-CIO and UE providing that the money checked off for GE employes' dues will go to whichever union wins the NLRB elections in which they are involved.

Before agreement was announced, the fast disappearing UE went through a series of contortions designed to gain control of dues, presently held in escrow by a court order.

The controversy first arose when IUE was chartered and informed GE that its position as the CIO union in the electrical industry entitled it to receive the check-off dues of GE employes.

The company, due to the conflicting demands made by the two unions, filed a suit and asked the court to decide the rightful recipient.

Although the matter was in the hands of the court, the company and UE entered into a deal which wound up with the former issuing new check-off cards in its Schenectady plant and assisted UE in signing 10,000 workers on the new forms.

A Federal Court injunction issued in New York put a stop to the practice before it had spread to more than a few plants. As a result of the court order, the company was restrained from paying dues money to the UE.

When the court case came up for further argument Feb. 9, UE agreed that all dues held by the the company would be returned to the employes and the check-off clause be cancelled until the contract terminated April 1.

Illinois Labor Journal Meet to Hear Swim

Allan L. Swim, CIO publicity director and editor of the CIO News, will be the featured speaker in a talk on "The Labor Press" at the Fourth Annual Labor Journal Editors' Conference, at the University of Illinois on April 28 and 29.

Editors of CIO, AFL and independent union newspapers will serve as consultants at a writing and makeup clinic and will be assisted by experts from the University School of Journalism and the Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations. The conference will be conducted by the University's Extension Division.

PICKET LINES were maintained at airports throughout the country last week, as in Chicago (above), by members of the Transport Workers Union while their officers and representatives of American Airlines met with federal conciliators in Washington. No progress was reported. The union wants a 20c hourly wage increase and job security.

TWU Wins 2d 25c Package

The utility division of Transport Workers Local 101 negotiated its second pension and wage agreement within a fortnight when it signed a new agreement with Brooklyn (N. Y.) Borough Gas Co. yielding an average of 25c an hour in wage and other benefits.

In addition to a 5c across-the-board wage increase, the company also agreed to a contributory pension plan which will cost it 15c an hour and yield pension payments in some categories of $100 more a month than Social Security. Controlled jointly by the union and management, according to John Lopez, local president, it will be a funded plan with the average employe paying 3½c an hour.

A job revaluation program aimed at correcting inequities in some rates will cost the company an estimated 1½c an hour. It will pay an additional 3½c by improving the insurance program to pensioners by pegging the payments to 50% of the last annual wage.

The new contract duplicates benefits negotiated two weeks earlier for the 3600 employes of the Brooklyn Union Gas Co., servicing 850,000 gas users. The Brooklyn Borough Gas Co. services about 100,000 families.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating DixieGOPs

ICFTU Is Made UN 'Consultant'

THE NEW INTL. Confederation of Free Trade Unions last week won consultant status at the United Nations.

The UN's Economic & Social Council voted unanimously to place the ICFTU in "Category A." Groups in that category have the right to submit items for the agenda of the Council.

Both the CIO and AFL, as well as labor organizations in some 40 other nations, founded the ICFTU last November as a world-wide federation of non-Communist labor organizations.

The World Federation of Trade Unions—from which the CIO and many other trade union centers withdrew early last year—also has "A" status with the council. The WFTU is now comprised almost entirely of Communist-dominated labor groups.

Presence of the ICFTU at the UN was warmly commended by a number of the Council members. Earlier CIO Pres. Philip Murray had urged Secy. of State Dean Acheson to instruct the American delegate to vote for its acceptance as a consultative group and to seek quick action.

CIO Warns TUC Of Arms Race Threat To Israel

The concern of American unionists over an arms race in the Middle East that may lead to a war of aggression against the Republic of Israel has been transmitted to leaders of the powerful British Trades Union Congress.

In a letter to Vincent Tewson, British TUC secretary, CIO Pres. Philip Murray voiced hope that "your organization may decide to impress upon your government the need to make a new approach to the problem."

Reports from the Middle East have spoken of heavy shipments of military equipment, funds and army specialists from Britain to Egypt and other Arabic states. Israeli leaders have voiced alarm that they are being threatened by these shipments, and both Murray and AFL Pres. William Green have conferred with Pres. Truman about the situation.

In his letter to the British labor movement, Murray expressed belief "that it is in the power of our two governments, acting jointly, to secure the peaceful solution which is so urgently required in the interests of the democratic world."

Va. House Kills Anti-Labor Bill

An anti-labor bill introduced in the Virginia legislature at the request of Gov. John S. Battle and drafted by the state attorney general was killed last week in the House of Delegates by a vote of 44 to 42.

Purpose of the bill was to tighten up the so-called "right-to-work" law, passed in 1947, which bars the union shop and restricts picketing.

The fight against the bill was led by Temple Kessinger, president of the CIO Paper Workers local at the West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co., Covington, Va., who was elected to the House of Delegates from Allegheny County.

The move to kill the bill was actively supported by a group of liberal delegates in the House composed of two Democrats, two Republicans and one Independent.

Stitches

"THAT'S NO OSTRICH, THAT'S MY WIFE--LOOKING FOR THE UNION LABEL."

ILWU Denies Sellout Charges On Disability Insurance Plan

The Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union denied last week that it is trying to drop coverage for members in California by the State Disability Insurance plan in favor of private coverage.

The charge was made some weeks ago in a leaflet distributed by a group in Ship Clerks Local 34, San Francisco, which charged a "sell out" to private insurance interests by the administration of ILWU Pres. Harry Bridges.

"The fact is that in California, the only Coast state with a disability insurance law, the men are still covered by the State plan," according to Lincoln Fairley, ILWU research director. "No private disability insurance law has been written for the members in California.

"Indeed, the only beef on the welfare plan so far has been by a group of members who wanted to stay under a private plan and couldn't. The ILWU record on the general issue of state vs. private disability insurance is perfectly clear. When the disability law was passed, we fought to keep the private insurance companies out of the trough. Since then we have fought to get the benefits increased. However, whenever we can get a better deal for the membersip with a so-called private plan, we take it.

"It simply is not true that the private plans do not pay as much as the state plan. The fact is that the law requires that every private plan must offer greater benefits than the state plan.

"The law provides that the private plans cost the same at the state plan, namely 1% of the first $3000. It is not true that some men would have to pay double under a private plan. No one would pay a cent more."

CIO Leaders Join in Fight On 'Loyalty' Oath Discharges

CHICAGO CIO leaders joined with representatives of the rest of the labor movement and the American Civil Liberties Union in assailing the "creeping paralysis of so-called loyalty discharges" at a conference protesting the firings of eight workers who refused to sign non-Communist affidavits.

The eight men, discharged by three different employers, are members of the United Electrical & Radio Workers, which was expelled by the CIO on the ground it is Communist-dominated and refused to follow CIO policy.

Although the CIO International Union of Electrical & Radio Workers is contesting jurisdiction of the plants with the old UE, "that has no bearing on the question," Al Fineman, CIO-IUE field man, told the meeting.

"We in the IUE have nothing to gain from purges because of political belief," he said. "Such employers are borrowing from the arsenal of Communism."

"We don't believe anyone has the right to take away a person's living because of race, color, religion or political belief," declared Pat Greathouse, CIO Auto Workers regional director.

Rhyme and Reason

HERE IS A SAMPLE of the material the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers is using in its nationwide campaign to promote the sale of union label clothing. In addition, the ACW has taken over sponsorship of the "Town Meeting of the Air" radio program in the New York City area, where it is heard over Station WJZ. The ACW label drive started last fall.

Move Over, Hope—Here Comes Taft

Labor doesn't want the Taft-Hartley Act repealed, neither does the President, and CIO-PAC is "practically a socialist party." That's what Sen. Robert A. Taft (R, O.), says in his weekly column for Ohio papers.

Taft lauds the GOP's new "socialism or freedom" line.

"The labor people simply want to defeat all those who voted for the law," he says seriously of T-H, "so that they can acquire the same domination over the legislative branch that they have over the executive."

House Approves States 49 & 50

Statehood for Alaska and Hawaii—numbers 49 and 50—was approved last week by the House, and now goes to the Senate.

Both territories would get two Senators apiece, with Alaska getting one Representative and Hawaii at least two.

The Alaska bill passed the House by a narrow majority—168-146. The Hawaii bill had a heavier margin of victory, 261-110.

Statehood for both territories was advocated two years ago by the President's Committee on Civil Rights, and has been supported by the CIO.

Light, Not Heat, On British Health Plan

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

IF ALL the articles and news stories written about the British health system were laid end to end, it would undoubtedly take quite a walk to pace them off. Yet few Americans really know much about the subject and too often what they think they know is inaccurate or entirely untrue.

The American Medical Association can take much of the credit for th Their $100,000-a-year publicists, Whitaker & Baxter, a husband and wife team, can be criticized harshly for the type of lurid propaganda they turn out, but they can't be accused of laziness. Millions of copies of the pamphlets, leaflets and other releases they issue in behalf of the AMA's fight against national health insurance circulate throughout the country.

(The AMA tops the list of lobbyists with the whopping total of $1½ million spent in 1949, according to figures given in the year-end financial reports filed under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act.)

Britain's health system is a favorite topic in the AMA propaganda, although just what it is or how it works is never explained. Instead of facts or honest analysis, the AMA gives rumors, prejudiced opinions and calls names.

REP. BIEMILLER (D. Wis.), one of the sponsors of a bill for a national health insurance system for the U. S., last week called the attention of Congress to the general misconception in this country about the British health plan. Everyone has an opinion on the experiment, he said, "but very few people know the facts about it."

To throw some much needed light on the subject, he asked to have an article by Dr. James Howard Means on England's Public Medicine inserted in the Congressional Record.

DR. MEANS IS a professor in the Harvard Medical School and chief of the medical services at Massachusetts General Hospital. He is the author of many books and over 150 articles on medical subjects. The article quoted in the Congressional Record appears in the March issue of the Atlantic Monthly.

Dr. Means explains that he holds no brief either for or against the British Health Service, but believes that information about it will be of great value to Americans. "We can be aided by the experience of others," he says.

The article is of special interest because it not only explains from an unbiased viewpoint how the British system works, but also takes up the objections made against it in this country and Britain, and examines their validity. Dr. Means says his analysis is based on observations extending back to 1913. Last year he spent some time in England and Scotland studying various phases of the present health system.

"AMERICANS either hold up the British Health Service as a horrible warning," the doctor writes, "or use it as a talking point in favor of compulsory health insurance for the United States," whereas what is needed "is less recrimination and more investigation."

Dr. Means found a practically unanimous opinion in Britain at present that the health service is there to stay. He quoted, however there was much discontent among British doctors running all the way "from trifling dissatisfaction to something approaching actual hostility."

The direction taken by the present health service was set by the Emergency Medical Service, set up to take care of the military and civilian wounded and sick, he states. Although set up hurriedly, the EMS worked smoothly and efficiently.

The service is not compulsory, he points out, although it is intended to provide medical care for all people, even aliens temporarily in the country. Any doctor or person who wants to can stay out of it. Doctors may serve under it and keep their private practice at the same time.

Here are some of Dr. Means' answers to questions raised about the British plan and to attacks constantly made on it:

How well is the health service working? Fairly well, he says, though of course not perfectly. After all it has been in effect only about 19 months. Efforts to improve it and to remove the "bugs" are continually being made.

Has medical care deteriorated under it? Based on observations extending back to 1913, Dr. Means says he found "no important change, and certainly no deterioration in the quality of the care provided." At no time either in Britain or America, he declares, has medical care been as uniformly good "as medical knowledge of our time would permit it to be. . . . There is always abundant room for improvement."

Isn't it true that America has the best medical care in the world? "Possibly, but how many people get it?" replies Dr. Means. "I am unable to assert that the general standard is higher in Britain under the national health act than it was before that went into effect, but on the other hand, I have encountered no convincing evidence that it is lower, and certainly more people get it."

Is it undermining the incentive of doctors? Dr. Means admits that this would be a serious defect, if true, but he admonishes prophets of doom to remember that there is nothing available on the subject at present but opinion. "Only experience will answer the question, and 19 months' experience with the Health Service is not enough time by which to judge it accurately," he says.

What about the complaints that general practitioners are overworked? It is true that at present they are overworked, underpaid and insufficiently related to the hospitals, answers Dr. Means, but amendments to the bill to correct these and other abuses are now before Parliament.

Don't patients abuse their privileges and go to the doctor more often than necessary?

Steps are being considered to remedy this difficulty, possibly by imposing a token fee to put a slight brake on such a tendency, Dr. Means states.

What about this clamor about free eye glasses, dentures and even free wigs?

All this would seem to mean "when viewed dispassionately," says Dr. Means, "is that under the previous system there were great numbers of people who needed prosthetic appliances and could not afford to get them. The stories of abuses of these privileges I am convinced are exaggerated, and I am assured that steps are being taken to eliminate such abuse as does exist."

In rounding out his analysis of the British system, Dr. Means emphasizes the fact that local health centers are one of the important elements of the program, although so far they are still largely in the blueprint stage. When they get going, they will implement and facilitate the work of general practitioners and even provide them with office space in many instances.

Although our own problems are in many ways different from those of the British, Dr. Means feels that we have much to learn from Britain's "momentous experiment."

"We should be grateful to Britain," he concludes, "for making this venture."

You're Right, Soldier

A state-wide lobby tie-up in Wisconsin between the American Legion and the American Medical Association to fight the proposed national health insurance bill was exposed recently in the Capital Times of Madison.

On its front page, the Times reproduced a letter from the president of the State Medical Society to Legion post commanders urging the posts to adopt resolutions opposing the program as "socialized medicine."

One commander sent the letter to the Capital Times with this note scrawled across the top: "I received this as county commander of the American Legion. Alas, we have fallen upon evil days."

CIO Charges Gag by Two Southern Radio Stations

THE CIO has filed a formal complaint with the federal government against two southern radio stations which have refused to sell time for CIO broadcasts.

The stations are WKLY in Hartwell, Ga., and WAIM, in nearby Anderson, S. C. The complaints were filed with the Federal Communications Commission by Jerome Cooper, counsel for the CIO Organizing Committee in the southern area.

A formal demand that CIO complaints against WKLY be heard at hearings on a renewal of the station's operating license will also be filed in the next few days.

WKLY was charged by the CIO with deliberately breaking a contract with the CIO to carry a series of union programs. WAIM refused to make any time at all available to the CIO.

A CONTRACT TO carry the series of CIO radio shows was negotiated with WKLY by the Georgia Association of Local Stations and the CIO, and the first broadcast was carried in Hartwell on Feb. 12.

But two days later the station proprietor—Louie Morris—rushed into print in the newspaper at Anderson with an "apology for ever having broadcast a thing of that kind."

"I'm against the CIO, I don't approve of its policies or its tactics, and furthermore, we had already turned down the application of some of the CIO crowd for time on the station," Morris said in the newspaper story.

Morris claimed that he had received what he described as considerable "adverse comment" about the show, and claimed it was put on the air "strictly by accident and without his knowledge or approval"—even though a contract had been signed for the sale of time.

WKLY's BOSS, in the concluding sentence of his statement, tipped his hand as to a major reason for keeping the CIO's organizing message off the air.

"We are getting new industries here in Hartwell, and we don't want this CIO crowd to muddy up the waters," Morris said.

Cooper, in his letter to the federal radio agency, said the proposed programs were "of general, educational and economic interests to a vast audience of working people reached by this station." He added that the programs were clearly "in the public convenience, interest and necessity."

WAIM, is owned by Milton Hall, who also publishes two daily newspapers.

WAIM at first refused to sell the CIO radio time on Sundays; then it refused time for Saturday broadcasts.

LATER, COOPER charged, a station official "stated orally . . . that the programs would be broadcast if time becomes available . . . but the station still maintains that no time is available."

It is expected that in its petition for a public hearing on WKLY's FCC license renewal, the CIO will charge that the station ownership is "lacking in the probity and character" required of a station license holder.

By refusing to sell time to the CIO for discussion of important public issues, WKLY is failing to operate its station in the public interest, CIO lawyers maintain.

The FCC has held in past decisions that a station is not compelled to sell its time to every would-be program buyer—but it has also ruled that it must make time available for discussion of controversial public issues.

The CIO's organizing campaign in Hartwell is clearly that.

What a Local Does For Its Members When They Strike

By Mary Heaton Vorse
For Labor Press Association

IT WAS almost a blizzard when I went to Local Dodge 3 at Hamtramck, Mich., with Mildred Jeffrey, UAW-CIO radio director.

Dodge Local 3 is one of the locals where anti-administration elements are strong, but the UAW is a young, turbulent, disputatious and independent union.

The last time I was in Hamtramack was in 1937, in the sit-down era. The wind had been howling and the snow blowing then too, only it was 2 a.m. and we'd just heard there had been a settlement of the Chrysler strike in Lansing.

Big Ed Barttiebort, Dodge local president, was away on negotiations, so the first person I met was William Stachiw, publicity director and editor of Main Dodge News. He told me Dodge 3 has 30,000 members.

THE STRIKE committee is made up of the executive board, the plant bargaining committee, and the chairman of the Flying Squadron. Each local has a distinguishing mark for its Flying Squadron, and that of Dodge is a blue fatigue cap, with "Flying Squadron" in yellow. The squadron is on watch 24 hours a day.

The Publicity Committee was meeting, and they let me sit in. They were discussing the material for the issue of the weekly paper, and the meeting was so full of pep it reminded me of the Provincetown Players who first put on Eugene O'Neill's plays. They took up the case of a man who had been burned out and had lost his children.

Next they took up an article about activities for wives. You've got to make the women at home understand what the strike is about, was the gist of the article.

"You take this piece of literature which told all about the strike," some one said, "It was given away at the gates and in the union hall. How many men troubled to take it home? The women sit home and half the time all they know about a strike is that there is no pay check."

"Yes," said someone else, "you know well enough that our dressmaking classes and our dancing classes for the kiddies have had more criticism than anything else."

THIS HAD A familiar ring. As long as I have been in the labor movement, most men wait until there's a strike before they feel something must be done about the little woman.

Then followed a piece on the union-wide blood bank the union has set up.

So the contributions ranged over the whole strike activities, from pensions to blood banks. When I was called away far too soon, someone was reading an article on the H-Bomb and what to do about it. I passed through the welfare room where the strikers were being screened for relief, and back through the kitchen again, feeling I had only had a glimpse of this militant Local.

UAW Wins T-H Vote, Sets GM Proposals

THE CIO AUTO Workers recently smacked General Motors with a resounding union shop vote and at the same time UAW's 275-man General Motors Council announced formulation of the union's 1950 contract proposals.

The workers voted overwhelmingly for the union shop in the biggest NLRB election ever held, final returns showed last week. Of the 193,579 valid ballots, 171,629, or more than 88%, were for the union shop. T. A. Johnstone, director of the UAW-GM department, declared wholesale attempts to pad eligibility lists were made by the company. He called attention to the 5774 challenged ballots and declared:

"The challenged votes would have reached astronomical figures had not NLRB officials ruled, in many instances, against the more obvious fraudulent lists submitted by the corporation."

Johnstone said that the company had listed as eligible workers who had died, quit, been promoted to supervision, fired or laid off so long ago they were unknown in the plants.

"THE VOTE tells GM, in no uncertain terms," Johnstone said, "that the workers stand solidly behind their union and that they mean business in their demand for a union shop this year."

Meanwhile the UAW-GM Council, which speaks for 160,000 GM workers, informed the company it intends to "get a slice" of the corporation's huge $600 million 1949 profit melon.

The union pointed out that for every dollar paid in hourly wages last year GM made $1.13 profit. For every hour worked by hourly rated employes, at an average rate of $1.63 an hour, the corporation made $1.85 in profits.

The union's proposals include $125 a month pensions, comprehensive hospital and medical coverage, severance allowances, wage increases and other economic improvements which will total 31c an hour.

The UAW wants to discontinue the cost-of-living escalator clause written into the 1948 contract, although it would retain and increase the "annual improvement factor" also in the 1948 pact.

"In view of GM's record profits, which are greater than those of any other corporation in the world and greatest in the company's history, the proposals formulated by union are relatively modest," the council declared. "They can be granted in full, the prices of General Motors products can be reduced and the company can still make a substantial profit."

THE PRESENT contract expires May 29. Negotiations may be initiated as early as April 1.

The proposed GM pension plan would follow the pattern of other plans negotiated by UAW in the industry and would be based on three fundamental principles:

1. A fully guaranteed plan through the establishment of an actuarially sound trust fund maintained through fixed payments by the company.

2. The plan to be administered by a joint board on which the workers through their union have equal representation with the company, with an impartial chairman.

3. Full financing of the plan by the corporation.

FROM NOW ON Frank Schratz, 66, UAW-CIO member who for 36 years worked for the Ford Motor Co. in Detroit, will take it easy. The taking started March 1, when he retired as the $100-a-month pension plan reached under agreement between Ford and the UAW became effective. Nearly 90,000 UAW members have struck Chrysler for similar benefits.

Organizationally Speaking

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The workers of the Chrysler Corp., members of the United Automobile Workers-CIO, are still engaged in a gigantic strike for improved pensions, wages and social benefits. The one major strike action in the country today, it has the support of every true trade unionist.

The United Mine Workers' strike has been settled, and the credit for settlement goes to the workers themselves, the men with the picks. They resisted successfully every effort of the operators to force them back to work.

The writer had the pleasure of addressing a meeting of workers of the Atomic Plant, Oak Ridge, Tenn. These workers are members of the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, and the occasion was the installation of recently elected local officers. The workers in atomic plants operate under restricted conditions, therefore are entitled to utmost considerations. They are determined to maintain their union and keep it strong, and with the help of the CIO they can better realize the improvement and considerations they are entitled to.

There continues to be good progress in organizing white collar and office workers, and public workers.

USA-CIO Rep. Erwin "Curly" Leppert reports the following union shop elections recently held in District 9, United Steelworkers of America:

	Yes	No
L. F. Grammes & Sons, Inc., Allentown, Pa.	371	14
Traylor Engin. & Mfg. Co., Allentown, Pa.	145	4
The Aldrich Pump Co., Allentown, Pa.	101	15
W. F. Mosser & Sons, Allentown, Pa.	60	9
Dieters' Foundry, Cherryville, Pa.	44	1
Sarco Mfg. Corp., Bethlehem, Pa.	181	16
Keystone Lamp Mfg. Co., Slatington, Pa.	109	4
TOTAL	1011	63

Al Hartnett, assistant to the chairman, IUE-CIO, reports two more IUE representation-election victories. At the Star Metal Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, the workers voted 56 to 32 for the IUE. This was a run-off election, as the IUE had a plurality but not a majority in the first election. The UE got only 8 votes in the first election and was dropped from the ballot in the run-off. At the Illinois Gear and Machine Co., Chicago, the workers voted 185 to 16 in favor of IUE.

Pres. O. A. Knight, Oil Workers International Union-CIO, and CIO Reg. Dir. Robert Starnes report a representation election victory at the Cit-Con Oil Refinery, Lake Charles, La. The vote was 254 OWIU-CIO; 164 AFL; no union 1. Dir. Starnes gives particular credit for this victory to Harry Cochran and Perry Allen.

CIO Reg. Dir. Ben Henry reports that the Textile Workers Union of America won a representation election at the Allied Manufacturing Co., Des Moines, Ia., by a vote ofi 30 to 1.

CIO Reg. Dir. Joseph Walsh reports that the TWUA also obtained recognition from Duplan Corp. for 650 employees at its Nanticoke, Pa., mill, who for 10 years were represented by an independent union. Vote for affiliation with TWUA was practically unanimous. Congratulations to Appalachian Joint Board Manager Charles Sobol and Reps. Joseph Killian, Sam Fiore, Joseph Bellas, and Al Camer on a notable victory.

A. F. Hartung, vice president, IWA-CIO, reports that in a representation election at the Coos Head Timber Co., McKenna Mill, Coos Bay, Ore., the 57 eligible voters gave the IWA-CIO a substantial majority over the AFL. The organizing work was carried on by the local business agent, Howard Campbell, and Pres. Ed Benedict of District 7. The IWA-CIO also won two NLRB representation lections in Michigan: Barrett Logging Co., Eligible 37; IWA 21; no union 9; Northwestern Veneer and Plywood Corp., eligible 99; IWA 45; no union 24. IWA Organizer Walter Young participated in these elections.

CIO Reg. Dir. Edward McCrone reports that the TWUA-CIO won a representation election at the Under Garment Corp., Watertown, Conn., by the following vote: Eligible 510; TWUA-CIO 298; Intl. Garment Workers-AFL 10; no union 172; void 8; challenged 2. Gordon Lodge, TWUA representative, was in charge. Through a check of signed application cards, Local 364, Cleaners and Dyers Union, CIO, was recognized as the bargaining agent for the 29 employes of the American Cleaners Corp., West Haven, Conn. This local is affiliated with the ACWA-CIO.

In the largest union shop election held in the history of organized labor, the workers of General Motors voted in favor of the UAW-CIO by the following vote: Eligible 230,050; ballots cast 193,579; yes votes 171,629; no votes 21,950; void ballots 521; challenged 5774. Of the valid ballots cast, 88.6% voted for the union shop. Of those eligible to vote, 86.9% participated.

Chrysler Bars Plan of UAW To End Strike

THE CHRYSLER CORP., which has literally made a career out of saying "no" to CIO Auto Worker contract proposals, has turned down another UAW offer to end the seven-week strike against the nation's third largest auto manufacturer.

The union's latest bid offered "immediate termination" of the strike if the company would agree to a pension plan and a hospital-medical program amounting to 10c an hour, providing the pension plan incorporated three basic pension principles included in other contracts in the industry. The principles were:

Establishment of a trust fund maintained through fixed payments by the company which would guarantee pension payments.

Joint union-company administration of the plan.

Full financing by the company, with no employe contributions.

If the company agreed to these provisions, the union would call off the strike and the parties would then negotiate on contract changes for a 30 day period, the union said. All unresolved issues at the end of that time would then be submitted to impartial arbitration.

Chrysler's director of industrial relations, Robert W. Conder, promptly turned thumbs down on the offer.

He also replied "not interested" to a UAW invitation to debate the issues of the strike at a union meeting later in the week.

At the meeting, UAW Pres. Walter Reuther told 20,000 strikers to "stay out on strike until Chrysler is ready to give what we ask." Reuther indicated that the Auto Workers are making plans to ask for a $200 a month pension by 1960.

"Give us 10 years and we will reach that goal," he said.

LATE last week, Reuther rejected with thanks an offer of a $1 million cash loan by the United Mine Workers to assist UAW in its strike. He said the union has not been forced to borrow money to support the strike and did not anticipate that it would have to do so.

UAW Chrysler members went on strike Jan. 25 in a dispute over pensions. The union charged that the company's offer amounted to not more than 3c an hour.

When Chrysler rejected a union counter proposal of a straight 10c an hour wage increase, the 89,000 union employes walked out.

Bowles Orders Jobless Study

Gov. Chester Bowles of Connecticut has named a Full Employment Committee to look into the problem of the State's 68,000 currently unemployed persons.

The committee will explore all possible measures for developing a broad program of economic expansion, including the creation of new jobs, raising the level of industrial production and retail sales, and increasing farm income.

Chairman of the committee is Laurence I. Ackerman, dean of the University of Connecticut School of Business. The committee's activities will be financed by a grant from the U. S. Department of Labor.

Congressional Hysteria Puts Civil Rights in Peril

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

IT WAS a tough week for the cause of civil rights:

1. The Mundt-Ferguson bill, which endangers every sort of labor and liberal organization, was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

2. The Smith Amendment to the National Scientific Foundation bill was approved by the House; it would bar federal scientific scholarships to a lot of youngsters under the stiffest "loyalty" statute yet drawn.

3. Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.), joining in a GOP drive to smear the State Dept. plunged into the middle of a name-calling contest. First victims of the smear: Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Secretary; Philip Jessup, a leading State Dept. figure; and Miss Dorothy Kenyon, prominent New York lawyer.

CIO joined with scores of other liberal and labor groups to protest both the Mundt-Ferguson bill and the Smith amendment to the Science bill.

Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director, described the Mundt-Ferguson bill as "vicious and repressive" and said it would confer on a government bureau—the FBI—"the power of life and death over all organizations."

The bill contains a number of loosely-worded provisions for registration and control over allegedly subversive organizations, but its terms are so sweeping that all types of groups might be caught in its meshes.

COWAN pointed out that the Justice Dept. has not requested any such bill, and charged that its "real purpose is simply to make political hay for its authors in an election year."

"Under this bill, organizations would be judged not on the basis of their acts but on their beliefs," he said. "Such thought control is totalitarian, not democratic; and democracy cannot be preserved by totalitarian methods."

Liberal Sen. Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said its provisions might cover "several million" Americans who are clearly not Communists or Communist sympathizers. Sen. Langer (R., N. D.) called the bill a product of "hysteria and frantic, unthinking fear."

Sen. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) attacked the proposal as "fundamentally a sedition bill." He said it "can be used against organized labor and in fact against other organizations, whether churches, farm business, or any of the multitude of legitimate American organizations against which a hostile prosecutor or administration might want to use it."

With the Smith amendment to the Scientific Foundation bill ready for study by a House-Senate conference committee, CIO Pres. Philip Murray urged its elimination from the final bill. The amendment was added in the House and was not passed by the Senate.

Pointing out that the Foundation's scholarships are for "pure science" and have no relation to atomic matters, Murray noted that the education funds would be withheld from anybody who ever belonged to any organization on the Attorney-General's subversive list.

THAT TYPE of inquisition seemed to be just what McCarthy was after as he started testimony before a Senate committee on his charges of "communism in the State Dept."

The Wisconsin Republican—twice censured in the past 10 years by his state's Supreme Court for unethical conduct—received widespread publicity when he listed what he claimed were "81 cases" of persons with Red ties in the State Dept.

The first person named—Miss Dorothy Kenyon, who has served the U. S. at the United Nations—called the Wisconsin Republican an "unmitigated liar. . . a coward to take shelter in the cloak of Congressional immunity."

Miss Kenyon, a former New York City judge, suggested that if the Senator thinks she's a Red, he should talk with Russia's delegate on the UN Women's Commission—"she and I battled for years."

Mrs. Acheson, wife of the Secy. of State, McCarthy charged, was listed in the House Un-American committee's files as a sponsor of the leftist Congress of American Women. Mrs. Acheson revealed to reporters that 10 years ago she'd given two bucks to the League of Women Shoppers, which just recently merged with the women's congress.

Philip Jessup, a top State Dept. figure, has been buillding anti-Communist diplomatic fronts throughout the world; but he was "accused" of having belonged to the highly-respectable American Russian Institute during the war.

It was also revealed that two of McCarthy's "81 cases" were in mutual conflict. The same person branded as a dangerous Communist in "Case 14" was hailed as a devoted but thwarted anti-Communist in "Case 41."

Steel Price Rise Held Untimely by Probers

A Congressional committee is due to report this week that recent price increases by the steel industry were "untimely" and "unwarrantd."

A majority of the joint Senate-House economics group has told reporters that last year's steel union pension-welfare programs were not responsible for causing the price increase. The committee, it appears, will accept the argument of Otis Brubaker, steel union economist—who testified at length before the group—that the corporations had no economic basis for lifting their prices to the consumer.

Sen. Taft (R. O.), leading minority member of the committee, has already squawked against the forthcoming majority report.

Senate Delays DP Bill Action To Next Month

THE SENATE has delayed action on a new displaced persons bill until early next month.

Decisions to postpone final debate and vote on 24 amendments and a substitute measure was taken after days of wrangling and talk on the Senate floor. At times it looked suspiciously like a filibuster.

The Administration has been calling for major reforms in the Displaced Persons act voted by the 80th Congress. That bill limited the number of war refugees entering the country to about 200,000 and included provisions that were widely criticized as biased against Catholics and Jews.

Revision of the law—to remove the discriminatory features and to add about another 100,000 to the number of refugees allowed into the country during the next few years—has been vigorously backed by labor, church and civic groups.

The House has already passed the Celler bill, which carries most of the Administration's proposals. But that bill was held up for months last year in the Senate Judiciary committee, where Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.) has voiced his opposition to it.

The bill was finaly blasted out of committee last year just before adjournment, but was sent back with instructions that it be reported out again on Jan. 25, 1950. The bill McCarran reported at that time was looked upon as providing a stymie to further efforts to get DP's into the country.

Liberal members of the committee then proposed a substitute bill along the lines of the measure voted in the House. Meanwhile McCarran ordered new hearings on charges of maladministration of the existing law. The hearings, which still continue, have offered little support for his accusations.

McCarran used the continued hearings as an excuse for postponing action on the bill at this time. Sen. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), a supporter of the liberal subtsitute, commented that it was the "first time in the history of the Senate" that new hearings have been ordered on a bill already up for action.

The debate itself was an often hot-tempered exchange of views about the war refugees, their desirability as new American citizens and the country's power to absorb new immigrants at this time.

Sen. O'Conor (D., Md.) hailed the liberalized bill as fitting in with American traditions of humanitarianism. But Sen. Eastland (D., Miss.) strongly supported the McCarran "tightening up" bill.

Liberal Sen. Lehman (D., N. Y.) followed up with a listing of 10 major inaccuracies which he said were contained in Eastland's criticism of the DP program and the Administration bill.

Eastland claimed that Lehman had spoken a "deliberate untruth"—at which point Sen. Neely (D., W. Va.) forced Eastland to give up the Senate floor under rules that one Senator may not call another a "liar."

Also read into the record were wires to Senators from CIO Pres. Philip Murray hailing humanitarian purposes of the Administration bill and denying that the DP's would in any appreciable way aggravate the unemployment situation.

Millionaires' Relief Bill Set For Early Vote

IF THEY called it a bill to make millionaires richer, it probably wouldn't have a chance.

Instead the Kerr bill's title talks about regulation of shipments of natural gas, and sounds very technical.

The result is that the bill may soon be passed by Congress unless popular outcries frighten off some Senators who will otherwise support it.

The bill—S.1498—is due for a Senate vote any day. It was passed by the House last year. If it becomes law, the Federal Power Commission will lose much of its effective regulation over rates for interstate shipment of natural gas to consumers in big city areas.

Opponents of the bill predict its passage would take at least $50 million a year out of the pockets of gas consumers. Natural gas consumption for household and industrial purposes has been spiralling upward.

A small number of big oil corporations would get most of the higher revenue. Sen. Kerr (D., Okla.) is a big oil-and-gas man himself, and his own Kerr-McGee Oil Producing Co. would benefit directly. It owns about 900 billion square feet of natural gas reserves.

Fair Deal Senators are planning a heavy barrage against the bill. They see it as one of a recent series of moves to grab heavy profits and to limit federal regulation of basic utilities.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed in Congress.	Keep writing to Senators, Representatives to force T-H repeal.
FEPC S. 1728 HR 4453	Senate bill would bar job discrimination based on race, creed or color, and provide penalties for violation.	House Dixiegops voted substitute bill without any enforcement teeth. Senate version faces filibuster.	Ask Senators to vote for S 1728 without weakening amendments, and to fight filibuster.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S. 2246 HR 7402	Provides for long-term, low-interest U. S. loans to co-ops for building moderate-cost housing projects, etc.	OK'd by House and Senate Banking Committees, due for floor action soon.	Ask Senators, Congressmen to give bill full support.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors benefits, etc., under social security. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Senate Finance Comm. now holding hearings. CIO has asked further improvements.	Ask Senators to try to strengthen HR 6000 over present provisions.
Federal Aid To Education S. 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. House Labor Comm. now considering.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to OK Senate bill.
ECA extension HR 7378	Renews Marshall Plan for another year; sets $2,950,000,000 ceiling on funds.	Senate Foreign Relations Comm. and House Foreign Affairs now considering. CIO has announced support.	Ask members of the two committees to approve it as drafted.
Kerr Bill S. 1498	Weakens Federal Power Commission authority to regulate interstate shipments of natural gas.	Passed House last session; on Senate calendar awaiting action.	Write your Senator, ask him to vote NO.
Mundt-Ferguson Bill S. 2311	Bill endangers civil liberties, union rights — under guise of fighting subversive activities.	CIO opposed bill at hearings last year. Senate Judiciary Comm. has brought out revised bill.	Ask Senators to oppose bill as dangerous to civil rights.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00 A YEAR
5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., MARCH 20, 1950 82 No. 12

On The Ideological Front . . .

MISS DOROTHY KENYON, who called Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) a "cowardly liar" after he charged her with being a Communist sympathizer, appears before a Senate subcommittee to establish her loyalty. (See Page 3.)

On The Strike Front . . .

IN AN EFFORT to speed settlement of the two-month strike of the Chrysler workers, Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers (right) meets with Chief Federal Mediator Cyrus Ching at a Washington hotel. (See Page 7.)

On The Political Front . . .

Your vote is the one that counts

Register!

CIO POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE

PAC MOVES into high gear as the dates of the primary and general Congressional elections draw nearer. (For story on PAC activities and a round-up of the contests, please turn to Page 9.)

Left-Wing Unions Routed By CIO on Four Fronts

The Steelworkers, the new Intl. Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers and the newer Government and Civic Employees Organizing Committee scored significant victories over Communist-dominated unions. In New York City members were flocking into the Community and Social Agencies Union No. 1707, CIO, from the discredited Office and Professional Workers.

The IUE-CIO signed a contract with General Motors covering electrical workers just two weeks after the new union, in a National Labor Relations Board election, roundly defeated the Commie-controlled United Electrical Workers.

The Steelworkers gained 20,000 new members when miners and smeltermen in Utah and Nevada deserted the Red-controlled Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers. (See Page 2 for the Steelworkers and IUE stories.)

GCEOC issued its first block of charters to local unions, many members of which formerly belonged to the expelled United Public Workers. (See Page 11 for Stories on GCEOC and Local 1707.)

20,000 Desert Mine, Mill; Join Steelworkers

APPROXIMATELY 20,000 members of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers have deserted their Communist and party line leaders and affiliated with the CIO Steelworkers.

The shifts in affiliation are the fruit of a seed of rebellion against being used as a front for Communist activities that was planted among the miners and smeltermen in Nevada and Utah more than 10 years ago, grew in a decade of ever-increasing dissension and dissatisfaction, and ripened when the IUMMSW was expelled as Communist-dominated by the National CIO Executive Board last month.

Other locals with an estimated membership of an additional 20,000 are seeking affiliation with the Steelworkers, it is reported.

Communist domination of the IUMMSW almost destroyed the union in 1947, when a large group of members sympathetic to the CIO rather than the Communist Party revolted. The CIO for a long time advised the workers not to secede but to fight within the union to remove the Communist influence. This proved impossible. Early in 1948 some locals bolted in disgust and became part of the Progressive Metalworkers Council of the CIO Shipbuilders Union in order to remain within the CIO. Others followed.

THOSE THAT remained found themselves burdened with trade union as well as ideological problems. Last summer five IUMMSW locals with about 5000 members in iron ore mines in the Birmingham, Ala., area were on the verge of disintegrating because top leaders appeared to be too busy serving the Communist Party to serve them. The CIO was forced to step in and charter them as local industrial unions. They later affiliated with the Steelworkers.

In the Timmins gold area of Northern Ontario, Canada, once-strong IUMMSW locals charged that to all intents and purposes they were completely abandoned by top leadership. Contracts ran out and were not renewed, grievances remained unsettled.

In 1948 they appealed to the Canadian Congress of Labour, which chartered them, launched an organizing campaign and won certification as bargaining representative at seven mines. At its meeting last January the CCL Executive Board formally took over IUMMSW's jurisdiction and asked the Steelworkers to assume it.

The majority of the new members of the Steelworkers come from locals which were associated with the Shipbuilders' Progressive Metalworkers Council and with the CCL. They are located in Alabama, Utah, Nevada, Illinois, Connecticut, Indiana, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, as well as Canada.

The IUMMSW was organized in 1916 by locals of the old Western Federation of Miners. It was one of the original eight internationals which left the AFL in 1935 to set up the CIO. At the time of its expulsion by CIO it had a membership of about 44,000. In its jurisdiction are about 150,000 workers.

Pres. Truman Urges Abolition Of NLRB Post Held By Denham

By GERVASE N. LOVE

TWENTY-ONE sweeping changes in the federal government's administrative setup were proposed to Congress on Mar. 13 by President Truman.

They were prepared in accordance with the Reorganization Act of 1949 and were based on recommendations of the Hoover Committee. They become effective in 60 days unless a majority of the authorized membership of House or Senate—not a majority of those voting—passes a resolution of disapproval.

The most important change from the labor viewpoint is the abolition of the office of general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, made one of the most powerful in the entire government by the Taft-Hartley Act.

The general counsel is the chief administrative officer of the NLRB, although the five board members have some administrative authority themselves. In addition, he can act independently of the board in some instances as set forth in the law. The post is filled by Robert N. Denham, a Republican, who has been bitterly criticized by labor.

A move to abolish the job was made a year ago by one of the sponsors of T-H, Sen. Taft (R., O.). A bill he introduced with this proviso passed the Senate, but died in the House.

THE T-H division of authority between the general counsel and the NLRB, and the confused administrative organization it established, have led to an increasingly bitter feud between the board and Denham.

The board early this month rescinded some of an earlier delegation of its administrative authority to him, whereupon he announced that he refused to stand for "usurpation" of his authority by the board. President Truman in his accompanying message to Congress said his plan will "end the confusion which has resulted from divided responsibility."

"The Senate last year indicated its approvel of this setup," he said. "The reorganization plan in effect restores unified authority and resposibility of the board. As in the case of other plans for regulatory agencies, certain administrative and executive responsibilities are placed in the chairman (Paul M. Herzog) . . .

"This action eliminates a basic defect in the present organization of the NLRB and provides an organizational pattern consistent with that established for other regulatory agencies."

"Has a Denham complex—thinks nobody can change his ways."

THE CIO "is in agreement with and supports" the order abolishing the NLRB general counsel's post, Arthur J. Goldberg, CIO general counsel, said. In its testimony on the Thomas-Lesinski Bill last year, he recalled, the CIO objected to the unlimited discretion conferred upon the holder of the post by T-H.

"The CIO's objections to the independent office of general counsel," he said, "were apart from and in addition to its opposition to the person of Mr. Robert N. Denham."

He pointed out that the Taft bill of last year and the Hoover Commission both said the office should be abolished, and maintained that "this is one proposition on which everyone seems to be in agreement."

The Hoover Commission's first recommendation in its report on regulatory agencies was that all administrative responsibility be vested in the chairman. President Truman followed this suggestion not only for the NLRB, but also for the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Power Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Communications Commission and Civil Aeronautics Board.

Radical changes were made in the Maritime Commission.

The present five-man commission was abolished and will be replaced by a three-man Maritime Board and a Maritime Administration in the Dept. of Commerce. The new board will have the regulatory duties of the commission and its authority to award subsidies for shipbuilding and operating.

However, ship construction and the other administrative functions will be vested in the Maritime Administration. The plan also includes an Undersecretary of Commerce for Transportation who will have charge of the department's expanded transportation activities.

THREE MAJOR changes were made in the Dept. of Labor.

One concentrates in the Secretary the powers and functions now conferred on subordinates and creates an administrative assistant secretary at $14,000 a year to provide top-level assistance in managerial functions. The same change was made in the Depts. of Justice, Treasury, Interior, Agriculture and Commerce; in addition, two more assistant secretaries were provided in Agriculture and one more in Interior.

A second Dept. of Labor change vests in the secretary the authority to coordinate the enforcement of labor standards provisions of laws relating to federal construction and public works, or to construction with federally-financed assistance or guarantee.

He likewise will have authority in the application of the eight-hour-day law on such projects; over the Davis-Bacon Act prescribing the going rate for workers on federal construction; the Copeland anti-kickback law, and the payment of prevailing rates on construction financed wholly or in part by federal loans or grants, or covered by federal guarantee, such as the National Housing Act, the Housing Act of 1949, the Airport Act and the Hospital Survey and Construction Act.

The third change shifted to the department from the Federal Security Administration the Bureau of Employees' Compensation and the Employees' Compensation Appeals Board and their functions. The bureau administers programs which compensate federal workers and their dependents for death or disabling injuries suffered on the job, and carries on accident prevention and safety campaigns among government workers.

At present it covers 2 million federal employes, about 500,000 longshoremen and harbor workers, 250,000 industrial employes in the District of Columbia and an estimated 100,000 employes of private contractors at overseas U. S. bases. The Appeals Board hears and decides appeals on compensation of such employes.

IUE-CIO, GM Sign First Agreement

GENERAL Motors Corp. signed a contract Mar. 10 with the CIO International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers just two weeks after the CIO's new union dealt a resounding defeat to the United Electrical Workers in the first major NLRB elections in the industry since the IUE was chartered.

The contract continues provisions of the old agreement and contains some additional IUE suggestions, and will expire on the same date as the UAW-CIO contract with GM. Representatives of the two unions met in Dayton recently and agreed to recommend to their respective members that neither union come to an accord with General Motors in future negotiations without agreement of the other.

Some 27,000 workers in GM's electrical division in Dayton and Warren, O., Rochester, N. Y., and New Brunswick, N. J., are covered by the contract. One of the provisions is new system for checkoff cards which will go into effect in May.

The contract, IUE officials said, "completely refutes the phony UE propaganda handed out before the NLRB election that a vote for IUE-CIO meant a vote for no contract."

MEMBERS OF IUE's Westinghouse Conference Board met in Pittsburgh recently to discuss contract demands. A week earlier the General Electric Conference Board had met in Schenectady, N. Y., to draw up its economic program.

The Westinghouse group discussed changes which include:

- Pensions, hospitalization and insurance.
- Three weeks' vacation after 15 years service, instead of after 20 years.
- One day's vacation for each month of work up to 10 months. This would assure paid vacations to workers in shops with seasonal employment.
- Increase in holidays from seven to nine a year.
- All holidays to be paid, even if they fall on a Saturday.
- Temporary or estimated time values to become recorded values within 90 days rather than within 12 months.
- Added time on estimated value to be considered integral part of estimated value so that total will become the recorded value.
- Five days sick leave per year for hourly employes to be paid for by end of year whether used or not.
- Day worker inequities to be removed by wage adjustment.

THE GENERAL Electric group highlighted in its proposals:

- Substantial wage increases.
- An improved company-financed pension plan.
- Death benefits, sick benefits, severance pay.
- Improvement of holiday pay and seniority provisions.

Both groups will take back the proposals to the membership of each local union for discussion. At the end of the month the boards will meet again, both separately and jointly, to adopt specific contract proposals based on the rank-and-file suggestions.

Sen. McCarthy Used Red Smear To Win Office

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

SMEAR compaigns against Fair Dealers—in the State Department and throughout the Administration—are an old story with Sen. Joe McCarthy (R., Wis.).

The Senator has been using the cry of "communism" to attract headlines in his current attack on the State Department—one that seems to fit in with current Republican sniping attacks on the Truman administration.

McCarthy used much the same technique during his 1949 election campaign in Wisconsin.

His Democratic opponent in that contest was Howard McMurray, a university professor and consistent New Dealer who had already served two years in the House of Representatives. But McCarthy hauled out the "communism" brush against him, too.

That attack on McMurray's patriotism sprang from the fact that he had been endorsed by the CIO Political Action Committee.

—From St. Louis Post Dispatch

Sen. McCarthy Goes Into His Act

—Herblock In Washington Post

"Pst—Is She Gone Yet?"

ELECTED in the 1946 Republican sweep, McCarthy showed his antagonism to labor by voting down the line for the Taft-Hartley Act.

In fact, the CIO's 1947 Voting Record showed that McCarthy had failed to cast a single "right" vote on the listed issues.

In 1948, he failed to vote "right" on any of the key domestic issues listed by the CIO; and last year, though his record improved a trifle, he was still voting wrong on labor issues—including Taft-Hartley.

Only last week the Senator, who has done a lot of talking about housing, voted with the majority to remove the most important section of the middle-income housing bill.

McCarthy was not even the majority selection of his party in the 1946 Republican primaries in Wisconsin, the records show. Though he won the primary by 5500 votes over veteran liberal Sen. Robert LaFollette, Jr., he received less than 50% of the votes cast in that primary.

A STATE judge twice cited for unethical conduct by the Wisconsin Supreme Court, McCarthy looked anything but judicial as he ranted through his charges of "communism" against various employes of the State Dept. last week.

And Washington residents who know a good many of the people cited by McCarthy as reds, ex-reds, or near-reds, called his charges "fantastic."

The sharpest retort came from Dorothy Kenyon, former New York municipal judge and later a U. S. representative at the United Nations. Miss Kenyon termed herself "an independent, liberal, Rooseveltian Democrat."

When she was through, a GOP member of the Senate group investigating McCarthy's charges—Sen. Hickenlooper (Ia.)—admitted that there wasn't "the least evidence . . . the least belief" that Miss Kenyon had been "in any way subversive or disloyal."

But, as always, the denials and the acceptance of the denials were having a hard time catching up with McCarthy's headline-hunting charges.

News of McCarthy's attack on Miss Kenyon—as "affiliated with at least 28 Communist front organizations" and as having a "deep-rooted" record of communist activities—reached a lot more people than did her fiery, consistent reply to the Wisconsin Senator.

She testified under oath that "I am not and never have been a Communist. I am not and never have been a supporter of, or a member of, or a sympathizer with any organization known to me to be, or suspected by me of being controlled or dominated by Communists."

Hickenlooper made the mistake of trying to tone down McCarthy's charges—McCarthy himself had taken a run-out powder during the afternoon when Miss Kenyon appeared on the Senate committee witness stand.

He suggested, blandly, that McCarthy hadn't really called her a Communist, but that her affiliation with a number of liberal organizations should be a "matter of concern to the State Dept."

Miss Kenyon bristled, said she was "trying to keep her temper" and emphasized that Sen. McCarthy had charged her "with a great deal more than that."

AS McCARTHY added names to the record, at the insistence of the Senate investigating committee's Democratic majority, the denials came pouring in from all parts of the world.

Philip Jessup, a high State Dept. official busy trying to build an anti-Communist front in Asia, was flying back to Washington to put his statement on the committee's record; and the State Dept. said the manner in which disloyalty charges against John Service, U. S. Consul in India, had been made to the Committee were a "shame and a disgrace."

One effect of the Republican Party's constant hammering at the State Dept. and at other branches of government service may prove a serious blow at liberal government.

With McCarthy applying the Red smear to people of liberal sentiments who are clearly anti-Communists, the government may soon find it hard to find capable people for top jobs, if they feel that working for Uncle Sam will result in defamation of character and loss of future earning power.

And government executives may decline—consciously or unconsciously—to hire men and women who have belonged to liberal organizations, for fear that they, too, will become involved in the smear campaign.

That type of pressure and fear may help make the government safe for conservatives and reactionaries — despite the people's mandate for liberal policies when they vote in national elections.

Three 'Free State' Women Lose Jobs Over Loyalty Oaths

ON MARCH 13 the Court of Appeals of the Free State of Maryland ordered reinstatement of the Ober Anti-Subversive Act, which it had ruled constitutional a month earlier.

On Mar. 14 the law, which is opposed by the CIO, AFL and other liberal groups, chalked up its first victim.

On Mar. 15 the toll was two more.

First to go was Doris Shamleffer, a personnel examiner in the State Dept. of Employment and Registration. She was notified that her services would be terminated on Mar. 15, the end of the payroll period, because she had refused to sign the loyalty oath required by the act.

Out practically on her heels were Dr. Miriam E. Brailey, head of the Baltimore Health Dept.'s Bureau of Tuberculosis, who was on leave collaborating in the writing of a book on tuberculosis in children, and Elizabeth Hass, an employe of the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore. They too had refused to sign as a matter of principle.

The refusal of all three to take the oath stemmed from their religious convictions. They are members of the Society of Friends, or Quakers.

THE OBER LAW requires public employes and candidates for office to sign loyalty affidavits under penalty of losing their jobs if already in the public service, or being barred from them if successful candidates.

It is aimed at the Communists, but what the CIO and other opponents claimed would happen actually happened when the three—about whose loyalty and patriotism no one has any doubts—lost their jobs because of it. The foes of the law contended it was so worded that it could be used against any one of a large number of groups as opposed to Communism as are the legislators who passed it.

The bill was attacked in a test case filed in Baltimore. When Judge Joseph Sherbow ruled it unconstitutional its effectiveness was stayed pending an appeal to the Court of Appeals, which in February upset the lower court by refusing to act but left the stay of enforcement dangling. The reversal was based on the appellate court's claim that the none of the test case complainants is a candidate for office and that the one state employe among those bringing the suit had not been threatened with discharge or other harm.

This, the court held, failed to show "unconstitutional discrimination." In other words, it insisted on having someone harmed by application of the act before making a decision.

It now has such a person—three of them, in fact. The trio scheduled a conference with co-religionists to determine upon a course of action, but no decision was reached immediately, petitions have been filed for a referendum on the law. It probably will be on the ballot at the next election.

Not Too Tough For Woodruff, Critic Of HST's Luxury

PERHAPS the "Woodruff story" wasn't a sensation, but it was given a big play by many of the daily newspapers.

It "broke" on March 13 when Rep. Roy O. Woodruff (R., Mich.) declared:

"A private citizen, to match the standard of living now enjoyed by the President, would need an income of between $3 million and $3.5 million a year."

He then gave figures to show that the man who holds what is probably the biggest job in the world gets well paid—but he didn't stop there.

He added in the cost of the Presidential staff, White House travel allowance, the cost of operating the Presidential yacht and airplane, and the cost of the Secret Service and White House guards.

"H-m-m-m," said a CIO staff member after reading the story. "Wonder what the same kind of figuring would show about Mr. Woodruff."

HE PUT the matter up to an expert on governmental affairs, who provided the following information:

Rep. Woodruff receives an annual salary of $12,500 and has a $2500 tax-free expense account. He is allowed $16,300 annually for clerical help, $500 for telegrams and long distance telephone calls.

"That amounts to $31,850," the expert said, "but that isn't all."

Rep. Woodruff also gets the free use of office equipment and other facilities in Washington and his home town.

"The figure of $31,850," the expert added, "does not include free medical care, free flowers, unlimited free postage, cut-rate prices on stationery and other articles in the House Post Exchange (called by courtesy a 'stationery room') and it does not include a 20c-a-mile travel allowance to and from his home."

And furthermore, our expert added, members of Congress have a good pension system. After serving six years, Congressmen can draw $1875 a year in pensions for the rest of their lives. The maximum pension is $7500 annually.

FREE medical care applies not only to Congressmen but to members of their families. There's a fully-equipped clinic on Capitol Hill—and services also are provided free at the Army's Walter Reed Hospital and the Navy's Bethesda, Md., hospital.

"And even beyond that," the expert continued, "Rep. Woodruff and his colleagues get cut rates on the food they eat in the Capitol dining room and for their barbering and shoe shines.

"And then there's the matter of how much we charge up to Rep. Woodruff of the $56 million which was required to run Congress last year."

"H-m-m-m," said the CIO staff member. "Very interesting—very interesting."

"You understand, of course," the expert concluded, "that I'm not charging Rep. Woodruff abused any of his privileges or took undue advantage of facilities.

"What I'm saying is that his method of 'figuring' in relation to the President has a very bad odor."

McCarthy Didn't Have A Pumpkin

But He, Like Whitaker Chambers, Produced a Sensation; Senator's Scheme Can Cause Nothing But Damage

By ALLAN L. SWIM

AH, PROGRESS is a wonderful thing—a really wonderful thing, and there's no two ways about it.

Way back in 1949 a fellow by the name of Whitaker Chambers poked his hand into a "secret" pumpkin on his farm in Maryland.

What he brought out—a handful of documents—was a nine-day news sensation. Hundreds of thousands of words were used to chronicle the event.

And it was even rumored that little children went around trying to make up rhymes containing the words "Whitaker Chambers—Pumpkin Papers."

But time has revealed Chambers was a piker.

Just a short time ago a fellow named Joseph McCarthy, a Republican Senator from up Wisconsin way, apparently stuck his hand into thin air and came up with an even bigger sensation.

The State Dept., according to the McCarthy story, is just loaded down with Communist influences.

We on the CIO News aren't going to be so silly as to declare in advance that McCarthy won't dig up a person—or maybe two—in the big State Dept. who at one time or other belonged to Commie front outfits.

He might even do better than that—though we doubt it.

Regardless of the outcome of his "investigation," however, the public owes him a real vote of thanks.

He has demonstrated again—and forcefully—the danger and folly of guilt by association.

But the public owes him no thanks for the other things he has done.

He has undermined—or at least cast suspicion on—American foreign relations at a time when it can ill be afforded.

He has demonstrated a dirty method of making what he no doubt considers "political hay."

And, unfortunately, a large portion of the press has handled the McCarthy story in such a way as lend aid and comfort to the Senator.

IF THERE ARE Communists in the State Dept. they should be booted out—and in a big hurry.

The same goes for Communists sympathizers.

ButMcCarthy seems to be more interested in smearing Secy. of State Dean Acheson and, by inference, President Truman, than in getting rid of a dangerous element existing in one of our important governmental bodies.

The "evidence" he has produced thus far indicates he's taken up where the House Un-American Committee left off when it was dominated by former Rep. J. Parnell Thomas, the salary kick-back man.

Thomas made "guilt by association" a phrase which believers in civil liberties abhor.

In a way, he, too, was a piker. He picked mostly on the "small fry"—but McCarthy is going after the big boys.

Ah, yes, progress is wonderful—perhaps.

AS WAS SAID earlier, the nation owes McCarthy a vote of thanks—or will owe him one if his fancy little scheme backfires to such an extent that the public wakes up to the danger of this "guilt by association" business.

In past years many persons who dislike everything the Commies stand for joined "front" organizations without realizing what they were.

Many persons, in an effort to obtain books at a saving, patronized certain book shops without knowing they were operated by the Commies.

Many others joined organizations which were non-Communist at the time but later swung to the extreme left.

And still others became members of organizations which have been tagged "subversive" but aren't.

And those who did so can easily lose their good reputations and professional standing if the "guilt by association" schemes of the Thomases and the McCarthys aren't nipped in the bud.

AH, YES, PROGRESS is a wonderful thing—or so it's said in certain circles.

But for our money you can stamp "void" on the progress that has been made in recent years in limiting the freedom of Americans to join the organizations of their choice.

We'll still cling to the old-fashioned, time-tested theory that a person should be convicted by his acts—not by his thoughts or by his associates.

And we can't go along with the idea that McCarthy's little stunt is merely smart politics in a political election year.

It's much more than that—and it's much worse than that.

A Little Speed, Please

We're inclined to go along with a liberal friend of ours who said, "Not bad, but not outstanding," when asked what he thought about the record Congress made during its last session.

But we feel that Congress hasn't been doing so good this year—that is, good from the standpoint of those who favor Fair Deal legislation.

It won't be very long before Congressmen and Senators head back home to participate in that biennial sport known as "trying to get re-elected."

The Republicans seem to have figured out their campaign strategy. They'll make the most of the phony "Liberty vs. Socialism" campaign slogan.

The Democrats, we hope, will be in a position to do much better than that. We'd like to see them run on the record of their accomplishments.

And the more accomplishments, the better the record.

That's why we're urging more action—more speed—on those portions of the Fair Deal program that have not been enacted.

The President's civil rights program is still in the "talking stage." Action needs to be taken (or completed) on the following:

Social security, health insurance, middle-income housing, labor extension service, elimination of discrimination from the displaced persons law.

And then there's that obnoxious Taft-Hartley Act!

If the Democrats can't get all of the Fair Deal legislation through, they will have a strong point if they can convince the voters they made a real effort to do so.

There's something appealing about those who try hard.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer
Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher
Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII March 20, 1950 No. 12

Owner's Bias Made KMPC Policy, FCC Told

NEWS BROADCASTS on Radio Station KMPC at Los Angeles—one of the West Coast's most powerful transmitters — were thoroughly scrambled into editorials slanted to the prejudices of the station's owner, a government agency was told last week.

The prejudices of G. A. Richards, KMPC's owner, were sharply turned against Pres. Truman's Fair Deal, against Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, and against Jews, and against labor, according to testimony from the station's former news editor.

The Federal Communications Commission has been hearing testimony on whether Richards should get a renewal of his license to operate KMPC and other 50,000-watt stations: WJR in Detroit and WGAR in Cleveland.

Hearings are being held in Los Angeles, where Clete Roberts, former news editor of the station, has been telling how Richards slanted the news for a period of several years.

Roberts and two other members of the KMPC news staff were fired in Feb., 1948, and the story of their charges was given nationwide coverage by Billboard magazine, a show business publication.

At the FCC hearing, Roberts testified:

"I was told always to present the Roosevelts in an unfavorable light. I was once ordered to fabricate a story that Eleanor (Roosevelt) and (Henry) Wallace were going to run together on the same ticket.

"I was instructed always to couple Wallace and the Roosevelts with Communists when I could, and also always to report items where Jews were involved in criminal actions."

WESTBROOK PEGLER, the labor-baiting columnist, was a favorite of the KMPC station owner, Roberts testified, and he was instructed to use Pegler's material generously in his news broadcasts — without identifying Pegler as the source.

KMPC policy, under the instructions he received from Richards, was to use news "to the best advantage of the Republican position in 1947 and 1948. He instructed me to minimize Truman in the news."

On numerous occasions, Roberts said, he received early morning phone calls from Richards demanding that he carry generous hunks of anti-Administration newspaper editorials as news. There were other orders to play up unfavorable news about Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas, David Lilienthal and airplane maker Howard Hughes.

Roberts testified that when he protested to Richards that his policy directives to slant the news were in violation of the federal law covering radio, Richards snorted:

"To hell with the FCC. Let them take our license away. We'll go down with all flags flying."

The incidents occurred at a time—1946 and 1947—when the FCC sternly forbade editorialization by station owners. Since that time, FCC has loosened the ban on editorials, but only when all sides get a chance at fair rebuttal.

Radio stations operate under government license, since the airwaves are considered the property of the people.

Federal law provides that stations which abuse their privileges or fail to operate in the public interest and welfare may be denied extension of their operating licenses.

Ruttenberg Serves On Foreign Service Board

Stanley Ruttenberg, CIO Research director, has just completed serving as a member of one of the Foreign Service Selection Boards which recommend promotions in the State Dept.'s career service overseas.

During seven weeks the board examined and discussed the efficiency and personnel reports of more than 400 career Foreign Service Officers. At the conclusion of this study the board recommended a substantial number of the officers for promotion.

"I know the ship's sailing, but I want to finish the job!"

It Took Guts To Wage Such A Fight

THIS IS THE STORY of the "Battle of Griffin," which began in 1945 and ended just a couple of weeks ago.

Involved were a group of tenacious textile workers, a company that was determined not to deal with a union, the courts and armed guards.

It was a tough battle and before it was over some 20 persons went to jail for short periods and one man served time on a chain gang.

Following are the details, as told by a CIO representative who was on the scene during part of the struggle.

EARLY IN 1945 a group of workers at the Highland-Crompton Mills at Griffin, Ga., decided that what they needed was a union.

An organization drive was started and in July employes of the plant voted by more than six to one in favor of a union. There was great elation among the workers as a result of the smashing victory.

The union soon entered into negotiations, which continued until broken off in December. The company wasn't interested in signing a contract and it declared it just couldn't grant a wage increase.

After contract talks were broken off, the company granted a wage hike—without conferring with the union.

FINALLY, IN APRIL of 1946 union members had had all they felt they could take, so they went out on strike.

"Soon the company threw everything at us but the kitchen sink," said the CIO man.

"A judge granted an injunction limiting us to 50 pickets for the big plant and ruled that the pickets had to remain at least 10 feet from each other while in the line.

"The judge also granted the company permission to hire armed guards to 'preserve order.' Thirty-seven or 38 guards were hired.

"Before long our members were being picked up on phony charges that they had violated the injunction."

ABOUT 20 UNIONISTS, the CIO representative said, were sentenced to jail for from 10 to 30 days each on injunction charges.

"Then one day I was out on the picket line and a fellow in front of me stopped and leaned over to tie his shoe, holding up the line a bit.

"This made the guards suspicious, I guess, and the fellow was arrested. He was charged with throwing tacks on the company's road and ended up by serving three months on a Georgia chain gang.

"The people at the plant thought so much of this fellow that they elected him chairman of the local union after he got out."

Day in and day out, without let-up, men and women picketed the plant.

IN AUGUST the pickets decided to call the strike off. They maintained a union although they had no contract and they paid their dues regularly.

Last spring the company decided it was time to hold a decertification election under the Taft-Hartley Act, but failed to get the approval of the 20% of employes necessary to call such an election.

"At this point the CIO Textile Workers decided it would be a good idea to have an election—just to demonstrate the union's strength—and one was set," the CIO man said.

"Despite the fact that there had been all kinds of difficulties and there had been no contract, the vote was 426 for the Textile Workers and 229 for 'no union.'

"And, boy, was I happy when I learned recently that the company and union had signed up a good contract!"

And so were a lot of Griffin textile workers.

A. L. S.

The Mountain Labored --

And Brought Forth a Mouse

Washington Post Flays Natural Gas Lobby As Selfish

"PROPONENTS (of the Kerr bill) have not denied that the chief purpose is to permit a price rise" in natural gas, the Washington Post declared in an editorial March 13. The editorial which lambasts the selfishness of the natural gas lobby follows:

"The seemingly perpetual efforts to remove independent natural gas producers from Federal regulation are coming to a head again in the Senate. The House already has passed the Harris bill, which would amend the Natural Gas Act of 1938 to eliminate Federal Power Commission jurisdiction over the sale of natural gas to pipeline companies for transmission in interstate commerce.

"The Kerr bill, scheduled to be called up shortly in the Senate, is the companion piece. Inasmuch as some 86% of the country's natural gas reserves are held by so-called independent producers—that is, companies which do not operate pipelines—in all probability the effect of the bill would be to raise gas prices down the line, with the consumer ultimately paying the bill.

"As the flight from coal for heat and power becomes more pronounced, the Kerr bill takes on added significance. Proponents have not denied that the chief purpose is to permit a price rise. Senator Kerr himself is a party at interest; he is a millionaire many times over as a result of his gas and oil holdings.

"The plea that natural gas production is the 'poor man's domain' has some superficial merit in that there are 2300 separate producers. But only 3% of these producers sell 75% of the gas, and they would be the principal beneficiaries of the Kerr bill. Many of the larger holders, incidentally, are oil companies. Nor is there any reason to believe that existing regulations are unfair or have frozen out new enterprises; applications continue to come before the FPC in great numbers.

"An additional element of discrimination is to be found in the bill. It would be patently unreasonable to regulate gas transmission companies of distributors if producers were left free to charge what the traffic would bear. Although a more specific law might be desirable, the authority of the FPC to regulate the sale of gas for interstate commerce has been upheld explicitly by the Supreme Court.

"No one should be misled by the intense activity of the selfish and determined natural gas lobby Nor should there be any mistake about the nature of the amendment to the Kerr bill which would authorize the power commission to investigate the matter and make recommendations after controls were removed. The FPC now has that authority, and the amendment merely would gloss over what was being done. Indeed, it looks suspiciously like a move to enable the FPC to recommend locking the door after the horse is stolen."

S. C. Readies Its Resources To Impeach Liberal Judge

THE OFFICIAL MOTTO of the State of South Carolina is the Latin phrase "Animus Opibusque Parati," which means "Ready with Minds and Resources."

The state House of Representatives recently indicated that it goes along with at least the latter part of the motto by voting to put up $10,000 to finance the proposed impeachment of U. S. District Judge J. Waties Waring, of Charleston.

Waring is the judge whose 1947 and 1948 orders opened state Democratic primary voting and party membership to Negroes.

The House previously had voted to appropriate money to buy Judge and Mrs. Waring one-way tickets out of South Carolina.

Rep. Hare (D. S. C.) announced in Washington that a resolution to impeach Waring had been prepared for introduction in Congress.

On the other side of the picture, the American Council on Human Rights last week—also in Washington—presented Judge and Mrs. Waring with citations for distinguished service. The council is sponsored by Negro school fraternities.

Mrs. Waring, in speeches in South Carolina, Washington and N. Y., has called the South "decadent" and "morally weak," and has stated Negroes should intermarry with whites if they please.

Co-op Clause of Housing Bill Beaten In Senate

THE SENATE on Mar. 15 dealt a smashing blow to the Truman administration, organized labor and veterans when, by a vote of 43 to 38, it killed the cooperative housing section of the "middle-income" housing bill. The proposal was actively supported by the White House, by all of organized labor, by all veterans' organizations and by the entire cooperative movement.

The emasculated measure now goes to the House, for possible vote March 22. In the short time remaining, the interested organizations are expected to redouble their efforts to get commitments from House members in favor of the co-op section, in order to overcome the psychological hazard of the Senate defeat.

(The CIO Housing Committee immediately urged all CIO Internationals, councils, locals, and representatives to write, wire, phone, or visit their Congressmen, asking their support of the measure. The same approach was used by AFL and veterans organizations.)

The reversal was all the more disappointing because it was unexpected. Political prognosticators, even the more cautious ones, had predicted that the co-op section would pass the Senate. Three switched votes and five absentees made the difference.

THE MOTION TO kill the section was made by Sen. Bricker (R., O.), who gave an all-out, down-the-line, tub-thumping argument that the section was a "direct, special grant of government benefits to the cooperative housing movement."

The proposal would advance long-term, low-interest loans to genuine housing cooperatives and non-profit trusts. The money would be raised through the sale of Treasury-guaranteed debentures on the private investment market. The loans would be amortized over periods of 50 years or longer at an interest rate which was not spelled out in the bill but has been estimated at about 3¼%.

Because of the long-term natures of the loans, and the savings inherent in the cooperative approach, it has been conservatively estimated that monthly costs to owners or tenants would be 25% less under the program than for identical accomodations now available.

NOT EVEN Bricker, who wouldn't look at a sunset if he thought it was red, dared come right out and call the proposal socialistic. He just hinted at it. He said cooperative housing was successful in other countries but insisted that it would work only in a Socialistic state.

The argument that appeared to carry the most weight with the Senators who voted with Bricker was that it was unfair to the veteran — since government-guaranteed veterans' home loans are at 4% for a shorter period. The success of this argument was ironic, because the veterans' organizations had backed the co-op proposition to the hilt.

Since no interest rate was spelled out in the bill, chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D. S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee offered to amend the co-op section by stating that the interest rate should be 4%. This, he said, would meet the unfair-to-veterans argument. No takers.

After the Bricker motion had carried, Senators Ives (R. N. Y.) and Tobey (R. N. H.) proposed a substitute, suggested by the mortgage bankers, to force cooperatives to secure Federal Housing Administration loans. This was defeated 66 to 14. Ives had voted against the Bricker amendment and Tobey had been paired against it, but both had made it clear from the start that they intended to offer this substitute.

The bill as passed may not prove too pleasing to the real estate lobby in spite of the fact that it was victorious in its campaign against the co-op program. The Senate ended, as of March 1, the famous "608" FHA mortgage insurance for construction of large-scale rental projects, allowing $400 million more to take care of applications on file up to Feb. 1. The lobby had been pressing as eagerly for full extension of "608" as it had against the co-ops.

The bill now contains a new authorization for the FHA to make $2 billion worth of loans to private builders, provides for the first time direct loans to veterans (at 4%) if they cannot get private loans, offers direct loans (at 2½) to educational institutions, and provides machinery for the transfer of war housing to local government for low rental housing purposes.

Senate Vote On Housing Co-ops

Here's the record of the vote by which the Senate cut out the most important provision of the middle-income housing bill, providing low-interest, long-term government loans to cooperatives for housing purposes. The Senate approved, 43-38, on March 15, an amendment by Bricker (R., O.) to kill that provision.

Thirty Republicans and 13 Democrats—mostly from the South—voted for the Bricker proposal: 32 Democrats—13 from the South—and six Republicans voted against. Votes for the Bricker amendment are marked W; votes against, are marked R; pairs are shown by PR and PW. A indicates absent.

ALA.	—Hill (D)	R
	Sparkman (D)	R
ARIZ.	—Hayden (D)	R
	McFarland (D)	R
ARK.	—McClellan (D)	W
	Fulbright (D)	W
CAL.	—Downey (D)	A
	Knowland (R)	W
COLO.	—Johnson (D)	R
	Millikin (R)	W
CONN.	—McMahon (D)	R
	Benton (D)	R
DEL.	—Williams (R)	W
	Frear, Jr. (D)	R
FLA.	—Pepper (D)	PR
	Holland (D)	W
GA.	—George (D)	W
	Russell (D)	W
IDA.	—Taylor (D)	R
	Dworshak (R)	W
ILL.	—Lucas (D)	R
	Douglas (D)	R
IND.	—Capehart (R)	W
	Jenner (R)	W
IOWA	—Hickenlooper (R)	W
	Gillette (D)	W
KAN.	—Darby (R)	PW
	Schoeppel (R)	W
KY.	—Chapman (D)	W
	Withers (D)	PR
LA.	—Ellender (D)	W
	Long (D)	R
ME.	—Brewster (R)	W
	Chase Smith (R)	R
MD.	—Tydings (D)	PW
	O'Conor (D)	W
MASS.	—Saltonstall (R)	W
	Lodge (R)	R
MICH.	—Vandenberg (R)	PW
	Ferguson (R)	W
MINN.	—Thye (R)	W
	Humphrey (D)	R
MISS.	—Eastland (D)	A
	Stennis (D)	W
MO.	—Donnell (R)	W
	Kem (R)	W
MONT.	—Murray (D)	R
	Ecton (R)	W
NEB.	—Butler (R)	W
	Wherry (R)	W
NEV.	—McCarran (D)	A
	Malone (R)	W
N. H.	—Bridges (R)	W
	Tobey (R)	PR
N. J.	—Smith (R)	W
	Hendrickson (R)	W
N. M.	—Chavez (D)	R
	Anderson (D)	R
N. Y.	—Lehman (D)	R
	Ives (R)	R
N. C.	—Hoey (D)	W
	Graham (D)	R
N. D.	—Langer (R)	R
	Young (R)	A
OHIO	—Taft (R)	PW
	Bricker (R)	W
OKLA.	—Thomas (D)	R
	Kerr (D)	R
ORE.	—Cordon (R)	W
	Morse (R)	PR
PA.	—Myers (D)	R
	Martin (R)	W
R. I.	—Green (D)	R
	Leahy (D)	A
S. C.	—Maybank (D)	R
	Johnston (D)	R
S. D.	—Gurney (R)	W
	Mundt (R)	W
TENN.	—McKellar (D)	R
	Kefauver (D)	R
TEX.	—Connally (D)	R
	Johnson (D)	R
UTAH	—Thomas (D)	A
	Watkins (R)	W
VT.	—Aiken (R)	R
	Flanders (R)	R
VA.	—Byrd (D)	W
	Robertson (D)	W
WASH.	—Magnuson (D)	R
	Cain (R)	W
W. V.	—Kilgore (D)	R
	Neely (D)	R
WIS.	—Wiley (R)	W
	McCarthy (R)	W
WYO.	—O'Mahoney (D)	R
	Hunt (D)	A

Their Position Unknown

Although many House members have made definite commitments for or against the middle-income housing bill, the CIO Housing Committee reported there was a sizeable group which has not made its position known.

Labor-supported Congressmen who have not made their position known include:

ARIZONA
Murdock (D)
H. Patten (D)
CALIFORNIA
G. Miller (D)
Cecil White (D)
Harry Sheppard (D)
COLORADO
W. Aspinall (D)
CONNECTICUT
A. Ribicoff (D)
J. McGuire (D)
FLORIDA
C. Bennett (D)
A. S. Herlong, Jr. (D)
GEORGIA
H. Lanham (D)
IDAHO
C. I. White (D)
ILLINOIS
T. S. Gordon (D)
C. Reed (R)
C. W. Bishop (R)
INDIANA
E. Kruse, Jr. (D)
KENTUCKY
N. Gregory (D)
J. Whitaker (D)
F. Chelf (D)
T. Underwood (D)
J. Bates (D)
J. Golden (R)
LOUISIANA
E. Willis (D)
J. Morrison (D)
MAINE
C. Nelson (R)
MARYLAND
W. Bolton (D)
E. Garmatz (D)
MASSACHUSETTS
P. Philbin (D)
MICHIGAN
G. Ford, Jr. (R)
C. Potter (R)
MINNESOTA
Roy Wier (D)
F. Marshall (D)
MISSOURI
Paul Jones (D)
State
NEBRASKA
E. O'Sullivan (D)
NEVADA
W. S. Baring (D)
NEW JERSEY
M. Norton (D)
NEW MEXICO
J. Miles (D)
NEW YORK
G. Clemente (D)
V. Quinn (D)
E. Keogh (D)
Mrs. Kelley (D)
J. Heffernan (D)
J. Murphy (D)
W. Lynch (D)
C. Buckley (D)
W. Byrne (D)
C. Gorski (D)
NORTH CAROLINA
F. Carlyle (D)
OHIO
R. Crosser (D)
OKLAHOMA
D. Gilmer (D)
W. Stigler (D)
C. Albert (D)
T. Steed (D)
T. Morris (D)
G. Wilson (D)
OREGON
H. Angell (R)
PENNSYLVANIA
H. O'Neill (D)
TENNESSEE
D. Phillips (R)
J. Frazier (D)
P. Sutton (D)
TEXAS
J. Combs (D)
A. Thomas (D)
H. Thornberry (D)
UTAH
W. Granger (D)
Mrs. R. Bosone (D)
WEST VIRGINIA
J. Kee (D)
E. Hedrick (D)

CIO Protests Roll Back Rents

RENT CONTROLS are going back on in Shamokin and the surrounding area of Coal Township, Pa., as the direct result of union labor activity spearheaded by the CIO Clothing and Textile Workers.

The Office of the Housing Expediter announced March 17 that Tighe Woods, administrator of the federal rent control law, on the basis of information received from the Williamsport Rent Advisory Board, had decided to recontrol the area. Back of the brief announcement lay quite a story.

OHE decontrolled Shamokin and Coal Township, effective last Dec. 21, on the recommendation of the Williamsport Board, whose members allegedly had conducted their own informal survey of housing conditions and found "ample housing" and no reason for continuing controls. The board made this recommendation without holding any public hearings.

THEN the rent increases started, and the evictions.

Things got so bad, so fast, that early in January a group of local CIO officers complained directly to Woods. He advised them to try to persuade the Williamsport Board to hold hearings on recontrol. The board, possibly embarrassed by the fact that Williamsport is 42 miles by car from Shamokin and that the only board member from Shamokin owned rental property, held three hearings, on Jan. 8 Feb. 8 and Feb. 22.

At these hearings, union witnesses produced some cold statistics nobody could dispute: That the population of Shamokin in 1940 was 18,810; that 3833 dwelling units had been decontrolled by the OHE order of Dec. 21; that currently 1200 persons in Shamokin were unemployed and had exhausted their state compensation payments.

The witnesses also testified that there had been 944 marriages in the past year; that the working force in town was on a part-time basis.

And, added Harold Sneltz, president of ACW local 129 and secretary of the Northumberland County CIO, exactly three new building permits had been issued in the past two years.

The two labor union representatives on the board, neither of them from Shamokin, persuaded the board to ask OHE to make a formal survey of rental conditions in Shamokin.

OHE sent three men in. And here's what they found:

NEARLY 40% of all rental units had been increased, by an average of 33.1%, in the two months since controls went off. The average maximum rental of this group on Dec. 21, 1945, had been $20.64 a month. By Feb. 20, when the survey was made, this average had risen to $27.48 a month. And this was for "shelter rent" only, with tenants supplying their own heat and light.

Individual increases ranged from $1.50—the lowest—to $60.00—the highest.

The increase was the highest, percentagewise, in the units that had been controlled at the lowest rentals. The under-$20 group had received an average hike of $4.55 a month, or 34.8%. The group formerly paying $20 to $30 had received increases averaging $7.17, or 31.5%. Those formerly paying $30 to $40 a month were now paying an average of $8.59 more, or 24%.

When these official figures came before the board at its March 8 meeting, the recontrol motion, renewed by the two union representatives, passed. And OHE acted.

Rents will be rolled back to the Dec. 21 level.

How To Keep Curbs

How's your rent situation? What will happen to you if controls go off? What increases have you had already?

The people who should hear your story are your Representative and your Senator. They are the ones who will vote on whether rent controls will be renewed. Unless they are convinced that rent control is really necessary, chances are they will vote it down.

A letter to OHE does no good. OHE cannot vote on Capitol Hill.

Liberal Party Reneges On Pensions--CCL

THE CANADIAN Congress of Labour, to which CIO unions north of the border belong, has taken Prime Minister St. Laurent of Canada to task for apparently walking out on a Liberal Party pledge to eliminate the means test for the old age pension.

St. Laurent recently declared that "there never was any offer of a pension without a means test and without a contribution." The CCL has been actively campaigning for elimination of the means test "as long overdue for the welfare of the Canadian people," according to Pat Conroy, CCL secretary-treasurer.

"Mr. St. Laurent now takes the extraordinary position that the party which he leads and the government which he heads "at no time obligated itself to wipe out the means test," he said.

"The fact is that in August, 1945, the Liberal Government placed before the Dominion-Provincial Conferences proposals which included this paragraph:

"'It is proposed that the federal government would establish a system of national old age pensions entirely financed and administered by the federal government, and paid at the uniform rate of $30 per month regardless of means to men and women aged 70 and over in all parts of Canada.'

"MR. ST. LAURENT was a minister of the government which made those proposals. He has since become Prime Minister and in the general election of last year received a mandate which clearly gave him authority to carry out the commitments made by the Liberal government and repeated during the recent election by candidates of the Liberal Party.

"Now the country is faced by the extraordinary situation of hearing the Prime Minister deny that these commitments, which are to be found in official government documents, ever existed. At a time when democratic forms of government are being challenged in so many parts of the world these circumstances are cause for the deepest concern.

"It is to be hoped that the Prime Minister and his government will not only admit that they are committed to relieve the plight of so many older Canadians who suffer under the injustices of the means test, but also act without delay to give effect to their repeated promises."

Pay Rise Asked On Govt. Pacts

The CIO Textile Workers Union has requested that the minimum hourly pay for workers on government contracts in the cotton-rayon industry be boosted from the current 87c to 94c. TWU Pres. Emil Rieve told Administrator William McComb of the Wage-hour and Public Contracts Division, U. S. Dept. of Labor, that 94c is already the going rate in the industry.

Plants employing 90% of the workers in the South have minimum rates of 94c or higher, with a prevailing minimum of 97c in the North. Rieve said in a letter to McComb. These minimums include both organized and unorganized mills, he said, since the latter have almost universally followed the wage patterns set by the union.

DETERMINATION of the Chrysler strikers was shown by the crowd of more than 20,000 that overflowed the Michigan State Fair Coliseum in Detroit March 7 to cheer strike reports by Pres. Walter P. Reuther and other leaders of the CIO Auto Workers. Here is part of the crowd. Chrysler workers have been out for two months in a pension dispute.

Nash Settlement Brings Hope Of Break in Chrysler Strike

TWO developments last week spurred hope for an early break in the two-month-old Chrysler strike.

The CIO Auto Workers union, which is striking Chrysler, and Nash-Kelvinator Corp., signed an agreement which meets the 10-cents an hour pattern established by the union at a number of other auto manufacturers. The pact provides a pension plan and an insurance program for Nash workers, such as the union has proposed to Chrysler.

In announcing the Nash agreement, Leonard Woodcock, UAW Nash-Kelvinator Dept. Dir., said, "We have reached an agreement with Nash-Kelvinator which we can recommend to our members without the necessity of strike action."

"The pension plan meets the three basic requirements essential to any equitable and guaranteed pension program," Woodcock declared.

The three requirements are:

1 Through the payment of fixed sums by the company into a trust fund and provision for the amortization of past service credits, the pension plan guarantees the payment of benefits to all eligible employes.

2 The pension fund will be administered by a joint board which will consist of two representatives from the company, two from the union and an impartial chairman selected by the other members.

3 The plan is financed entirely by the company with no contributions from employes.

The five-year Nash plan provides workers with $100 a month pensions, including social security benefits, to those retiring at 65 with 25 years service. Features include payments of a fixed amount—seven cents an hour—into a fund with the amounts not affected by future social security law changes and no automatic compulsory retirement age. The union has a voice in administering the pensions.

UAW officials hailed the Nash contract as "the most advanced yet negotiated in heavy industry."

THE PENSION plan is entirely financed by the company. The insurance program is a contributory plan based on hourly rates. The company will pay 2.6c an hour for each worker for life and health insurance, and the remainder for administration. Workers contribute and receive benefits in proportion to their hourly pay.

UAW represents 20,000 workers in plants in Kenosha and Milwaukee, Wis., Grand Rapids, Mich., and El Segundo, Calif.

The other sign auguring well for a Chrysler settlement was the announcement by UAW and Ford that "complete agreement" was reached on details of a $100 pension plan.

Basic agreement on the Ford pension plan was reached last September but details proved to be a knotty problem for Ford and UAW negotiators.

The joint union-company statement said, "All administrative details have been worked out."

On the Chrysler front, the nation's third largest auto builder maintained its refusal to contribute a cents-per-hour sum toward pensions for its 89,000 workers.

IN THE FACE of the Ford and Nash settlements, however, the company was expected to undergo a change of attitude.

UAW invited some 70 outstanding citizens in the fields of religion, educational and civic activities to hear a presentation of the issues in the Chrysler dispute at a meeting in Detroit last week. Chrysler officials were invited to present the company's side of the picture.

UAW Pres. Walter Reuther in a letter of invitation said the meeting would afford those attending an "opportunity to hear the issues in dispute explained first-hand by those participating in negotiations."

"It is our sincere hope that the issues in dispute can be fully clarified so that you will be in a position to judge independently the merits of the dispute and fix the responsibility for the strike and its continuation." Reuther stated.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating DixieGOPs

Chicago CIO Honors Firm

FOR THE FIRST time in its history, the Chicago CIO Council presented a Philip Murray award to the management of a plant organized by the CIO. The award went to the management of the Gibson Springs Co. for its cooperation with the union in its plant on the health and welfare problems of workers.

The 1950 Community Services Award went to Judge George Quilici of the Chicago Municipal Court. He was honored as "a friend and protector of labor's rights and who as a citizen has vigorously championed the inherent rights of all men to a dignified and secure way of life."

The awards were made at the all-day fifth annual conference, March 11 attended by 400, who split into 11 "workshops" to discuss such subjects as housing, education, transportation, human relations, recreation, and the current relief crisis caused by recent cuts in the relief budget. The conference closed with a banquet, addressed by Ted Silvey, secretary of the Natl. CIO Community Services Committee. Chairman was Albert Towers, Chicago CIO president.

Philip Murray awards also went to CIO members representing their unions on public and private community agencies; to three local unions, and to individual union counsellors. The awards were presented by Jerome Wilczewski, chairman of the Chicago CIO Community Services Committee, and president of Local 65, Steelworkers.

GM Report Is Argument For UAW Program

GENERAL MOTORS Corp. last week built up a swell case for the CIO Auto Workers' 1950 wage and pension proposals with the issuance of the 1949 financial statement for stockholders.

The corporation's stockholders, meeting in New York, were told the company's 1949 net profit was the greatest ever recorded by an American corporation. Last year's net profit hit $656,434,232, 49% above 1948.

The report, signed by C. E. Wilson, president, and Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman, noted that the corporation's sales last year were 3½ times the 1936-41 average.

(Wilson gave an inkling of GM's huge 1949 profits last January when he told a luncheon meeting of 500 industrial and financial leaders that the corporation's profits for last year "are likely to move up to over $600 million.)

THAT $656 ODD million presents a beautiful argument to GM's 230,000 production workers. The union is proposing $125-a-month pensions, wage increases, comprehensive hospital and medical coverage and severance allowances, totaling 31c an hour.

The GM officers acknowledged 1949 was a year of "substantial achievement" and called attention to the fact that, because of the company's record-breaking performance "material benefits accrued to a large number of individuals." General Motors has 434,000 stockholders.

The corporation's net profit last year was equal to $14.64 each on the 44,104,340 shares of outstanding common stock and represented a return of 11.5% on the year's sales. The 1948 net income was $440,447,724—equal to $9.72 a common share and 9.4% on sales.

Total sales increased 21% over 1949—$5,700,833,141 from $4,701,770,340. Passenger car sales alone increased 39% over the preceding year to 2,264,406 units.

Va. Poll Tax Repeal Killed

THE VIRGINIA House of Delegates recently voted by a better than three to one margin to repeal the state's poll tax but the measure never reached a vote on the Senate floor. The Senate Privileges and Election Committee last week voted five to four to kill the bill.

Voting against reporting the resolution which would have eliminated the tax as a voting prerequisite were Sens. Earl Fitzpatrick, M. M. Long, Robert Varden, L. Paul Wailes and last, but not least, Harry F. Byrd, Jr., son of U. S. Senator, Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.). Young Byrd said, "the committee has had too little time to consider the bill."

The General Assembly turned down a much-needed teachers' pay boost, and failed to repeal the state's segregation laws affecting public carriers.

The Assembly gave Gov. John S. Battle requested authority to seize and operate the state's coal mines in "emergencies." The chief executive promptly used the power to take over two tipples several days before the coal strike ended.

Labor unions and "certain other organizations" were made subject to the state's anti-monopoly laws.

How We Treat Aged is Test of U. S. Progress—Reuther

ANYBODY WHO'S dreaming about lolling around in sybaritic luxury after his social security-old age pension checks start to roll in had better find himself something new for his pipe—but fast.

He—or she—will have no steam yachts, no champagne, little if any pate de foie gras.

He won't have to worry about full dress suits or evening gowns, the shore or the mountains, the opera or the drama.

In fact, he won't be around long enough to do much worrying about anything unless he has some other source of income or outside help. He'll just starve quietly to death—if, by any questionably fortunate chance — he manages to survive the winter in the kind of clothes he'll be wearing.

THAT GRIM picture of what the future holds for millions of working men and women was painted between the lines March 15 when Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers testified before the Senate Finance committee in support of higher old age pensions at least as good—and preferably better—than those established in HR 6000.

"When corporation executives paid as much as $300,000 a year are too old to work and too young to die," he told the Senators, "they are assured of non-contributory pensions of $25,000, $50,000 and up a year for the rest of their lives.

"The same corporations' employes, who have invested their lives in production for wages of $3000 a year and less, can look forward to getting the disgraceful sums of $120 to $540 a year when they are too old to work and too young to die.

"In the past, some workers, by collective bargaining, have more than doubled these amounts. But $1200 a year is not enough for an aged worker nor is the present top of $1460 enough for an aged couple to live on."

THEN the UAW president went into details.

He told how UAW experts had spent four months studying the Federal Security Agency's Budget for an Elderly Couple, how they adjusted it to include certain increases and additional items "essential to an American standard of living."

"We offer this budget as an approach to an adequate standard of living for retired American workers," he said. "We challenge anyone to point out to the American people any item in that budget that should be reduced or cut out. We challenge anyone to show why any retired American worker should have less than this budget provides."

What kind of a living standard does the budget give the pensioner and his wife?

Well, each of them can indulge in an eighth of a pound of butter a week. That's six and a half pounds a year each. The dairy farmers will love that; last year they produced 11.4 pounds for every person in the country.

The husband can have one dental examination every 30 years, the wife can have one every 25 years. There is no explanation of what happens should either develop a toothache in the meantime.

The husband can't have an umbrella, but he can swagger around in a new raincoat every 25 years. The wife can't have a raincoat, but she can flaunt a new umbrella before her aged friends every 20 years, assuming she can flaunt anything after living that long on the diet she'll have to put up with. For instance, a round steak is the best steak they'll ever have on their table.

(Lamb chops, incidentally, were $1.29 a pound last week in a Washington chain store of the type patronized by workers; the aged are often urged to eat lamb chops because they are easy on tired, worn digestive systems.)

SO THE budget goes—an overcoat every eight years for the husband, one house dress a year for the wife, 11 movies a year (less than one a month) for each.

"Measured against this budget," Reuther told the committee, "which comes to $2089 a year or $174 a month (in Detroit), the level of benefits in the present Federal program leaves a deficit of $96 to $106 a month for an aged couple in the $200 to $300 a month earnings bracket and with 30 years in covered employment.

"The level provided in HR 6000 as passed by the House leaves a deficit of $53 to $70 a month for such an aged couple.

"The level proposed in the bill when introduced would leave a deficit of $35 to $64 for such an aged couple (the bill was amended before passing).

"The level proposed in Social Security Commissioner Altmyer's recommendations to this committee would leave a deficit of $18 to $47 for such an aged couple.

"The ratio of benefits to past earnings proposed by CIO, which we indorse and support, would provide monthly payments of from $136.50 to $175.50 to aged couples with average earnings of $200 to $300 a month during the best five years in 30 years of covered employment. This would leave deficits of as much as $37.50 for those who had earned $200 a month and even greater deficits for those whose earnings had been lower."

REUTHER urged Congress to use adequate old age pensions as a powerful weapon in the cold war with Russia.

"The American economy is freedom's greatest asset in the cold war," he declared.

"The world will judge America not by our ability to split the atom and to make great technological strides, but by our ability to translate the technical progress into human progress, such as adequate security."

His plea made a strong impression on the committee.

"I think that's a very good way to put it," commented Sen. Millikin (R., Colo.).

Russia has two psychological weapons important as the H-bomb, Reuther contended, in this country's failure to cope with unemployment and to provide adequately for the aged. Proper pension payments would also hit unemployment, he said, as the dollar paid to the elderly is "the highest velocity dollar in the economy" because it goes into "dynamic" or immediate spending.

Failure of social security to pay decent old age pensions lies behind the drive of the UAW and other unions for greater security, Reuther held. When all Americans are adequately protected in their old age, he added, the union will de-emphasize its own campaign for industry pensions and eventually eliminate them.

"A raise is out of the question, but we can offer you another stripe."

War Lumber Supply Inadequate, CIO Warns

ANTHONY W. Smith, executive secretary of the National CIO Committee on Regional Development and Conservation, last week warned the Subcommittee on Agriculture Appropriations of the Senate Appropriations Committee that the United States will not be able to meet its needs for lumber, even with the aid of Canada, in case of war.

Smith also represents the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America in respect to forest resources legislation and appropriations. Smith is assistant to John Brophy, CIO councils' director.

"Behind the whole issue lies the question of sustained-yield production in America's domestic forests, public and private," he said. "Partly, this is a problem of direct federal regulation of timber cutting on private lands. But a great deal of the problem is one of using the agencies and laws we have as they should be used by making adequate appropriations available. That part is the responsibility of this Committee."

Earlier, Smith said that while some increases in forest items have been recommended by the Budget Bureau, the amounts are still "very inadequate." He spoke specifically for adequate appropriations for the Forest Survey, which has the task of locating forest resources.

"THE PRESIDENT'S budget," he said, "recommends an increase of $410,500 for the Forest Survey, which would bring the total appropriation for this item to $1,293,500, or roughly half the annual authorization. The recommended increase is a direct result of bi-partisan legislation (PL 128) passed last year.

"The CIO strongly indorses the proposed acceleration of the Forest Survey as a minimum. It knows that happy families and prosperous communities are not built upon nomadic industries. The history of the timber industry in this country is one of continual movement. Permanent industry is based upon continuous supply of raw materials; timber industries and public officials responsible for the administration of our timber lands must have a reliable balance sheet of timber supply and demand.

"The Forest Survey furnishes that balance sheet."

Regarding a wartime scarcity of timber, Smith said:

"The important point is that in case of another war, we could not produce 33.6 billion board feet, as we did the last time, but only about 30 billion. The reason is that we cut most of our readily accessible stands of soft wood during the recent war. Large areas of second growth in the Southeast were cut, and many of the more accessible stands in the West.

"UNQUESTIONABLY, our demands on Canada will be stepped up sharply. We might conceivably be able to get two billion feet a year from Canada instead of the 1.2 billion feet or less which we obtained this last time.

"But we are not going to be able to do any better than that for the simple reason that Canada's sustained-yield production is perhaps six billion feet of sawtimber at the most. Canadian production had to be divided three ways in World War II between the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States, and perhaps we can count on a one-third share again.

"Now, where does this bring us out? It gives us 32 billion board feet a year to meet a demand which some people think may rise as high as 50 billion feet.

"And we cannot count on it from sources outside the North American continent, because of military interference with oceanic transportation, and because tropical and other Latin American resources have not been developed and probably cannot be developed satisfactorily . . ."

Compensation Conference To Be Held This Week

A NATIONAL conference on Workmen's Compensation and Rehabilitation, sponsored jointly by the U.S. Dept. of Labor and the Federal Security Administration, will be held in Washington, March 22-23, Labor Secy. Maurice Tobin announced.

CIO representatives named to the planning committee are Harry Read, executive assistant to Secy-Treas. James B. Carey, and Frank Fernbach. William L. Connolly, director of the Dept. of Labor's Bureau of Labor Standards, heads the committee.

The conference will be attended by state administrators of both workmen's compensation and vocational rehabilitation, as well as leaders of labor, business, medical and insurance groups.

"Advances in rehabilitation and medical techniques and compensation practices," states the letter of invitation, "make it highly desirable that we examine joint responsibilities to the injured worker and plan activities to embrace as many as possible of the newer methods."

CIO representatives at the conference will have as a guide in discussions a program recently drawn up by the CIO Committee on Social Security which calls attention to the maze of overlapping and inconsistent state, federal and territorial compensation laws confronting American workers today.

The committee recommended "a single Federal Workmen's Compensation with broad coverage, equitable benefits and fair and efficient administration," but until such a law is enacted, drew up a set of standards for evaluating present state laws.

These advocated compulsory coverage of all employers, including small establishments and employments now classified as nonhazardous; payments for entire period of disability, revision upward of present compensation for permanent partial disability, inclusion of occupational diseases and other improvements.

Pay Raised As Much As 38½c

The highest wage rates in the aluminum industry have been negotiated in a new contract between the Aluminum Division of the CIO Steelworkers and the Kaiser Aluminum Co., covering four plants employing 3500 members in Tacoma, Mead and Trentwood, Wash., and Newark, O.

In addition, the contract eliminated inequities by raising some rates as much as 38½c an hour and provided for $2000 life insurance, $2000 accidental death and dismemberment, $26 weekly for a maximum of 26 weeks for sickness and injury, and a pension. The pension clause guarantees a minimum of $100 monthly after 25 years' service and $60 after 15 years' service at 65 years of age.

Winning Spirit

PAC Director Jack Kroll recently gave a speech to a small local meeting in the Deep South.

When he got through, a voice from the rear said:

"Mr. Kroll, I have $98 here that I collected for PAC. Our local has 100 members. And I'm a-going back now to get them other two."

Local PAC's Getting In Gear To Launch Big Dollar Drive

ALL OVER the nation, thousands of local CIO Political Action Committees are getting in gear for the big dollar drive which must supply the bone and sinew of successful campaigns in the crucial 1950 Congressional and state elections.

PAC's goal is that every CIO member be personally, intelligently approached with an appeal to give a dollar or more to PAC—to give it voluntarily, from intelligent motives and for understood purposes.

In a speech to the CIO Executive Board Feb. 14, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said that CIO-PAC is "the only worthwhile instrumentality we have had in the United States of a political nature that can help this nation and help its people . . . It is the good strong arm, political arm, of American wage earners and the common people . . . But its successes or its failures are contingent wholly upon the degree of application, the degree of energy and vigor and work that we put into this movement.

"You see, this organization has its roots way down in the life of America and in every community, no matter where you may go, organized or unorganized, you will hear people talk of the work of CIO-PAC. It is good. It is a good organization, good for the country and good for its people.

"Well, we are coming along to the year 1950. We are beset with dangers that are reflected in the newsprints of the nation and in the activities of mortal enemies of the American labor movement, and we must assume the initiative in a fight of this description."

TICKET to a better way of life. This is a PAC receipt. Every CIO member ought to have one of these, made out in his own name, to show that he has made his voluntary contribution to CIO-PAC's efforts to elect a better 82nd Congress this fall.

UNDER THE "fair" rules of the political game, dreamed up by the 80th Congress, labor unions can't make direct contributions from their treasuries to federal political campaigns. Neither can corporations. Members and officials of both must confine themselves to voluntary contributions, given by individuals.

The fact that local union presidents, for the most part, cannot afford more than $2 or $3, whereas corporation branch managers probably can cough up $500, is not taken into account. So tens of thousands of union volunteer collectors are going into action.

The collectors do a tremendous selling job. They get no commissions for doing it. They don't even get a PAC membership free.

PAC financial operations take place in a "goldfish bowl." The money comes in, in trickles, gushes, or floods, from the local PAC's, and here's how it's spent:

Half the collected amount—50c of every $1—stays in the state, to be spent on the scene by the local PAC's, for the thousand and one expenses that attend a political campaign — literature, radio time, baby sitters, rallies, posters, telephones, postage, clerical help.

The other half goes to the national office, at 1346 Connecticut Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C. Of this, a large portion is used for direct contribution to candidates whom local and state PACs have indorsed. Out of the national office share also comes money for research which provides state and local PACs with material useful in campaigns, such as voting records and statistics, results of special surveys, last-minute information on Capitol Hill developments.

The public relations department in the national office is in charge of the preparation and printing of literature, which is sold below cost. It also develops and produces network radio shows of a general nature, devoted to issues such as Taft-Hartley and housing, and likewise prepares "canned" radio programs for local sponsorship. The public relations staff also helps out local PAC's from time to time with specific problems, and is always ready to give time-tested advice.

A small field staff also works out of national headquarters, keeping constantly on the move, going into "hot" situations to stand by ready to help, visiting local PAC's personally, and coordinating their activities where possible.

In quite a few instances, the national office and the local PAC split expenses for hiring workers for a specific campaign.

PAC Pamphlets Are Available

Here is a list of PAC literature currently available.

"What is PAC?", a four-page leaflet. Free.

"The Case of the Missing Ballots," giving off-year election statistics. One cent each.

"Brother, Can You Spare $100?" an appeal for voluntary contributions. One cent each.

"How We Win," an instructive pamphlet on registration drives. One cent each.

Also there are posters available on the dollar drive and on registration, and a "register-vote" car sticker.

Magnuson Predicts 'Utter Chaos' If Hiring Halls Go

IF THE preferential hiring hall system in the maritime industry is "wrecked" by enforcement of the recent U. S. Supreme Court ban, "utter chaos will break out on the waterfronts," Sen. Magnuson (D., Wash.) warned the Labor-Management Relations subcommittee of the Senate Labor committee last week.

Magnuson, whose first job was as a merchant seaman, testified in support of the bill he co-sponsored with Rep. Lesinski (D., Mich.) to legalize union hiring halls in the industry.

"Having followed the industry rather closely," he said, "I am aware of the low wages, intolerable working conditions and degrading hiring practices which prevailed prior to the unionization of merchant seamen

"The labor strife which reached its peak shortly after the emergence of these unions has steadily declined. Today management-labor relations in this industry are better than at any time which I can recall.

"The outlawing of preferential hiring through the union hiring hall by the Labor-Management Relations Act (Taft-Hartley Act) has created a condition which threatens to disrupt these good relations. I feel, and strongly, that the hiring practices developed by the industry through collective bargaining are sound. As such they should not be changed without the consent of the industry, or other compelling reasons.

"It was through the hiring halls that the merchant seamen were able to eliminate the degrading, vicious hiring practices which prevailed in the industry. If I were a seaman today I would not be forced to return to the practices which prevailed before the hiring halls. No seaman with dignity could be expected to do so."

MAGNUSON recalled that certain provisions of the 1936 Merchant Marine Act, which he helped frame, were aimed at improving the then low ability and character of merchant seamen. One of the reasons for the "material" improvement since then, he said, "has been the disciplinary action of the seamen themselves through their unions . . . (which) have suspended members for serious acts of misconduct aboard ship."

Management, he declared, has nothing "but praise for the present method of employment of merchant seamen, as compared to those that existed before the emergence of the union hiring halls." He conceded that management had cited instances of alleged unfairness of the operation, but said "they unanimously indicated a desire to work these problems out with the unions."

The maintenance of membership and dues checkoff offered by T-H as union security do not offer seafaring unions the protection they do shoreside unions, he pointed out. Turnover among crews at the end of a voyage could quickly wipe out union membership, he demonstrated, and deductions from seamen's wages are forbidden by a 1915 act.

"I have a pretty good knowledge of union security as it related to maritime unions prior to the enactment of the Labor-Management Relations Act," Magnuson went on, drawing again from his experience.

"The preferential hiring hall system operates in a manner which gives less security to merchant seamen than could be had by shoreside establishments through the maintenance of membership and checkoff. Union security through preferential hiring in the maritime industry approaches to a degree maintenance of membership for shoreside unions. There is nothing in the hiring hall practices, however, which can be likened to the checkoff."

Joseph Curran, president of the CIO Maritime Union, testified at length in support of the union's contention that the union hiring hall operates as a preferential shop and not as a closed shop, as the Supreme Court found.

Curran, who also appeared on behalf of the CIO American Radio Association, answered specific questions raised by members of the committee when he appeared earlier.

The hiring hall as it has been operated, he showed, provides more competent employes than were obtained from crimp joints or could be shanghaied because it has introduced stability and security into the industry, raised wages and improved conditions, and so attracted a better type of man.

He recalled applying for a job in 1934 under the pre-union setup. Everybody had to show his discharges, which are evidence of experience, and those with the least experience were hired.

"I had too many discharges," he explained. "They wanted young fellows who wouldn't squawk about the grub or a donkey's breakfast if they found it in their bunk."

(A donkey's breakfast is a straw mattress.)

THE VESSEL sailed in charge of a "thoroughly incompetent crew," he said. It was the Morro Castle, and before it returned it caught fire off Asbury Park, N. J. The crew stampeded to the lifeboats, he said, and wouldn't let in the passengers. As a result of their incompetence and failure to behave as they should, he recalled, 134 lives were lost.

Curran cited contract clauses in support of his earlier contention that employes may be retained in their positions as long as both parties are satisfied and that they are not required to seek new jobs when discharged after each trip.

He said other clauses giving management the right to reject employes furnished by the hiring hall, requiring the union to furnish replacements for those rejected, and giving management the right to fill vacancies at will if the union cannot provide acceptable candidates.

Curran proposed a substitute for the Magnuson-Lesinski bill which would limit the operation of hiring halls to unlicensed personnel. This would do away with one objection to the original measure—that it was so loosely worded it could be made applicable to other industries.

H. L. Daggett, representing the CIO Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, told the subcommittee that nothing should be done to affect adversely the current relationships of the union with employers.

Alabama, Florida, Ohio To Hold Crucial Primaries in 6 Weeks

ON MAY 2, just six weeks from now, the voters of Alabama, Florida and Ohio will decide who runs for election in November.

The results of these primary contests, each one of them dramatic and important, will be watched closely all over the nation and will have a decisive effect on the national political scene.

In Alabama, Sen. Lister Hill, who was elected with labor support in 1944, is seeking the Democratic nomination for re-election, and faces a tough, bitter, opponent, Dixiecrat Lawrence McNeil.

Alabama's nine-man House delegation is likewise seeking renomination, with major attention centered on the Birmingham district, where incumbent Laurie Battle, who voted with the administration only four times in 13 crucial roll-calls last year, faces John Tucker.

Gov. James E. Folsom cannot, by law, succeed himself, and his place is being sought by no less than 15 candidates, including Eugene ("Bull") Connor, Birmingham chief of police, who won national fame by arresting Sen. Glen Taylor (D., Ida.) for attending a non-segregated meeting. In Alabama, which has an extremely punitive poll-tax law, victory in the Democratic primaries is the same as election, since there is no Republican opposition to speak of.

IN FLORIDA, PAC-supported Sen. Claude Pepper and conservative Rep. George Smathers are in a hot race for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

(Smathers has publicly charged that the CIO has "invaded the state" in an effort to help Pepper. Maybe he has something; CIO Pres. Philip Murray did spend his vacation in Florida, if you can call that an invasion.)

The six-man Florida House delegation also seeks re-nomination. Florida has no poll tax. Here, as in Alabama, however, victory in the primaries means election in November.

In Ohio, the Democrats will decide which of three men will oppose the Republican nominee, Sen. Robert A. Taft. The three contending Democrats are State Auditor Joseph Ferguson; Michael V. DiSalle, mayor of Toledo; and Henry F. Busch, professor of social science at Western Reserve Univ.

Ewing, Target Of GOP, Given Hillman Award

THE SIDNEY Hillman Foundation has presented its 1950 award for public service to Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing, the target of a score of reactionary attacks on Roosevelt-Truman liberalism.

The award is given each year in memory of the late president of the CIO Clothing Workers in recognition of meritorious service by those devoted to the public welfare. It carries a $1000 award and was presented to Ewing in New York on March 11 at a luncheon over which Hillman's successor as ACW leader, Jacob S. Potofsky, presided.

"His courageous fight for the nation's health in the face of powerful opposition," said the citation by Potofsky, "his concern for the widows, the orphans, the sick, the disabled and the aged; his warm and lively interest in those who toil and make our country great; his enlightened stand on government's responsibility to its citizens place Oscar R. Ewing in the forefront of our great public servants and have earned for him the esteem and affection of millions of his countrymen."

POTOFSKY PAID further honor to Ewing in his presentation.

"As Federal Security Administrator and before," he said, "Mr. Ewing has fought for the underdog. Perhaps even beyond the call of duty he has fought for civil rights and FEPC.

"He has opposed discrimination in all its forms. He has fought for an adequate housing program and federal aid to education. He has opposed the Taft-Hartley Act.

"He has made a determined campaign to extend old age and survivor insurance to millions of persons not now covered. He has fought for increases in social security benefits to compensate for rises in living costs. He is making a fight to aid unfortunate Americans who do not qualify for those insurance benefits.

"Millions of American men, women and children are in debt to this great public servant for his fight in behalf of comprehensive welfare programs, including public assistance and family, adult and child welfare services, as well as services to safeguard mothers and children.

"But perhaps Oscar Ewing has earned the gratitude of millions of Americans because of his stand in support of national health insurance. While he has the support of those millions of plain Americans suffering from inadequate medical care, he has been the object of the most unscrupulous attacks by organized medical interests. He has been made the principal target of these attacks."

IN ACCEPTING the award, which he said he would add to a loan fund he has established for Harvard Law School students, Ewing attacked both the Republican Party and the American Medical Association, bellwether of the campaign against health insurance. First he teed off on the new GOP campaign slogan, "Liberty or Socialism."

"What kind of a political slogan is that?" he demanded. "Do they mean that only a Republican is dedicated to liberty in America? Do they dare to say that American liberals who have produced men like Roosevelt and Truman and Hilman, do not know the value of individual liberty, of human dignity, of American freedom?

"And as for Socialism—at a time when American industry is a hundred times healthier than at any point during the last years of the last Republican administration, these lackwit leaders of reaction presume to raise the scarecrow of Socialism."

A recent AMA booklet attacking national health insurance had at least 19 misstatements or misrepresentations, he said. On its cover is a reproduction of Sir Luke Fildes' famous painting, "The Doctor," with an AMA-added caption "Keep politics out of medicine."

"WHEN Sir Luke painted this picture," he said, "I am certain that he intended to give us the impression of the good family doctor, in the old tradition, whose single concern was to bring the child back to health. As a result of AMA's action, most of us are now given the distinct feeling that our good country doctor is not thinking about what he must do to cure his patient, but rather how he must word his next letter to his Congressman.

"If the doctor in Sir Luke's picture were to practice medicine with the same disregard for painstaking accuracy that the doctors' lobby uses in practicing publicity, the little child would have small chance for survival."

The picture shows a bearded doctor, chin in hand, gazing intently at a sick child in a bed in a poverty-stricken home. The mother sits at a table, head in arms. Behind her stands her husband, one hand on her shoulder, looking distractedly at the child.

FRANCES V. SMITH, newly elected president of CIO Communications Workers' Michigan Division, is a shrewd negotiator. Her operators have the highest scale in the country. Michigan division was set up as a merger of CWA Divisions 43 and 44.

Monopoly In Gas Charged

THE House Monopoly committee has been asked by Rep. John Lesinski (D., Mich.) to investigate alleged monopolistic control of the supply of natural gas in Detroit, which the CIO Auto Workers union has also been fighting.

Lesinski said the Michigan-Wisconsin Pipe Line Co., which imports gas to Detroit, and the Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. which distributes the gas at retail in the Detroit area, are owned by the American Natural Gas Co. and are headed by the same person.

As a result, he said, the local gas company is powerless to choose the lower-priced source of natural gas offered by the Panhandle Eastern system and has been "shackled, instead, to the high-priced natural gas of the Michigan-Wisconsin Pipe Line Co."

Lesinski also complained that the Detroit Common Council is now considering a resolution which would block competitive sales of natural gas directly to industrial consumers, although that is required by the anti-trust laws. The Congressman cited opposition of Walter Reuther, of the UAW-CIO, to the proposal pending before the Detroit Council.

Golden State Agency Lined Up As Bell Fink

WAS THE State of California getting ready to act as a strike-breaking agency if the CIO Communications Workers there had found it necessary to go on strike against the Bell Telephone monopoly Feb. 24?

Albert T. Lunceford, greater Los Angeles CIO Council Secretary-Treasurer, says it looks that way and has a photostatic copy of a State Dept. of Employment memorandum to back up his suspicions.

The memorandum, issued over the signature of H. P. Harnish, department area director, was addressed to all of the department's local managers. It was headed "Impending telephone strike," and gave detailed instructions on how to proceed in "Fearless Fosdick" fashion toward gathering information on the activities of the prospective strikers.

The mangers were instructed to "post observers in strategic positions near telephone exchanges, not later than 7:30 a.m. on Feb. 14."

Among other duties, the observers were told to do the following:

NOTE THE HOUR and minute the picket lines were established.

Describe the identification signs worn by the pickets.

List the number of persons on picket line and number of potential pickets gathered in nearby groups.

Observe demeanor of pickets and note what was said to persons who crossed or approached the lines.

Watch for any indications of violence, threats or intimidation.

Make written notes on all incidents observed, conversations held, etc.

THESE DETAILED instructions to labor spies point to only one think," Lunceford charged, "an attempt to break strikes and undermine organized labor."

"The California Unemployment Insurance Act was intended to benefit workers. It is being perverted by state officials to wreck trade unions and benefit wealthy corporations."

Lunceford said the CIO has demanded from Gov. Warren a full explanation as to "why a state agency was to be used against the workers." He declared the CIO demands that the practice be stopped.

ON THE negotiation front, CWA officials reported all quiet with the exception of brief flare-ups in Indiana and Wisconsin where A. T. Jones, CWA vice president in charge of negotiations, accused the Bell System in those two states of trying to make certain there is a strike in the telephone industry next month by "opposing the use of state mediation and arbitration machinery in working toward a peaceful settlement of issues in dispute between the union and the company."

"Use of state mediation and arbitration machinery is one way of peacefully revolving a dispute," Jones said. "By opposing the full use of this machinery, AT&T is trying to make certain that there is a strike in the industry at the end of the present 60 day truce.

"We don't like these laws, but since strikes are prohibited under them in both states by special public utility anti-strike statutes, they provide the only method we can use as an alternative to acceptance of AT&T's flat 'No'.

"THE BELL SYSTEM spurns compromise. They flout the institution of collective bargaining. Now they are even opposing the use of state mediation laws which they themselves inspired.

"It just proves what we have been saying all along. The Bell System has no intention of carrying on decent collective bargaining. They are determined to retain the intolerable wage levels, long progression schedules and unsatisfactory working conditions that prevail in the industry. They're trying to make certain there will be a strike in the industry next month."

CIO Leaders On Labor Council To Aid City Of Hope

FORMATION of a National Labor Council for the City of Hope, tuberculosis sanitarium at Duarte, Calif., where thousands of trade unionists have been restored to healthy, useful lives, has been announced by Victor M. Carter, president of the institution. Since its inception in 1913, organized labor has been the hospital's strongest means of support.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey and a group of other labor leaders, CIO and AFL, are members of the Council. At the time the council was set up, Pres. Murray praised the work of the City of Hope and urged support for the hospital. "We should ally ourselves with this friend of labor and give generously to aid in reaching humanity's greatest goal—health for all," he said.

A number of unions, among them the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, have given funds to construct buildings on the 75-acre grounds at Duarte. A building expansion program is near completion.

ORIGINALLY an institution for victims of tuberculosis exclusively, the medical program in the past few years has been expanded to care for patients of all long-term chest ailments, including cancer of the lung.

The institution is run on a strict non-sectarian basis, and is mainly supported by volunteer contributions from labor unions and other groups and individuals. No patient has ever paid for his care and treatment at the City of Hope, which has been praised by medical authorities.

In addition to Murray and Carey, these presidents of CIO International unions are on the City of Hope's Labor Council: Jacob Potofsky, Clothing; O. A. Knight, Oil; Walter Reuther, Auto; Michael Quill, Transport; John Green, Shipbuilders, and Irving Simon, Retail & Wholesale Employes.

N.Y. Times Refuses To Discuss Pay Increases For Guildmen

THE NEW YORK TIMES, Publisher Arthur Hays Sulzberger told employes in his Christmas message last December, "is what it is today because of each of you."

Apparently he didn't mean to include 1800 American Newspaper Guild members who work in his editorial, business and maintenance departments. At any rate he won't even talk about wage increases for them, so after four months of hearing his spokesman insist that pay boosts be removed from current negotiations, the New York Newspaper Guild has scheduled a strike vote for later this month.

Times employes have not had a wage raise since 1948, and had looked forward to one hopefully when the old contract expired in December. However, the Times consistently has refused to meet the standards agreed to by other New York newspapers which have signed 1950 agreements with the Guild. The standards set in Times contracts often have a major influence in Guild negotiations throughout the country.

The Times is one of the country's more prosperous newspapers. Since the last Guild contract was signed the newsstand sales price has been boosted from 3 to 5c; its 1949 revenues were the highest in its history.

Two More Labor Films Available

Two more 16 mm. sound films have been added to the list of labor movies available from the CIO Dept. of Education and Research. They are:

Voices of the People, 35 minutes: The film shows that our nation was founded by discussion which led to action. It can be used by unions to point up the importance of discussion in solving union problems. Rental $2.

Hymn of the Nations, 35 minutes: Shows the response of Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony Orchestra, as they hail the liberation of Italy by Allied troops. It features the Westminster Choir and Soloist Jan Peerce. Rental, $4.

Requests for film rentals should be made three weeks in advance of date of showing, and sent to CIO Film Division, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Tax Repealer Signed

President Truman on Mar. 16 signed the bill repealing the 64-year-old U. S. tax on oleomargarine. It becomes effective July 1.

New CIO Gov't Unit Issues 1st Charters

ANTHONY FEDEROFF, chairman of the new CIO Government and Civic Employees Organizing Committee, announced last week that the first block of charters in the new organization had been issued.

The march of government workers from federal, state and municipal branches into the new CIO group, Federoff reported, was literally "overwhelming."

"The office, established in CIO headquarters at 718 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C., has been deluged with applications for affiliation. Locals of the former United Public Workers have been writing and telephoning from all parts of the country to announce their intention of remaining with CIO," Federoff said.

CHARTER NO. 1 was issued to the Washington federal workers local which had been among the leaders of the fight to establish a sound, effective and honestly American trade union for government workers.

Charter No. 2 went to a group of West Virginia state employes and Charter No. 3 was being held to complete transfer of a group of nearly 5000 New York employes.

Among the first charters issued by GCEOC were certificates to the 40 Local Industrial Unions comprising approximately 5000 workers who had revolted against UPW, to the more than 40 locals which had rallied in the Government Workers Union and to revived groups which had, temporarily, suspended operation rather than continue under UPW.

CIO Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood and GCEOC Secy.-Treas. Milton Murray met last week in Detroit, Mich., with representatives of a number of city and state locals which had disaffiliated from UPW and were asking continued affiliation with CIO. Also represented at the conference were 10 locals of city and state workers who had been grouped in the United Government Workers Union as an independent organization until they could regain CIO affiliation.

P.R. Governor Feted By CIO

IF ALL THE population of the world were moved into the United States, this country would become as crowded as Puerto Rico, our island possession in the Caribbean.

With the 1940 population of about 1,900,000—it's much larger now—Puerto Rico's people are crowded together, about 625 of them to the square mile. Lack of industry and natural resources have kept the island's standard of living down to low levels.

But the island's liberal political administration is trying desperately to improve conditions, Puerto Rican Gov. Luis Munoz Marin told a luncheon in Washington given in his honor last week by the CIO.

"Operation Bootstrap is the name we've given to our program," the liberal Governor told some 40 guests of the CIO. "We haven't yet succeeded, we are still tugging at our bootstraps.

"But we in Puerto Rico consider the CIO among our warmest and staunchest friends, and we appreciate your help."

Gov. Marin was introduced as a "great liberal statesman" by Jacob S. Potofsky, head of the CIO's International and Latin American Committees.

Pointing out that the CIO has recently given a charter to the Puerto Rican labor movement, Potofsky promised full understanding by CIO of the island's difficult economic problems and its pressing need for industrial expansion.

"We're not afraid of your competition, we welcome it," Potofsky said.

The Governor, first to be elected by the people of Puerto Rico, was hailed by Potofsky and by CIO Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood as a "real New Dealer" and a warm friend of the CIO. Haywood emphasized the "responsibility" of the United States to work for improvement of Puerto Rican living conditions.

Attending the luncheon were CIO Vice-Presidents John Green and Joseph Beirne, representatives of a number of CIO affiliates, staff officials and officials of a number of government agencies concerned with Latin American problems.

$102,500 Anti-Trust Fine Imposed

Twelve firms, 13 individuals, and two national associations have been fined $102,500 in federal court at San Francisco for violating the anti-trust laws in the sale of vertical pumps. All pleaded nolo contendere (no defense), thus in effect admitting government charges that they had conspired to fix prices since 1935.

The indictments were returned last December after the Justice Dept. had worked on the cases for about a year. Vertical turbine pumps and parts are used by farmers and municipalities for water for both irrigation and domestic purposes.

"Reducing is easy! Just try living on the same diet your employes can afford."

TWU Strikers Win Security

THE NATION'S largest air carrier, American Airlines, last week signed a contract with the CIO Transport Workers which brought the strike of TWU's 4600 maintenance and store members against the company to an end.

The 11-day walkout had cut flight schedules 80% after the first day.

American agreed to a job security clause in the contract and to elimination of the practice of "farming out" work to sub-contractors when regular employes could handle it. The sub-contracting practice was one of the chief union complaints.

The issue of severance pay was settled by compromise. TWU had sought two weeks pay for the first year, four weeks for the second year and one week for each additional year up to eight. The company finally agreed to give two weeks for the first year, two for the second, three for the third and one additional week for each year up to eight.

The union dropped its proposal for a wage increase,

Members Joining CIO As UOPWA Crumbles

OFFICE and professional workers in New York City, who for years struggled under the handicap of being represented by the discredited United Office & Professional Workers, are flocking in increasing numbers to the CIO banner.

Spearhead of the surge into the CIO following its expulsion of the UOPWA as Communist-dominated is the Community and Social Agencies Employes Union No. 1707, which was presented with a local industrial union charter three weeks ago by Irving Abramson, CIO national representative.

The presentation took place in the Textile Workers Hall as a couple of hundred pickets, purporting to be members of the crumbling UOPWA Local 19, marched in front of the place and screamed hysterical mouthings about fascism.

THE NEW local is centered around a group of employes of the YWCA national office who bolted from Local 19 about a year ago under the leadership of Elizabeth Herring and Hilda Siff.

They tried to obtain a CIO charter but were turned down because the UOPWA was still in good standing at the time, so they formed the United Social Service Employes Union and started to expand. At the time the UOPWA was expelled last month they had the nucleus of a national organization set up.

When the UOPWA ouster was announced they got in touch with Abramson. Using their 600 members as a base, he was able to amalgamate other CIO-minded people in Local 19 with them and came out with a strong new local of about 1200 members.

Since then the CIO has been tearing Local 19, largest in the UOPWA with 4500 claimed members, into shreds.

IT HAS cracked the largest of Local 19's units, that at the United Jewish Appeal, with more than 600 members, and has built up a substantial membership in the offices of Hadassah, the Jewish women's philanthropic organization.

At the UJA the CIO has asked recognition and bargaining rights. When the old contract expired it notified Hadassah that it now represents the employes. Hadassah attempted to persuade Local 19 to agree to a consent representation election (charitable organizations are not covered either by the Wagner Act or the New York State Labor Relations Act). The left-wing union refused and threw a picket line of business agents around Haddassah headquarters.

UOPWA Insurance Agents Local 30, the largest local of insurance agents in the country, also is fast moving into the CIO. The UOPWA leadership promptly lifted the charter when word got around and rushed into court for an ex parte injunction barring the local even from holding a meeting.

An "ex parte" injunction is one obtained without notice to the other party. It is a form of employer resistance which every phase of organized labor has fought for years and has managed to wipe out in some states, but the left-wingers tried to use it.

TWU To Issue P. R. Charter

THE CIO Transport Workers have broken through the continental bounds of the United States and are organizing in Puerto Rico.

Arrangements have been made to issue a charter as Local 600 to some 3000 airport employes and bus, trolley and taxi drivers in San Juan, the island capital, as soon as the workers themselves ratify affiliation.

Chartering of the new local is an outgrowth of the recent visit to Puerto Rico of CIO Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood, CIO Councils Dir. John Brophy and Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the National CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee. During their visit they presented a charter as an industrial union council to the Puerto Rico Generl Confederation of Labor, representing about 100,000 workers on the island.

PRIOR TO their trip TWU Secy.-Treas. Gustave Faber conferred with Haywood about the ground crews at San Juan airport, some members of which already belonged to the TWU. In San Juan, Haywood met with the workers themselves, and with the cooperation of the CGT the conference resulted in widespread alignment with the TWU. The Puerto Ricans will continue to retain their affiliation with the CGT.

Since then TWU Pres. Michael J. Quill paid a flying visit to the island and completed arrangements for the affiliation short of the formal member ratification.

He was hailed and feted throughout his trip and when he left his hotel for the airport on the return trip, a short auto ride, the new TWU members arranged a parade of limousines. The crowds along the route cheered Quill.

Organizationally Speaking

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers reports that TWU-CIO has come through with a new improved contract for the 4600 employes of American Airlines. Quill compliments the CIO Regional Directors, CIO legal and legislative depts. and the rest of the National CIO for their help to TWU in this campaign in some 22 stations of American Airlines all over the country.

The writer was in Detroit, Mich., this past week along with Chairman Anthony Federoff and Secy.-Treas. Milton Murray of the Government and Civic Employes Organizing Committee, to meet with public workers in Michigan. CIO Regional Dir. Scholle and his staff were also in attendance and we started the movement rolling to give protection to these workers by bringing them within the CIO where they want to belong. Their desire to escape the discredited Communist-dominated United Public Workers was very pronounced.

An untimely tragedy has occurred in the death of CIO Rep. B. T. (Hank) Wolford. "Hank" worked loyally and untiringly for the CIO. The hour was never too late or the day too long for him to help the movement he loved and served so well. He put all he had into his work for the CIO.

His buddies will join with me in expressing our profound sympathies to his family and many friends. In his memory we shall carry on to build a better, more secure country and world.

Vice Pres. Philip O'Rourke, American Radio Association-CIO, reports that the ARA defeated the AFL Radio Officers' Union in a representation election for radio officers on Tidewater Associated Oil Co. tankers. The election was held in San Francisco, Cal.

Al Hartnett, Assistant to the Chairman James B. Carey of the IUE-CIO Administrative Committee, reports that in a representation election held at the Osborne Transformer Co., Detroit, Mich., the workers voted in favor of the IUE by 19 to 6 for no union.

The Newspaper Guild of New York-CIO reports that it gained its second overwhelming victory in a union security vote under the NLRB when editorial and commercial department employes of the Herald Tribune voted 487 to 89 for a Guild shop. The first union security election in a unit of the Newspaper Guild of New York since the passage of the Taft-Hartley Law was won at Standard & Poor's where employes voted 211 to 7 for a Guild shop last December.

Adolph Germer, Director of Organization, Intl. Woodworkers of America-CIO, reports that IWA victorious in two NLRB union shop elections at Everett, Wash.: Weyerhauser Timber Co., eligible approximately 1000; for union shop 779; against 166; Eclipse Mill Co., for union shop 164; against 28; eligible, approximately 200. Pres. Ralph Winn of Local 101, IWA, was in charge of the campaign.

Reg. Dir. Loren Houser reports that in a representation election held at the Producers Dairy, Muncie, Ind., the workers voted 42 to 2 in favor of the United Brewery Workers-CIO. There were 49 eligible to vote. Intl. Rep. John Dippel was in charge of this drive and was assisted by Chairman Jack Reed of the Delaware County IUC and Pres. Leland Stiff of the Delaware IUC. This group was formerly Food and Tobacco Workers Local 38, and had been in that organization for a number of years.

House Unit Kills Education Bill, 13-12

THE HOUSE Labor and Education Committee by a one-vote margin voted on Mar. 14 to kill the $300 million aid to education bill, which already had been approved by the Senate. The vote was 13 to 12.

The bill, which had the support of the CIO, directed that most of the money be earmarked for teachers' salaries in public schools. A major controversy with religious overtones was created when Rep. Barden (D., N.C.) introduced an amendment specifying that the money only be spent for public schools and that neither parochial nor private schools nor their pupils be assisted.

The original measure would have left disposition of the money up to the States. In about 20 states religious and other non-public schools receive some kind of aid, most often in the form of bus transportation for pupils from outlying areas, for school lunches or for textbooks.

Hope for some kind of federal aid for schools did not appear to be completely lost. Rep. Burke (D. O.) offered another bill to provide $300 million for teachers' salaries alone. This money would go entirely to public schools. The private and parochial school question would not arise, he claimed.

The committee met again the following day and by a 13 to 12 count voted to take up Burke's bill for amendments. However, any action was delayed at least until April 17, when a subcommittee is due to report on alternative measures to help schools indirectly by contributions to the cost of their construction.

The committee's vote on March 14 was in executive session. The members immediately got themselves into such a parliamentary knot they had to call upon House Parliamentarian Lewis Deschler for help in untangling it.

"Inside Lobby" Aids German Cartels

By NATHAN ROBERTSON
For Labor Press Association

ONE OF THE most important planks in American foreign policy is the destruction of the German cartel, or monopoly, system which helped build Hitler's war machine and supported his maniacal war.

Recently there has been strong evidence that this policy has not been carried out. This evidence has come from none less than John J. McCloy, American High Commissioner in Germany, and an official of the Justice Department who called the program a "complete failure."

One reason for this failure has been a clever propaganda campaign in this country to convince Congress and the public that to dismantle German plants would destroy the hopes of a new democratic Germany, by making the democratic government too weak to survive attack from the Communists or Fascists. Many liberals in this country are convinced of this danger — but it is obvious that this line of reasoning plays into the hands of the cartelists who want to save their plants.

THIS PROPAGANDA was put over through a tremendous campaign financed by a number of sources—some of them believed to be the German cartelists, the Nazis, and their allies in this country.

The House Lobby Investigating Committee has evidence that two of the most important figures in the conduct of this propaganda campaign against dismantling were lobbyists working from inside the Capitol. One, says the committee, was John Crane, administrative assistant to Senator Malone (R., Nev.); the other, his wife, Joan Crane, who was employed for a while by Rep. Katherine St. George (R., N.Y.), the successor to Ham Fish, who as a Congressman was a tool of Nazi propagandists.

Both Malone and Mrs. St. George have denied to this correspondent that they had any knowledge of, or responsibility for, the lobbying campaign carried on by the two Cranes.

Both admitted hiring these "inside lobbyists," and Mrs. St. George admitted paying the expenses of a trip last summer by Mrs. Crane to Germany during which she gathered much of the data she used to impress Senators with the desirability of stopping the dismantling program. Mrs. St. George also carried Mrs. Crane on her payroll for a couple of months while she wrote a report on the trip and lobbied with Senators.

But when questioned about the activities of the Cranes, both Senator Malone and Mrs. St. George denied they knew of their lobbying when it was taking place.

NEITHER CRANE nor his wife was registered as a lobbyist or a foreign agent. Whether they should have been, under the law, remains a question for the lobby investigating committee to determine.

But investigation by this correspondent discloses that there is no question about the lobbying activities. Mrs. Crane talked to many Senators and their assistants—trying to sell liberal Senators such as Douglas (D., Ill.), O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), Kefauver (D., Tenn.), Humphrey (D., Minn.) and others the story that the dismantling program was hurting the chances for a democratic Germany. They apparently talked some other line to the conservative Senators—who were lined up almost solidly in the campaign to stop dismantling.

Investigation discloses, also, that neither Crane nor Mrs. Crane admitted to the liberal Senators their connections with conservative Senator Malone and Mrs. St. George. Whether they also were violating one or two laws—the lobbying law and the foreign agents registration act—depends upon whether they were being paid, and by whom.

If they were receiving no pay, they may have been violating no law, although it is possible that the lobby law would require Mrs. Crane to register her expense payments from Mrs. St. George.

Both Senator Malone and Mrs. St. George denied any knowledge of who was paying the lobbyists. Senator Malone did not know whether they were being paid or not. Mrs. St. George said she assumed Mrs. Crane was being paid by someone, but she did not know who. She said she had inquired without finding out, even though she had paid Mrs. Crane's traveling expenses.

But while still on Malone's payroll, Crane went to Germany between sessions last year. He did not leave the Senator's payroll until Feb. 15 this year. During the last month of his employment he was very busy writing letters from the Senator's "research" office in the Press Building, lobbying against dismantling. A week or two before his employment with Malone ended, Crane headed back to Germany to join his wife, who had been there since mid-December.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed in Congress.	Keep writing to Senators, Representatives to force T-H repeal.
FEPC S. 1728 HR 4453	Senate bill would bar job discrimination based on race, creed or color, and provide penalties for violation.	House Dixiegops voted substitute bill without any enforcement teeth. Senate debate, probable filibuster, due soon.	Wire Senators to vote for S 1728 without weakening amendments, and to fight filibuster.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S. 2246 HR 7402	Provides for long-term, low-interest U. S. loans to co-ops for building moderate-cost housing projects, etc.	Co-op feature failed to pass Senate. House to vote soon.	Wire Representatives to give bill full support.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors benefits, etc., under social security. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Senate Finance Comm. now holding hearings. CIO has asked further improvements.	Ask Senators to try to strengthen HR 6000 over present provisions.
Federal Aid To Education S. 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. House Labor Comm. badly split.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to OK Senate bill.
ECA extension HR 7378	Renews Marshall Plan for another year; sets $2,950,000,000 ceiling on funds.	Senate Foreign Relations Comm. and House Foreign Affairs now considering. CIO has announced support.	Ask members of the two committees to approve it as drafted.
Kerr Bill S. 1498	Weakens Federal Power Commission authority to regulate interstate shipments of natural gas.	Passed House last session; on Senate calendar awaiting action.	Write your Senator, ask him to vote NO.
Mundt-Ferguson Bill S. 2311	Bill endangers civil liberties, union rights — under guise of fighting subversive activities.	CIO opposed bill at hearings last year. Senate Judiciary Comm. has brought out revised bill.	Ask Senators to oppose bill as dangerous to civil rights.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

ADA Presses For 3 Steps To Aid Europe

THE UNITED States should work for better conditions in Europe "to dispel any notion" that this country is "on the side of decay," Henry S. Reuss, Milwaukee attorney, testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in urging continuation of the Marshall Plan.

Reuss formerly was deputy general counsel in the office of the ECA Special Representative in Paris. He testified in behalf of Americans for Democratic Action, and hailed the plan and its execution as "really great achievements" in U. S. foreign policy.

Reuss said that by taking account of "human aspirations" we "may surprise ourselves at the number of people who will repair to our standards." He recommended that we tell the French through ECA that "we favor a return to collective bargaining and a more honest tax system," and that we "be sympathetic to the cry of the Italian peasants for land reform."

Communism makes gains in those Marshall Plan countries "where standards of living are lowest, where jobs are unstable, where the ordinary working man and peasant has lost hope that he can cross over to the other side of the street in his search for the better things in life," Reuss said.

While applauding "integration" as a step toward greater productivity in Europe, Reuss said these further steps were needed:

1. Requiring Marshall Plan countries to end cartel restrictions in domestic trade as well as international trade.
2. Special aid to factories and farms which develop productivity plans through management-labor cooperation. This would give trade unions and co-ops, as well as private and public enterprise, "a long delayed opportunity to participate directly in the Marshall Plan."
3. Adoption of full employment as another Marshall Plan goal, placing it beside high production, liberalized trade, economic stability and European unification as a purpose of American aid.

DuPont Profits Rise $56 Million in Year

DuPont, the giant firm against which the government has brought anti-trust suits, set a new record in 1949, its annual report disclosed. Sales hit $1,025,000,000, or 6% over 1948, the previous record year. Net income (profits after taxes) reached $213 million against $157 million in 1948. A greater physical volume, plus higher prices, accounted for sales passing the billion-dollar mark.

REA Brings Power To 83% Of Farmers

Claude R. Wickard, Rural Electrification Administrator, told the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association at its convention at Chicago that 83% of the nation's farmers now have electricity as compared with only 10% when the REA program got under way. He said the farm borrowers had repaid to the government almost $225 million and are now delinquent on only four-tenths of 1% of their loans.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00 A YEAR
3c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., MARCH 27, 1950 82 No. 13

REAL ESTATE and medical lobbies have been united in unholy matrimony with the blessing of the Committee for Constitutional Government to form with other groups the Natl. Committee to Limit Federal Taxing Powers. Birdseye view of the ceremony, caught by our cartoonist, above. See story on Page 6.

House Unit Hits Denham Post

The House Committee on Executive Expenditures voted last week to abolish the office of NLRB general counsel.

The committee voted to carry out the recommendation of the Hoover Reorganization Commission after three days of testimony, pro and con, on eliminating the much disputed post held at present by Robert N. Denham.

Denham's removal has been demanded by many union groups, which charge him with extreme bias. Present move in Congress is aimed at abolition of Denham's office, not merely the removal of the present general counsel.

Unless disapproved by Congress, the change is effective in seven weeks.

See Page 3 for Additional Details

FTA And UE Losing To CIO

Local industrial union charters have been issued to nine groups which voted to pull out of the Food & Tobacco Workers Union after FTA was expelled from the CIO on charges of consistently following the Communist Party Line. Included in group newly chartered is former FTA Local 78, with 10,000 dues-paying members.

Westinghouse Electric has notified the United Electrical Workers, also expelled from CIO on Commie charges, it will not extend present contract.

WE's action also means IUE-CIO can handle members' grievances at Westinghouse plants.

See FTA and IUE-UE Stories on Page 2

CIO, AFL Sea Unions 'Unite'

CIO, AFL and independent maritime unions have launched joint campaign to retain hiring halls, outlawed court interpretation of the Taft Hartley Act.

Unions say elimination of hiring halls would bring chaos to industry and return to old "shape-up" and the racketeering and shanghaiing which accompanied it.

Also they point out even T-H sponsors admit the statute was not intended to outlaw hiring halls.

The U.S. maritime group also declared "hot war" on the Communist-dominated maritime unions of Europe who are attempting to sabotage the Marshall Plan and interfere with shipments made to Atlantic Pact Nations.

For Futher Details See Page 3

Locals Are Rejecting FTA Coast To Coast

OPEN AND widespread rebellion against the Communist-line Food, Tobacco & Agricultural Workers has brought a veritable flood of rank and file membership applications to the CIO from coast to coast.

In the lush agricultural districts of California and Arizona, where the once-powerful FTA Local 78 sprawled across irrigated fields from San Francisco's back door to the gates of Phoenix, workers in one packingshed after another have voted to cast off the red mantle. Six key officers have resigned and a CIO charter as Local Industrial Union No. 78 has been issued.

This local has a minimum of 10,000 members at the height of the fresh fruit and vegetable season, and has paid per capita on as high as 14,000 members.

The officers who bolted were G. Lewis Joyce, local secretary; Clayton Coon, vice president in the Brawley, Calif., area; Lester Logan, vice president in the Yuma, Ariz., area; Nona Joyce, secretary of the Imperial Valley area, and Victor H. Burns and Eugene Watkins, local trustees.

IN A FORMAL statement they said they resigned "in protest against the policies, political or otherwise, formulated and carried out by FTA and certain officials in Local 78, FTA, which are against our democratic principles."

The FTA was expelled from the CIO at the last meeting of the national Executive Board. It had been found guilty of following "every zig and zag" of the Communist Party line.

Over on the other side of the continent a charter has been issued to Local Industrial Union 1711 in Philadelphia, Pa., covering about 1600 members. This was an FTA amalgamated local with members in several food and tobacco processing plants—right on the doorstep of FTA's national headquarters.

Back in California again, FTA Local 64, with nearly 1000 members, voted to jump out of FTA at a regular membership meeting held only two days after the expulsion. A charter as LIU No. 64 has been issued to a substantial majority of the workers, who process a well-known brand of canned tuna at the plant of the Van Camp Sea Food Co.

Another LIU charter, No. 306, has been issued to old FTA Local 306, Cotton Compressors and Oil Mill Workers, in Phoenix. This local, which also voted unanimously to get out of the FTA, is protected by an agreement between the CIO and the employer, the Western Compress Co., that the contract will continue in effect.

Two locals of agricultural workers in Michigan have been given LIU charters. No. 1710, at Traverse City, has about 800 workers at the height of the season. No. 1709, at Ellsworth, has about 400.

ACROSS LAKE Michigan at Whitewater, Wisc., members of FTA Local 236, Dairy Workers, voted to rid themselves of the FTA incubus and continue with the CIO. They have been chartered as LIU No. 1705.

In Toledo, O., more than 200 employes of a spice company and a coffee roaster who had been in FTA Local 297 killed off that affiliation and have been given a charter as LIU No. 1714, Coffee, Tea, Spice and Allied Workers.

More than 100 tobacco workers in Wheeling, W. Va., who left FTA, received a charter as LIU No. 1704, Tobacco & Stogie Machine Operators & Strippers Union.

These defections from FTA have been spontaneous and became effective with the aid of members of other CIO local unions and the various CIO regional directors. The National CIO has not yet set up an organizing committee in the jurisdiction formerly held by the red-ridden FTA.

STEELWORKER'S SON: Lyle Button, Jr., captain of the 1949 Univ. of Illinois football team, has just signed a contract with the Washington Redskins of the National Professional Football League. His father, Lyle Button, has been a member of Steelworkers Local 1014 at Gary, Ind., for the last 14 years. Young Lyle is considered a hot prospect by Redskin owner, George Marshall. He is the 2nd U. of Ill. captain to join the Redskins.

Senate Votes This Week On 'Gas Steal'

THE KERR amendments to the Natural Gas Act, which would open the way to a boost of millions of dollars a year in the nation's gas bill, will go to a vote in the Senate Mar. 29.

The balloting will follow some of the most furious debating in the Senate in recent years, with the oil interests and their allies staging a bitter offensive to put across the amendments. Sponsored by Sen. Kerr (D. Okla.), whose oil millions make him one of the wealthiest men in Congress and who stands to benefit personally from passage, the measure would exempt so-called independent gas producers — those who do not transport their product — from price regulation by the Federal Power Commission.

The battle for the bill was led by Sens. Thomas (D. Okla.), and Johnson (D. Tex.), in addition to Kerr. In the front line of its opponents were Sens. Douglas (D. Ill.) and Gillette (D. Ia.) who made full-dress speeches as well as participated in the rough-and-tumble debate, and Sen. Brewster (R. Me.)

DOUGLAS charged the sponsors' aim is to raise the price of natural gas if the amendment is passed "so that one million BTUs of energy" will cost "approximately the same" as a similar amount of energy from coal or oil. That, he declared "would mean quadrupling the cost of gas in the field."

"And the hotels in Texas," he added "would be even more lush than they are now."

He predicted that if the bill passed it would "blast open a rate loophole big enough to allow $4 billion to $16 billion rate increases to drive through."

The big companies are hiding behind the skirts of the small ones on whose behalf the fight is ostensibly being made, he said. In the two biggest oil fields, 10 pipeline companies and 16 non-transporting producers control 75% of the reserves, he said, showing the high degree of concentration in a few companies.

GILLETTE CHARGED the producers with taking a "public be damned" attitude and called for a complete investigation of the industry "because we have allowed a situation to develop which calls for far more than the defeat of this bill." He said the investigation is in order because owners of "a precious natural resource —90% of which is found in seven states—have the power to sell or withhold as they desire or their interests direct, a fuel on which millions of consumers depend."

Brewster said the only reason the producers are excited over the bill is because "they are contemplating an increase" in rates. Sen. McFarland (D. Ariz.) maintained the bill would make no difference in the present situation.

"Then why do you need a bill?" shot back Brewster.

McFarland earlier had admitted that he was supporting the bill only because Texas producers will not sell natural gas to potential users among his constituents in Arizona unless the Kerr bill passes.

Sen. Langer (R. N. D.) quoted minutes of a hearing before the Federal Power Commission at which Kerr frankly and openly admitted that proponents of the bill are interested in higher prices for natural gas. Kerr got mad.

All Of 'Big Three' Now Recognize IUE

ANNOUNCEMENT by Westinghouse Electric that it had refused a request of the United Electrical Workers to extend that union's contract beyond the March 31 expiration date means that for the first time representatives of the CIO Intl. Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers will handle grievances for its members in Westinghouse plants.

Coming on the heels of a similar move by General Electric, the statement also means that for the first time since UE was expelled from the CIO last November, IUE will now be able to represent its members in the "Big Three" — General Electric, General Motors and Westinghouse. IUE signed a contract with General Motors Mar. 10 after GM workers had handed UE a shellacking in an NLRB election.

The company's reply to the UE request was given by W. O. Lippman, Westinghouse vice president in charge of plant labor relations, at a meeting with UE representatives in Pittsburgh Mar. 20.

The statement disclosed the company had agreed not to cancel any contract agreements during the period April 1-30, during which time a new contract is expected to be negotiated with whichever union wins the forthcoming NLRB representation elections.

In turning down the UE request, the corporation reiterated a policy laid down on Jan. 27 in which it announced its intention to terminate the contract in accordance with the contract's 60-day termination clause.

"At that time," Lippman explained, "inasmuch as the UE is a party to representation proceedings now before the NLRB, Westinghouse would be unable to negotiate and execute a 1950 contract without laying itself open to a possible charge of influencing a 'free' selection of a bargaining agent. This same situation applies to any act by Westinghouse which would extend the existing contract."

Lippman also issued a statement of policy to employes which will govern the company's actions during the interim period.

The statement held that "local management will recognize the right of the individual or individuals to choose any person to represent him or them in the presentation of the grievance."

Westinghouse announced it will continue in effect various employe benefits and company practices which are currently in effect under the present contract, including vacations, paid holidays, seniority rights and progression schedules.

Leftists Oust Perlow Follower

Abraham Zide, insurance fund director of the Furniture Worker-CIO, for the past three years, was removed from his post at the March 20 meeting of the fund's board of trustees.

Zide, a strong adherent of UFWA Pres. Morris Pizer's program to support National CIO policy, charged his removal was "witch-hunting with a vengeance" and was engineered by the Perlow-Marsh anti-CIO forces because "I expressed my backing of Natl. CIO."

Max Perlow is secretary-treasurer of the union, Ernest Marsh is director of organization.

"My own local union, Local 76B, voted overwhelmingly to support Pres. Pizer's CIO position," Zide continued, "I expressed my honest convictions and was active for CIO in my own union. That is why the axe fell.

"Our membership repudiates the undemocratic, union-busting tactics of the anti-CIO Perlow-Marsh gang. Our international convention opens in Chicago, June 7 and they see the handwriting on the wall. In their desperation, they are hell-bent-for-destruction, trying to wreck and ruin what they can't control.

"Their crimes against democracy, free speech, free press and free thought are a disgrace to the labor movement."

'Most Dynamic Registration Drive' Planned By Ohio PAC

THE OHIO CIO-PAC central committee, 100 strong, met March 18 in Columbus to lay the groundwork for "the most dynamic registration campaign ever conducted in Ohio," as the primary date came nearer and with it the dramatic race between Sen. Robert A. Taft (R.. O.) and whomever among three Democratic candidates for Senator the voters pick to oppose him.

PAC Dir. Jack Kroll, who also is president of the Ohio State CIO Council, attended the meeting, and told the press afterwards that "the momentous issue of our time must not be decided by the voters who stay away from the polls."

The Committee "carefully considered the qualifications of candidates for the Democratic Senate nomination," an official announcement stated. "Fortunately, this year unusually well-qualified men are seeking the nomination . . . All of these candidates are committed to a policy of placing the welfare of our people ahead of the profits of special interests. Therefore the Ohio CIO-PAC is making no indorsements in this race."

Kroll said that committee research showed that there is an estimated potential vote of 5,200,000 in Ohio, but that in the general elections of 1948 only 3,138,463 voted, and in 1946 only 2,343,862.

This year, he said, "we shall have as our goal the registration of every eligible voter, regardless of political affiliation, in the areas where registration is required. In November we shall endeavor to get every eligible voter to the polls."

The Ohio committee will hold a Political Action Institute April 21-22 in Columbus, to instruct PAC leaders on the best techniques for bringing the issues and the record of candidates home to voters.

House Unit Votes To Kill NLRB Counsel Post

THE HOUSE Committee on Executive Expenditures on Mar. 23 approved President Truman's plan to abolish the post of general counsel of the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

The vote, at a closed session, was 18 to 7. It was on a motion by the anti-labor Rep. Hoffman (R., Mich.) which would have kept the plan—part of the overall reorganization recommended by the Hoover Commission—from becoming effective.

The committee acted after three days of public hearings at which the plan, including the shift of the general counsel's powers to the board itself, got mingled approval and disapproval. Those favoring it pointed out that it would end the turbulence and disharmony between the board and the general counsel. Opponents called it a subterfuge to amend the Taft-Hartley act, which created the position as it now stands.

One of those who approved the plan was Director of the Budget Frank C. Pace.

Pace stressed the "confusion and conflict" that the division of responsibilities between the genreal counsel and the board has caused, and which the President mentioned in a letter to Congress accompanying his plan. Continuation of the division, Pace claimed, "with resultant confusion and demoralization of staff, can affect efficiency and economy as well as the sound effectuation of the purposes of the (Taft-Hartley) law." He claimed the conflict between the board and the incumbent general counsel, Robert N. Denham, is more than one of personalities requiring the President to determine who's wrong and fire him.

The committee also heard NLRB Chairman Paul M. Herzog indorse the Truman plan. Labor policy as determined by Congress cannot be effectively administered by a "two-headed agency," Herzog said.

Continuation of the split in authority will constitute a continuing threat to effective enforcement of the law, whatever that law may be," he said.

THE GENERAL counsel, he said, has full authority to decide if a charge of unfair labor practices is to be prosecuted, and there is no appeal from his ruling. Denham, he added, has assumed the role of "policy maker" and has objected to defending board decisions he thought would embarrass him.

In one case, the chairman related, Denham even told the board he intended to make a statement to the court in opposition to the board's decision and "in support of the very party attacking the board's orders."

"Thus the government of the United States—indeed, one agency of the United States—would be on both sides of the same case," Herzog pointed out.

The general counsel is required by the T-H act to defend board decisions against attack in the courts.

Sen. Taft (R., O.), co-sponsor of the law, flipped a complete flop from his stand of a year ago. At that time he introduced a resolution which would abolish the general counsel's post. Last week he announced he will oppose President Truman's proposal to to do the same thing.

William B. Barton, director of employer-employe relations for the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, opposed the plan and alleged it would restore "unfair and inequitable administration of our national labor law."

Rep. Ralph E. Church (R., Ill.) collapsed on the witness stand and died immediately after telling the committee the proposed change is "illegal."

The recommendation was one of a score sent to Congress by the President at the same time. They become law after 60 days unless a majority of the authorized membership of House or Senate disapproves.

Maritime Unions Unite For Hiring Hall, Against Reds

SEVEN UNIONS in the seafaring industry met in Washington Mar. 20 and 21 and united for a "hot war" on European Communists fighting the Marshall Plan and the Atlantic Pact.

They rapped the reds and their trade union "stooges" for the violence they have declared will mark the arrival of Atlantic Pact arms in Europe, and for the chaos with which they have tried to write off the benefits of the Marshall Plan.

Then they took up another joint attack—to preserve union hiring halls, declared illegal under the Taft-Hartley Act by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The union agreed not to use the Taft-Hartley Act to attack each other and not to aid any outside group using the act against a union.

The unions, representing 170,000 mariners, were represented by their top leaders. Pres. Joseph Curran, of the CIO National Maritime Union, presided.

AGREEING TO the pact, in addition to the NMU and Curran, were Harry Lundeberg, of the Seafarers International Union, AFL; H. L. D. Daggett, Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, CIO; W. R. Steinberg, American Radio Association, CIO; Andrew MacDonald, Radio Officers Union, AFL; Capt. C. F. May, Masters, Mates and Pilots, AFL; Vincent J. Malone, Marine Firemen's Union, unaffiliated.

The agreement to fight the propaganda of the Communist-dominated unions in European transporation came in answer to a plea by Omer Becu, of Belgium, secretary-general of the International Transportation Workers Federation.

"Through this resolution," he said, "we are now declaring 'hot war' on the Communists through all maritime unions."

The Senate Labor sub-committee studying the Magnuson-Lesinski bill to legalize maritime union hiring halls received a letter from Federal Mediation Director Cyrus W. Ching warning that abolition of the halls probably would result in strikes on all coasts and would be "a most serious disturbing factor" in the industry's labor relations.

"It would precipitate strikes and stoppages on all coasts," he wrote, "unless some other hiring procedure acceptable to maritime workers which would give them and their unions the protections and benefits of the union hiring hall were substituted in its stead.

"I know of no such procedure."

The maritime unions consider the hiring hall "essential and indispensable to their security and survival as effective unions," he wrote the Senators.

Employers, he continued, regard "well-run" hiring halls "essential or significantly important for industrial stability." Unions regard the union shop as impracticable in the industry, he added, because of its special character and the presence of a "casual and itinerant" relation to the industry.

At a session of the Labor subcommittee at which Lundeberg pressed for continuance of the hiring hall, Sen. Taft (R. O.), said he did not think the Taft-Hartley Act was intended to abolish the institution, but admitted the law was not clear on the point.

Lundeberg reminded Taft that the hiring hall clause in contracts between employers and the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, SIU division on the West Coast, had been approved by the Ohio Republican. The clause gives preference on a basis of seniority—and seamen with seniority are all SUP members.

Three Great Lakes shippers urged abolition of the hiring halls on various grounds.

Murray's Knowledge of Jobless Silences Hostile Audience

IT WAS A crowd—invited by the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin — that filled every chair in the ornate, gold-decorated ballroom of Philadelphia's Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Said CIO Pres. Philip Murray: ". . . There are almost five million people in this country unemployed and looking for jobs."

The crowd laughed—a hostile, derisive laugh. The audience was clearly showing that those unemployment figures were something dreamed up by an "outside agitator" and they weren't going to believe any such nonsense.

"Just a minute, now," said Murray, a note of sternness in his voice.

"There's a man at this table with me who knows something about the facts of the situation. He's the president of a great corporation in this state"—and Murray pointed his finger at Gwilym Price, head of Westinghouse Electric—"who knows something about unemployment. For his company has laid off 4000 men."

The crowd quieted down. And Price looked uncomfortable.

OCCASION OF the debate was the annual Philadelphia Bulletin Forum. The question: "Is the Fair Deal Endangering the American Way of Life?" Yes, said Price and Pennsylvania's Gov. James Duff (R.) who is running for the Senate. No, said Murray and liberal Sen. Francis Myers (D.), who is seeking re-election.

The crowd, invited by the Bulletin, obviously felt that the Fair Deal is "ruining everybody." They hooted with amusement at several phases of the Murray-Myers defense of the Fair Deal.

(A radio man told the CIO News: "the crowd may have applauded the Republicans, but Phil Murray was the man tonight whose speech would register with radio listeners.")

Gov. Duff, a heavy man with a sandpaper voice, thought the federal government is ruining opportunity, making bad economic experiments and copying socialist practices abroad.

The GOP Governor admitted that there are a "vast number of things" that the government must do, but he had no stomach for the things that the Fair Deal is doing. One of them, he said, was coddling "loafers," the people out of jobs and on relief.

PRES. PRICE of Westinghouse was deeply worried by government policies which he claimed had produced "centralized planning by a small group of economic theorists," and he worried about "distorted economic thinking" which has killed "incentives."

Retorted Murray: Westinghouse Electric had just reported 1949 profits after taxes of $68 million, highest in the company's history. That, and reports of record-breaking profits by other companies, didn't look to the head of the CIO as though the Fair Deal were altogether ruining business.

Sen. Myers also noted that the country had risen, under the Fair Deal and the New Deal, "from the paralysis of depression, and today we stand with the highest standard of living in world history." He charged that old-guard Republicans hadn't stopped complaining "in 17 long years."

AUSTRIAN UNIONISTS VISIT U.S.: Five Austrian trade unionists have come to the U. S. for a two-month study of how our unions operate. Group is shown as it prepared to leave Vienna for Washington. Left to right: Leo Geiger, Metal & Miners Union; Ferdinanda Flossman, union research economist; Herman Brotman, labor adviser to U.S. occupation authorities in Austria; Walter Schwarcz, English teacher in Vienna trade union schools; Wilhelm Schmidt, member of Trade & Transport Workers Union.

JAPANESE VISITORS talk with Natl. CIO Research and Education Director Stanley Ruttenberg. Mrs. Setsu Tanino (right) is with the Women's and Children's Bureau, Labor Ministry of Japan, and Miss Michiyo Marusawa is on the executive committee of the Japanese National Railway Labor Union, one of the largest in Japan. It has 500,000 members, 16,000 of them women, she said. They came to the U. S. with a group of 49 men and 11 women from Japan on a tour sponsored by the Army

We're Fighting a Soft 'Cold' War

United States Hasn't Really Rolled Up Its Sleeves In Ideological Battle Which Engulfs Whole World

By ALLAN L. SWIM

IT'S EASIER for a nation like the United States to effectively fight a "hot" war than a "cold" one.

We're a united people when the bombs are bursting, the machine guns chattering and torpedoes are tearing gaping holes in ships.

The sight of men and women in uniform and stories about their heroism in conflict make us forget our petty differences and work as a team against our common enemy.

But experience has demonstrated that we're not too well equipped by nature or experience to wage a "cold" war—a war of ideologies.

We can understand the meaning of cold steel and hot lead—and we're willing to spend huge sums for armament while bloody battles are under way.

But we're prone to pinch pennies and shrug our shoulders when told that an ideology is doing what armed might couldn't accomplish.

About 4½ years have passed since the end of the shooting war in the Pacific and still the world doesn't have peace.

Those old dreams of a world dominated by brotherly love have turned into horrible nightmares.

The Communists now exercise control over Russia, Poland, Roumania, Hungary, Albania, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, China and Eastern Germany.

They are making strong bids for power all over the Orient and in Italy and France.

In some cases the Communists expanded their domain with the help of the Russian army. In other cases "domestic" Reds, with aid from Russia, did the job.

And in our battle to preserve democracy little or nothing can be gained by trying to distinguish between the Stalin, Tito and Chinese brands of Communism.

SOME MEMBERS of Congress seem to feel that Marshall Plan economic aid and Voice of America propaganda are enough—perhaps more than enough—to halt the spread of Communism.

And there is an even larger group which acts on the false theory that our behavior at home has no effect on the ideological struggles abroad.

Take civil rights as an example.

Discrimination against Negroes in this country provides the Communists with a powerful propaganda weapon—a weapon they use effectively in winning over the colored peoples of the world.

"Why should you support the United States?" they ask. "Why, in Washington, the capital of the United States, Negroes are barred from all of the best restaurants and hotels."

And they tell about our slums, our Taft-Hartley Act, our lynchings, our restrictions on free voting.

LET'S GO on the assumption that we already have the best nation in the world and that we're going to make it better—much better.

We're going to eliminate our faults, raise our standard of living, make our liberty more secure, more equitably distribute the fruits of production, unify ourselves as we've never done before.

Will that be enough? Will that halt the spread of Communism and the totalitarianism that goes along with it?

Absolutely not!

As producers of material that maims and kills we're the tops. As propagandists on the home front we probably have no superiors.

But we, as a nation, either do not realize the seriousness and importance of the "cold" war or we're unwilling to give it all we've got.

IT TOOK only a brief visit to Europe for me to learn that the most likely victims of ideological warfare know little or nothing about the real United States.

And I didn't get behind the Iron Curtain.

Day after day the Communists pour out the story of our "dollar imperialism," of our "great" armaments, of our "desire" to embroil the world in another war.

Maybe the stories don't "stick" completely, but they cast doubts on our motives and make people suspicious.

Abroad we're using few of the propaganda techniques which prove so effective at home.

Perhaps that's because we don't want to be accused of interfering in the internal affairs of other nations.

It's a big problem. Perhaps no one person has all the right answers.

But we've got to put more into the battle—much more—and soon.

It's Ridiculous!

We know of nobody interested in good management-labor relations who would do away with the maritime hiring halls.

The CIO and AFL unions directly involved say—with considerable feeling—that abolition of the halls would bring chaos into the industry.

Many of the ship owners agree.

Government officials who deal with management-labor problems do likewise.

And Senator Taft, co-author of the Taft-Hartley Act, says T-H wasn't designed to do away with hiring halls.

But the courts have held that the halls are illegal under T-H.

It's a ridiculous situation—and a bad one. And what has happened illustrates again that labor was right when it said T-H appeared bad enough on the surface but was worse than it looked.

Hiring practices in the maritime industry before the unions established hiring halls were a disgrace. Men obtained their jobs —when they were able to get them—through the "shape-up."

And the "shape-up" provided many opportunities for the "shake-down." A couple of bucks paid to the right guy often meant you'd be hired. If you failed to pay, however, you might sit on the beach for weeks.

Through the hiring halls the unions established an orderly system of providing maritime workers for the available jobs. Under this system those who registered first got an opportunity to take the first jobs available. This eliminated shanghaiing, favoritism and racketeering.

Congress can remedy the present bad situation by passing the Magnuson-Lesinski Bill legalizing the hiring halls. It should act promptly.

CIO Wins, Dixie Bosses Stall

CIO's organizing drive in the South "apparently at long last is clicking," says a story by Charles Pou in the Atlanta Journal.

"But there's one big hitch," he added. "The unions are admittedly having trouble getting management to sign contracts even after NLRB says CIO represents employes.

"A whopping win at Atlantic Cotton Mill in Macon for the Textile Workers Union of America made the victory string five in a row for the CIO in the state.

"But at Atlantic Cotton Mill, as was the case in other recent triumphs, there were no indications that management would come rushing to sign on the dotted line.

"Implying darkly that the mill might close, Atlantic president George W. McCommon said he was afraid 'some of our big customers' might not like the mill's doing business with the CIO. He glumly predicted that 'we'll have to go back to plowing.'

"Somewhat similar reactions from management in all the other recent victories have added a sour note to victory celebrations by the organizing staff. In Atlanta, for example, the union has not yet negotiated a contract with one company for which it was declared the duly certified "bargaining agent" last June.

"Blaming the 'red tape' of the Taft-Hartley Act for the long gap between signing up union members and actually negotiating with their bosses, the CIO, for the moment, is just happy that the elections were wins and not losses.

"A switch from a Southwide, scattershot technique to a concentrated effort—one mill at the time —possibly has been the chief reason for recent successful campaigns. And drive director George Baldanzi is generally credited with being a smart organizer."

Free Advice For Strikers

How to organize an effective assistance program is outlined in one of a series of new program guides just issued by the National CIO Community Services Committee.

The leaflet is designed to assist CIO unions on strike in setting up machinery for referring needy strikers' families to the proper source for public or voluntary assistance.

Other leaflets in the series:

Services for the Unemployed tells about some of the typical welfare problems and how to meet them through securing community aid.

Health of Your Community, proposes that CIO unions become active in voluntary health agencies as well as working for long-range national health programs.

Design for Giving states the CSC's case for federated financing for voluntary health and welfare agencies and suggests ways of meeting the problem of multiple appeals through overall planning in cooperation with other community organizations.

The leaflets are available free to CIO unions and members from the CSC's headquarters, 1776 Broadway, New York 19, N. Y.

Labor, Business Meet Planned By College

Workers and businessmen in Kansas and surrounding states have been invited to the fourth annual Labor-Management Round Table conference April 14-15 at Kansas State College, Manhattan, Kans.

Purpose of the conference is to bring labor and management groups together in a congenial atmosphere to discuss problems of joint interest, and to promote a better understanding by the public and the college students of better labor relations. The conference, sponsored by the college, is indorsed by the CIO, AFL, unaffiliated labor groups and business organizations. Last year attendance at the six sessions held totaled 1825, or nearly double that of previous years.

Willard Murphy, president of the Kansas CIO Council, will preside at the final session.

Conciliator Honored

The annual Rerum Novarum Award of St. Peter's College, Jersey City, N. J., has been presented to Justin McAghon, U. S. commissioner of conciliation, for outstanding work in promoting peace between labor and management.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer
Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher
Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII March 27, 1950 No. 13

He Picked A Good Time to Leave Town

TWO PERSONS—a man and a woman—stood in the center of a mob in a Northern state back in 1937.

They saw men uncoil a rope. They listened to threats that "we're going to hang you, you dirty ——."

Nobody seemed willing, however, to order the lynching and nobody made a definite move to drape the rope around the necks of the intended victims.

The mob continued its threats for what seemed like hours—and then it dispersed.

And the two CIO organizers who had been slated for hanging went on their way.

The climax would have been different if—

But here's the whole story.

THE TWO organizers, both of whom are now well known in the union movement, were sent to a company town soon after the CIO was formed.

It didn't take them long to learn the sledding was going to be tough.

One big industry dominated the entire town. It really "ran things." It was THE POWER in the community.

After a lengthy search, the organizers finally made arrangements for a meeting of workers in the hall of a fraternal organization.

The company objected and the organization said the meeting would have to be called off.

Another meeting was called—this time at a privately owned amusement park. The owner soon cancelled it, however, and told the organizers, "I've just learned the bank will foreclose on my mortgage if I permit you to hold the meeting."

SOME TIME LATER the organizers located an abandoned schoolhouse on the edge of town and scheduled a meeting there.

Workers turned up for the session and everything seemed to be going fine. Finally the crowd departed—just at dusk—and the two organizers remained behind, intending to spend only a few more minutes there.

Suddenly, and almost as if they had risen out of the ground, a mob of about 50 men surrounded the two union representatives.

A rope was uncoiled and the organizers were told they were going to be hanged. The men hurled insults and threats at them.

But the mob didn't dash in for the kill.

The men seemed to be leaderless and uncertain as to whether to complete the nasty job they'd started.

Several of them went into a huddle, then a handful of "scouts" hurriedly left the scene.

THE THREATENING and insulting continued as the "scouts" attempted to carry out their mission.

The organizers were told that hanging was "too good" for them. The CIO and its leaders were called dirty names.

And the mob didn't pull its punches merely because one of the unionists was a woman already well along in years.

Time passed—slowly for some, rapidly for others. The original enthusiasm of the mob seemed to be disappearing.

One by one the "scouts" returned—and still nothing happened. Eventually the last one was back. There was a brief conference and the mob broke up.

"We found out later what had happened," the woman organizer said.

"Nobody would assume actual responsibility for hanging us until they got an OK from the superintendent of the plant. They hunted all over town for him before learning he had gone to a nearby town.

"He certainly picked a good time to go visiting!"

A.L.S.

I Cover The Waterfront!

Union Leader Scoffs At 'Big Labor Defeat' In Britain

A FEW WEEKS ago headlines in many American newspapers told about the "defeat" of the Labour Party in the British elections, and about the "swing" away from the labor government.

The "defeat" was hailed by conservatives and reactionaries as part of a widening movement away from "socialism."

Today, however, the Labour Party is still in control of the British government and a top British unionist says that the "swing" simply didn't materialize.

Victor Feather, assistant secretary of the British Trade Union Congress, puts it this way:

The 1945 Labor vote was 12 million and it increased in 1950 to 13 million.

The Tory vote of slightly less than 10 million in 1945 increased to 12.5 million in 1950.

These figures showed that the Conservatives increased their vote more than Labour did but they "did not attract support away from that given to Labour candidates in 1945."

"It is obvious that the miners voted Labour more solidly since nationalization than before," Feather says.

"Labour had no difficulty in again winning the big centers of nationalized railways such as Carlisle, Crewe, Doncaster, Derby and Swindon.

"In Middlesbrough and Newport, steel constituencies, Labour again won more easily than last time. Labour's opponents in each constituency were former Labour M. P.'s who had resigned from the Labour Party because they were opposed to the nationalization of iron and steel.

"Generally speaking, Labour strengthened its vote in the industrial constituencies and maintained its support among the agricultural workers.

"The increase in the Conservative vote came from lower middle class and middle class communities, who turned out in force, mainly because the margin between the standard of living of manual workers and those who consider themselves 'middle class' is now not so pronounced.

"Before the war the dweller in the city suburb could usually employ a low-paid domestic worker who 'lived in'. He could afford to run a car. Now, because of full employment, the domestic worker has found a preferable job in a factory. The car isn't available because of our need to build up exports.

"The Tories claim their increased support is a 'revolt' against nationalization and a blow for the restoration of a 'free economy'. The brutal fact is that the Tory upsurge derives little from high principles but much from considerations of narrow and short-term self-interest.

"It was this which helped to give an aggregate vote of 84% as against 73% in 1945.

"It is difficult to compare 1950 constituency results with 1945 because changes were made in boundaries at this election. Of 625 Parliamentary constituencies, only 62 remain unaltered.

"The changes appear to have favored the Tories, or rather, to have redressed the Parliamentary advantage which Labour got at the 1945 election. For, based on the aggregate votes of the various political parties, the 1945 election results gave more Parliamentary seats to Labour than their vote actually merited. This election has corrected that bias.

"In short, where Labour in 1945 won certain constituencies by a narrow margin and lost others decisively, this time they have won with heavier majorities and lost narrowly elsewhere.

"Labor scored a higher number of votes than any other political party has ever secured before.

"The expected failure of the Liberal Party was confirmed."

Feather said the Communist campaign was a "farce" and that every one of CP candidates—about 100 of them—was defeated.

Are Businessmen Serious?

Here are some figures that businessmen who say they want to keep government out of their affairs as much as possible, might consider:

- There are 10 states in the U. S. in which income payments from government (federal, state and local) are at least twice as large as manufacturing pay rolls.
- In 21 states people get more money from government agencies than they do from factory payrolls.
- In 15 states, government payments are more than half as large as manufacturing pay rolls.
- In no state do government payments amount to less than a fourth of the amount workers in industrial plants get.

These figures showing "the importance of government to the country's business activity," are cited by the U. S. News and World Report, business weekly.

Frank Gannett's Committee Officiates

Lobbyists Unite To Try Impoverishing Uncle Sam

By GERVASE N. LOVE

THE POLITICAL doctors and the rent-greedy real estate owners have been united in the bond of what appears to be unholy matrimony by Publisher Frank Gannett's Committee for Constitutional Government.

Although both principals to the ceremony, the American Medical Association and the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will retain their premarital identities, they and members of a host of other anti-labor reactionary organizations which can only assume their own legitimacy have constituted the Natl. Committee to Limit Federal Taxing Powers.

The new committee purports to be, according to its literature, a "cross-section of American life including housewives, doctors, small manufacturers, lawyers, retailers, realtors, educators and property owners" with a common objective—a constitutional amendment to limit the federal tax levy in any year to a maximum of 15% of the average total annual income received by the country's individuals during the previous four years. It plans to work in Congress and if necessary at the polls.

If it were part of the constitution at present, such an amendment would tie down Congress to imposing taxes of about $30 billion this year. Actually the tax bill will run about $40 billion and even at that deficit financing will be necessary to pay some of the cost of fighting the cold war and giving the people the kind of government they want.

NOBODY LIKES to pay taxes, even low ones. The new committee is going to try to capitalize on this universal aversion. Lower federal taxes, it claims, will keep the country from going socialistic, though nobody but a handful of Dixiegops concedes such a probability.

Less money to spend will result in decentralization of federal powers, it asserts, completely ignoring the fact that a majority of the people in the last four presidential elections demonstrated their belief that a strong central government is a necessity in a country the size of the United States.

Furthermore, the committee proclaims, less money for government to spend will "return the right of home rule to the people." Whatever that means.

What the sum total of it all means, however, is pretty obvious. It means that if the committee's campaign is successful the government just won't have money enough to do the things the people have told it to do through their votes.

It's a pretty safe bet, for instance, that there won't be a national health insurance program or anything remotely resembling a housing program for people who can't pay the inflated prices builders and landlords are screaming for now. The farmers undoubtedly could bid farewell to most price supports for their products.

Any union member ought to be able to figure out for himself what would happen to things like the wage-hour law and its enforcement, social security, money for relief, etc. He also ought to be able to foresee some of the most thriving monopolies in the history of the world through a lack of funds

The Congressional Quarterly, an independent publication in Washington, took a long, hard look at the new group and came up with some interesting information and background about the committee itself and those behind it.

Reactionary anti-laborites and clamorers for the particular brand of freedom pursued by anti-New Dealers and anti-Fair Dealers have been bellowing for a ceiling to federal taxing powers for some time.

Among the loudest voices raised were those of former Rep. Samuel B. Pettengill of Indiana; Rep. Ralph W. Gwinn, of New York; Herbert U. Nelson $25,000-a-year lobbyist for the NAREB, and Theodore H. Maenner, NAREB president last year.

Gwinn is a Republican. Pettengill, shifting with the grace and ease of a pinwheel, served in the House as a Democrat from 1931 to 1939 and then went over to the opposition. He did so well as a Republican that by 1942 he was chairman of the GOP National Finance Committee.

Both are old stalwarts who have long decorated the rolls of Publisher Gannett's Committee for Constitutional Government and/or its numerous spawnings. Pettengill, in addition, has decorated its payroll. He wrote a regular column for the group until last year and still collects royalties according to the committee's report, Gwinn writes a weekly column which is syndicated by Features for America's Future. And who owns Features for America's Future? None other than Gannett's Committee for Constitutional Government, which sends the column to Gwinn's fellow members of Congress every time it appears.

THE NAREB has a publication called "Headlines." Nelson, in addition to being NAREB lobbyist, is also executive vice president of the association and editor of "Headlines." He won a Freedom Foundation award for three of his editorials.

In his farewell speech as president of the NAREB last November Maenner called upon the realtors to join other groups "in small business political action." The convention passed two resolutions. One pledged the group "to fight for constitutional amendments limiting the federal taxing power" and barring the government from business. The other instructed officers to work with other groups to launch "a non-partisan movement in election districts to support the program."

"I am going to work for launching Small Business Action," Maenner had told California realtors a month before, "to demand that the voters be given a choice be-spending power, which leads to socialism, and constitutional government . . . I urge realtors throughout the nation to . . . work for its success."

The same sort of airy nothingness has appeared repeatedly in editorials in "Headlines." Last August Nelson wrote:

"The only recourse for small business, as President Maenner has vigorously and fearlessly pointed out, is to act in its own interest. . . . He means political action at the level of the congressional election district . . . He means a nation-wide effort by the professions and small business to limit the federal taxing power."

He gave frequent echo to Maenner's plan and dutifully plugged the convention resolutions.

And so on.

GWINN, A blatant anti-laborite and a long and loud critic of the administration, has been howling for small businessmen to do something about the government for a long time.

In a speech in January before the presidents of real estate boards he called for a "Boston Tea Party" to throw off the "crushing burden" of federal government,

"Gwinn outlined the same program which is being pushed by the tax limitation committee.

PETTENGILL, THE Democrat turned Republican, summed it all up in a speech in Chicago last Columbus Day. His speech was entitled "The Grand Strategy of Freedom." Copies were sent to all congressmen by—guess who? The Committee for Constitutional Government! Just to make sure that nobody was missed, the Gold Standard League sent it around, too.

Sam's theme was that tax limitation by the constitutional amendment route is the "grand strategy" if the New Deal is to be cancelled out and the Fair Deal killed in its youth. Many people, he said, are "fighting different phases of Socialism . . . exhaust-(ing) themselves on scattered tactical skirmishes." Let's all get together, he said—"Cut off the money supply—and the power to borrow—and you stop them in their tracks . . . Reduce taxes and spending, especially at the federal level. Keep government poor and remain free."

Improverishment of the government of the wealthiest nation in the world must be the No. 1 plank of the "grand strategy," he said. All the special interests can fight together on that basis, he made clear, and—

"The doctors can then fight socialized medicine; owners of real estate can fight public housing; others can fight federal control of education; business can fight government competition; others can fight to relieve privately created wealth of some of the tax burden and shift some of the necessary taxes to socially created wealth."

DR. ELMER L. HENDERSON was sort of a fifth evangelist for the cause. As chairman of the coordinating committee of the AMA National Education Campaign, he reported in 1949 to the AMA board of trustees and House of Delegates that the decisive fight for national health insurance lies ahead.

"That fight may be lost or won in next year's Congress, or in the 1950 Congressional elections," he wrote. "Let's reach our objectives in 1950. Let's face our Battle of Armageddon, proud to carry the banner for American medicine—and our American way of life."

Dr. Henderson was elected AMA president at the December convention.

The National Committee to Limit Federal Taxing Powers was formally set up at a luncheon in Washington's Statler Hotel on Feb. 27 which was ostensibly paid for by eight reactionary Republican congressmen. At least they were the hosts. Gwinn was toastmaster.

The others were Reps. Curtis (Neb.), Andresen (Minn.), Crawford (Mich.), McCulloch (O.), Phillips (Calif.), Harvey (Ind.) and Saylor (Pa.) In 1949 they had the opportunity to cast a total of 94 votes on the 13 key issues listed in the CIO Voting Guide (Saylor came in late). Seventy-two of those votes were cast wrong, according to the Guide, and two more were paired wrong. There were 14 absences—and only six "right" votes among the lot of them.

SEVENTY-FOUR housewives, small manufacturers, etc., attended the luncheon. At least 20 of them are in the real estate or allied business, according to Congressional Quarterly's survey; 24 are in or dependent upon other business; four each are doctors or lawyers, two are in other professions. Activities of the rest are undetermined.

The real estate interests and their allies were well represented among the temporary officers. Dr. Joseph W. Seay, Falls Church, Va. (a Washington suburb), formerly executive director of the National Home & Property Owners Foundation and a past president of Optimists International, was named chairman.

Nelson was chosen acting secretary-treasurer. Craig Siegfried, Independence, Mo., of the Property Owners Association heads the public relations committee. Acting vice chairmen are Douglas Whitlock, Washington lawyer and $1500-a-month lobbyist for the Building Products Institute; Fritz B. Burns, Los Angeles realtor, a member of the executive council of Realtors' Washington Committee of the NAREB; Judge Paul A. Lennington, Muncie, Ind., and Mrs. Reginald V. Cauchois, Yonkers, N. Y.

The executive council includes Fred A. Virkus, Chicago, whose lobby law registration discloses that he gets $12,000 a year as chairman of the Conference of American Small Business Organizations. He is a former chairman of the highly reactionary National Republican Round-up and a member of the Council for Clarification of Pricing Practices, which works for the revision of the law on basing points, and is on record as favoring, among other things, the elimination of "labor monopolies."

Other council members are Thurman Sensing, Nashville, Tenn., research director of the anti-labor Southern States Industrial Council; Harold L. Kennedy, oil lobbyist; Harry Hansen, Des Moines, Ia., lobbyist for the Home Owners Protective League of Des Moines and the Property Owners Association of America, which sponsored a mass eviction drive in 1949, and a member of the Friends of the American Constitution. Fourteen others comprise the board, seven of them realtors.

THE ORGANIZED medicos graciously stepped aside when it came to filling the executive council posts.

But they were well represented among the founders. Dr. Joseph S. Lawrence, director of AMA's Washington office, whose lobbying registration shows a salary of $15,000 a year and $5000 a year paid into a pension fund, was one of them.

Other founders included Dr. Gunnar Gundersen, LaCrosse, Wisc., a member of the coordinating committee of the AMA National Education Campaign; Dr. James E. Paullin, Atlanta, Ga., AMA president in 1943-44, and Dr. R. L. Sensenich, South Bend, Ind., AMA trustee and also a member of the coordinating committee of its education group.

At no stage of development of the Natl. Committee to Limit Federal Taxing Power was a single soul unkind enough even to suggest that its bleeding about small business and the constitution might possibly—just possibly—be a front for big business.

Lobby Probe Opens This Week

The special congressional committee named to find out how the lobbying law works will open public hearings this week with considerable misgivings about what it will find.

Rep. Buchanan (D. Pa.), the chairman, in a speech in Washington last week estimated that only one-fifth of the individuals who lobby among congressmen and one-third of the groups have complied with the act by registering. He calculated that 10,000 individuals and 1500 groups are trying to influence legislation, but that only about 2000 persons and 500 organizations have placed themselves on record in full compliance with the law.

Some "irregularities" have already been uncovered, he said, but it will be up to the Dept. of Justice to decide if they are actual violations.

Maybe A Loyalty Oath Is Needed

Down in Mississippi they take party politics seriously.

The lower house, by a vote of 118-1, passed a bill stating that if people who did not vote Dixiecrat in 1948 tried to pass themselves off as Democrats, they could be thrown in jail.

Northern Democrats, or Trumancrats, can go off and form their own party, if they like, but they can't call themselves Democrats.

The upper house hasn't acted.

The Keep-Uncle-Sam-Poor Club

AFFILIATIONS, past and present, of those who attended the founding luncheon of the Natl. Committee to Limit Federal Taxing Powers follow:

American Medical Assn., Natl. Home Property Owners Foundation, Optimists International, Building Products Institute, Natl. Association of Real Estate Boards, Property Owners of America, Conference of American Small Business Organizations, Natl. Republican Round-up Committee, Council for Clarification of Pricing Practices, Natl. Tax Equality Association, Pennsylvania Realtors Association.

Other affiliations were: Southern States Industrial Council, Inc., Ohio Oil Co., Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association, Friends of the American Constitution, Home Owners Protective League of Des Moines, Minneapolis Property Owners, Inc., Southern Pine Industry Committee, Southern Pine Association, Gold Standard League, Classroom Periodical Publishers Association, Natl. Retail Dry Goods Association, Natl. Retail Lumber Dealers Association, Real Estate Board of Kansas City, National Federation of Private Schools Association, Indiana Real Estate Association, Indiana Real Estate Board, American Retail Federation and National Association of Retail Grocers.

WILLARD UPHAUS, executive secretary of the National Religion and Labor Foundation, outlines program of Foundation's national conference at opening session at Cincinnati, Ohio. John Ramsay (seated), community relations director of the CIO Organizing Committee, was co-chairman of the three-day meeting.

PANEL DISCUSSION of "Religion, Labor and Discrimination" was moderated by Rev. Charles A. Hill (above), pastor of Hartford Avenue Baptist Church, Detroit, Mich. Conference delegates lashed out time and again against racial discrimination.

Churches, Unions Seek Better Life Together

By ALLAN L. SWIM

ONE OF THE delegates put it this way: "The atmosphere here is as refreshing as a cool breeze blowing in off the ocean on a hot summer night."

Men and women of many different religious creeds joined with veteran union representatives in an effort to find possible solutions to important, weighty problems—controversial problems.

But there was no jockeying for position, no clever parliamentary maneuvering, no "secret deals" worked out in smoke-filled rooms—and no arguments conducted along ideological lines.

That's what made the annual conference of the National Religion and Labor Foundation at Cincinnati, Ohio, last week refreshing and "different."

It was different from the usual labor meeting and different from the average religious meeting because those attending tried to combine the spiritual-ethical approach of the church with the practical approach of organized labor.

DELEGATES CAME from most parts of the country—about 150 of them representing 20 different religious groups and 27 CIO and AFL unions.

There was speech-making by Protestant ministers, Jewish rabbis and Catholic priests.

Men like CIO-PAC Dir. Jack Kroll and Joseph Keenan, director of the AFL League for Political Education, talked about the role the church and labor should play in a democracy.

Editors of labor papers and church publications discussed methods of improving church-union understanding

There were panel discussions on social and economic planning, legislation, discrimination, relationship of church, labor and agriculture, the cooperative movement and peace.

One little incident which occurred during a panel meeting illustrated that the ministers and unionists were able to speak each other's language.

"The boys in the local unions aren't too impressed by the pious pronouncements the preachers make from the pulpit unless they are accompanied by action," said a CIO council official.

"You're not talking about me then," responded a minister. "I've walked the picket line with the boys!"

And in the group were other ministers who had done the same thing.

A number of ministers voiced sharp criticism of what one of them termed "the failure of a large portion of the organized church to understand, appreciate and support the program of organized labor."

And a number of union officials said such a condition was unlikely to change until organized labor gives greater support to the church.

THE CONFERENCE, which was generally ignored by the daily press, went on record as favoring a labor-Fair Deal type of social action program.

Throughout the meeting ran a general theme which might be summed up like this:

"Although they're following different paths and using different methods, the church and the labor movement are seeking the same thing. They both want a better way of lif for all the people."

THREE MEMBERS of the conference Commission on Religion, Labor and Legislation look over copy of CIO News before opening session on legislative matters. From left to right are Mrs. Orville Jones, wife of the Ohio CIO Council educational director; Ben Segal, CIO Textile Workers upper-South educational director; Rev. Maceo Pembroke, pastor of St. Mark Methodist Church of Chicago. Delegates indorsed a Fair Deal type program.

FOUR EDITORS attending conference discuss mutual problems. They are (l. to r.) Dr. David D. Baker of St. Louis, editor of The Messenger, and president of Associated Church Press; Miss Margaret E. Kuhn of Philadelphia, assistant editor of Social Progress; Rabbi Eugene Kohn of New York, editor of the Reconstructionist; Robert Bollard of Chicago, editor of Illinois (CIO) Labor. Editors discussed methods of improving church-union understanding.

Real Estate Lobby Hands People Another Licking

By D. ROCKWELL CLARK

HOPES for enactment of co-op housing legislation at this session of Congress are dead and buried.

The House on Mar. 22 finished what the Senate began and kicked the co-op section out of the middle-income housing bill by a roll call vote of 218-155, in the face of a direct appeal by President Truman to retain the feature.

On the final vote, 137 Republicans and 81 Democrats, the latter mainly from the South, prevailed over 141 Democrats, 13 Republicans and one ALP member.

The usual political maneuvering preceded the vote.

Seeing which way the wind was blowing, administration leaders offered two compromises, answering two specific points of criticism which had been raised against the bill. The critics thereupon voted against the compromises. It was the same story in the Senate, the week before.

The tactic surprised nobody in the House, but outspoken Majority Leader McCormack (D. Mass.) did not let it pass without comment. He warned the Republicans that anybody could see they had been "flip-flopping"—refusing to support their own suggestions for improvement—and said that while they might be able to "fool the public today," they would not be able to do so next November.

FIRMLY in the House saddle, the victorious group then proceeded to pass a landlord bill, minus its only Fair Deal feature.

As passed by the House, the "middle-income" housing bill now ladles out more gravy for builders and the mortgage banks. The bill provides an additional $600 million for insurance of mortgages for private builders of rental housing. It also gives the Reconstruction Finance Corp. another $750 million for bailing out the makers of Federal Housing and veterans' loans. And in another section, the rental ceiling for dwellings built with government funds is raised from $7000 to $8000, with no corresponding upward adjustment in minimum standards for size of the unit or quality of the materials.

The term of GI loans was raised from 25 to 30 years at 4% interest, thus reducing monthly carrying charges on an $8000 home by $4 a month. And provision was made for the transfer of 145,000 government-built war-time units to municipalities for use as low-rental housing.

The co-op section, which had been indorsed by all veterans' organizations, by all of organized labor, by the cooperative movement and (sotto voce) by segments of the building industry, would have worked this way:

The government would have put debentures on the private investment market and with the proceeds would have made up to $2 billion worth of loans to genuine cooperatives and non-profit housing trusts. The loans would have been long-term ones—50 years, for the most part, with periods as long as 63 years allowed under special conditions. The interest rate would have been low. It was not spelled out in the bill, but had been estimated at 3¼% or thereabouts.

THAT was the proposal, in a nutshell. It represented no direct drain on the U. S. Treasury or the U. S. taxpayer. But it also gave no toehold to profiteers. They were ruled out of the picture. With the profiteers out, and the long-term, low-interest features in, savings of 25% or more per month were in sight.

Put it in your memory book.

It was licked by arguments like these, handed out in neat packages by the well-heeled real estate lobby:

"The interest rate is so low as to be unfair to veterans who now have to pay 4% if they borrow under the G. I. provisions." (The veterans' organizations emphatically disagreed—they loved the idea. In fact, the super-cautious American Legion sent a special message to every House member, stating flatly that elimination of the proposal in the Senate was a "vote for the real estate lobby and not for the veterans of the country.")

A few tactless House members, fighting for the co-op proposal, said that the low interest rate would only be "unfair" to one group—the mortgage bankers. The GOP strategists just ducked their heads and let that one whistle by.

Rep. Patman (D. Tex.) offered an amendment making the interest rate 4%, and the very group that had been kicking about the lower rate voted it down.

Patman then offered to cut the loan ceiling down to $500 million, which would have meant merely a "pilot" co-op program, and the same thing happened. The reactionaries knew what they wanted to vote against and also knew that if they took any compromises they might lose some votes on the final roll-call.

THE OTHER argument, put forward with a perfectly straight face by House Minority Leader Martin (R. Mass.), was that the proposal was Socialistic. This tararaboomdeay had been a little too embarrassing for use by the GOP in the Senate, but Martin used it.

The motion to kill the section was made by Rep. Wolcott (R. Mich.), ranking Republican on the House Banking Committee. He advanced the most unusual argument of all—said it was inflationary. This in spite of the fact that the Federal Reserve Board, asked for its opinion, had said it might have a deflationary effect if anything, whereas the move to give RFC another $750 million for the real estate boys, which Wolcott ardently supported, is inflationary on its face, as was pointed out ably in a fiery speech by Rep. Roosevelt (D. N. Y.).

Wolcott also said that since the program would help only 3% of the nations middle-income families it had better not be undertaken at all.

THE VOTE was preceded by intensive efforts on the part of all organizations favoring the measure. CIO Pres. Philip Murray called for enactment of the section, stating that "the American people have a right to expect that Congress will give preference to their desperate housing needs rather than to the selfish demands of greedy financial interests."

In his special appeal, President Truman pointed out that "about a third of our urban families have incomes in the middle range between $2800 and $4400 a year."

"They are the backbone of our country," he said, "yet they cannot pay the rental or sales prices now being asked in most localities for homes large enough for family living. They are not in need of and certainly do not want public assistance or governmental subsidies in meeting their housing problems.

"It is important that measures be devised to permit them to live in decent housing and to realize their dreams of owning their own homes. H. R. 7402 . . . will stimulate home ownership through the use of cooperative methods to achieve savings in the cost of financing and construction methods which have long been successfully used in other fields of endeavor."

Congress Slashes Rent Control Operating Funds Over 61%

The politics that killed the co-op housing bill quietly crippled rent control too, last week.

The Office of the Housing Expediter, which administers the federal law, had been forced to ask Congress for $3,600,000 more in operating fund to take it through June 30, when the law expires, because it got too little money last year. Congress quietly cut this to $1,400,000, slashing 61.11% from the requested appropriation — and added $2,600,000, which OHE had not requested, to pay terminal leave for thousands of employes OHE doesn't want to fire.

Hearings on extension of the law for another year from June 30 will start in April in the Senate and House Banking committees.

How House Members Voted On Housing Co-op Provision

Here's the record of the vote by which the House on March 22 cut out the most important provision of the middle-income housing bill, providing low-interest, long-term government loans to cooperatives for housing purposes. The House approved, 218-155, an amendment by Rep. Jesse Wolcott (R., Mich.) to kill the co-op section, and then passed a landlord bill. For killing co-ops: 137 Republicans and 81 Democrats. Against it, 141 Democrats, 13 Republicans and 1 ALP. Votes for the Wolcott amendment are marked W; votes against are marked R; pairs are shown by PR and PW; A means absent.

ALA.—Andrews (D) W
Battle (D) W
Boykin (D) W
deGraffenried (D) R
Elliott (D) R
Grant (D) R
Hobbs (D) W
Jones (D) R
Rains (D) R
ARIZ.—Murdock (D) R
Patten (D) W
ARK.—Gathings (D) W
Harris (D) W
Hays (D) W
Mills (D) R
Norrell (D) W
Tackett (D) W
Trimble (D) R
CAL.—Allen (R) W
Anderson (R) W
Bramblett (R) W
Douglas (D) R
Doyle (D) PR
Engle (D) R
Havenner (D) R
Hinshaw (R) W
Holifield (D) R
Jackson (R) W
Johnson (R) W
King (D) R
McDonough (R) W
McKinnon (D) W
Miller (D) R
Nixon (R) W
Phillips (R) W
Poulson (R) W
Scudder (R) W
Sheppard (D) A
Shelley (D) R
Werdel (R) W
White (D) R
COLO.—Aspinall (D) W
Carroll (D) R
Hill (R) W
Marsalis (D) R
CONN.—Lodge (R) W
McGuire (D) R
Patterson (R) W
Ribicoff (D) W
Sadlak (R) W
Woodhouse (D) R
DELA.—A. Boggs (R) W
FLA.—Bennett (D) PW
Herlong (D) W
Peterson (D) PW
Rogers (D) W
Sikes (D) W
Smathers (D) R
GA.—Brown (D) R
Camp (D) W
Cox (D) W
Davis (D) W
Lanham (D) W
Pace (D) R
Preston (D) W
Vinson (D) PR
Wheeler (D) W
Wood (D) W
IDA.—Sanborn (R) W
White (D) R
ILL.—Allen (R) PW
Arends (R) W
Bishop (R) W
Buckley (D) R
Chesney (D) R
Chiperfield (R) PW
Dawson (D) R
Gordon (D) R
Hoffman (R) PW
Jenison (R) W
Jonas (R) A
Linehan (D) R
Mack (D) PR
Mason (R) PW
McMillen (R) W
O'Brien (D) PR
O'Hara (D) R
Price (D) R
Reed (R) W
Sabath (D) PR
Simpson (R) W
Velde (R) W
Vursell (R) W
Yates (D) R
IND.—Crook (D) R
Denton (D) R
Halleck (R) W
Harden (R) W
Harvey (R) W
Jacobs (D) R
Kruse (D) PW
Madden (D) R
Noland (D) W
Walsh (D) R
Wilson (R) W
IA.—Cunningham (R) W
Dolliver (R) W
Gross (R) R
Hoeven (R) W
Jensen (R) W
LeCompte (R) W
Martin (R) W
Talle (R) W
KAN.—Cole (R) W
Hope (R) W
Meyer (R) W
Rees (R) W
Scrivner (R) W
Smith (R) W
KY.—Bates (D) R
Chelf (D) W
Gregory (D) A
Golden (R) W
Morton (R) W
Perkins (D) R
Spence (D) R
Underwood (D) W
Whitaker (D) PR
LA.—Allen (D) W
Boggs (D) R
Brooks (D) W
Hebert (D) W
Larcade (D) W
Morrison (D) PR
Passman (D) W
Willis (D) W
ME.—Fellows (R) W
Hale (R) W
Nelson (R) R
MD.—Beall (R) W
Bolton (D) W
Fallon (D) W
Garmatz (D) R
Miller (R) W
Sasscer (D) W
MASS.—Bates (R) W
Donohue (D) R
Furcolo (D) R
Goodwin (R) W
Herter (R) W
Heselton (R) W
Kennedy (D) R
Lane (D) R
Martin (R) W
McCormack (D) R
Nicholson (R) W
Philbin (D) R
Rogers (R) W
Wigglesworth (R) W
MICH.—Bennett (R) PR
Blackney (R) W
Crawford (R) PW
Dingell (D) R
Dondero (R) W
Engel (R) W
Ford (R) W
Hoffman (R) W
Lesinski (D) R
Michener (R) W
O'Brien (D) R
Potter (R) PW
Rabaut (D) R
Sadowski (D) PR
Shafer (R) PW
Wolcott (R) W
Woodruff (R) W
MINN.—Andersen (R) W
Andresen (R) W
Blatnik (D) R
Hagen (R) W
Judd (R) W
Marshall (D) R
McCarthy (D) R
O'Hara (R) W
Wier (D) R
MISS.—Abernethy (D) W
Colmer (D) W
Rankin (D) W
Whitten (D) W
Whittington (D) W
Williams (D) W
Winstead (D) W
MO.—Bolling (D) R
Cannon (D) R
Carnahan (D) R
Cristopher (D) R
Irving (D) PR
Jones (D) W
Karst (D) R
Karsten (D) R
Magee (D) R
Moulder (D) R
Short (R) W
Sullivan (D) R
Welch (D) R
MONT.—D'Ewart (R) W
Mansfield (D) PR
NEB.—Curtis (R) A
Miller (R) W
O'Sullivan (D) R
Stefan (R) W
NEV.—Baring (D) PR
N. H.—Cotton (R) W
Merrow (R) W
N. J.—Addonizio (D) R
Auchincloss (R) W
Canfield (R) R
Case (R) R
Eaton (R) W
Hand (R) W
Hart (D) R
Howell (D) R
Kean (R) W
Norton (D) PR
Rodino (D) R
Widnall (R) W
Towe (R) W
Wolverton (R) R
N. M.—Fernandez (D) W
Miles (D) A
N. Y.—Buckley (D) PR
Byrne (D) R
Celler (D) R
Clemente (D) A
Cole (R) W
Coudert (R) W
Davies (D) R
Delaney (D) R
Dollinger (D) R
Gamble (R) W
Gorski (D) R
Gwinn (R) W
Hall, E. A. (R) W
Hall, L. W. (R) W
Heffernan (D) R
Heller (D) R
Javits (R) R
Kearney (R) W
Keating (R) W
Kelly (D) R
Keogh (D) PR
Kilburn (R) W
Klein (D) R
Latham (R) W
LeFevre (R) W
Lynch (D) R
Macy (R) PW
Marcantonio (ALP) R
McGrath (D) R
Multer (D) R
Murphy (D) PR
O'Toole (D) R
Pfeifer, J. L. (D) PR
Pfeiffer, W. L. (R) W
Powell (D) R
Quinn (D) R
Reed (R) PW
Riehlman (R) W
Rooney (D) R
Roosevelt (D) R
St. George (R) PW
Taber (R) W
Tauriello (D) R
Taylor (R) W
Wadsworth (R) W
N. C.—Barden (D) W
Bonner (D) W
Bulwinkle (D) A
Carlyle (D) W
Chatham (D) PW
Cooley (D) R
Deane (D) R
Doughton (D) W
Durham (D) W
Jones (D) W
Kerr (D) W
Redden (D) W
N. D.—Burdick (R) PR
Lemke (R) R
OHIO—Bolton (R) W
Breen (D) R
Brehm (R) W
Brown (R) W
Burke (D) R
Clevenger (R) W
Crosser (D) R
Elston (R) W
Feighan (D) R
Hays (D) R
Huber (D) R
Jenkins (R) W
Kirwan (D) R
McCulloch (R) W
McGregor (R) W
McSweeney (D) R
Polk (D) R
Secrest (D) R
Smith (R) PW
Vorys (R) W
Wagner (D) R
Weichel (R) W
Young (D) R
OKLA.—Albert (D) R
Gilmer (D) PW
Monroney (D) A
Morris (D) R
Steed (D) R
Stigler (D) R
Wickersham (D) W
Wilson (D) R
ORE.—Angell (R) PR
Ellsworth (R) W
Norblad (R) W
Stockman (R) W
PENN.—Barrett (D) R
Buchanan (D) R
Cavalcante (D) R
Chudoff (D) R
Corbett (R) W
Dague (R) W
Davenport (D) R
Eberharter (D) R
Fenton (R) W
Flood (D) R
Fulton (R) A
Gavin (R) W
Gillette (R) PW
Graham (R) W
Granahan (D) R
Green (D) R
James (R) W
Kearns (R) W
Kelley (D) R
Kunkel (R) PW
Lichtenwalter (R) W
Lind (D) R
McConnell (R) W
Morgan (D) R
O'Neill (D) PR
Rhodes (D) R
Rich (R) W
Saylor (R) A
Scott, Hardie (R) W
Scott, Hugh (R) W
Simpson (R) W
Van Zandt (R) R
Walter (D) R
R. I.—Fogarty (D) R
Forand (D) R
S. C.—Bryson (D) W
Hare (D) W
McMillan (D) W
Richards (D) W
Rivers (D) A
Sims (D) R
S. D.—Case (R) W
Lovre (R) W
Tenn.—Cooper (D) W
Davis (D) W
Evins (D) W
Frazier (D) PW
Gore (D) W
Jennings (R) W
Murray (D) W
Phillips (R) R
Priest (D) R
Sutton (D) R
TEX.—Beckworth (D) R
Bentsen (D) A
Burleson (D) W
Combs (D) R
Fisher (D) PW
Gossett (D) W
Kilday (D) W
Lucas (D) PW
Lyle (D) A
Mahon (D) W
Patman (D) R
Pickett (D) W
Poage (D) W
Rayburn (D) Speaker
Regan (D) W
Teague (D) W
Thomas (D) W
Thompson (D) W
Thornberry (D) W
Wilson (D) W
Worley (D) A
UTAH—Bosone (D) R
Granger (D) PR
VT.—Plumley (R) W
VA.—Abbitt (D) W
Burton (D) W
Fugate (D) A
Gary (D) W
Hardy (D) W
Harrison (D) W
Smith (D) W
Stanley (D) W
WASH.—Holmes (R) W
Horan (R) W
Jackson (D) R
Mack (R) W
Mitchell (D) R
Tollefson (R) R
W. VA.—Bailey (D) R
Burnside (D) R
Hedrick (D) R
Kee (D) R
Ramsay (D) R
Staggers (D) R
WIS.—Biemiller (D) R
Byrnes (R) W
Davis (R) W
Hull (R) R
Keefe (R) W
Murray (R) W
O'Konski (R) R
Smith (R) W
Withrow (R) R
Zablocki (D) R
WYO.—Barrett (R) W

Wash. CIO Council Faces Charges Apr. 5

DEMANDS that the certification of the Washington State Industrial Union Council be revoked will be heard by the National CIO on April 5 in Seattle, Wash.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray has designated John Brophy, councils director, as the hearing officer. The sessions will be held in the office of CIO Reg. Dir. Roy W. Atkinson, who filed the charges. They were made in a letter to Brophy on Mar. 1 in which he said:

"I hereby charge that the Washington State Industrial Union Council has ceased to be representative of the CIO in its territory, in that, among other things, a substantial majority of the local unions affiliated directly or indirectly to the CIO in the State of Washington, comprising a substantial majority of the membership in the state, have severed their affiliation to the Council or have not affiliated, and will not affiliate.

"I ask that the certificate of affiliation of the Council to the CIO be revoked, that the Council be expelled from the CIO, and that such other actions as may be deemed appropriate be taken."

William Plested, Raymond, Wash., is president of the council, and A. A. Fisher, Seattle, is secretary-treasurer.

The proceedings are being conducted pursuant to Rule 25 of the CIO Rules for Industrial Union Councils, which states in part:

"The President or his designee, on notice and hearing, may revoke the certificate of affiliation of any Council for violation of the CIO Constitution or the Rules governing Councils, or on the ground that the Council has ceased to be representative of the CIO in its territory or has ceased to function, or may suspend or remove any officer thereof, including Board and Committee members, for violation of the Constitution or Rules, or may take other appropriate remedial action. . . ."

Man Gets Jail Term in Union Leader's Death

GUS DORAZIO, once an outstanding heavyweight boxer, was sentenced to 2½ to 5 years in prison for beating to death Al Blomeyer, shop steward of CIO Brewery Workers Local 5, Philadelphia.

Dorazio, who was good enough to merit a bout with Joe Louis while the latter was champion, was convicted of second degree murder and has appealed to the State Supreme Court.

He was found guilty of attacking Blomeyer in Jan. 1949, as the latter circulated petitions for a union shop election in Philadelphia breweries after defeat of the AFL Teamsters Union in an NLRB election. Witnesses testified that Dorazio had threatened other Local 5 members also circulating petitions and warned he would "send them home in an ambulance" if they didn't stop. Principal witnesses for Dorazio were two officials of the Teamsters Union.

New Pacts Assure Pension For 62,000

CIO TEXTILE, rubber and utility unions last week announced pension agreements, covering 62,000 employes.

The CIO Utility Workers Union has signed a pact with the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York City assuring minimum pensions of $125 a month to 30,000 employes. Four thousand employes already retired will be eligible for increased benefits which are to be paid entirely by the company.

The union estimated that under the arrangement, 95% of the employes will retire on pensions of at least $150 a month, social security benefits included.

UWUA officials said the settlement, which included a new wage progression program and improved holiday benefits, represented the fifth round of wage increases since the war. The union estimated cost of the full package at more than $9 million a year or 18c an hour for each worker.

All employes who retire at the age of 65 after 30 years' service will receive minimum pensions of $125 a month. The contract, an extension of one that went into effect last year, provides for a wage reopening next Mar. 1 for a 60-day period. If no agreement is reached in that time, the issues go to arbitration.

IN the RUBBER industry, Firestone Tire and Rubber signed a new company-wide bargaining agreement with the CIO Rubber Workers.

About 20,000 employes of eight plants are covered by a pension plan calling for at least $100 a month, including social security.

The agreement which runs for one year left wage rates unchanged but the pension plan was set up on a five-year basis. Also included in the agreement was a life insurance plan. The company will pay all the costs of both pensions and insurance. The contract is almost identical with the one recently signed by the union and Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

Workers become eligible for pensions at the age of 65 after 25 years' service. They will receive 1% of their total earnings. If the 1% is less than $100 a month, including social security, they will receive $100. If the 1% exceeds the minimum, they will receive the full 1%.

The company will provide group life insurance in amounts ranging from $1000 to $4000 depending on the employe's hourly rate of pay.

The agreement covers plants in Akron, O.; Noblesville and Newcastle, Ind.; Los Angeles, Cal.; Pottstown, Pa.; Fall River, Mass.; Des Moines, Ia., and Memphis, Tenn.

THE CIO TEXTILE Workers reached tentative agreement with three major rug concerns which will provide $100-a-month pensions for 12,000 workers.

The contract was made with Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co., Yonkers, N. Y.; Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co., Thompsonville, Conn., and Amsterdam, N. Y., and the A&M Karagheusian Carpet Co., Freehold and Roselle Park, N. J.

The terms of the agreement, the details still to be worked out, call for pension payments, including social security benefits, to employes reaching the age of 65 with 30 years' service.

Negro Fraternities Honor Judge And Mrs. Waring

FEDERAL JUDGE J. Waties Waring, of Charleston, S. C., whose stand on the race issue has brought threats of impeachment from his neighbors, was presented with a citation at the annual dinner of the American Council on Human Rights, a group of Negro fraternities, in Washington.

A citation also was presented to Mrs. Waring.

Judge Waring chose the dinner to attack racial discrimination in Washington as "disgraceful," with conditions "even worse than in my part of the country."

"At least in my state a lot of the people don't know any better," he commented.

He urged the council to use its influence on Congress and the White House to obtain legislation insuring equal rights for all racial groups. The solution, he maintained, lies "in a status (of equality) created by law" with the aid of Congress, the executive department and the courts.

Judge Waring has been viciously attacked in South Carolina because of his ruling in 1947 requiring the admission of negroes to Democratic primaries. The lower house of the South Carolina Legislature has passed a resolution appropriating $10,000 to promote impeachment proceedings against him.

On the same day that Judge and Mrs. Waring were honored in Washington, delegates to the Southeastern Regional Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Chattanooga, Tenn., condemned the efforts of "certain white citizens of South Carolina" behind the impeachment move. Introduced by the South Carolina delegation, the resolution asserted that those sponsoring the impeachment were "aiding and abetting the enemies of democracy and embarrassing our United Nations delegation before the eyes of the world."

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating DixieGOPs

"And what has mama's little helper learned in school today?"

Wrote Letter, Made History

THE MAN whose letter in 1902 to a coal baron evoked a reply that shocked the country, is dead.

The reply, enunciating the amazing doctrine of the "divine right" of coal operators to do as they saw fit, brought such public denunciation that President Theodore Roosevelt stepped in and named a commission, a landmark in labor history, to settle the bitter dispute.

William F. Clark, 81, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., wrote a plea during the strike to George F. Baer, president of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Co., asking that Baer "bring about peace and good will by granting a wage increase no matter how small." Clark's letter continued:

"I believe all would gladly return to work and you would have the respect of the nation and the blessing of God. I pray God to send the Holy Spirit to reason in your heart and to act accordingly as the means of lifting thousands to a better way of living and, finally, to purer, nobler lives." Clark was a coal miner's son.

Baer replied: "I have your letter of the 16th instant. I do not know who you are. I see you are a religious man but are evidently biased in favor of the right of the working man to control a business in which he has no other interest than to secure fair wages for the work he does. I beg of you not to be discouraged.

"The rights and interests of the laboring man will be protected and cared for—not by the labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom in His infinite wisdom God has given control of the property interests of the country and upon management of which so much depends . . ."

Thornton Re-elected Shoe Workers Head

Unofficial returns indicate that William E. Thornton of Boston, has been re-elected international president of the CIO United Shoeworkers in balloting on Mar. 21.

Reports from locals put Thornton about two to one ahead of Milton Filker, of New York, with a substantial majority of the board lined up with him.

Mundt Bill Hit As Totalitarian

USING THE Mundt-Nixon bill (S. 2311) to fight communism would be "like using a hammer to swat a wasp on baby's head."

That was the opinion expressed last week by Prof. Zachariah Chaffee of Harvard Law School, one of the country's leading legal experts on civil liberties programs.

Chaffee's views were written into a 15,000-word statement which he mailed to the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, now studying the bill. It has already been approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Chaffee argued that America's hope is to stand firmly on its "principles of freedom, and not, as this bill does, water freedom down by borrowing some of the most hateful practices of the totalitarians."

Opposition to the bill has already been voiced by the CIO and numerous other organizations. They charge that in allegedly fighting subversives, the bill would build a straitjacket into which any labor or liberal organization could be placed.

JOHN GREEN, president of the CIO Shipbuilding Workers, looks over testimony presented at a hearing of a subcommittee of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce in support of a $25 million appropriation for repair to the reserve fleet. The subcommittee heard other speakers point out that it is vital to the defense of the nation that the ship repair industry be maintained at a level to meet any emergency. Other Shipbuilding Union men who also spoke were (l. to r.) Sid Rose, Local 12; Ben Hewitt, Local 33 and John Grogan, Intl. vice-president who also holds the office of Hoboken, N. J., Commissioner.

A Page From Labor History

Robot-Like Treatment Sparked Auto Union

By WILLIAM WEISS

A NUMBER OF years ago theater audiences were amused by the antics of Charlie Chaplin in the movie "Modern Times."

Chaplin played the part of a worker on an automobile factory line. All day long, as the partially completed cars moved past him, his job was to tighten two nuts on each chassis.

The motions he made simultaneously with both hands while on the job became so automatic that Chaplin, after working hours, continued to tighten imaginary nuts. The scene caused movie-goers to be convulsed with mirth but actual auto factory workers saw nothing humorous in this characterization.

The burning resentment of auto workers at being considered mere robots was a major factor in the beginning of unionization in the automobile industry.

When the "inventor" of scientific management, Frederick W. Taylor, hit upon the conveyor belt system as a means of building autos faster and cheaper, his accomplishment was hailed as the greatest triumph of American technology.

TAYLOR WAS an expert in the field of machine designing but he ignored the worker required to adjust himself to an ever-increasing tempo to keep in rhythm with a mechanical master. He had hoped, however, to eliminate discord between capital and labor by increasing the output of industry to a degree that both employer and worker would benefit.

The "speedup" and "stretchout," the methods by which workers were forced to work harder and harder, to put out more and more effort in the same amount of time, took the "guts" out of the men and made them old before their time.

In the late twenties the late Henry Ford startled the country with the announcement of the unheard of $5-a-day wage in his auto plants. Reams of copy hit the newspapers regarding his generosity.

It is a matter of record, however, that in the prosperous year 1926, annual earnings of auto workers averaged less than $1300 and by 1935 the average yearly wage had dropped to less than $1000.

It was true that some of the workers did make $5 a day but due to seasonal layoffs, auto workers found themselves continuously "in the hole"—never able to get their debts paid and a little laid aside while they were working in preparation for the next inevitable layoff.

From the industry's infancy, union-minded workers time and again tried to unite for their own protection. As early as 1891, the International Union of Carriage & Wagon Workers was founded to embrace all horseless carriage labor and was later chartered by AFL as an industrial union. An ill-timed strike caused the disintegration of this group in 1921.

In 1926, AFL made the first serious attempt to organize the nearly half million workers then employed in automobile plants. The effort died a gradual death.

A series of spontaneous Detroit area strikes in 1933, caused by layoffs, wage cuts and the everlasting speedup, brought out workers at Buick, Chevrolet, Fisher Body, Cadillac, Dodge, Hudson, Plymouth and Packard. The strikes were short lived and unsuccessful but for the first time auto workers in different plants had acted in concert and the seeds of industrial unionism were firmly planted among workers in the industry.

IN 1935 FEDERATED auto locals began banding together in what was at first a loose alliance under the name of the United Automobile Workers at just about the time the Committee for Industrial Organization was being formed.

With the characteristic militancy for which the UAW is known today, the group in a letter to General Motors Vice Pres. William Knudsen asked for a conference on the general subject of collective bargaining.

When Knudsen refused the request, workers in the Fisher Body Plant at Flint, Mich., promptly sat down in protest. In doing so they rang up the curtain on the most spectacular capital-labor drama of the post-World War I period.

Within a few days the "sit down" technique had spread to practically every GM plant in the country and the attention of the nation was focussed on the outcome of this new type labor-management struggle.

Despite court injunctions, company police onslaughts with tear gas and lack of food and heat, the sit-downers stuck it out for over a month and the company finally capitulated and signed an agreement in 1937. The contract was a great step forward for unionism in the motor industry.

No history of the automobile workers would be complete without some reference to the elaborate spy system devised by employer groups and used with telling effects to smash early attempts at unionization. In the early days, an auto worker could never tell whether the man who worked beside him was a friend or a company stooge.

Sometimes the corporations corrupted the weak and unprincipled among their own employes to act as spies. At other times, they depended on the professional services of private "dectective agencies."

GM paid the Pinkerton agency $419,000 for 2½ years' work and Chrysler gave $211,000 to Corporations Auxiliary for the services of spies and stool pigeons.

Despite owner opposition of the most violent type, the auto workers by their courage and determination brought democracy into the plants of one of the most arrogant anti-union industries in the world.

Chryler Continues To Say 'No' To UAW Pension Proposals

CHRYSLER Corp., the nation's third largest auto manufacturer, continued its monotonous practice of saying "no" to CIO Auto Worker pension proposals as the strike of 89,000 UAW members entered its ninth week.

The company, spurred to slight action by the Ford and Nash settlements, did get around to making an offer last week but went back to its negative position in a hurry when Auto Workers President Walter Reuther countered with a union proposal.

Referring to the company's proposal, Reuther said, "Even though the concessions were small, the Chrysler Corporation has finally and reluctantly moved from its unreasonable position in the current negotiations. It is unfortunate that the corporation has been unwilling to make these very small concessions until after 56 days of strike action."

"The company's proposal is unsatisfactory because it does not meet the needs of Chrysler workers and it still falls far short of the protection and security afforded workers by the contracts worked out with Ford, Nash, Kaiser-Frazier and other competitors of Chrysler.

"The Chrysler offer still makes no provision whatever for medical and hospital protection for Chrysler workers."

The strike, longest in the company's history, began Jan. 25 when the corporation refused to make a definite cents-per-hour contribution to a pension fund and refused to permit the union to have a hand in the fund's administration. UAW officials contend that the company's offer amounted to only 3c an hour.

Union efforts to have Chrysler officials present their views on the current contract dispute at public hearings have been rebuffed by the company on three different occasions.

Steel Union Gives $100,000 To Aid Chrysler Strikers

The CIO Steelworkers union has made a contribution of $100,000 to aid the striking Chrysler workers, it was announced by Emil Mazey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Auto Workers.

"We are grateful to the Steelworkers for this substantial expression of their solidarity," Mazey said. "This gift will be distributed among the various Chrysler locals for direct relief of striking Chrysler workers and their families."

The contribution was sent to the UAW headquarters in Detroit by David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the steel union.

PROXY STATEMENTS to the Chrysler stockholders filed last week with the Security and Exchange Commission, revealed that 229 Chrysler top executives were paid a total of $2,581,000 in bonuses during 1949. An additional $2,101,210 went to 5086 supervisory employes in the form of bonus payments.

The report showed $1,352,266 distributed in "fees and salaries" among top bracketed officials. These payments were exclusive of bonuses.

K. T. Keller, Chrysler, president, was down for a salary of $250,800, but was left out of the bonus picture, according to the report.

The statement credited B. E. Hutchinson, vice president, director and chairman of the company's finance committee, with receiving $225,700 in salary and he also received no bonus.

AMONG THE lesser figures, Fred M. Zeder, vice president and vice chairman of the board, picked up $215,400 in salary, L. L. Colber, Dodge Division president, drew $100,100 in salary and $70,000 as a bonus, and H. L. Weckler, Chrysler general manager, got $175,400 in salary and a bonus of 70,000.

A. Vander Zee, a vice president, received $85,100 salary and $75,000 bonus, Owen R. Skelton, corporation director, got $88,350 salary and a bonus of $55,000 while Carl Breer, another corporation director, settled for $62,866 salary and $55,000 bonus.

Of particular interest to the striking Chrysler workers is the revelation of the following retirement plan payments last year: Weckler, $27,546; Skelton, $14,904; Vander Zee, $11,915 and Colber, $6,342.

In Detroit, negotiations continued. Despite an optimistic feeling in the industry that a break in the strike was imminent, both parties were reported far apart.

Reuther Made Doctor Of Laws

Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the CIO Auto Workers recently was awarded an honorary degree of Doctors of Laws by Boston Univ.

When he conferred the degree, Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, the university's president, said that Reuther is "a man who knows both intellectually and experimentally the Christian idealism of America and also the pagan realism that too often characterizes both sides in a labor dispute; a man whose civic stature is well proportioned, and whose American patriotism is unimpeachable."

Bell Strikers Facing Prison, Funds Sought For Legal Aid

THE COMMITTEE to Aid in the Legal Defense of Bell Workers has been set up in Buffalo, N. Y., to raise funds to aid 46 members of CIO United Auto Workers Local 501 who face penalties up to 26 years in jail and a fine of $25,500 on charges growing out of the Bell Aircraft Corp. strike in nearby Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The walkout started last June when negotiations for a new contract broke down. Bell had refused a pension plan and a wage increase, and declined to extend the old contract while its successor was being negotiated. The company got an injunction limiting picketing, then promoted a back to work movement.

Disorder on the picket line in August and September led to attacks on the strikers by deputy sheriffs who used a Bell helicopter to drop tear gas bombs, brutally clubbed the strikers and arrested a total of 83 workers, strike leaders and supporters on criminal charges.

Prosecution of the 46 indicted continued even after the walkout was ended on Oct. 18 by an agreement to arbitrate. Notice of appeal has been filed in each conviction, and the committee is seeking to raise funds to finance the court fight.

Chairman of the group is Richard Lipsitz. The Rev. Alan B. Peabody is secretary-treasurer. The committee includes clergymen of many religious faiths, educators, liberals, labor leaders including CIO Regional Director Hugh Thompson and two Democratic members of Congress, Reps. Chester D. Gorski and Anthony F. Tauriello. Contributions may be sent to the committee at 506 Brisbane building, Buffalo 3, N. Y.

Drawn By McGregor

"I'm sorry, Smitty, Joe has decided to stay home today."

Ewing Urges Centers For Rehabilitation

CIO LEADERS together with AFL, United Mine Worker and International Association of Machinists representatives last week attended a two-day National Conference on Workmen's Compensation and Rehabilation in Washington, D.C.

The annual conference, sponsored jointly by the U.S. Dept. of Labor and the Federal Security Agency, seeks closer cooperation in the rehabilitation of injured industrial workers through the participation of federal officials, state workmen's compensation and rehabilitation officers, business and labor leaders and medical and insurance men.

Undersecretary of Labor Michael J. Garvin, substituting for Secretary Tobin, told the delegates at least 200,000 of the two million workers injured each year could use rehabilitation services. But, he pointed out, only 6000 get them under the current state-federal program. About 12,000 are eligible under the present law.

FEDERAL Security Administrator Oscar Ewing called for a fool-proof system under which an injured worker could get immediate rehabilitation services. Ewing would extend rehabilitation services to disabilities caused by chronic disease or by mental and physical impairments.

He asked for more rehabilitation centers throughout the country. "You know how many technicalities must be unraveled if we are to make any real headway toward this objective," he said. "In many instances state compensation laws are not geared to facilitate really effective rehabilitation work. These inadequacies must be remedied."

The conference grew out of Pres. Truman's industrial safety conference of several months ago. On the planning committee for the conference were Harry Read, executive assistant to CIO Secy.-Treas. James Carey, and Lewis G. Hines, AFL.

Other CIO representative attending were J. W. Childs, Rubber Workers vice president; Harold Grossman, Penna. CIO Council; Frank Burke, Steelworkers safety director; Dolly Lowther, Clothing Workers; Leonard Lesser, Auto Workers; John Edelman, Textile Workers; C. W. Werkau, Communications Workers; Frank Fernbach, CIO Department of Education and Research, and Gaston LeBlanc, Stone & Allied Products Workers.

Doctors' Mag Blasts AMA

A slashing attack on the methods used by the American Medical Association in its drive against national health insurance is made in the March issue of the National Medical Association's Journal. The NMA membership is composed of Negro physicians.

Accusing the AMA of trying to "shackle free expression" by using its $25 assessment on all members to fight the health insurance proposal, an editorial in the Journal charged that the AMA's "attempts to use the techniques of ward politics to disparage dissenting opinion in the NMA are beneath contempt." It urged NMA members to take the lead in developing adequate medical care programs.

REPRESENTATIVES of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers appear at a hearing in the Wage and Hour Division to protest against the glove industry's proposal that so-called learners be paid less than 75c an hour. They are (left to right) Hyman Bookbinder, assistant research director; Reuben Kamm of the Western Organization Dept., Frank E. McMaster of the glove workers, and Miss Helen Blanchard, Washington representative. The man at the extreme right was not identified. Other "learners" face similar threats.

Steel Union Dist. 21 Perfects PAC System

PROBABLY THE outstanding record on PAC collections, year in and year out, has been made by CIO Steelworkers' District 21, under Director John Grajciar of Sharon, Pa.

There are thousands of Steelworkers in the area. And in every $1 drive, District 21 has come through with contributions of $1 or more from between 75% and 80% of the entire membership.

District 21's technique sounds simple enough.

The drive starts with a meeting of all district officials and shop stewards. At this meeting, the stewards and officers are briefed thoroughly on the whys and wherefores of PAC. Receipt books are distributed and a date is set for the next meeting.

The shop stewards are the chief collectors. Occasionally they ask for volunteer help. The ideal is one collector for every 25 members. Each steward makes it his personal responsibility to see that every man in his department is approached at least once for a contribution. They work with membership lists supplied by the locals.

The stewards and assistant collectors make it clear to every person they talk to that there is nothing compulsory about the contributions and that nobody is telling anybody how to vote. They explain what PAC is and what the money is used for.

The drives last a month, usually, and the collectors meet once a week and compare notes. They keep accurate count of how many persons they have talked to and what the response has been. The collectors vie with each other for 100% records.

Organizationally Speaking

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The writer attended a banquet given in honor of our dear buddy, George De Nucci, CIO Regional Director, Columbus, Ohio, on Friday, March 17. The banquet was well attended by Brother De Nucci's many friends. He has served the CIO well in Ohio and everyone wishes him every success in his new assignment in Puerto Rico. Walter H. Harris will take up the duties of Regional Director in Columbus.

This past week the CIO set up temporary offices in Philadelphia to meet the growing demand for charters by former local unions of the Office & Professional Workers, particularly insurance agents. The headquarters will be the office of CIO regional Director George Craig, 1105 Bankers Securities Building, Philadelphia.

CIO Rep. Harold Ash, who served with the Telephone Workers Organizing Committee, will handle all correspondence for this group with the support of an advisory committee for the time being. The reports are that the UOPWA, as well as the Public Workers, are getting desperate and are calling conventions. While they "bark" the CIO marches on!

Robert I. Wishart, Business Agent, Local 1145 International Union of Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, reports the victory of the Amalgamated Local 1140 IUE-CIO over the discredited UE by the vote of 896 to 276, in Twin Cities, Minn. This makes five recent victories in that area, representing some 8,886 workers, others to come.

Al Hartnett, Assistant to the IUE-CIO Chairman, James B. Carey, reports another victory for the IUE over the discredited UE: Heekin Can Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, IUE 80; UE 5; no union 21; challenged 20.

IUE-CIO won two elections in Lynn, Mass., when workers of J. C. Pitman & Sons voted IUE 41 to nothing and Superior Products chose IUE 18, no union one. UE was not on the ballot in either case.

Everyone is looking forward to the important elections in Westinghouse.

Adolph Germer, Director of Organization, CIO Woodworker, reports the following results of two union shop elections: Doernbecher Manufacturing Co., Portland, Ore., eligible 619; yes 558; no 7; challenged 10; void 2. Vancouver Plywood Co., Vancouver, Wash., eligible 373; yes 338; no 6.

Reg. Dir. Chester Dusten reports that in a representation election held at the Pendleton Woolen Mills, Pendleton, Ore., the workers voted 54 for CIO; 16 AFL; 4 neither and 2 challenged. This campaign was conducted by Neil Griffin and Ray Brown, representatives of the Textile Joint Board, Portland Area.

Russell Taylor, Legislative Representative of the CIO Shoe Workers, reports that the shoe workers of the Rondeau Shoe Co., Farmington, N. H., won a union shop election by the following vote: eligible 1216; yes 712; no 426; challenged 24.

Reg. Dir. Delmond Garst reports that in a representation election held at the Texas Empire Pipe Line Co. the workers voted 128 to 101 in favor of the Oil Workers International Union. The election was conducted in St. Louis, Mo.

Sub-Reg. Dir. John Maurillo reports that the Barbers & Beauty Culturists Union of America, CIO, won elections held in the Hills Building Barber Shop and the Phil Plessis Barber Shop, both in Syracuse, N. Y., by a unanimous vote. This drive was conducted by Maurillo and William Rabinowitz.

Reg. Dir. Michael Livoda reports that the CIO Auto Workers won two union shop elections: Air Cleaners Service Co., Denver, Colo., eligible 90; yes 77; no 7, Heckathorne Manufacturing Co., Littleton, Co., eligible 116; yes 90; no 26.

Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler reports that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers won a representation election held at the Ideal Garment Co., Los Angeles, Calif., by a vote of 10 to 9. Rep. Hymie Schneid was in charge of the campaign. DeShetler reports further that the CIO Textile Workers won recognition from the Allied Printing and Dyeing Co., Los Angeles, by a show of cards.

Va. Landlords Move Quickly To Hike Rents

"THE SITUATION is general and people are frantic," says a letter written to the Rent Control District Office in Danville, Va., by four tenants of a Danville apartment building.

The Virginia Legislature voted to end rent controls in the state, effective June 25. No sooner was the decision announced than landlords started telling tenants their rents would be raised.

In one 12-unit apartment house, a familiar building to several CIO representatives, tenants on March 4 received identical letters from their landlord.

The building consists of six three-room apartments and six five-room apartments, currently rently at $48 and $65.75 a month. The letter stated that, effective June 1, the rents would be $70 for the three-room units, $85 for the five-room apartments. Tenants also were notified that they would be expected to sign a 12-month lease.

Four of the tenants of three-room apartments wrote the rent control office. "The apartments occupied by the undersigned," they said, "consist of three unfurnished rooms, very crude bath. The stove and refrigerator are not furnished. No painting nor other improvements have been made during the past 10 years except by the tenants.

"In 1943 at the beginning of rent control, these apartments rented for $40 per month. From 1943 to 1949, two 'hardship' increases were given, which made a total of 20%. With the abolishment of state rent controls, notices have been received that rent on the three-room apartments will be increased from $48 to $70. . . .

"We consider this completely out of all reason. . . .

"The landlords in this area all seem to have the same idea, so there is no alternative of moving out and moving somewhere else where the rent will be more reasonable. The situation is general and people are frantic."

Phone Co. Talks Long Distance

HEARINGS IN the dispute between Division 55, CIO Communications Workers, and the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. continued last week before the five-man arbitration board established by Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll, of New Jersey.

Testimony was expected to continue into the early part of this week because the company took more time than was expected in presenting arguments against the union's proposals for a wage increase, a reduced work week and other contract improvements.

The Governor seized the telephone company's facilities three weeks ago to avert a strike of 12,000 CWA members. Under state law, seizure permitted him to establish the arbitration board.

Oleo Monoply Charged

An investigation of why the price of oleomargine "has consistently followed the price of butter as the shadow follows the man, regardless of the price trends in the basic materials from which oleo is manufactured" has been proposed by Sen. Herbert Lehman (D. N.Y.). The New York Senator, who unsuccessfully opposed repeal of the taxes on oleo, charged that five firms manufacture 60% of the output, and altogether there are only 25 firms making oleo.

McCarthy Act—Ho Hum!—Runs Another Week

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

SEN. JOE McCarthy's hit-and-run act has run into its fourth week—and nobody, including the Wisconsin Senator, seems to know where or when it's going to wind up.

McCarthy, having so far failed to make his accusation stick—that the State Department is infested with Communists in leading positions—last week pulled another bunny out of the hat.

His story: that he had the name of the "top espionage agent in America," and that the man is connected with the State Department.

On demand, and under oath, McCarthy gave the name in closed hearings to the patient, somewhat shell-shocked Senate investigating committee which has been hearing his testimony during the last month.

John Peurifoy, State Dept. administrative head, looked at the name and told reporters the man had never been on the State Department payroll.

He had, it appeared, acted as an informal consultant to members of the department. The Senate group has launched a high-priority investigation to find if there is any more factual matter in McCarthy's latest charge than earlier buck-shot accusations.

IF THE McCarthy series of charges—and his blunt demand to President Truman to "put up or shut up"—had not produced much proof, it had succeeded in keeping the Wisconsin Republican's name on the front pages

Behind the verbal artillery attack, some Republicans—most of them from the party's most reactionary, isolationist wing—began to call for removal of Dean Acheson as Secretary of State. Acheson, a Fair Dealer, has never been popular with the GOP's isolationists.

Meanwhile Sen. Robert A. Taft—a top-ranking member of the Republicans' Senate Policy Committee—took out a political insurance policy on the McCarthy charges.

He told the New York Times that McCarthy's charges were "not a matter of party policy"—that is, the GOP wouldn't take responsibility for them if they prove a complete dud.

ON THE other hand, Taft said he had personally urged McCarthy to keep pressing his accusations, and "if one case didn't work, to bring up another."

At that rate, McCarthy will be competing during the late spring with the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers for the public's attention, for he has estimated the number of State Dept. "reds" to be, variously, 57, 81 and 256.

So far the documentary proof behind those charges has been conspiculously missing.

Thus, on Feb. 9, at a speech in Wheeling, W. Va., McCarthy told an audience he had the names of 57 card-carrying Communists still employed by the State Dept.

On Feb. 20 he told the Senate: "I shall be willing, happy and eager to go before any committee and give the names and all the information available." And, he added, "I think I have a fairly good digest of the files."

But when the committee headed by Sen. Tydings (D., Md.) started to listen to McCarthy on Mar. 8, he back-tracked: ". . . Before I turn over cases to the Senate, I want to check all of the information, document it and give it to you."

By Mar. 20, McCarthy had given the Senate committee a list of 81 names—but he had not provided information about the cases, digests of material he had claimed to have in his files; and he had declined to transfer into the committee's sworn record even the statements he'd made on the Senate floor.

In his earlier pronouncements, McCarthy had claimed that three of his 81 cases constituted the big menace to the country's security—but by now that trio appears to have been pretty well forgotten.

Then he predicted details of a "phenomenal" case. But McCarthy's next move was to throw in nine more names—many of them people not connected with the State Dept., and none of them showing any phenomenal characteristics. Most of the people denied the charges, vigorously.

WITH THOSE vigorous denials—from Miss Dorothy Kenyon, from Mrs. Edith Brunauer and from Ambassador-at-Large Phillip Jessup—McCarthy moved off on a new tack, with his "revelation" about the "man I consider the top Russian espionage agent in this country."

If it had any meaning at all, this bit of information was obviously pretty important. But McCarthy handled it like a casual piece of gossip. Instead of presenting the "name" to Sen. Tydings and his investigation committee at a formal hearing, McCarthy passed along the name to Tydings in the course of a chance meeting in the Senate cloakroom. Tydings made him repeat the charge at a closed committee session.

So far, that name hasn't been officially divulged.

In the face of these hit-and-run tactics, the Administration has been considering whether it should turn over to the Senate committee the loyalty files of the people named in McCarthy's various speeches in the Senate and at the committee hearings.

There is a solid mass of precedent, going back to the earliest days of the Republic, against any one of the three divisions of government — legislative, executive and judicial—being compelled to turn over its files on demand of any of the other three.

(In the recent federal perjury trial of Harold Christoffel, former Auto Workers local officer, the House of Representatives firmly declined to turn over minutes of a Labor Committee session to the court.)

THE LOYALTY files — like the files of the FBI—are filled with both fact and fancy. They include hearsay gossip, rumors, anonymous letters, as well as sworn statements and documentary evidence.

It's up to the loyalty boards—in the State Dept. and other departments—to assess this mass of evidence and rumor about each individual, and to seek a reasoned judgment on the basis of all the facts at hand.

But McCarthy's demand for making public the contents of these files would undoubtedly lead to further smearing of government employes, with more lurid headlines and extension of the GOP attack on the Fair Deal Administration.

Which is just what Sen. McCarthy, Sen. Taft, Sen. Wherry and other Republicans are seeking.

Registration In April In 10 States

April is a crucially important month politically in 10 states, on the registration front. Groups working for the nomination and election of liberal candidates face the following deadlines and restrictions:

ALABAMA—The all-important Democratic primaries, in which labor-suported Sen. Lister Hill faces skilled Dixiecrat opposition, are May 2. Only two registration days remain—Monday, April 3, and Monday, April 17. In order to be allowed to register, the Alabama would-be voter must be accompanied to the polls by two qualified voters, and must have paid a poll tax of $1.50 by the poll-tax deadline, which was two months ago.

CALIFORNIA—To vote in the exciting June 6 primaries, when voters will decide whether Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas or Sen. Sheridan Downey gets the Democratic nomination for Senator. Californians voting for the first time and those who didn't vote in 1948 must be registered by April 28.

FLORIDA—To vote in the critically important May 2 primaries, new voters must be registered by April 1. In these contests, Sen. Claude Pepper is opposed by Rep. George Smathers for the Senatorial nomination, victory in which amounts to election.

GEORGIA—Primaries in the Talmadge state are not till September 13, but in Fulton County, where most of the voting strength is centered, registration for the September primaries must be completed by May 6.

ILLINOIS—Primaries here are April 11, and the registration for them is already closed. Registration for the general elections opens April 14. This is the state where Senate majority leader Scott Lucas faces a hard battle with former Rep. Everett Dirksen (R.).

INDIANA—Primaries here are May 2; new voters and those who failed to vote in 1948 must register before April 3.

NEW JERSEY—The primaries are April 18; registration for the general elections begins April 19.

NORTH CAROLINA—For the May 27 primaries, which will be decisive here, voters may register only on April 29, May 6 and May 13. A new law provides that the counties may call for all voters to re-register this year, and about three-quarters of county elections officials have done so. The two Senators, of opposite opinions on almost every issue, are both up for re-election—Frank Graham and Clyde R. Hoey. The state also is having an intensive battle for the governorship.

OHIO—The primary date is May 2, with a three-way contest among Democrats to see who gets to run against Sen. Robert A. Taft. To vote in the Ohio primaries, new voters and those who failed to vote in 1948 must register before April 3.

PENNSYLVANIA—Primaries here are May 16, with interest centering on the Republican contest; Gov. James H. Duff is seeking the senatorial nomination against Rep. John C. Kunkel, and the victor will face Senate Majority Whip Francis J. Myers. New voters and those those who failed to vote in 1948 must register before April 27 to vote in these primaries.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed in Congress.	Keep writing to Senators, Representatives to force T-H repeal.
FEPC S. 1728 HR 4453	Senate bill would bar job discrimination based on race, creed or color, and provide penalties for violation.	House Dixiegops voted substitute bill without any enforcement teeth. Senate debate, probable filibuster, due soon.	Wire Senators to vote for S 1728 without weakening amendments, and to fight filibuster.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S. 2246 HR 7402	Provides for long-term, low-interest U. S. loans to co-ops for building moderate-cost housing projects, etc.	Both Houses defeated co-op section, passed landlord bill.	Write Senators and Representatives asking reconsideration.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors benefits, etc., under social security. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Senate Finance Comm. now holding hearings. CIO has asked further improvements.	Ask Senators to try to strengthen HR 6000 over present provisions.
Federal Aid To Education S. 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. House Labor Comm. badly split.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to OK Senate bill.
ECA extension HR 7378	Renews Marshall Plan for another year; sets $2,950,000,000 ceiling on funds.	Senate Foreign Relations Comm. and House Foreign Affairs now considering. CIO has announced support.	Ask members of the two committees to approve it as drafted.
Kerr Bill S. 1498	Weakens Federal Power Commission authority to regulate interstate shipments of natural gas.	Passed House last session; Senate votes this week.	Wire your Senator, ask him to vote NO.
Mundt-Ferguson Bill S. 2311	Bill endangers civil liberties, union rights — under guise of fighting subversive activities.	CIO opposed bill at hearings last year. Senate Judiciary Comm. has brought out revised bill.	Ask Senators to oppose bill as dangerous to civil rights.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

ICFTU Official Will Visit U.S.

J. H. Oldenbroeck, secretary-general of the new democratic world labor organization, will be a guest of honor of the CIO and AFL this week.

The two organizations have scheduled a Washington luncheon for Oldenbroeck, who was elected last November to the top staff post of the Intl. Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

It is his first visit to the country since that time. ICFTU headquarters have been established in Brussels, Belgium.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

$1.00 A YEAR

5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., APRIL 3, 1950 No. 14

J. H. OLDENBROEK (center), secretary-general of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, was guest of honor and main speaker at a CIO-AFL luncheon in Washington. He's shown here with Jacob Potofsky (left), president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the CIO International Affairs Committee, and Pres. William Green of the AFL. Oldenbroek said the ICFTU will seek to spread democratic trade unionism throughout the world and improve the standard of living of workers everywhere. It also will fight Communist efforts to sabotage the North Atlantic Pact, he said. See Page 3.

AS PART OF THE SYSTEM of Local 100, Rubber Workers, near Los Angeles, for getting members registered and to the polls, Karl Englund checks the names of members which are filed according to assembly districts. See story on Page 11.

RECOVERING RAPIDLY at her home is Patty Carey, 8, daughter of CIO Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey, who was unconscious for 32 days after being hit by an automobile and dragged more than 100 feet while on her way to school on Jan. 5. She is able to walk and to talk to her little friends on the telephone but is still under medical care, must be massaged daily.

Westinghouse Poll Apr. 27; IUE Expects 2nd Big Win

THE SECOND major test of strength between the Intl. Union of Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers-CIO and the discredited United Electrical Workers will take place among the 75,000 employes of the Westinghouse Corp. April 27.

That was the date set for Nat'l. Labor Relations Board elections by the Baltimore Regional Director last week after the NLRB, a day earlier, ordered 51 elections at 40 plants in 32 cities in 13 states within 30 days.

IUE leaders are confident that there will be a repeat performance of the first major NLRB election at the General Motors electrical division plants which the IUE won by a vote of 21,167 to 2528 for UE. The current Westinghouse contract with UE expired April 1.

IUE and UE will not be the only unions on the ballot in some of the plants. These five other unions will be listed:

Federation of Westinghouse Independent Salaried Unions (unaffiliated); AFL Electrical Workers; AFL Pattern Makers; Intl. Association of Machinists (unaffiliated) and Meter Division Engineers (unaffiliated).

The board set up 40 specific bargaining units. It also set up 11 tentative voting groups of employes on which it reserved final determination of the bargaining unit until after the expression of the employes' own wishes on their ballots.

Most of the bargaining units were agreed to among the parties and followed the lines of the units which UE has been representing. Most of the tentative voting groups were set up among the salaried clerical and professional employes and skilled craftsmen.

THE ELECTIONS will be held at Westinghouse plants in the following cities:

Pennsylvania — Wilkes-Barre, Johnstown, Derry, Sharon, Philadelphia, South Philadelphia, Manor, Sunbury, East Pittsburgh and Pittsburgh.

New Jersey — Newark, Bloomfield, Trenton, Jersey City and Belleville.

Ohio—Cleveland, Mansfield, East Springfield and Lima.

New York—Buffalo and Attica.

West Virginia—Huntington and Fairmont.

California — Los Angeles and Emeryville.

Chicago, Ill.; Detroit, Mich.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Seattle, Wash.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Baltimore, Md.; and St. Louis, Mo.

THE ELECTIONS were asked for in a series of 57 petitions filed with the Board. Hearings on the cases before an NLRB Hearing Officer consumed 32 days, with the transcript of the testimony and argument totalling 4526 pages, among the longest in any representation case in the history of the NLRB. In addition, 264 exhibits of documents and other matter were filed.

UE's contention that "its contracts are a bar to the holding of an election" was denied by the government agency, which ruled that "without regard to the events which gave rise to the formation of IUE, we find that the UE contract, which is about to expire, is no bar to this proceeding."

James B. Carey, chairman of IUE-CIO administrative committee, hailed the announcement. He said:

"It is gratifying to IUE-CIO that the NLRB has finally ordered an election among the workers in the Westinghouse chain.

"This means that the workers will at long last have the opportunity to choose between the IUE-CIO, a real trade union, and the Communist-dominated, do-nothing UE.

"The tactics of UE have been disgraceful all through the hearings and preceding them. UE tried every delaying tactic possible to disrupt and prolong the hearings.

"As chairman of the administrative committee of IUE-CIO, I am confident that the workers of Westinghouse will vote overwhelmingly for IUE-CIO. In that way they will win decent union coverage."

Petitions for elections among approximately 150,000 employes of General Electric Corp. and 6750 employes of RCA-Victor Corp. are pending before the Board.

Joblessness Perils U.S. Economy—Murray

THE 13th annual convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council was an historic demonstration of the power and influence of the CIO for liberal government in this Commonwealth.

The convention, which was held in Pittsburgh Mar. 28-30 emphasized the necessity for greater political action this year. Delegates heard the opening of the Democratic campaign to put Pennsylvania back in the liberal column.

The entire state ticket headed by U. S. Sen. Francis J. Myers, Philadelphia City Treasurer Richardson Dilworth for Governor, and Judge Michael A. Musmanno for lieutenant-governor, made public their platforms for the first time. The convention endorsed the ticket while the candidates remained on the floor.

Judge Musmanno, of Allegheny County Common Pleas Court, the man who put the coal and iron police out of business and a long-time symbol of liberalism, was put on the ticket at the behest of the CIO and Pres. Philip Murray.

Rivaling the visit of the candidates for drama was the appearance of Pres. Murray.

The CIO leader charged unemployment is reaching a point dangerous to the internal economic structure of the country. Machines, he said, were displacing men from jobs, and 750,000 youngsters were leaving schools each year without a chance to earn a livelihood.

But the CIO, Murray declared, would not stand by while new machines force workers into starvation. He said the CIO is not opposed to new labor saving equipment so long as it provides greater benefits for the workers.

Murray was one of a dozen national CIO leaders who spoke.

PRES. JOSEPH A. BEIRNE made a stirring appeal for his Communication Workers in their fight against the AT&T and the Bell System.

He urged the delegates to help organize Bell workers in Pennsylvania, and explained "that we are decent American citizens" who only want "a break."

"We wouldn't presume to ask for a 'square deal,'" he said, "for that would be too much."

CIO Dir. of Organization Allan Haywood exhorted the delegates to go out and "help those telephone kids, for they can do you a lot of good." Haywood asserted Bell workers are virtual "serfs" now.

PAC Dir. Jack Kroll urged a $1-a-member contribution to help defeat Sen. Robert A. Taft (R., O.), co-author of the Taft-Hartley slave act, and the rest of the enemies of labor this year.

CIO SECY.-TREAS. James B. Carey got applause from Western Pennsylvania delegates particularly when he tore apart the pension agreement the Commie United Electrical Workers signed recently with the Westinghouse Airbrake Corp. Carey, director of the CIO's new International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, said the Westinghouse pension program was a company union plan as far back as 1937.

David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers, spoke for the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

The convention re-elected Pres. Harry Boyer, of Reading, to his third term. Sec. Harry Block also was re-elected without opposition.

Two new vice presidencies were created. The places went to Morton Schiller, Wilkes-Barre, of the Brewery Workers, and Andrew Kaelin, Philadelphia, Transport Workers.

THE IUE WAS recognized with the election as vice president of Steve Hritz, of Local 601, East Pittsburgh. The classification of United Public Workers was changed to Government Workers, with John Evans re-elected vice president.

Other officers re-elected were Frank Kirsch, needle trades, Philadelphia; James J. Thomas, Pittsburgh, Steel; Harry J. McDonald, Philadelphia, Auto; Francis H. McCabe, Ford City, Glass; George Craig, Philadelphia, and Anthony J. Federoff, Pittsburgh, for the Eastern and Western Pennsylvania miscellaneous industries, respectively.

The convention without dissent adopted 30 resolutions, including one commending Murray for his victory in the Steel Industry pension fight and for driving the Commies from the CIO.

Steel Price Rise 'Untimely, Unwarranted Greedy, Conscienceless,' Congress Unit Finds

THE POOR, harassed steel industry—nobody seems to love it any more except a few Republicans—took another sock on its unprotected little chin last week over the matter of boosting its prices last December.

The Joint Congressional Economic Committee, which has been investigating the price raise, reported that the hike was "not only untimely but unwarranted, greedy and conscienceless" and a threat to the whole economy.

The raise, approximately $4 per ton, was supposed to have been "forced" upon the industry by the cost of the pension agreements that settled last fall's strike by the CIO Steelworkers.

The congressional committee's attack was the third by an impartial agency. A Presidential fact-finding board, which delved into the strike, reported last September:

"The substantial profits of the steel industry in the past two years and the current reversal of the downward trend in production satisfy the board that the net cost of the insurance and pension plans herein recommended can be absorbed without unduly narrowing the profit margins of the industry or the ability to hold or even lower its prices."

IN JANUARY the President's Council of Economic Advisers took another healthy swing at the price rise:

"Steel affects the whole economy, and some reduction in steel prices would favorably influence the whole economic situation . . . The statement of the steel industry accompanying the recent price increases did not in our judgment impair the shortly prior findings of the Steel Industry Board. These findings were to the effect that the price-profit-cost situation in the steel industry, allowing for pensions, would not justify price increases and in fact left room for price decreases in view of no wage rate increases."

The Economic Outlook, publication of the CIO Department of Education and Research, in the issue which appeared last week observed that "the propaganda machine of the steel industry has suffered a setback" in its grim effort to foist the blame for the price increase on the union. The industry's "shortsighted policies on profits and prices are unbalancing the nation's purchasing power," it declared.

"By the piling up of profits against the lean depression years which they seem to feel are 'inevitable,' the steel companies are leading us to the bust," the Outlook charged.

THE JOINT congressional committee in reaching its conclusions found that steel prices were out of line even before the rise, as they have gone up much more than other industrial products since the base year of 1926; that cost increases in 1949 amounted to only about $1.20 a ton, not $4, and even these were offset to some extent by decreases; and that prices were lifted only because the traffic would bear it—and the industry never would have got away with it had there been honest-to-gosh free competition.

It also recommended that the Federal Trade Commission collect and make continually available to Congress pertinent information on steel prices, production, costs and profits; that producers be required to file notice of pending price increases with the government 30 days before they become effective; and that a further study be made to determine if the steel industry has assumed the character of a public utility and should be regulated as such.

The Republican minority of the committee disagreed vehemently with the conclusions. The only recommendation upon which it could agree with the Democratic majority was a further study aimed at finding out if there is full competition in the steel industry, and if not how to obtain it.

The lack of detailed information on the industry, which has hampered students of its economics for years, became so apparent during the inquiry that the committee chairman, Sen. O'Mahoney (D. Wyo.), asked Congress for the power of subpoena.

Four Union Men Get Civic Posts

In line with the CIO program of developing more democratic representation in civic groups, four more CIO officials have been named to the boards of national organizations.

Arthur Goldberg, CIO and Steelworker's general counsel, was elected to the board of directors of the National Legal Aid Association.

August Scholle, president of the Michigan CIO Council, became a member of the board of directors of the National Committee for Education on Alcoholism.

Joseph W. Childs, executive vice president of the CIO Rubber Workers, and Sol Stetin, a vice president of the CIO Textile Workers, were elected to the board of directors of Community Chests and Councils of America, Inc.

ACW Label Drive In High Gear

The far-flung campaign of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers to induce the consumers of two nations to ask for clothing with the union label has brought other unions, municipal officials and even retailers to its aid.

A series of "union label week" celebrations has been held in this country and Canada and has drawn widespread attention and participation. In Canada the celebrations were held under the auspices of the Canadian Congress of Labour.

In Altoona, Pa., "Union Label Week" was inaugurated with a proclamation by Mayor J. Lester Laughlin. As he signed it, representatives of CIO and AFL unions and the railroad brotherhoods looked on and posed for newspaper photos.

Two of the city's largest stores had Amalgamated label displays, thanks to the work of E. B. Gersh and Julia Maietta, union representatives.

Speakers representing virtually every union in the city discussed the campaign on two 15-minute radio programs each day. The label message reached the city's entire union membership through speakers at local meetings and house-to-house visits.

In Eldon, Mo., the same general program was carried out but a couple of additional twists were added. Ray Snodgrass, owner of the largest clothing store, filled one of his windows with the Amalgamated display usually exhibited at conventions and later spoke at a Saturday night jamboree.

Gas Price Rise Expected, If Kerr Bill is Signed

THE SENATE last week gave the natural gas monopoly the right to clip the consumers for several billion dollars before the country's present and known potential supply gives out.

By a vote of 44 to 38 it passed the bill introduced by Sen. Kerr (D.), multi-millionaire oil and gas tycoon from Oklahoma, exempting from regulation by the Federal Power Commission independent producers of natural gas.

The independents are producers who do not transport natural gas via pipelines to homes and factories hundreds of miles away. They sell it "at arm's length" to pipeline companies which are subject to FPC regulation. The FPC also regulates companies which both produce and distribute natural gas. It has never regulated the independents but had the implied power to do so. This the Kerr bill prevents.

Twenty-eight Democrats and 16 Republicans voted for the measure, 16 Democrats and 22 Republicans against it.

An estimate that up to $16 billion may be added to the nation's gas bill was made by Sen. Douglas (D., Ill.), who was a professor of economics at the University of Chicago when he was elected to the Senate. The estimate was based on the maximum length of time known reserves may continue to deliver.

THE MEASURE now goes to conference with the House, which passed a similar bill at the last session.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray urged Pres. Truman to veto the Kerr bill which Murray described as an "unconscionable measure" which would "enrich large and profitable oil companies out of the pockets of the consumers."

He said that "millions of families are dependent on natural gas," have spent money to equip their homes for its use and "are compelled to pay whatever price is fixed." Murray declared that "gas service is a public utility and is properly subjected to regulation under Federal, state and local laws."

The gas industry victory followed another triumph an hour earlier when it defeated a motion by Douglas, who led the fight against the measure, to send the bill back to the Commerce committee. The vote was 45 to 37.

Three amendments that would have made it somewhat more palatable to opponents were defeated also before the final vote. One by Senator Kefauver (D. Tenn.) would have exempted only the small producers from regulation—those grossing less than $250,000 a year or producing less than 2 billion cubic feet. The proposal would have exempted every independent except the 37 largest producers, who stand to benefit most from the measure.

Another, by Sen. O'Mahoney (D. Wyo.), provided that if the FPC were to find that a price-fixing agreement existed, the sellers involved would lose their exemption from regulation.

The third authorized the FPC to regulate prices if they go up "unduly" and was introduced by Sen. Mundt (R. N. D.).

In its final form the bill provides for a continuing study by the FPC to determine if gas prices or supply are being adversely affected by lack of competition among the producers.

—From St. Louis Post Dispatch

Up We Go, Boys

Before the last vote there had been days of debate during which advocates of the measure, led by Kerr, thumped the tub and brought forth all the weary old phrases that have greeted every effort to protect the average American against exploitation or to improve his lot since the late President Roosevelt's first term.

Sen. MacFarland (D. Ariz.), who previously admitted he had been "blackmailed" into voting for the bill because Texas producers refused to sell additional gas to his constituents until they get a higher price for it, said the next step after defeat of the bill would be "nationalization."

Sen. Hickenlooper (R. Ia.), one of the better tub-thumpers, orated that regulation of natural gas producers would be a step toward "the planned state and the planned economy." He righteously refused to accept the "bombastic arguments" of opponents that the industry is a monopoly—this in spite of the fact that 10 of the more than 2500 producers sold half of the gas that flowed out of Texas, Louisiana, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma in 1947.

DOUGLAS AND the others who sought to block passage of the bill stressed the monopolistic nature of the industry despite the proponents' refusal to see it. He declared the bill if passed would be "almost pure gravy" for the producers.

"It would be gravy for the big boys and not the small independents," he asserted. "It would be added gravy for those who are already making big profits. Competition cannot regulate the price."

Prices are rising "very rapidly" in the gas fields, he pointed out, but the consumer price has dropped because of regulation of the distributors. If the FPC is stripped of its power, he added, prices will shoot up still further.

Sen. Aiken (R. Vt.) told Northern Senators that the producers are holding a gun to their heads but that it isn't loaded — even though they threaten not to sell without a price boost.

President Truman had indicated he would sign the bill, but later reports hint he may have changed his mind.

Demo Ducking Was in Order

The Kerr bill, political dynamite, caused a lot of senatorial sweat right up to the time the vote was taken.

It was passed by the Democrats—enough of them voted for it to wipe out the smaller Republican majority which voted against it.

Democratic ducking was strictly in order. Sen. Lucas (D. Ill.), the majority leader, ducked all the way out of Washington and was not around to take part in the last three days of debate on one of the session's most controversial measures.

Three Democrats — Sens. Magnuson (Wash.), Hill (Ala.) and McMahon (Conn.)—ducked out of actually voting against the bill, which they said they opposed, by pairing with absentee Senators who were in favor of it. They did this even though the courtesy was not reciprocated by the proponents, who refused to allow pairs for absentees opposed to the bill.

How Senators Voted on Kerr 'Gas Steal' Bill

Here is how the Senate voted, 44-38, on March 29, to approve the Kerr Bill to prohibit the Federal Power Commission from regulating independent producers of natural gas—and thereby to protect gas consumers from price rises that may total billions of dollars over the years. Sixteen Democrats and 22 Republicans voted against the bill; 28 Democrats and 16 Republicans voted for the bill. Votes against the Kerr Bill are marked R; votes for the bill are marked W. Pairs are indicated by PR and PW. A means absent.

ALA.	—Hill (D)	PR
	Sparkman (D)	W
ARIZ.	—Hayden (D)	W
	McFarland (D)	W
ARK.	—Fulbright (D)	W
	McClellan (D)	W
CAL.	—Downey (D)	PW
	Knowland (R)	R
COLO.	—Johnson (D)	W
	Millikin (R)	W
CONN.	—Benton (D)	R
	McMahon (D)	PR
DEL.	—Frear, Jr. (D)	W
	Williams (R)	R
FLA.	—Holland (D)	W
	Pepper (D)	A
GA.	—George (D)	PW
	Russell (D)	W
IDA.	—Dworshak (R)	R
	Taylor (D)	R
ILL.	—Douglas (D)	R
	Lucas (D)	A
IND.	—Capehart (R)	W
	Jenner (R)	R
IOWA	—Gillette (D)	R
	Hickenlooper (R)	W
KAN.	—Darby (R)	W
	Schoeppel (R)	W
KY.	—Chapman (D)	W
	Withers (D)	W
LA.	—Ellender (R)	W
	Long (D)	W
ME.	—Brewster (R)	PR
	Smith (R)	R
MD.	—O'Conor (D)	R
	Tydings (D)	A
MASS.	—Lodge (R)	R
	Saltonstall (R)	R
MICH.	—Ferguson (R)	R
	Vandenberg (R)	PR
MINN.	—Humphrey (D)	R
	Thye (R)	R
MISS.	—Eastland (S.R.)	W
	Stennis (D)	W
MO.	—Donnell (R)	R
	Kem (R)	R
MONT.	—Ecton (R)	W
	Murray (D)	R
NEB.	—Butler (R)	W
	Wherry (R)	W
NEV.	—Malone (R)	PW
	McCarran (D)	W
N. H.	—Bridges (R)	W
	Tobey (R)	R
N. J.	—Hendrickson (R)	R
	Smith (R)	R
N. M.	—Anderson (D)	W
	Chavez (D)	R
N. Y.	—Ives (R)	R
	Lehman (D)	R
N. C.	—Graham (D)	R
	Hoey (D)	W
N. D.	—Langer (R)	R
	Young (R)	W
OHIO	—Bricker (R)	W
	Taft (R)	W
OKLA.	—Kerr (D)	W
	Thomas (D)	W
ORE.	—Cordon (R)	R
	Morse (R)	R
PA.	—Martin (R)	W
	Myers (D)	R
R. I.	—Green (D)	R
	Leahy (D)	A
S. C.	—Johnston (D)	W
	Maybank (D)	W
S. D.	—Gurney (R)	W
	Mundt (R)	R
TENN.	—Kefauver (D)	R
	McKellar (D)	W
TEX.	—Connally (D)	W
	Johnson (D)	W
UTAH	—Thomas (D)	PW
	Watkins (R)	W
VT.	—Aiken (R)	R
	Flanders (R)	R
VA.	Byrd (D)	W
	Robertson (D)	W
WASH.	—Cain (R)	PW
	Magnuson (D)	PR
W. VA.	—Kilgore (D)	R
	Neely (D)	R
WIS.	—McCarthy (R)	W
	Wiley (R)	R
WYO.	—Hunt (D)	W
	O'Mahoney (D)	R

ICFTU To Fight Commies and Develop Positive Program

THE INTERNATIONAL Confederation of Free Trade Unions is an independent organization "which is prepared to work with governments—and to criticize governments if need be."

That is what distinguishes the the ICFTU from the World Federation of Trade Unions, which criticizes governments opposed by the Soviet Union but never criticizes the Russian government itself.

That's what J. H. Oldenbroek, secretary-general of the ICFTU said at a CIO-AFL dinner in his honor last week in Washington.

"The same forces (Communists) which attempted to sabotage the European Recovery Program are now trying to sabotage the delivery of material sent to Europe under the North Atlantic Pact," he said.

"We're going to work against any group which tries to interfere with the North Atlantic treaty."

Oldenbroek said that fighting Communists groups is necessary but is "somewhat negative." The ICFTU must have a "positive" program—and is now working one out, he declared.

"If, in the midst of war, we were able to get our democratic message to individual Germans in the enemy's camp, we can surely get our message behind the Iron Curtain," he said.

But more than that is needed, he added.

"We must help improve the conditions of workers all over the world by providing them with advice, technical know-how and other aid."

He announced that ICFTU plans to establish a training college for trade unionists in Asia "to teach them about such things as collective bargaining and playing a bigger role in public life."

The college, he said, would be operated for at least three years "on an experimental basis."

He pointed out that the ICFTU is made up of representatives of more than 50 million unionists in 53 nations.

There will be a further gain in membership soon, he said, because "applications for membership are already coming in."

Oldenbroek was welcomed to the luncheon on behalf of the CIO by Jacob Potofsky, president of Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the CIO International Affairs Committee, and on behalf of the AFL by Pres. William Green.

Potofsky said the CIO is giving "full support" to the ICFTU in its campaign to "spread our way of life throughout the world."

"Labor must do all it can to establish peace, prosperity and democracy everywhere," he said.

Green pointed out that the AFL and CIO had worked closely with each other in helping establish ICFTU.

Commies Make False Anti-Semitism Charge

Party-Liners, Who Last Year Tried To Picture Philip Murray As Klansman And Fascist, Trot Out Another Lie

By ALLAN L. SWIM

THE COMMIES really scraped the bottom of the gutter in the latest campaign they've cooked up in an effort to discredit the CIO.

What they've done, however, isn't surprising in the light of their previous behavior.

Last year they attempted to picture CIO Pres. Philip Murray as a Ku Klux Klansman, an exploiter of Negroes and as a fascist.

Previously they had termed him a "warmonger."

It was to be expected that the party-liners would eventually get around to accusing Murray and the CIO of anti-Semitism—and so they have.

The Daily Worker has called on Murray to "repudiate" the "anti-Semitic" cartoons which have been carried in the CIO News and the IUE-CIO News.

The implication is that if he doesn't "repudiate" them he will be guilty of anti-Semitism.

The Commies know, of course, that the issue they're trying to raise is a completely phony one.

They know that the CIO hasn't deviated one iota from its firm and well known position of strong opposition to anti-Semitism.

They know that the CIO News has consistently fought against racial prejudice of all types and has not carried any anti-Semitic cartoons.

They know that James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer and IUE administrative chairman, has a long record of fighting racial intolerance.

And they know that the CIO in its own employment practices has never discriminated against Jews.

But that doesn't seem to bother them.

Long ago they set out to smear the CIO and they wouldn't let a "little" thing like lying bother them.

PERHAPS THE latest underhanded attack by the Commies shouldn't be dignified by a reply—but if a reply wasn't forthcoming the party-liners would soon be yelling:

"CIO Refuses to Deny Charge of Anti-Semitism."

That's the way they do their dirty work.

So here's a bit of documentation—just for the record:

Long before I was employed by the CIO I traveled around the country writing stories for a big newspaper chain about organizations which preached and practiced anti-Semitism. The stories strongly condemned such outfits.

Over a period of years I worked closely with the Anti-Defamation League in combatting anti-Semitism.

And the editor of the IUE-CIO News (who, incidentally is married to a Jewish girl) has a long record of openly battling racial and religious prejudice.

LeBARON COAKLEY, who draws the "Coak" cartoons for the CIO News and the IUE-CIO News, is a man who can speak bluntly when he's angry.

And he was angry when he heard himself accused of anti-Semitism. He declared:

"Anybody who says I've been creating anti-Semitic cartoons for the CIO News or any other publication is a liar!"

He added that he'd been cartooning for the CIO News for five years and that the Commies hadn't "discovered" his "anti-Semitism" until after he drew some anti-Commie cartoons.

Both Murray and Carey are well known for the work they have done for such organizations as the Jewish Labor Committee and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Murray is now co-chairman of the labor division of the National Christian Committee of the United Jewish Appeal and is a member of the NAACP board.

DESPITE THE facts cited here and many others of similar nature which are known to the Commies, the CP boys decided to embark on their smear campaign.

The official publication of the Communist Party on March 23 ran a Page 1 article which said:

"The Daily Worker yesterday called on Philip Murray, CIO president, to repudiate 'obviously anti-Semitic cartoons' published in the CIO News and the IUE News."

At least one of the unions expelled by the CIO—the Office & Professional Workers—has issued a pamphlet accusing the CIO of anti-Semitism and Jim Crowism.

By now the pattern should be familiar to everybody who has watched the CIO's campaign to rid itself of Communist influences.

It's a simple pattern. The Commies try one type of smear and if it doesn't stick they try another.

And none of them have been sticking!

Outrageous!

The two houses of our Congress last week took actions which might easily make one wonder whether our lawmakers had lost their sense of direction and their appreciation of public needs.

The Senate passed the Kerr natural gas bill, which prohibits regulation of independent gas producers by the Federal Power Commission.

Unless all of the predictions of the experts are wrong, this action will cost consumers millions of dollars over the years to come.

And don't let anybody sell you the idea that independent gas producers are just like the little independent grocers who are having a hard time because of chain competition. Many of them are really "big boys" whose profits run into huge figures.

The House, in a flippant mood and with only a minority of members present, voted to withold ECA funds from Great Britain until partition of Ireland is ended.

Regardless of the merits of partition of Ireland, the move by the House, acting as a committee of the whole, is a stupid one which can do great harm.

The world has been told time and again that the U. S. would not use ECA economic aid to interfere in the internal affairs of nations given help. House members certainly knew this to be true.

Yet they voted to use ECA as a club by which to attempt to beat Britain into taking action on the Irish problem.

It was generally assumed in Washington as this was written that the House would quickly reverse its position—but reversal could come only after much of the world had started questioning our foreign policy and our moral stability.

Things Ain't Always What They Seem Dept.

IT SOMETIMES makes a lot of difference who tells the story and how it's told.

Here's the way Associated Press did it:

BREWTON, Ala., Mar. 24—A southern textile mill is proving one of its favorite economic theories by employing a force that is nearly 100% Negro.

They work in the Stephens Spinning Mills in this deep south Alabama town, and their standard of work is regarded as the equal of that in any mill.

Stephens Spinners is a branch of the Bonita Ribbon Mills, which also operates plants in Allentown and Stroudsburg, Pa., and New York City. The Negro labor policy is part of the "new South" formula of Bonita's owner, Horace Levy.

"The sooner we find a way to put the Negro to work in our factories, the better off the South will be," says the middle-aged industrialist who came here from Stroudsburg 11 years ago.

"There's a definite place for these people and we've got to help them. Besides they do a whale of a good job.

"They're 50% of our buying power down here. We've got to give them something to buy with."

And here's the story of the plant and its owners as told by the CIO Textile Workers Union.

Back in 1946, TWUA began an organization drive at the company's mill in Brewton. The company raised racial issues during the campaign and fought the union bitterly. The union won an NLRB election but while contract negotiations were going on, the workers were given a 10c an hour raise, plus a 2c shift premium, without consultation with the union. The first contract was finally signed when NLRB charges TWUA had filed were withdrawn. (The mill paid a minimum wage of 40c an hour before the raise.)

Six months later when the first contract expired the company refused to pay the 10% increase the union had won throughout the South. It also refused to grant union security or the checkoff and insisted on a "no strike" clause which would make the union liable for any work stoppage.

TWUA offered to arbitrate the differences but the company refused. A strike vote was taken and the strike itself began April 28, 1947. The company brought in strikebreakers, state and local police, and got an anti-picketing injunction. The walkout ended when all but 40 of the strikers returned to work.

In Nov., 1949, a decertification election was held and the union was voted out.

The Associated Press article gives a Brewton farmer and businessman, E. V. Lovelace, who is also president of the town's Chamber of Commerce, partial credit for development of the "Stephens Negro project."

John Papson, superintendent of the mill, says the production rate is "above average" and that the company plans to move its Pennsylvania plants south.

Asked what kind of workers the Negro women were, Papson is reported to have replied:

"Once they're trained, they're as good as there are anywhere . . . they like the work too, and it's hard to get them to take time off."

"Before the Federal minimum wage went up to 75c an hour," Papson said, "the women averaged 48c an hour—with plenty of overtime. Now they make an average of $28 a week, more than many of them used to make in a month on the farm and as cooks in white people's homes."

What he neglected to say was that the average textile worker in Alabama—union and non-union lumped together—earns an average of $1.13 an hour, or $42.50 for a 40-hour week.

Harold Laski Dies; Labor Party Leader

Harold Laski, one of the principal architects of the British Labor Party's rise to power, is dead at 56.

Laski took top honors at Oxford, taught at McGill Univ., Montreal; Harvard, Amherst and Yale. He returned to England in 1920 and made a reputation as Socialist teacher at London Univ. He became a member of the British Labor Party's executive committee in 1936; served briefly as Clement Attlee's advisor during World War II, and was chairman of the British Labor Party in 1945-46.

The CIO News
Congress of Industrial Organizations
Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer
Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.
Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director
Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher
Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love
Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.
Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28 1925.
Vol. XIII April 3, 1950 No. 14

It All Happened Because He Got Sick

IT'S OFTEN SAID that "good trade unionists are born—not made," and some people think it may be true.

But occasionally you come across a story which refutes this contention—a story like this one, in which some germs changed a man's life.

The man really didn't know the direction in which he was heading and he was just about as surprised as anybody by where he finally ended up.

THIS MAN, whom we shall call George, joined the union when his local shop was organized, but for a while he was more of a dues-payer than a unionist.

Then gradually, he became interested in union work—but not too interested.

George got sick one day—the day on which his local union met and elected delegates to the annual convention of his international.

George wasn't interested in attending the convention but he wasn't on hand to object when he was nominated and elected an alternate.

He still didn't think much about the convention until a few days before it was scheduled to open. Then the delegate got sick and George attended.

THE CONVENTION was a hectic one and there was much battling over efforts of the Commies to retain their control over the union, which they had dominated almost since its founding.

George went back home convinced that the Commies should be kicked out on their ears and that this couldn't be accomplished without a lot of work.

So George began working. He became a leader of his local union. He was elected a delegate to the next convention.

GEORGE WAS in there pitching for all he was worth during the convention at which the Commies were defeated.

He agreed to run for office and was elected an international executive board member.

He hadn't intended to do any of these things when he joined the CIO, he told himself, but he liked what he had been doing.

He'd do a bit more work for the union, he figured, and then he'd "retire." After all, he had a reasonably good job for which years of experience qualified him.

And, furthermore, he'd made his contribution to the union movement, hadn't he?

Yes, just a bit more union work and he would go back to the old grind.

AT THE TIME George was "arguing with himself" the CIO organizational department was looking for a representative in George's region.

His record was checked and found to be good. He was contacted, told about the job and asked to take it.

And almost before he realized it he was a CIO sub-regional director.

That happened a number of years ago and George is still on the job. He's found that his earlier training served him well, that the battles against the Commies in his own union taught him many lessons from which he profited later.

But don't tell George that he's a "born" trade unionist.

"Chances are 100 to one I'd still be working at my old job today if I hadn't had the good luck to get sick when I did," he said. "Germs are sometimes pretty potent, you know."

A.L.S.

Ray Becker, Centralia Labor Martyr, Dies in Portland

HE HAD spent more than 18 years of his life behind prison bars, this martyr to the cause of labor now lying in his coffin. Trade unionists, both CIO and AFL, paid him final honor as his body lay in state in a funeral parlor in Portland, Ore. Some placed wreaths on the coffin.

The International Woodworkers of America, CIO, presented red roses. Carl Winn, the union's secretary-treasurer, leaned over and pinned an IWA-CIO button on the coat of the lapel of the still figure in the coffin.

Ray Becker, a leading figure in one of America's most terrible labor cases, died last month. The story of the Armistice Day riot in Centralia, Wash., in 1919 and the ensuing trial that sent Becker and seven others to prison, all under sentences of 25 to 40 years, was front page news in the nation's press some 30 years ago.

To thousands of woodworkers, however, his death brought echoes of one of the most bitter of the battles waged in behalf of loggers and mill workers in the early attempts to organize the workers for better wages, hours and working conditions, reports the CIO Woodworkers weekly paper.

Oldtimers in the IWA recall that Ray Becker, "the Tom Mooney of the Northwest," was one of the eight members of the IWW (Industrial Workers of the World) convicted of murder as a result of the Armistice Day attack on the IWW hall at Centralia during the wave of anti-labor hysteria that followed World War I, states the IWA paper.

"THE IWW, known as the Wobblies, was the only organization actively opposing the old 4L (Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen), a set-up sponsored by the government during the war as a company-union counter to the efforts of the workers to force an improvement in their wages and working conditions," the story continued.

"In Centralia, then a center of logging activity, the IWW hall was attacked and gutted by fire less than two months before that Armistice Day in 1919. Seeking protection of the law, IWW members were told by their attorney that they had a constitutional right to protect their property.

"A new hall was acquired on Tower street and when it was learned that another attack was planned against the IWW hall, preparations were made to defend it.

"According to the oldtimers who were in the city at that time, a group of those participating in the parade sponsored by the American Legion broke ranks and headed for the IWW hall. The riot that ensued resulted in the death of five persons and the lynching of another, an IWW member."

Westley Everest, union logger and former serviceman, was captured by a mob after the raid on the union hall. He was beaten, castrated and hanged from a bridge trestle.

Ralph Chaplin, then a member of the IWW and a reporter at the trial, in his book "Wobbly," says there were 10 defendants at the trial, two of whom were acquitted, an old man named Mike Sheehan and Elmer Smith, IWW attorney. A third, Loren Roberts, was declared insane.

THE others were found guilty of second-degree murder and sentenced to 25 to 40 years each at Walla Walla prison. As the years passed and the bitterness died down, the prisoners were eventually paroled—all except one who died in prison, and Ray Becker, who refused to apply for a parole or accept one when it was offered.

Becker maintained to the bitter end that he had been unjustly convicted and that he would not accept a parole because he was innocent. Finally toward the end of 1939 his sentence was commuted to the time served and he was released.

After lying in state in Portland, Ore., where he had lived and died, Ray Becker's body was sent for burial to Chicago.

H. R.

Survey Confirms The Obvious

Business Week says management "might do some pondering" over the results of a test on supervisory practices conducted by an outfit called the Purdue Research Foundation.

The test, "a carefully devised and scored examination of human relations attitudes," was given to large groups of supervisory personnel, and the results graded according to whether the answers showed understanding of sound psychology.

A while back, a couple of the researchers thought it might be interesting to ask a group of labor leaders the same questions.

They picked 100 union officers at random, and gave them the same set of questions. (Sample questions: Do you think it is right to post the names of the workers with the worst production records each week? Do you think most employes will do better work when constantly watched by their supervisors?)

The results: the union leaders showed greater understanding of the psychologically best supervisory methods.

The scores were "not related to degree of formal education, position in the labor hierarchy, number of people represented in past and present union jobs, or supervisory experience in industry."

Committee Makes Second Report:

Hitler Technique Used On Jews Behind Iron Curtain

THE NATIONAL executive committee of the Jewish Labor Committee heard a grim story about what's going on in Europe at its meeting a couple of week ago.

It struck a reminiscent note for many of the members. And well it might, for they were hearing it for the second time. The first time, a decade or so ago, it was about the unspeakable brutality with which the Nazis were treating the Jews in Germany. This time it was about the unspeakable brutality with which the self-styled friends of the common man, the Communists, are treating the Jews in Russia and the other countries behind the iron curtain.

The report is a moving document—unemotional, matter-of-fact, even dull in the damning simplicity with which it describes how the Hitler techniques are being applied by the Russians and their satellites.

It is the second report that has been made to the Jewish Labor Committee executive board. The first was given a year ago, when "we pointed out that liquidation threatened the Jewish communities in all the countries dominated by Soviet power."

Summation

What happened in the last year? Let the report sum it up:

"Our conclusion is: While for most of the people living under the Soviet regime that reign means impoverishment, slavery and moral degradation, for the Jews and the Jewish groups it spells thorough spiritual annihilation as well. The national liquidation of the Jewish population in Communist-dominated countries is now proceeding with an iron hand."

The national strength of Jewry in Russia now is about two million persons, compared to 5.3 million in 1939 (including the Baltic republics, Eastern Poland and Bessarabia). That means about 3.3 million Jews exterminated by Nazis or Reds, dead in Siberia or liquidated in concentration camps under one flag or another.

The campaign to exterminate Jewish national cultural life was launched in September, 1948, by Ilya Ehrenburg, himself a Jew, in the Moscow newspaper, Pravda.

Since then party apologists have proclaimed that the aims of Jewish nationalism and Zionism are the same as those of "reactionary capitalism and American imperialism."

In November, 1948, Einikeit, the only Yiddish newspaper published in Russia, was liquidated. During 1949 "almost all Yiddish literary figures, even though they were members of the Communist party," vanished.

Inquiries as to their whereabouts at the Soviet embassy in Washington "have met a stone wall of silence," the report says. The Yiddish literary almanac, The Star, was closed because it "cultivated Jewish national consciousness."

The Soviet undertook to end "cosmopolitanism" in Russian life. About two-thirds of its alleged followers who were liquidated were Jews—in every category from scientist to sports writer.

"The Communist line," said the report, "was that Jews are landless, stateless and are not an integral part of Russia and her people, and that they are devoted to abstract Jewish nationalism, which is basically Jewish chauvinism. 'Cosmopolitanism,' which was largely identified with Jewish national culture, was harshly castigated.

"In particular, Jewish literary figures were pictured as lifeless corpses, renegades, men wearing traitors' masks and were accused of playing up the 'cosmopolitan idea of the existence of a worldwide Jewish literature and of putting Soviet writers on a par with burned-out businessmen of America and Palestine.'"

Jews were deported to Siberia during the year—from the Ukraine, Eastern Galicia, Bukovina, Bessarabia and the Baltic states, 30,000 from Lemburg alone. Their fate? A state secret.

"In Soviet Russia today," the report stated, "there is not a shred of Jewish cultural life remaining.

"All Jewish institutions and organizations, including the Yiddish press and Jewish publishing houses, have been liquidated. The Russification of the Jewish population has been carried out with an iron hand. All contact between Soviet Jews and Jews in the Western world was destroyed.

"In Russia today, Israel is considered an American-British colony and sympathy for its constructive efforts is ruthlessly suppressed.

"Very few Jews remain in government employ. Needless to say, emigration of Jews from Russia is strictly forbidden and correspondence with relatives abroad is most dangerous. The two million Jews in present day Russia are on the precipice of spiritual annihilation."

The same sickening story is told of other countries behind the iron curtain.

Poland

"Their national cultural life has in 1949 been subjected to a savage liquidation similar in intensity and form to that in Soviet Russia. . . . We are rapidly approaching the complete liquidation of the Jewish community in Poland," the report shows.

All Jewish economic institutions were taken over by the government in 1949. The Central Committee of Polish Jews, which included all Jewish groups, was converted into a Communist institution. The Jewish Central Committee, still formally alive, has been taken over and "has become a caricature of its former self." District committes were dissolved.

All Jewish political organizations were liquidated and their members forced into the Jewish section of the Communist Party. Foreign relief efforts were declared illegal.

Yiddish schools were declared illegal and were taken over by the government. A few Jewish papers are still allowed to print, and the remaining libraries, cultural clubs and orchestras expect to be destroyed at any time.

Emigration to Israel is officially permitted, but those who would leave are so intimidated that only a handful have been able to go.

"Insecurity, loneliness, homelessness and forced assimilation are the lot of the Jews who are compelled to remain under Soviet Communist domination in Poland today," this section of the report concluded.

Roumania

"Jewish communal life in Roumania is on the brink of physical and material extinction," the report said.

Roumania has more Jews—350,000—than any European country except Russia. Barred from employment unless they are party members, "80% of them are not self-sustaining."

Non-Communist Jewish communal leaders have been virtually wiped out in the last year. The American Joint Distribution Committee and other relief organizations have been forced to cease operations and their property has been turned over to the Communist-controlled and misnamed Federation of Religious Communities.

In April, 1949, 256 charitable institutions, including orphanages and hospitals, were liquidated. At the beginning of the year 3000 Jews were in jail in Bukovina province. By the end of the year the figure had risen to 11,000. Between June, 1948, and August, 1949, the Jews' 69 elementary schools and 23 high schools were taken over by the government. Opposition to liquidation of the Jewish language in the schools was penalized as "an act of sabotage against the state," the report said.

Jewish Communists overnight were installed as religious leaders and promptly launched anti-religious campaigns. Immigration is prohibited.

"Today . . . we witness the complete national cultural destruction as well as the physical impoverishment of Hungarian Jewry," the executive committee was told.

The wealth of Hungarian Jews amounted to about $1.5 billion before the war. Now it is all gone—confiscated by the Communists. Jews have been fired from government jobs and ousted from positions in the Communist Party.

The "gold train," a load of loot taken from the country by the Horthy government during the last days of the war and seized by U. S. authorities in Germany, was discovered to be mostly stolen from Hungarian Jews—but the Communist government claimed and got it.

As in Russia, Roumania and Poland, Jewish schools were nationalized in 1949 and the teaching of Hebrew was outlawed. Jewish pupils are forced to go to school on Saturday, and the government ordered all Jewish business establishments to remain open on that day, the traditional day of worship. Political spies and informers attend all Jewish religious and other ceremonies.

The Zionist organization was officially disbanded at the beginning of 1949, and the 60,000 Jews who had registered for emigration to Israel were barred from leaving.

"The Jewish population in Czechoslovakia is in agony, as their hopes for survival in their country of origin have been shattered. They are rapidly dying behind the bars of the Iron Curtain," the report said.

Czechoslovakia had 360,000 Jews before the war. Only 55,000 remained after VE-Day. Last September their number had been cut down to between 18,000 and 20,000.

"All hopes for restoration of their former possessions have been dissolved," according to the report. "Nationalization deprived the Jews of their former means of livelihood. Anti-Semitic excesses are not a rarity."

Zionist groups have been liquidated in the last year, their leaders jailed. The government backed out of an agreement to permit 20,000 Jews to emigrate to Israel, and only a handful succeeded in leaving the country. The government also has ceased the practice of issuing transit visas for Jewish refugees from Roumania.

28 Are Arrested At Jewish Wedding

Jewish religious life has been virtually driven underground in Roumania, according to the report on conditions behind the iron curtain made to the Jewish Labor Committee executive committee.

"In order to abolish Jewish religious life," the report said, "these institutions (Yiddish and Hebrew language schools) were turned over to Jewish Communists who overnight became religious leaders.

"The conduct of religious rituals was punished severely and Communist dogma took their place. In one instance, 28 Jews were arrested at a Jewish wedding because they sang Hatikvah, the Jewish national anthem.

"Under the leadership of a Communist, Marcelle Fisher, a Jewish organization to fight religious customs and ritual was organized. Young Jewish Communists were given instructions to invade synagogues and force the people to join them in singing the Roumanian national anthem."

Cost of Peace Low Compared to War

War is more costly than peace, CIO Legislative Dir. Nathan Cowan reminded Congress last week.

Cowan was hitting GOP isolationist plans to cut spnding for the Point Four Program to aid backward areas of the world.

Total cost of World War II, he noted, has been estimated at $1,300,000,000,000—one-and-a-third trillion bucks. That's $41 million an hour.

Cost of Point Four for next year would be equal of cost of war for about an hour and 10 minutes. Cowan thought peaceful economic programs deserve that much, at least.

CIO Seeks End Of Segregation In Oklahoma Univ.

THE CIO last week hopped into the middle of a major legal fight against state-enforced segregation of Negoes.

In the U. S. Supreme Court the CIO filed a "friend of the court" brief backing up G. W. McLaurin in his fight to put an end to segregation practices at the Univ. of Oklahoma Law School.

The university, having lost a fight to bar Negroes from the school, instituted a strict segregation set-up. McLaurin was forced to sit in a special section of the classroom, eat in a corner of the cafeteria, use a special desk at the law school library.

McLaurin protested in the courts that this scheme was in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution. The CIO brief was filed in support of his case, which comes up before the nation's highest court this week.

Two other important discrimination cases are due to come up at the same time. One of the cases is Henderson vs. U. S., which challenges the right of Southern railroads to set up segregated dining car services for Negroes.

The Interstate Commerce Commission had approved the railroads' policy, but U. S. Solicitor General Philip Perlman—who represents Uncle Sam in arguments before the Supreme Court—has agreed with Henderson and opposed the ICC position.

THE OTHER case is Sweatt vs. Painter which involves the refusal of the Univ. of Texas Law School to admit a qualified Negro as a student. The CIO was barred from filing a friend-of-the-court brief in that state by the objections of the Texas attorney general.

The CIO brief in the McLaurin case was filed by General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg.

G. W. McLAURIN

. . . The CIO goes to his aid

"The question is only whether a state may require segregation for the sake of segregation, nothing more," Goldberg said in his McLaurin argument.

The Oklahoma Univ. rule, he charged, "is not to permit them (the students) to practice segregation but to require them to do so."

OBJECTIVE of this type of regulation, the CIO added, is not to preserve public order—since there had been no evidence of disturbances or threats.

"The purpose and intent . . . whatever may be the justification offered, is to stamp the Negro as inferior and to require, in the field of higher education, the preservation and maintenance of the policy of 'white supremacy'.

"The issue which the Court must decide is whether such regulations meet the requirements of the Fourteenth Amendment that no state shall deny to its citizens 'the equal protection of the laws.' Once the issue is clearly seen, we submit that only a negative answer is possible."

The issue in the case, Goldberg's statement added, can be confused only by use of the "false assumption" of Negro inferiority and of the belief that no white persons ever want to associate with Negroes.

"The assumption is false," the CIO brief said. "The CIO is living proof that it is false. And, apart from matters of proof, certainly such an assumption . . . has no place in our constitutional doctrine.

"The Court should hold that such compulsory segregation is, per se, unconstitutional because it deprives both whites and Negroes of freedom of choice because of color, and nothing else."

Integration Of Negroes in AF Goes Well

THE first survey conducted by Pres. Truman's Committee on Equality and Opportunity in the Armed Forces indicates that integration of Negroes and whites is "working well and without friction" in the Air Force.

The Air Force last May established a new racial policy which called for the breaking up of most segregated units and complete equality of assignment and training on an integrated basis.

E. W. Kenworthy, executive secretary of the President's committee, recently reported after a tour of major Air Force bases that 71% of the Negroes in the Air Force are "now living and working in integrated conditions."

"Almost without exception," his report states, "commanding officers stated frankly that, although they had recognized the merits of the new racial policy when it was announced, they had been apprehensive.

"Without any exception, they added that their fears had been completely groundless and that they were amazed at the ease with which the new policy had been effected and the absence of trouble."

Kenworthy said he views this "quiet social revolution" inside the armed forces as influencing racial relations throughout the Nation.

Fields inspected were: Bolling Air Force Base, Va.; Maxwell Base, Biloxi, Miss.; Lackland Base, San Antonio, Tex.; Davis-Monthan Base, Tucson, Ariz., and Williams Base, St. Louis, Mo.

Only at Maxwell was there still a segregated squadron.

N. Y. City, CIO, AFL and U.S. Move Against Puerto Rican Exploitation

THE BRAVE new world that teeming Puerto Rican thousands sought to find in New York City is in sight at last.

Maybe not the same bright one these job-hungry American citizens had in mind when they left their overcrowded island home, but certainly a better one than they have found so far, with its grinding poverty, its squalor and its exploitation by employers and politicians.

The joint committee established recently by the New York City CIO Council and the AFL Central Trades and Labor Council suggested about 10 days ago to Mayor William O'Dwyer that something be done to integrate these Spanish-speaking Americans into mainland social and economic life, to give them some sort of a future to look forward to and to halt the increasing exploitation that was beginning to look like a threat to the established standards of the recognized unions in a dozen or more fields.

O'Dwyer summoned the 12 committee members to City Hall. He got in representatives of the Puerto Rico government in New York and the whole matter was thrashed out. The mayor told them to go to it—with his blessing. He added that the protection of existing labor standards demanded unionization of the Puerto Ricans.

THE FIRST "working" meeting of the committee will be held this week. CIO members are Morris Iushewitz, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Council and co-chairman of the committee with James C. Quinn, secretary-treasurer of the AFL central body; Val Fernandez, of the National Maritime Union; Dr. Ernst Schwarz, executive secretary of the National CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee; Martin Kyne, executive vice president of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes and also a member of the CIO Latin American group; Alex Bail, secretary-treasurer of the Playthings, Toy and Novelty Workers, and Ellis Van Riper, secretary-treasurer of Local 100, Transport Workers Union.

THE ENTIRE CIO committee of which Schwarz and Kyne are members strongly supports the move to aid the Puerto Ricans.

Some of the things the committee talked about at the meeting in City Hall included assignment of Spanish-speaking organizers to work among Puerto Ricans; classes in English, Spanish and labor problems; the spotting of wage-hour law violations; aid in obtaining housing—one of the most pressing problems—and a problem referral service.

Puerto Ricans have been more cruelly exploited by violators of the wage-hour law than any other group in New York, committee members said. They have been intimidated until they were afraid to complain, they don't speak English, they are reluctant to talk when approached by wage-hour inspectors and often deliberately avoid giving their proper addresses so they can be interviewed after working hours.

Arthur J. White, Wage-Hour Division regional director, said the evdence turned up so far indicates that violations among employer hiring Puerto Ricans may be widespread. Large numbers of the islanders are employed in the apparel trades, the maritime industry, steelworking, in hotels and restaurants, service trades, metal polishing, etc. An investigation of every shop employing them is under way.

White has arranged for 5000 wage-hour posters in Spanish—which the language newspaper La Prensa has translated as a public service and is printing—which will be placed in shops employing Puerto Ricans. He and Manuel Cabranes, New York director of the Puerto Rican employment and immigration service, arranged for short spot broadcasts in Spanish describing the law and telling where complaints may be filed, on five radio stations having large Puerto Rican audiences. Since they started, said White, the wage-hour office has been deluged with complaints.

THE DIVISION also is preparing a Spanish translation of the act itself and a digest, primarily for distribution in Puerto Rico. Thousands of them will be distributed in the New York City area also.

"What we're going to try to do," said Iushewitz, "is just part of the growing realization by labor that we can't live by and for ourselves alone, that when a group like this is affected it affects us all.

"We aim to make these people conscious of the fact that the United States is their country, too, and that the country and the labor movement want to help them."

Injunction Asked Against BowlingGroup

NATHANIEL L. GOLDSTEIN, New York State attorney general, has applied to the State Supreme Court, for a temporary injunction against the American Bowling Congress pending trial of a suit to determine whether ABC should be barred permanently from sponsoring tournaments in the state.

The Supreme Court is a lower court in New York state. This motion for an immediate restraining order will be argued Apr. 6.

In his original suit filed in January, the prosecutor pointed out that ABC limited its membership to "white males." He said this restriction was contrary to the public policy of the state.

Shortly after the state's action was started, ABC made a motion in State Supreme Court that the attorney general amend his complaint so that each cause of action would be listed separately. On March 13, the request was denied by Justice Samuel H. Hofstadter. Goldstein said, however, he had been notified that the court's decision would be taken to the Appelate Division.

In Illinois, the CIO has instituted proceedings to revoke the state ABC charter for its discriminatory and monopolistic practices. At the CIO convention last year a resolution was passed urging all CIO Councils and international unions to discourage participation of their members in ABC leagues and tournaments.

Other liberal organizations which have condemned ABC include Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Anti-Defamation League, American Veterans Committee and the Natl. Committee for Fair Play in Bowling.

Auto Workers, Budd Reach Pension Pact

Agreement between the CIO Auto Workers and the Edward G. Budd Co.'s Hunting Park plant in Philadelphia on a company-financed pension plan which follows the pattern set in other companies was announced March 23.

The pension plan, plus an insurance program agreed upon last December, will cost the company 10 cents per hour. Covered are about 7000 employes. The agreement provides pensions of $68 for employes 65 years old with 25 years of service, guaranteeing at least $100 per month with social security benefits.

CP Tries Reviving Moribund CTAL

The moribund Latin-American Labor Confederation (CTAL) was undergoing resurrection last week in Montevideo, Uruguay, with the Communists trying to nurse it back to the health it once enjoyed.

It held a "Southern Labor Conference," with Communists pulling the strings, at just the right time to sound off against ratification of a proposed U. S.-Uruguay trade agreement and to edge into a Uruguayan wool strike.

Delegates were present from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Mexico and Paraguay as well as Uruguay, most of them from dissident minority factions of the labor movements of their respective countries. Pres. Vicente Lombardo Toledano of Mexico, who was elected the last time the confederation was heard from in 1944, presided. He did not identify himself openly with the Communists, but was welcomed by Uruguayan Communists—and apparently no one else.

Detroit Housing Foes Won't Admit Racial Bias

DETROIT'S newly elected Republican mayor, Albert J. Cobo, on March 28 personally denied permission to the $450 million Schoolcraft Gardens cooperative to proceed with its plans for building a multiple-dwelling housing project for 450 families.

Cobo vetoed a Detroit Common Council motion approving the Schoolcraft building plans, and thus effectively denied it a building permit. The council, meeting that same night, upheld the veto 5 to 3.

The co-op plans to fight back by erecting single-family dwellings instead of the community it had planned, figuring that by this maneuver it will avoid another defeat at the hands of the city government. Permits for single-family dwellings are issued as a "routine matter," according to a Schoolcraft spokesman.

The project is supported by all of organized labor in Detroit, and the CIO Auto Workers have been particularly active in it. Some 54 members have made down payments totaling $40,000. The project in its original form was called "ideal" by the City Planning Commission. It has been financed by local banks, with a mortgage guarantee by the Federal government.

BACK OF Cobo's veto lies an ugly fight with clear racial overtones. The fight is not over yet. Three factors were involved.

- Schoolcraft, a co-op formed over three years ago, states in its by-laws that nobody will be refused membership because of race, creed, or color.
- The building site is in Detroit's northwest section, which teems with race prejuidce.
- The real estate interests in Detroit were well aware that if the non-profit Schoolcraft project were completed, tenants throughout the city would clearly see that high-caliber housing was a possibility at lower prices.

These were the three factors everyone admitted were in the picture, though only the hardiest would venture openly to make a direct connection between them.

Nobody flatly accused the real estate interests of stirring up racial prejudice against the co-op, nor did anyone admit that racial prejudice was the real reason for a series of attempts to get the Common Council to kill the project on other grounds.

THE AREA until 1948 was zoned for single-family dwellings. In 1948, the Common Council, on the motion of a Schoolcraft supporter, re-zoned the area to allow multiple dwellings. This was the first necessary step toward securing adequate financial backing for the project, which in turn was necessary before a building permit could be issued.

For two full years, the Schoolcraft co-operators wrangled with banks and government agencies, finally securing a commitment from the Federal Housing Administration that it would guarantee repayment of whatever loans Schoolcraft could secure from the banks. The loans then went through. Came time for the building permit to be secured.

At this point a property owners' association, the Tel-Craft Civic Association, suddenly petitioned the Common Council to have the area re-zoned back to single-family dwellings. At an open hearing March 10, Tel-Craft spokesmen made all sorts of allegations; they claimed that the co-op would devalue their own single dwellings, that the schools would be overcrowded, and that the Council had not given them enough notice when it issued the 1948 rezoning order.

Hundreds of civic leaders jammed the hearing, including spokesmen for the City Planning Commission, which had unanimously approved the co-op plans. Every argument was met. The Council records showed that it had complied with every legal requirement before it zoned the area for multiple dwellings. The motion to re-zone was lost, by an extremely small margin.

THE SCHOOLCRAFT co-operators then, by another close vote, secured Council approval of the building plans. The property owners' group thereupon asked Cobo to veto the Council motion. He complied, on the grounds that building permits should not be granted over the objections of the majority of the residents in the area.

This was a clear break in precedent. In similar instances, none of them involving a non-segregated building plan, the guiding principle had been that, while the wishes of the residents in the area should be taken into account, they should not be the determining factor.

Cobo's low-cost housing plan, which involves the rejection of all federal aid in favor of turning over city funds to private builders for slum clearance purposes, has involved just this principle. The plan, violently opposed by CIO Auto Workers and other Detroit unions, leaves no place for the slum dwellers to go, and has been undertaken over their objections.

Tel-Craft, while all this was going on, secured a temporary court order enjoining the co-op from doing any building whatsoever, on the grounds that to do so would violate the zoning ordinance. The court hearing has not yet been held. By the time it is, Schoolcraft expects to be ready with its new plans, which sponsors say cannot conceivably violate any zoning ordinance.

THIS is the factual, recorded background of the Schoolcraft fight. But behind the scenes is mounting racial tension.

A member of the city Building Commission was fired for openly accusing the city of following a clear pattern of racial discrimination; a local "hate sheet," published by Floyd McGriff, has been smearing Schoolcraft for its biracial policies; a Detroit Communist paper suddenly blared that four Negro families would move into the first completed Schoolcraft project.

The Tel-Craft spokesmen denied that race had any thing to do with the question but were forced to admit that they had no objection to the project until its biracial policy was played up in the press.

Victor Reuther, UAW educational director, a Schoolcraft member, was one of the men who brought the race issue onto the Common Council record, when he stated at the March 10 hearing that the re-zoning fight was not the real question, but was a "subterfuge" covering racial discrimination.

Co-op members interviewing area residents in their homes heard off-the-record criticism of the non-segregation policy, and a local clergyman, the Rev. Paul Musselman, director of Christian and social relations for the Episcopal Diocese, told the Council that his parishioners had reported the spreading of rumors that Schoolcraft was an all-Negro project, that it was "slum housing," that it was a Communist project, and that it was tax-free.

WASHINGTON Flash

INITIAL HERE

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF HOME BUILDERS OF THE UNITED STATES

From 1028 Connecticut Ave. N.W., Suite 1116, Washington 6, D.C. -- Headquarters --

Important!

WELL DONE! — COOPERATIVE HOUSING HAS BEEN DEFEATED IN THIS SESSION OF CONGRESS, THANKS TO THE FINE WORK YOU HAVE DONE IN THE FIELD. The next important phase of the job must be done within 48 hours after you receive this. Joint Conference Committee may start meeting Tuesday or Wednesday to resolve differences between House and Senate versions of the bill. The private enterprise provisions of the bill will be made workable or unworkable — according to decisions of this 12 man committee (names attached).

IMPORTANT YOU AND YOUR MEN WIRE, or better still, TELEPHONE MEMBERS OF CONFERENCE COMMITTEE, urging them to accept the provisions of the House bill — (in accordance with official NAHB policy). Also talk to your own Representative and ask him to contact Conferees. See outline attached for details.

Bill Atkinson

W. P. "Bill" Atkinson
Chairman
NAHB Legislative Committee

INSTRUCTIONS to the Congress they control. Here is a copy of the message sent by one segment of the real estate lobby to its field workers, telling them to make sure the House-Senate conferees on the housing bill don't accidentally give the public a break. Attached was a list of specific points on which the lobbyists were to tell the conferees to insist. House and Senate versions of the bill differ slightly. (See story at bottom left of this page.)

Realty Lobby Tries Hurting Housing Measure Further

HOUSE-Senate conferences will try this week to reconcile the conflicting versions of the "middle-income" housing bill passed by the House and Senate, under heavy pressure from the never-satisfied real estate lobby to grab off a little more.

The conferees will not have before them the only Fair Deal section of the bill as originally presented to Congress, since the two Houses knocked out the proposal which would have made it possible for the government to put debentures on the market and, with the proceeds, make long-term, low-interest loans to co-ops.

The co-op section was knocked out as "inflationary and socialistic"; Congress then, in differing forms, passed a bill giving direct hand-outs to the real estate speculators and mortgage bankers.

A few of the items at stake in the conference are:

1 A House proposal, not in the Senate bill, to add $750,000,000 to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's mortgage - buying powers. RFC has already bought billions of dollars worth of first mortgages under this plan, which is a direct encouragement to the construction of low-quality, high-priced housing with the government taking all the risk.

2 A House proposal which would, in effect, increase the price of "low-cost" government-insured houses by $1000 without requiring any improvement in quality. This is not in the Senate bill.

3 A House proposal to let builders of rental apartments have another month in which to get Federal mortgage insurance for "emergency" type, minimum-standard construction. Both Houses would kill this off, but the Senate would make the action effective a month earlier than the House.

4 A House proposal to let real estate speculators have six months in which to buy up "war housing" before turning it over to public housing authorities as provided in the Senate bill.

5 A Senate proposal which would make it somewhat easier for co-ops to secure Federal mortgage insurance.

Quebec Catholics Told To Join Unions

Catholics in the Province of Quebec, Can., have been urged to join labor unions by the provincial hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church. The province is predominantly Catholic.

In pastoral letter calling labor unions "indispensable," 25 bishops and archbishops also advocated welfare legislation as a means of halting communism.

The letter said that workers with full stomachs are not likely to turn to leftist ideologies for salvation. The workers must also unite their efforts and their resources in cooperative organizations for their economic prosperity and their social advancement.

Registration Closed For Ohio Primaries

The Cio News in its March 27 issue inadvertently gave Ohio voters 12 extra days in which to register for the May 2 primaries.

Registration closed on March 22, not on April 3 as reported. The booths re-open again on May 12, for the general elections.

New York State To Take Over Rent Control May 1

NEW YORK state takes over rent controls from the federal government on May 1 for one year, under a law sponsored by the state Republicans and signed by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey March 29.

The hotly contested statute, which passed the state Senate with a one-vote margin, applies to all structures now under federal rent control. It would freeze rents at the level being paid March 1 and throw out of court all landlords' suits growing out of confusion between the federal statute and a New York City ordinance.

Rent increases may be granted after Dec. 1, 1950 by a newly established Rent Commission, but only in instances where landlords can prove actual loss or severe hardship. Any area within the state may be decontrolled or recontrolled by the commission. Evictions, with one important exception, are controlled by the commission.

TWO points in the law severely criticized by the state Democrats and by labor are (1) its failure to control any units built since Feb. 1, 1947, and (2) its "loophole" provision that landlords may get evictions directly from the courts in instances where the eviction is sought for a series of reasons not connected with the housing shortage.

Adoption of the N. Y. law eases the pressure on the federal rent control office, which suffered a severe budget cut recently. The federal law expires June 30.

CIO Testifies Against NLRB Counsel Post

THE CIO was on record before a Congressional committee last week in support of Pres. Truman's plan to eliminate the post of independent general counsel of the Natl. Labor Relations Board and to concentrate the authority of the office in the board itself.

Arthur J. Goldberg, CIO general counsel, told the House Committee on Expenditures that supporters of the Taft-Hartley Act were using a commonplace trick when they framed the powers of the NLRB general counsel. The enemies of social legislation, he reminded the committee, always attack laws like the original Wagner act by trying to weaken their administration.

"Whether the field be rent control, housing, communications, power or farm benefits," he said, "we find that the attack upon the administrative process is the handmaiden of the attack upon the substantive features of the particular legislation involved."

Truman's proposal was made in accordance with a recommendation by the Hoover Commission on Reorganization. It becomes law 60 days after Mar. 13, when it was sent to Congress, unless a majority of the full membership of either House or Senate rejects it.

Goldberg emphasized that CIO support of this phase of the reorganization plan "is grounded on sound principles of government administration and not on its estimate of the personage chosen to fill" the office. The incumbent is Robert N. Denham, whose removal the CIO has asked.

Goldberg cited the dual administrative system set up by T-H, with responsibility divided between the board and the general counsel, as productive of conflict and confusion and said it makes the act "more oppressive than its literal provisions."

KMPC 'Slant' On News Told

NEWS ABOUT the CIO was purposely slanted to give a bad impression to listeners of Station KMPC, Los Angeles, a federal hearing was told last week.

The Federal Communications Commission is taking testimony on demands that the 50,000-watt station be denied a renewal of its U. S. broadcasting license because of repeated violations of the Communications Act.

Robert L. Horn, a former news department employe of KMPC, gave the story at the hearings in Los Angeles. Horn said that when he went to work at KMPC in April, 1946, he was told never to give favorable mention to the CIO, Negroes, Jews, the Roosevelt family or the New Deal.

The instructions came from G. A. Richards, owner of the station and of other powerful transmitters in Detroit and Cleveland, he said.

Horn said he often read news items from the press association services to Richards. He added:

"If Mr. Richards found fault with any paragraph he would ask me to delete it to show only one side of the news. I would read the edited version on the air."

Similar complaints of slanting of news dispatches have been told to the FCC by Clete Roberts and William Kenneally, also former KMPC newsmen.

WINNER of the YMCA Southwest Region 3 Tournament at Corpus Christi, Tex., is the basketball team of Port Arthur, Tex., Local 23 of the CIO Oil Workers. Earlier the OWIU team won the Port Arthur "Y" League Championship for 1949-50. Should the Local 23 players win the Southwest area tourney at Bryant, Tex., they'll go to the "Y" national championship meet scheduled for San Pedro, Cal. The players are, left to right, front row, Carlos Rojo, Hank Anawaty, Jr., George Sladczyk, Jr., M. T. Knight, Ivan Schwing, Jr., Kyle Elam, Jr.; back row, Lemos L. Allmand, manager; R. D. Golt, Don Tucker, Walter Powell, Wilson W. White, player-coach; Leroy Sonnier, Ovey Babin, assistant coach.

Sniping Stalls Final ECA Vote

THE Marshall Plan program for next year took a pummeling last week in the House—but there's still time to undo the damage.

The House has been considering HR 7378, to authorize expenditures for the Economic Cooperation Administration during the year starting July 1. After the top-limit authorization has been set, Congress then votes the actual funds to keep ECA going.

The bill brought out by the House Foreign Affairs Committee called for approval of nearly $3 billion for the next year of the European Recovery Program.

But the House, by a 165-163 vote (without a rollcall), slashed $250 million from the Administration's request for ECA funds.

Before approving the quarter-billion cut, the House had turned down a proposal by Rep. Smith (R. Wis.) to knock out half a billion from the bill. That "economy" move was licked 152-137.

Administration forces came out a little better, though, when they defeated a GOP farm bloc proposal that one-third of the total ECA expenditures take the form of shipments of government-owned surplus foods. Similar suggestions in past years have been criticized as hobbling ECA with restrictions which cannot help European recovery.

Supporters of the Irish Republic also had their day during the ECA debate, when — with two-thirds of the House absent—they voted 99-66 to deny aid to Britain until the six British-controlled counties of Northern Ireland are turned over to Eire.

The move to end partition of Ireland has wide support (CIO last year passed a convention resolution in its favor), but after the House vote a number of Congressmen pointed out that this form of pressure—in connection with ECA—would not easily help the western European democracies.

It was generally expected that having shown its sympathy for the Irish state, the House would reconsider its decision about ECA funds.

STILL TO be considered are other phases of foreign aid, to Korea and other Far Eastern nations; and authorization for further funds to finance the President's Point Four program for economic and technical aid to backward and under-developed areas.

The Administration has asked a $45 million authorization for Point Four, but some isolationists have said they will seek to trim it down to $15 million.

That announcement — and the $250 million cut in ECA funds—brought an angry blast from Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative director.

Cowan called on the House to reconsider the quarter-billion funds slash, and he described the effort to trim Point Four funds as a "cynical move."

Earlier CIO Pres. Philip Murray, in letters to four House leaders, had urged full support to ECA, which "in two years has held at bay and turned back totalitarian aggression, by helping free people to change their economic and political climate from chaos and desperation to reconstruction and hope."

Talking of the fight against dictatorships, Murray pointed out that "the cost of winning this struggle for human and economic freedom throughout the world may seem large in dollars—but it is small compared to the cost of losing it."

He urged that the ECA debate be removed from the arena of "partisan political" discussion and that ECA funds be considered in the light of American and world needs for stronger democratic governments.

House Unit Hears Lobby Book Author

HEARINGS BY the House Lobby Investigating Committee got off to a flying start last week when the first witness called for a congressional investigation of National Association of Manufacturers' propaganda.

The witness, Stephen Kemp Bailey, a professor at Wesleyan Univ., Middletown, Conn., also proposed legislation requiring members of Congress to disclose their outside incomes.

Bailey outlined for the committee, of which Rep. Buchanan (D. Pa.) is chairman, a book he wrote on lobbying for and against the Full Employment act of 1946. A lot of the lobbying was directed from inside Congress, he said, but the outside lobby was conducted by such organizations as the Natl. Association of Manufacturers, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Frank Gannett's Committee for Constitutional Government and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

"Opinion leaders" in big business and big farming work hand-in-hand, he said, pointing out that the NAM supplies "canned editorials" to 7500 rural weekly newspapers.

Identical editorials against the Full Employment Act appeared in small town dailies and weeklies whose printing "of handouts from the national opinion machines of big business has considerable influence," he said. The source of the editorials was not identified, he added, and in answer to a question from Rep. Brown (R., O.) Bailey said he had found no instances of papers printing identical editorials favoring the measure.

George B. Galloway, of the Legislative Reference Service, testified that the present lobby law is vague and ambiguous, and is without enforcement and administration machinery.

Roger W. Jones, assistant director of the Budget Bureau, maintained that officials in the executive branch of the government have a right to lobby for the legislative program advocated by the President.

Frank H. Weitzel, assistant to the Comptroller General, testified that it "is obviously hard, if not impossible, to recognize unlawful use of federal funds for lobbying."

Celler Group Obtains Funds

The House has voted a new appropriation of $30,000 to continue its investigation of monopolies by the committee headed by Rep. Celler (D. N. Y.).

It was a strange contrast with the $150,000 voted for the un-American Activities committee, which has had many juicy appropriations in the past, but it is enough to permit the Celler committee to get going again. With a new counsel, Edward H. Levi, the committee is now preparing for hearings on the steel industry scheduled for April 17.

The full Judiciary Committee has now approved the first legislation recommended by the Monopoly Committee, a bill to increase the penalties for anti-trust violations from $5000 to $50,000. Meanwhile, however, legislation jumping the anti-trust fines for violation of Federal Trade Commission laws to $5000 for each day has been approved by Congress as part of the oleomargarine bill.

Unions' Right To Bosses' Pay Data Upheld

AN EMPLOYER who hands out merit increases unilaterally under a union contract must give the union full information about them, the Natl. Labor Relations Board ruled last week.

The case reached the board on appeal from a trial examiner's ruling in a case brought by the unaffiliated Intl. Assn. of Machinists against the General Controls Co., of Glendale, Calif.

The board ordered the firm:

"Upon request, (to) furnish to the union the name, classification, rate of pay and merit rating score of each employe . . . and full information with respect to individual periodic merit wage increases or decreases, including the names of such employes who received such increases or decreases, and the dates on which such increases or decreases were put into effect."

The union had asked for the information in advance of negotiations for a new contract and again during the negotiations themselves. The company refused and the local filed charges of unfair labor practices.

"All the information requested by the union," said the board opinion, "was necessary in order for the union effectively to police the existing contract, and in order for it intelligently to bargain with respect to future contracts. Without such information, the union would be seriously hampered.

"Under these circumstances, we have consistently held that withholding this type of information, when requested, constitutes a violation of the Act. The courts have approved this doctrine. And the result has been the same whether the demand and refusal occurred at the time of contract negotiations, or in the middle of the term."

The board pointed out that an employer is required to bargain on merit increases with a union representing its employes, but that the Machinists' local in this case had specifically waived that right in the contract.

The majority opinion was signed by Chairman Paul M. Herzog and Members John M. Houston and Abe Murdock. Member James J. Reynolds, Jr., dissenting without an opinion, said he would have dismissed the entire case. Member Paul L. Styles, recently added to the board, did not participate.

Auto Workers Begin Negotiations with GM

WEARY of watching the "fancy footwork" of Chrysler Corp. negotiators in endless so-called bargaining sessions, the CIO Auto Workers last week began contract talks with the world's biggest corporation, General Motors.

T. A. Johnstone, director of the union's General Motors Dept., and Louis G. Seaton, GM labor relations director, head the negotiating committees which will consider UAW proposals for a wage package of 31c an hour, including $125-a-month pensions for workers 65 years of age with 25 years' service.

The current two-year contract will expire May 29. It was geared to the cost of living with wages being adjusted each quarter in line with the BLS Index of Consumer Prices. UAW Pres. Walter Reuther has indicated, however, that the union is no longer interested in a market basket contract and will press for a straight pay raise of 9c an hour and a union shop in addition to the pension proposal.

A joint UAW-GM committee has been studying the pension question for three months and the union-proposed figure of $125 a month came out of these meetings.

GM operates 105 plants in 14 states, employing a total of 400,000 persons. The company has 35 manufacturing divisions.

Meanwhile at Chrysler, UAW's 89,000 members, entering the 10th week of their walkout, were told by UAW officers to dig in for a long siege. At the same time the full financial resources of the union were placed at the disposal of the strikers.

REUTHER charged that the corporation had hedged on its earlier offer to set up a $30 million pension fund and to give the union a voice in its administration. He called the offer "fancy bookkeeping." He said the pension figure was over $16 million short of the union's requirements.

After formally rejecting the pension proposal, Reuther countered by presenting the union's settlement terms. Apart from the pension proposals, they specified that Chrysler pay the cost of the following hospital, medical and insurance benefits:

- Full company-paid hospitalization protection for all employes.
- Medical and surgical benefits equivalent to, but not necessarily through, those offered by the Michigan Blue Shield.
- Temporary disability payments of $32.50 a week for 26 weeks beginning on the eighth day in case of sickness.
- Group life insurance providing $3600 coverage for each employe, with no more than a $1.35 monthly contribution.

In addition the union wants improved seniority provisions to provide greater job protection, a strengthened procedure for handling grievances, and the union shop.

ACCIDENT VICTIM

Mrs. Virginia Wigglesworth (above), president of New Jersey Traffic Div. 55, Telephone Workers, was killed Mar. 28 when her auto overturned near Atlantic City, N. J. The leader of 13,000 operators, she was returning to her home there after attending an arbitration hearing in Newark.

High Court Reaffirms Ban On Hiring Hall

THE U.S. Supreme Court refused on Mar. 27 the plea of the CIO National Maritime Union that it reconsider its ruling which in effect outlawed union hiring halls in the maritime industry.

The union had asked for review of the court's action of Feb. 13 in throwing out its appeal from a decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals at New York that the hiring hall, as now operated, is a violation of the Taft-Hartley act. The case specifically concerned hiring on the Great Lakes, but the same principle is involved on other coasts. The complaint was that the hiring halls operate on a preferential shop basis and that thus discriminated against non-union workers.

Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO National Maritime Union promptly warned all port agents to alert members "to act together and prevent any attempt to cause chaos in our union and in the industry." Fears had been expressed by union and government spokesmen that shipping would be thrown into disorder if maritime workers were forced to return to pre-union methods of hiring, such as bribery, the shape-up, crimp joints and shanghaiing.

"THE national office," Curran advised the members, "will take the next step under our 1949 agreement and shortly notify the shipowners that the agreement is terminated and negotiations should commence for a new contract.

"Meanwhile, we repeat again, that pending such notice and completion of negotiations with operators for a new collective bargaining agreement, status quo continues in all respects. Our present policy must not be changed and all members and officers in all ports must not permit themselves to be provoked into premature action by elements who want to disrupt our union and cause chaos in the industry.

"Members aboard ship and in port must continue the practice of constituting themselves as committees to see that no attempt is made to improperly ship men. No other action must be taken without first receiving official direction from national headquarters."

In its petition for review the NMU contended that the issues "are of such magnitude that the decision of the court below should be re-examined by the supreme judicial authority of our country."

"It is unreasonable to assume," said the NMU review petition, "that seamen who through the unions they have supported have waged bitter and costly struggles to dismantle the yoke of degrading and inhuman employment practices, will readily consent to revert to the indignities to which they have formerly been exposed."

The Senate Labor-Management subcommittee which has been holding hearings on the Magnuson-Lesinski bill legalizing union hiring halls in the maritime industry concluded its open sessions on Mar. 28. The last witness was George W. Morgan, president of the Association of American Ship Owners, whose main objection was that the way the measure is worded it is "so vague and indefinite" that it might be construed to legalize hiring hall practices in any industry.

Sen. Murray (D. Mont.), chairman of the subcommittee, said he thinks it will have "no difficulty" in working out a solution to the problem.

Max Perlow Is Defeated For 2 Offices In His Local

MAX PERLOW, regarded as leader of the anti-National CIO left wing faction in the United Furniture Workers, has been defeated for two offices in his own Local 76-B in New York City.

A tally made public last week showed that John Anania, president of the local, scored a two-to-one victory over him in a contest for chairman of the Frame Department, while he ran third to Nathan Goldberg and George Bocchierie in a three-way race for two posts on the executive council, the local's top executive body. Perlow's aide in the local, Sol Silverman, was also defeated for re-election as business agent.

The campaign against Perlow was directed by the Committee to Keep the UFWA and Local 76-B in the CIO. Its successful candidates for other positions included Pres. Anania, Vice Pres. John Martinelli, Manager Michael DeCicco, Financial Secretary Joe Garraffa, Treas. Isaak Chaikind and Business Agents Ernest Capaldo, David Ratushenko, Richard Mazza and Antonia V. Segura.

Perlow, who publicly resigned from the Communist Party last June so he could register under the Taft-Hartley act and retain his position as international secretary-treasurer of the union, has been at odds with pro-CIO forces headed by Intl. Pres. Morris Pizer for many months.

The UFWA Rank and File Committee for CIO has been set up on a national basis to carry the fight to the membership in the shops in the expectation of throwing off left-wing control, exercised through the general executive board, at the next convention.

The pro-CIO victory also included election of a full slate of five delegates to the convention. They are DeCicco, Garraffa, Capaldo, Anania and Chaikind.

The sweeping triumph was regarded as vindication by the membership for Abraham Zide, a Pizer supporter, who about two weeks ago was ousted from his job as the local's group insurance director because he defied the anti-CIO faction. The headline of a story in last week's edition of the CIO News referred to him in error as a "Perlow Follower." It should have said "Pizer Follower."

Handicaps No Bar to Radiomen--FCC

The Federal Communications Commission has amended its order barring physically handicapped men with "limiting" disabilities from serving as ship radio operators in accordance with the request of the CIO American Radio Association, the union announced last week.

The radio union—which flashed word of the victory to its members on more than 1000 ships at sea on its regular weekly broadcast—complained the order was so vaguely worded that handicapped men whose disabilities have no bearing on the performance of their duties were laid open to discharge.

In line with the suggestion made in the union's petition for revision of the order the new rule bars only "those afflicted with uncorrected physical handicaps which would clearly prevent" performance of their duties.

Ft. Worth Lions Hear No Evil, Etc.

Heavy pressure by influential members of the Downtown Lions Club at Fort Worth, Tex., forced cancellation of a speech giving the government's side in the anti-trust suit against the A&P grocery chain.

Scheduled to speak on the suit at the weekly luncheon Mar. 28 was Herbert Bergson, assistant U. S. Attorney General. But when the Lions' directors asked Bergson not to mention the A&P case at all he refused, pointing out that everything he would have said is a matter of public record. The Lions heard a local pastor instead.

Program chairman for March is Earnest O. Gillam, who has fought monopoly in the soap industry. In answer to the A&P full-page ads in the two Fort Worth dailies, he had tried to buy equal space to present the government's side. Both papers turned him down. Gillam's program for the February luncheons was closer cooperation between labor, industry and the government.

Two weeks ago he had as speaker Intl. Pres. O. A. Knight, of the CIO Oil Workers. The AFL Musicians supplied the music free. Knight's talk was well received. But some club members objected, and when the Bergson talk was announced the storm broke.

Trade Board Cites Cold Pill Makers

Two manufacturers of anti-histamine products, Bristol-Myers Co. of New York and Anahist Co., Inc., of Yonkers, N. Y., have been accused by the Federal Trade Commission of using false and misleading advertising to sell their anti-cold drugs.

FTC said advertising of other companies making the cold-minimizing drugs is being investigated and that "additional complaints will be issued where the evidence warrants."

The Bristol-Myers product is called "Resistabs" while Anahist sells its pills under the trade name "Anahist." Each company was charged with misrepresenting the therapeutic properties and effectiveness of its product in the prevention and treatment of the common cold.

Slap 'em Back With Bucks for PAC

Mill That 'Closed' Reopens as 8½-Month Strike Is Settled

THE 8½-MONTH strike at the Continental Paper Co., Ridgefield Park, N. J., has been settled by a four-point agreement under which the strikers have started back to work.

The pact was negotiated by Pres. Harry D. Sayre, of the CIO Paperworkers, and Carl D. Holderman, president of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council, representing the union, and Arnold B. Huyssoon, Continental vice president, and Alan J. Woodfield, personnel director.

The settlement was reached more than a month after the firm announced the indefinite shutdown of the huge paperboard mill. It became effective when approved by the strikers and by William J. Alford, Jr., company president, who was reached in England by transatlantic telephone. The company is British-owned.

Meetings that led to the agreement were witnessed by A. William Martin, editor of the Ridgefield Park Sun-Bulletin, who was instrumental in arranging them.

THE FIRST part of the settlement provides for ending the strike and removing picket lines. Employes are to be recalled as work becomes available on the basis of departmental seniority. No new workers will be hired until all members of UPW-CIO Local 299 have been offered a chance to go back to jobs to which their seniority, ability and qualifications entitle them.

The case of Weldon Myrick, an employe with 23 years' seniority whose discharge in July precipitated the strike, will be arbitrated.

Second, wage rates in effect at the time of the shutdown will be resumed. However, the call-in and reporting pay provisos will not be effective for the first 60 days. Pensions and insurance, discontinued during the strike, will be discussed after three months' operation.

Third, all negotiations were postponed for not less than three nor more than six months. Both sides agreed to cooperate in every way possible to return the mill to full, efficient and profitable production.

Fourth, Anthony Adamo, the union's area director, will no longer direct the affairs of the local or do any business with the company. Sayre appointed Charles Bridgwater, the union's area director for Pennsylvania and up-State New York, as administrator of the local. He will be in charge until the local's autonomy is restored by the international. Ernest Fritz resigned as president of Local 299 because of strained relations with the firm.

"It is an honorable compromise by both the union and the company," said Sayre. "While not a union victory, neither was it a defeat."

The last contract terminated June 1, 1949. The strike started July 5, during negotiations, when Myrick was fired.

Wood Union Fights 'Jobless' Pay Loophole

SOMETHING new has been added to Oregon politics this year.

It's "seasonality."

"Seasonality" is important to every candidate for public office in Oregon because 20,000 CIO Workers who live and vote in that state don't like it. There is no reason why they should, since it conceivably could cost each one of them up to $650 a year.

"Seasonality" was dreamed up at the last session of the Oregon Legislature and slipped into law as a rider to an omnibus bill increasing unemployment compensation benefits from $20 to $25 weekly and boosting the length of benefits from 20 to 26 weeks.

It provides that an operation may be closed for a certain period each year and be given a seasonality rating. The employes, though laid off, would receive no unemployment compensation. It is important in the lumber industry because adverse weather, as in the past winter, occasionally forces a complete halt in operations.

The IWA executive board, at its recent meeting in Portland, Ore., decided that if any candidate for public office doesn't pledge himself in black and white to vote for repeal of seasonality—he just won't get the union indorsement.

That block of 20,000 votes looks pretty attractive to budding politicians.

"This amendment can have a very detrimental effect upon workers and business alike," Pres. E. J. Fadling of the Woodworkers pointed out. "Many communities in this state are wholly or for the most part dependent upon the lumber industry, and when it is closed down as tightly as it was this winter because of adverse weather conditions, the unemployment compensation paid the workers has been the lifeblood of such communities.

"It is our contention that unemployment compensation is to provide the workers with a minimum amount of support during times of unemployment, and we do not agree that the lumber industry is subject to recurrent shutdowns due to weather conditions of such regularity that would warrant the granting of seasonality ratings."

The IWA executive board also approved the Northwest Regional Negotiating Committee's rejection of a pension plan proposed by the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co., behemoth of the industry, on the ground that it "would be of little of no use to Weyerhaeuser employes." The board likewise approved the negotiators' drive for a health and welfare plan and paid holidays, as well as union shop proposals by local unions with Weyerhaeuser contracts.

URW Local Finds Hard PAC Work Pays Off Well

SOUTH GATE Local 100 of the CIO Rubber Workers, near los Angeles, has mobilized its membership for PAC work.

It takes a lot of work, hard and systematic work. It's the kind of work that paid off—with the help of a lot of CIO locals and other liberal groups—in the election of President Truman.

First a questionnaire is sent out to the entire membership to determine who is unregistered. There are four registrars on the PAC committee and they go after the unregistered local members in the plant, at their homes and in the union hall—and get them registered.

Pertinent information compiled by other committee members who have taken the questionnaires apart are typed on cards which are filed according to assembly districts.

A STUDY is made of what is reported by PAC in the assembly and congressional districts in the Greater Los Angeles area and on the state and national levels.

On the basis of this study a report is made to the local for indorsement of candidates.

All the while the PAC committee is pushing the drive for voluntary dollars, an enterprise which like all the other activities require hard work. The local makes sure that members know what the money is being spent for—that makes it easier to collect the dollars.

AFTER ALL this activity, which covers several months, the PAC committee is ready for the home stretch. For example, a precinct reports that help is needed for the local-indorsed candidates. By looking at its map and by referring to its file, Local 100 knows that it has 18 members living in the district.

Six of them are sent immediately to the campaign headquarters, six will be available later, and six others can pitch in for heavy mailings or leaflet distribution.

Local 100 also knows where it can assign doorbell ringers because it has compiled a list for just such an eventuality. On election day there is a systematic phone check up to see what the PAC committeee can do to get the voters to the polls.

After the election celebrations are over, what does the PAC committee do? Asked that question, Annette Snider, PAC chairman, replied:

"Do? We go to work. There's another election coming up!"

CIO Wins Macon Mill Three To One

Employes of the Atlantic Cotton Mills, Macon, Ga., where turbulent labor history has been written, have voted almost three to one to be represented by the CIO Textile Workers, according to Natl. Dir. George Baldanzi of the CIO Organizing Committee.

The tally was 205 for the union, 80 against and six votes challenged. Some years ago the union filed unfair labor practices charges against the company and won an order from the National Labor Relations Board forcing the firm to rehire workers discharged for union activities.

Returns Show Thornton Wins

OFFICIAL returns last week confirmed the election of William E. Thornton of Lynn, Mass., as president of the CIO Shoe Workers.

Thornton, who was appointed by the Shoe Workers executive board last May to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Pres. Rocco Franceschini, defeated his opponent, Milton Filker, of New York, by a count of 21,886 to 11,125. Unofficial returns several days earlier showed Thornton the winner.

WILLIAM E. THORNTON

The new president has been with the Shoe Workers since 1937 and has served as organizer, vice president, regional director and territorial representative. He will take office May 1.

Five new members were elected to the 15-man executive board. They are: Albert Manville, Manchester, N. H.; Meyer Goldstein, Baltimore, Md.; John Andrews, Portsmouth, O.; Hugh Decker, Los Angeles, Cal.; and Florence Lynch, St. Louis, Mo.

In Baltimore, Goldstein defeated Karl McCauley, a left-wing candidate, while in New York City, Daniel Colette, a member of the right-wing group there, polled a total of 1730 votes against Freda Casso in an unexpected show of strength. Miss Casso was reelected to the Board.

Downey Quits Senate Race

SEN. DOWNEY (D. Cal.) announced on Mar. 29 that he will not seek a third term in Congress because of ill health.

The announcement was made from Bethesda (Md.) Naval Hospital and came shortly after he was advised that he will need 60 days' treatment for peptic ulcers.

The California National CIO-PAC earlier had refused to indorse him for re-election despite a voting record that was superficially good. Instead it pledged support to Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas, who is seeking the senatorial nomination. Downey opposed National CIO policy in several instances not reflected in his voting record and was leaning more and more away from those who elected him and toward the huge mechanized farming interests of his state.

He urged his supporters "and all the voters of California" to swing behind Manchester Boddy, publisher of the Los Angeles Daily News. Boddy's paper is currently involved in a serious dispute with the CIO Los Angeles Newspaper Guild over planned discharges growing out of a change in the number of daily editions.

Rep. Douglas and Boddy have filed for both Democratic and Republican nominations under the California cross-filing law. Rep. Richard M. Nixon, the Republican aspirant,, likewise has filed on both tickets.

Bucks For PAC Are Knockout Drops To Lick Labor-Hating DixieGOPs

Organizationally Speaking

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Our good friend George De Nucci is enroute to Puerto Rico to assume his duties as CIO National Representative there. He will be of great assistance to our fellow Americans in Puerto Rico. This past week the writer with Brother De Nucci and others attended a luncheon where the Puerto Rican situation was discussed with Gov. Luis Munoz Marin. The island government is doing a great job, working against tremendous odds for improved housing, schools, more and better industry and improved living conditions for the workers. Brother De Nucci will assist them in every way possible to attain these goals.

Asst. Organizational Dir. R. J. Thomas has been selected to direct the drive of the Government and Civil Employees Organizing Committee against the discredited United Public Workers in New York City. He will be working out of the office of the New York City CIO Industrial Union Council at 101 West 31st st., Room 2405. He will receive every cooperation from all local, state, national and international CIO affiliates in this campaign.

There occurred this past week an untimely and unfortunate accident that claimed the life of Mrs. Virginia Wigglesworth, President, CWA New Jersey Traffic Division No. 55. She had been engaged in a union arbitration and was on her way to Atlantic City to be with her husband who was ill, when her car skidded and overturned. Our sympathies go out to her relatives, to the members of her union and to her many, many friends.

The writer addressed the convention of the Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council this past week in Pittsburgh. This was the best-attended convention on record in the state. The Pennsylvania Council is a splendid organization and Pres. Harry Boyer and Sec. Harry Block deserve a great deal of credit for the work they have done in connection with the Council. Joseph Beirne, President, CWA-CIO, also addressed the convention, and the delegates there pledged him and his organization every support when the drive in telephone in Pennsylvania takes place.

CIO Reg. Dir. George De Nucci before leaving for Puerto Rico reported that in a representation election at the Borden Milk Co., Zanesville, O., the workers voted 11 to 8 in favor of the Dairy Division of the Retail & Wholesale Employes Union-CIO. This makes the third Borden unit to become a part of the CIO Dairy Workers Local 379. Intl. Rep. Gerald Hughes handled the campaign.

Leonard Woodcock, Director of UAW-CIO Region 1-D, reports that workers of the Marine City Gasket Co. (Division of Detroit Gasket Co.) in a representation election voted 297 to 190 in favor of the UAW-CIO. UAW Intl. Rep. Barney Young was in charge of the organizing drive.

CIO Reg. Dir. Ben Henry reports that in a representation election at the Herrick Cold Storage and Refrigeration Co., Waterloo, Ia., UAW-CIO Local 838 won by a vote of 86 to 2 for no union. Intl. Rep. Robert Johnston and Pres. Carl Dahl of UAW Local 838 conducted the campaign.

CIO Field Rep. Henry A. Schwarzott reports that in a representation election at the Oil Well Supply Co., Witte Engine Workers Division, Kansas City, Mo., the workers voted USA-CIO 96; UE 16; UAW-AFL 20; void 1.

Adolph Germer, Director of Organization, IWA-CIO, reports that in a union shop election at the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co., Springfield, Ore., the workers voted as follows: Eligible 557; for 393; against 55; challenged 8; void 2.

CIO Reg. Dir. Michael Mann reports that in a union shop election at the McCook plant of the Standard Lime & Stone Co., Lyons, Ill., the workers voted 31 to 2 in favor of the USA-CIO. In a representation election at the Illinois Gear and Machine Co., Chicago, the workers voted 185 to 16 in favor of the IUE-CIO.

CIO Reg. Dir. Irwin DeShetler reports that the UAW-CIO won a representation election over the AFL-UAW at the International Harvester tractor testing and proving grounds, Phoenix, Ariz., by a vote of 11 to 7. Intl. Rep. William Gillespie was in charge of the campaign.

CIO Reg. Dir. W. A. Copeland reports that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers won a representation election at the Rice-Stix plant, Blytheville, Ark., by a vote of 108 to 72.

George Baldanzi, National Director, CIO Southern Organizing Drive, reports that workers at the Atlantic Cotton Mills, Macon, Ga., voted almost 3 to 1 to be represented by the CIO Textile Workers Union. The vote was 205 for the TWU-CIO; 80 against and 6 challenged out of 300 eligible.

Wanted: Co-op Groups

The Council for Co-operative Development, formed at a Detroit meeting called by Victor Reuther, CIO Auto Workers education director, is seeking affiliations from local unions and co-op groups.

McCarthy Shoots Works But Begins Hedging

BY HENRY C. FLEISHER

SEN. JOE McCARTHY shot the works last week in his case against the State Dept.

Before packed Senate galleries, the Wisconsin Republican launched into a long attack on Owen Lattimore, whom he had previously charged with being a top Communist agent and espionage chief.

McCarthy, however, left a back exit open in case his charges don't hold up.

Previously the Senator had said that all his complaints against State Dept. officials would "stand or fall" on the strength of his case against Lattimore. But in his big Senate speech, McCarthy hinted that "perhaps" too much emphasis had been placed on the espionage charge.

The Wisconsin Senator quoted from a number of affidavits against Lattimore, which he is turning over to the FBI. He also took note of bitter criticism and sharp-spoken denials of charges made against other State Dept. employes.

THESE CASES have been termed as "Communists," "pro-Communists" and "bad security risks," McCarthy commented — although he didn't say that he himself had done all the "terming."

"I think a more proper term would be bad policy risks," he told the Senate.

That switch represents a major concession, for there's a tremendous difference between disloyalty and what the Senator would call poor judgment.

Lattimore, the butt of McCarthy's most serious charges, is one of the nation's leading experts on Far Eastern affairs and the author of several books on the subject.

A Johns Hopkins Univ. professor, he has been at various times an advisor to Chiang Kai-Shek, an executive of the U. S. Office of War Information, and—for only four or five months, in 1946—a State Dept. employe hired for special consultation on Far Eastern economic problems.

He was hired for that job by Edwin Pauley, rich West Coast oil man, who did a survey for the President.

Lattimore has returned home from Afghanistan, where he has been working with a United Nations mission.

He has called the McCarthy accusations against him "moonshine," "pure hallucination," "hogwash" and "hokum."

THE McCARTHY charges — against Lattimore and nearly a hundred other persons who are working for the State Dept., have worked for it in the past, or have never worked for it—have so far produced more heat than light. But they are keeping a lot of government officials busy:

1 Atty. Gen. Howard McGrath and FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover refused the Senator's request to turn over loyalty files to the Senate investigating committee.

They pointed out that this would permit any Senator or Congressman to circulate gossip, rumors or unproved charges against any government employe; and that it would also endanger FBI confidential contacts.

2 The Administration—acting in accordance with historic policy of keeping the three branches of government independent—said it would refuse to heed a Senate subpoena for those same confidential FBI files.

3 Pres. Truman ordered the government's top loyalty review board to re-examine all the 81 cases of State Dept. employes whom McCarthy has claimed were—or are—Communists or pro-Communists. Although names have not been made public, McCarthy has listed these cases in a Senate speech—and many of the charges appear extremely thin.

4 Isolationist Republicans in the Senate, hopping on the McCarthy band-wagon, have opened a major attack on the State Dept. The effort appears to be to make the Administration responsible for the Communist victory in China.

(Columnist Walter Lippman has pointed out that the basic decision on China was made by Gen. Marshall when he was Secretary of State. Gen. Wedemeyer, having made a thorough study of China in 1947, predicted that Chiang's regime would lose—unless America took over complete control of the Chinese government. Marshall, realizing the enormous cost and the uncertain results, recommended against any such drastic and hazardous step.)

But a Republican bloc—led by Senators Wherry (Nebr.) and Bridges (N.H.) — is after Acheson's scalp as a first step towards moving the nation's foreign policy away from Fair Deal policies.

Hit-Run Senator Leaves Smears In 2 Homes

A PLEASANT-voiced lady and a studious young man —both of them State Dept. officials—last week took the Senate witness stand to deny "red" charges flung by Sen. Joe McCarthy (R., Wis.).

When they were through, the fabric of McCarthy's story looked as though it had been hit by a heavy shrapnel attack.

But though the McCarthy charges were pretty well demolished, they had done tremendous damage to the reputations and the welfare of two government workers' families.

Mrs. Esther Brunauer told how she and members of her family had been deluged with insulting telephone calls at all hours of the day and night.

Haldore Hansen told the Senate Committee that rumor-mongers in the Virginia farm area where he lives had been circulating gossip that he was a "Russian spy."

Said Mrs. Brunauer: "We have received anonymous telephone calls, accompanied by threats and profanity, with such advice as 'Get out of the neighborhood, you Communists, or you will be carried out in a box.'

"All of you who have families will realize the effect this has on the atmosphere of a home—you know how you would feel if it were happening in your home."

MRS. BRUNAUER went through McCarthy's charges with a point-by-point denial of Communist affiliations.

McCarthy charge: She had been a "first assistant" to Alger Hiss at the San Francisco UN Confab in 1945.

Answers: She had no contact with Hiss there. She was assistant to the late Rep. Bloom, head of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Charge. As a former executive secretary of the Association of University Women, she had led it into various Communist fronts, particularly in consumer matters.

Answer: She was never the group's executive secretary, never had anything to do with its consumer activities.

Charge: She had signed a call to a 1939 meeting of the American Youth Congress, labeled as Communist.

Answer: She had done so—but along with four Senators, six Congressmen, three governors, and two Cabinet members—including Jim Farley. They had tried to keep the youth group from being Communist-dominated; when they failed they broke all ties with it.

Charge: She had been active in the American Union For Concerted Peace Efforts.

Answer: She had—but the organization took positions flatly opposed to the Communist line.

Charge: Leader of the American Union for Concerted Peace Efforts was an editor of the Daily Worker.

Answer: He wasn't; he belonged to another outfit, Communist-dominated, with a somewhat similar name.

HANSON, A State Dept. official working on Point Four plans, also flatly denied the McCarthy charges, and challenged him to repeat them without Congressional immunity from libel and slander.

He said McCarthy's attack was based mainly on a book on China written in 1938, when he was an AP correspondent there. One quotation attributed to Hanson, which spoke of the devotion of Chinese Communist leaders to their cause, was actually made by an American marine major, he said, and his book so indicated.

If praise of the Communists' fight against the Japanese invaders is now considered "subversive," Hanson commented, then McCarthy should also go after Winston Churchill, who praised the Russians' fight against the Nazis.

McCarthy wasn't there when the replies were given to the Senate committee.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed.	Keep writing to Senators and Representatives to force action.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors' benefits, etc. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Sen. Finance Comm. will report shortly. CIO has asked further improvements.	Ask Senators to accept and strengthen HR 6000.
ECA Extension HR 7378	Renews Marshall Plan for another year; sets $2,950,000,000 ceiling on funds.	House cut $250 million from authorization; Senate to act soon.	Ask members of both Houses to restore cut, pass bill as drafted.
Federal Aid to Education S 426	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. House Labor Comm. deadlocked over religious quarrel involving school buses.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to approve Senate bill.
FEPC S 1728 HR 4453	Senate bill would bar job discrimination based on race, creed or color and provide penalties for violations.	House voted substitute bill without enforcement teeth. Senate debate, probably filibuster, due soon.	Ask Senators to vote for S 1728 without weakening amendments, and to fight filibuster.
Mundt-Nixon Bill S 2311 HR 7595	Endangers civil liberties, union rights, under guise of fighting subversive activities.	Reported by Senate Judiciary; House Un-American Comm. holding hearings. CIO testifies this week.	Ask Senators, Representatives to oppose the bill.
Kerr Bill S 1498	Weakens Federal Power Commission authority to regulate price of natural gas; would raise gas prices to consumers.	Passed both Houses.	Ask President Truman to veto the bill.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S 2246 HR 7402	Among other things, provides long-term, low-interest loans to cooperatives.	Both Houses defeated co-op section, passed "landlord" bill; conferees meet this week.	Ask members of both Houses for new attempt to pass co-op section.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

Isolationist Drive Is On Again--CIO

THE CIO charged last week that recent attacks by Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) and Sen. Bridges (R. N. H.) on Sec of State Dean Acheson are part of an "isolationist offensive" based on "reckless and irresponsible charges."

The criticism of the GOP isolationist campaign was made by Jacob S. Potofsky, head of the CIO International Committee and president of the Clothing Workers.

He said that McCarthy and Bridges, through their attacks on the State Dept., may undo the work of years in cementing better relations with the western European democracies. In that respect, Potofsky warned, "the McCarthys are playing right into the hands of the Russians."

Potofsky said that both the extreme left and extreme right are attacking Acheson and the entire Truman administration.

"We see a united front of these anti-democratic forces in the making, and it is important for the masses of American labor to speak out against this unholy alliance.

"The pre-Pearl Harbor mentality, which nearly scuttled our country before 1941, is now arising again, in the hope of engulfing the electorate which genuinely yearns for peace and the continuation of our freedoms."

Pres. Truman and Sec. Acheson have the support of CIO members "in their struggle against this attempt to destroy our effectiveness in a world in crisis," the CIO officer said.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS
$1.00 A YEAR
5¢ a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII | WASHINGTON, D. C., APRIL 10, 1950 | 82 | No. 15

Unity Plan Prospects Good

SITUATION: Over four million American workers were unemployed last week, and millions more were working less than full-time. Economists freely predicted that the situation was due to get a lot worse before the year's end. (See Page 6.)

In Congress, the Fair Deal program was moving ahead at snail's pace. Social security improvements were in committee; health insurance hadn't been heard from in months; a quarter-billion had been sliced out of European recovery funds; the Kerr Natural Gas Bill, with its threat to consumers' pocketbooks, had been passed; the Taft-Hartley Act hadn't been repealed. The record of the 81st Congress' second session was anything but impressive. (See Page 12.)

Fair Deal Representatives and Senators, up for election in 1950, were facing hard fights; and without strengthening of liberal forces in Congress, the nation would continue to be held in the grip of the Dixiegop coalition.

PROPOSAL: CIO Pres. Philip Murray offered American unions a way to lick the "critical situation facing labor and the nation." (See Page 3.)

To the AFL, the miners, the machinists and the railway brotherhoods, Murray suggested a standing joint committee to represent all labor. It would consist of "duly accredited" representatives from each group, and it would have "authority" to shape and pursue a "common program."

The committee's goals: (1) to coordinate labor's efforts on economic, legislative, political matters; (2) to seek organic unity of all labor—"the goal . . . to which we all aspire."

Murray called it the "most significant proposal of its kind" ever offered by the CIO to other labor groups.

REACTIONS: AFL Pres. Green, reached by reporters in New Orleans, showed interest. He'll refer it to the May 8 AFL executive council; and he may talk with Murray about it soon. If labor can unite on international affairs, it should be able to do it at home, too, Green suggested.

Pres. Al Hayes of the Machinists said "the more unity among unions, the better the results for the members . . ."

Pres. John Lewis of the Miners said he'd recommend support of the joint labor committee to the mine union executive board meeting April 18.

SOLIDARITY of the Chrysler strikers behind the CIO Auto Workers is shown by this picture of a Detroit rally held to hear UAW Pres. Walter P. Reuther report on progress of the negotiations. Hopes for settlement of the two-and-a-half-month-old Chrysler strike were brighter last weekend. (See Page 11.)

DP Bill Passage Victory For HST Forces, CIO

THE TRUMAN Administration and the forces of liberalism scored their first major victory in this session of Congress when the Senate on April 5 passed a liberalized Displaced Persons bill.

The victory-starved liberals chalked up their win at midnight after a gruelling 12-hour fight that saw party lines torn asunder as a record-breaking 135 amendments were acted upon—many of them by time-consuming rollcall votes.

Most of the amendments were sponsored by the Senate Judiciary Committee and were intended to make the law even more conservative and stringent than it has been. One by one they were offered by Sen. McCarran (D. Nev.), committee chairman, and one by one they were knocked down, sometimes by a one-vote margin.

Then came the key vote—to substitute the liberal Kilgore bill for the committee bill. It passed by a thumping 49 to 25 count. Final approval of the amendment came easily by a 58 to 15 tally as Senators who had fought liberalization at every amendment gave up the ghost and climbed on the bandwagon. Even McCarran voted for it.

The measure was sent to conference with the House, which on June 2, 1949, passed a liberal bill sponsored by Rep. Celler (D. N. Y.). The differences are comparatively minor and no difficulty in reconciling them was foreseen.

THE KILGORE substitute had the wholehearted approval of the CIO. It represents to all intents and purposes what the CIO has been fighting for since the original DP measure, the Stratton bill, was started through the legislative grind three years ago. CIO Pres. Philip Murray testified personally in favor of the Stratton bill, which was emasculated before it finally became law, and called for a humane, liberal law consistent with the American tradition. These requirements are answered by both the Kilgore and Celler bills.

The only other liberal victory in Congress at this session was repeal of the federal tax on oleomargarine.

Sen. Kilgore (D. W. Va.), a member of the Judiciary Committee, and 17 other Senators in both parties sponsored the substitute that was passed. It makes a number of liberalizing changes in the present DP law. These include:

- Increasing the number of DPs to be admitted to the United States from the present 205,000 to 344,000. The Celler bill would admit 339,000 DPs; the Senate bill accepted that figure but added 5000 Italian refugees in Jugoslavia.
- Opening the way for admission of an additional 54,744 ethnic Germans from eastern Europe outside the DP program, and allowing the admission of 20,000 non-quota war orphans under an amendment offered by Sen. Humphrey (D. Minn.).
- Eliminating the controversial quota requirement that 40% of all DPs admitted had to be from the Baltic countries and 30% farmers. This was the proviso that gave rise to charges the present law discriminates against Jews and Catholics.
- Extending the DP program for one year beyond June 30.
- Extending from Dec. 22, 1945, to Jan. 1, 1949, the date on which a refugee must have been in a DP camp to be eligible for admission. This change makes political refugees from behind the Iron Curtain eligible for entry.

McCarran, Sen. Jenner (R. Ind.) and Sen. Eastland (D. Miss.) pushed the fight for the committee bill. They concentrated much of their fire on the Displaced Persons Commission, charging that by inefficient and careless operation it had authorized the admission of "subversives."

A key McCarran amendment to clip its authority by changing administrative procedures was beaten down by a 42 to 41 count.

The liberals won every important test when it came to the McCarran-sponsored amendments. Among those it defeated were proposals to:

- Restore the 40% quota for refugees from the Baltic states.
- Change the definition of a DP to make eight million Germans eligible—a change the opponents charged would sabotage the whole DP program.
- Make the date on which a refugee must have been in a DP camp to be eligible for entry April 21, 1947. This one had to be licked twice on rollcall votes before its sponsor, Sen. Cain (R. Wash.), the pal of the big housing interests, finally gave up.
- Halt the program whenever unemployment in the U. S. exceeds four million (which it does now). McCarran raised the figures to six million, but that was defeated, too. In a third try Sen. Langer (R. N. D.) boosted it to 10 million. That likewise was licked.
- Soften, instead of eliminate, the discriminating proviso.

The Senate spent most of the 12 hours that preceded the final vote in a parliamentary uproar as amendments were offered in a steady stream. Sen. Taft (R. O.) at one point found the body approving amendments to a section of the bill that had already been deleted.

Sen. Myers (D. Pa.), one of the co-sponsors of the Kilgore bill, summed up the feeling of its proponents during the debate.

"Approval of this bill," he said, "would assure the rest of the world that America plans to fulfill its international requirements."

The disruption of party lines was demonstrated by the key vote on substituting the Kilgore bill for the McCarran proposals, and again in the final vote.

On the motion to substitute 25 Democrats and 24 Republicans voted in the affirmative and 14 Republicans and 11 Democrats against.

On final passage the breakdown was 27 Democrats and 31 Republicans for the bill, and eight Democrats and seven Republicans against it.

Senate Vote on Kilgore DP Bill

This is the record of how the Senate substituted, by a 49-25 vote, on Apr. 5, the liberal Kilgore Displaced Persons bill for the McCarran bill which would practically have halted immigration of DPs. The House last year passed a bill similar to the Kilgore measure. Twenty-five Democrats and 24 Republicans voted for the Kilgore bill; 11 Democrats and 14 Republicans voted against. Votes for the Kilgore bill are marked R; votes against, W. Pairs are indicated by PR and PW. A means absent.

ALA.	Hill (D)	R
	Sparkman (D)	PR
ARIZ.	Hayden (D)	R
	McFarland (D)	R
ARK.	Fulbright (D)	A
	McClellan (D)	W
CAL.	Downey (D)	A
	Knowland (R)	R
COLO.	Johnson (D)	W
	Millikin (R)	R
CONN.	Benton (D)	R
	McMahon (D)	R
DEL.	Frear, Jr. (D)	R
	Williams (R)	W
FLA.	Holland (D)	W
	Pepper (D)	A
GA.	George (D)	PW
	Russell (D)	PW
IDA.	Dworshak (R)	W
	Taylor (D)	R
ILL.	Douglas (D)	R
	Lucas (D)	R
IND.	Capehart (R)	R
	Jenner (R)	W
IOWA	Gillette (D)	PR
	Hickenlooper (R)	R
KAN.	Darby (R)	W
	Schoeppel (R)	W
KY.	Chapman (D)	W
	Withers (D)	R
LA.	Ellender (D)	PW
	Long (D)	PR
ME.	Brewster (R)	R
	Smith (R)	R
MD.	O'Conor (D)	R
	Tydings (D)	R
MASS.	Lodge (R)	R
	Saltonstall (R)	R
MICH.	Ferguson (R)	R
	Vandenberg (R)	PR
MINN.	Humphrey (D)	R
	Thye (R)	R
MISS.	Eastland (S.R.)	PW
	Stennis (D)	W
MO.	Donnell (R)	W
	Kem (R)	W
MONT.	Ecton (R)	PW
	Murray (D)	PR
NEB.	Butler (R)	R
	Wherry (R)	W
NEV.	Malone (R)	W
	McCarran (D)	W
N. H.	Bridges (R)	R
	Tobey (R)	R
N. J.	Hendrickson (R)	R
	Smith (R)	R
N. M.	Anderson (D)	R
	Chavez (D)	R
N. Y.	Ives (R)	R
	Lehman (D)	R
N. C.	Graham (D)	PR
	Hoey (D)	W
N. D.	Langer (R)	W
	Young (R)	A
OHIO	Bricker (R)	W
	Taft (R)	R
OKLA.	Kerr (D)	A
	Thomas (D)	A
ORE.	Cordon (R)	W
	Morse (R)	R
PA.	Martin (R)	A
	Myers (D)	R
R. I.	Green (D)	R
	Leahy (D)	A
S. C.	Johnston (D)	W
	Maybank (D)	PW
S. D.	Gurney (R)	R
	Mundt (R)	R
TENN.	Kefauver (D)	R
	McKellar (D)	A
TEX.	Connally (D)	W
	Johnson (D)	A
UTAH	Thomas (D)	R
	Watkins (R)	W
VT.	Aiken (R)	R
	Flanders (R)	R
VA.	Byrd (D)	W
	Robertson (D)	W
WASH.	Cain (R)	W
	Magnuson (D)	R
W. VA.	Kilgore (D)	R
	Neely (D)	R
WIS.	McCarthy (R)	R
	Wiley (R)	R
WYO.	Hunt (D)	R
	O'Mahoney (D)	R

Wreckage of Housing Bill Totters Toward Presidential Signature

By D. ROCKWELL CLARK

THE "middle-income" housing bill, shorn of its sole Fair Deal feature and containing new bonanzas for the mortgage banks and real estate speculators, came out of House-Senate conference last week and was on its way to presidential approval.

In its final form, the bill gives an extra $250 million to the Federal National Mortgage Assn. to buy home mortgages—an action described by the CIO Housing Committee as "a direct subsidy to the mortgage banks."

A last-minute attempt by Sen. Douglas (D. Ill.) to earmark $25 million of this sum for prefabricated housing loans was defeated in conference on the technical grounds that since it had not been included in the original version of the bill as passed by either house, it could be ruled out of order. The House last year had approved a similar measure.

The conferees did agree to permit the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to issue $12,500,000 in loans for pre-fabs, since it has this much left from a $50 million home loan fund; but this was interpreted as an empty gesture since actually the funds referred to are frozen and their expenditure must be authorized separately.

As originally proposed, the bill contained a section which would have authorized the establishment of a separate government agency empowered to sell debentures on the private investment market and with the proceeds make long-term, low-interest loans to housing co-operatives and non-profit trusts. This proposal was enthusiastically supported by the White House, all of organized labor and all veterans' organizations, but both House and Senate turned it down.

The bill does, however, contain a crumb of comfort for co-operators. Congress would not agree to the original proposal but it did give official recognition to the fact that co-ops as well as real estate speculators are entitled to have up to 90% of their mortgages guaranteed by the Federal Housing Administration.

UP TO now, the FHA has had the implicit authority to issue such guarantees but has been extremely reluctant to do so, as scores of witnesses told the House and Senate Banking committees when the proposal was under consideration. The result was that many co-ops failed utterly to get private bank loans while others were able to secure them only after years of effort and the raising by their membership of exorbitantly high down payments.

The Senate committee report on the new proposal stated flatly that the provision was inserted in order to make it easier for co-ops to secure private bank loans, because they could go to FHA first and get a commitment that the mortgage guarantee would be forthcoming if the bank would issue the loan.

Another small but important benefit for co-ops is the proposed establishment within FHA of a division devoted to giving technical assistance and advice to persons or organizations who wish to start co-operatives.

(The CIO Housing Committee and the Department of Research are now jointly preparing a booklet, one of the Facts for Action series, on how to establish a housing co-operative.)

While the measure was in conference, the National Housing Conference was holding its 19th annual convention in New York. President Truman, who had sent a special appeal to Congress to include the original co-op section, telegraphed the convention that he would "continue to press for legislation to provide more adequately for the housing of middle-income families." The question is expected to become a hot campaign issue this fall.

Fur Union, ACA Hearings Scheduled

HEARINGS HAVE been set for two more CIO unions which were charged last November with being dominated by the Communist Party.

On April 11, a three-man CIO committee will hear testimony on the American Communications Association.

On April 18, another committee will hold hearings on charges filed against the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union.

The ACA is headed by Joseph Selly. The union, rather small in size, has contracts with Western Union in New York, a few cable companies, and a handful of radio stations.

The Fur & Leather Workers Union is headed by Ben Gold, an admitted Communist and member of the Communist Party's national committee. The union is not now represented on the CIO Executive Board, since the CIO constitution bars board membership to Communists.

THE COMMITTEE to hear charges against ACA is composed of David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the steel union; Pres. Harry Sayre of the paper workers; and Pres. Joseph Froesch of the glass workers.

The CIO group which will hear the fur and leather workers' case is headed by McDonald and includes Pres. Joseph Beirne of the Communication Workers of America and Pres. Sayre of the paper workers.

Charges against both unions were filed with the CIO Board last November by Pres. William Steinberg of the American Radio Association.

It is expected that dates for hearings in the cases of three other accused unions—the Longshoremen & Warehousemen, the Marine Cooks & Stewards, and the Fishermen—will be set within the next few days. All three unions are concentrated on the west coast.

Profit Margin Hunted

Congress was asked to appropriate $250,000 for a probe by the Federal Trade Commission of the gap between what the farmer gets and the consumer pays for foodstuffs. Representatives of CIO, AFL and independent unions, cooperatives and the Farmers Union asked for the investigation after an all-day conference at Minneapolis.

CIO Proposal on Unity Warmly Received

THE LABOR unity proposal made by CIO Pres. Philip Murray last week appears to be winning a friendly reception throughout the American trade union movement.

Murray's letter—approved at a meeting of the CIO vice-presidents—was sent to Pres. Green of the AFL, Pres. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, Pres. Hayes of the Machinists, and to the heads of three railway labor organizations.

It proposed that "we establish a joint committee consisting of duly accredited representatives of our various organizations with authority to embark upon and pursue a common program."

The letter suggested that the proposed standing committee should be given a "double mandate."

"Immediately, it should be empowered to coordinate our efforts in the economic, legislative and political spheres," he wrote. "It should also seek to achieve the organic unity of all of American labor."

AT NEW ORLEANS, AFL Pres. Green told the United Press he thought conditions are better for labor unity than at any time in the last six years.

Green, who had gone to the southern city to address an AFL building trades convention, voiced the AFL's traditional belief in actual merger of the CIO and AFL as a first step to unity.

But he pointed out that "a line of unity developed at the London conference last year when the new free world trade union conference was founded." Green said:

"The AFL and CIO voted together there on major issues. If they can agree on an international level, why not on a national level?"

Green said he hoped to have an early meeting with Pres. Murray, and added that the proposal would be referred to the AFL executive council, which meets at Philadelphia starting April 8. The CIO Steelworkers, headed by Murray, will be in convention at nearby Atlantic City the same week.

Philip Murray
Proposes Unity of Action to Defeat Reaction

ANOTHER favorable reply apparently was coming from Pres. Al J. Hayes of the Intl. Association of Machinists, unaffiliated. He told reporters late last week that he was drafting a letter to reply to Pres. Murray.

"We will do everything we possibly can to contribute to a better relationship among the various labor organizations in the country," Hayes said.

"We believe that the more unity among unions, the better the results for the members we represent."

Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers also registered a favorable reaction.

He said that when the miners' executive board meets April 18, the CIO letter will be discussed.

"The executive officers will recommend to the Board that it authorize participation in your suggested joint committee," Lewis wrote.

As the CIO News went to press, no reply had arrived from H. W. Fraser, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association; Alvanley Johnston, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, or Pres. W. P. Kennedy of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

MURRAY SET his plea for labor unity against a background of the "present critical situation facing labor and the nation."

He noted that "reactionary anti-labor forces are again in the ascendency" and voiced concern about growing unemployment. The economy, Murray said, is suffering from the "unrestrained greed" of trusts and monopolies, with their program of "too high prices, too high profits, and too low wages."

Unless the government acts quickly—and at the behest of a united labor movement—a "disastrous depression" is in store for America, Murray wrote. Congress, he added, is under the control of a reactionary coalition that has thwarted most of the Fair Deal program.

Corporation owners and their spokesmen in Congress believe they can take advantage of labor's lack of unity to "return to power in the 1950 elections," he said.

The ideal way—the "desirable goal . . . to which we all aspire"—would be merger of all labor organizations into one single federation, Murray acknowledged.

But pending any such organic unity, "we must find the means, within the framework of our existing organizational structures, to marshal our resources, strength, and membership, in order to overcome the forces of reaction," the CIO president wrote.

Formation of a standing joint committee to coordinate U. S. labor's program would provide inspiration to millions of Americans and "strike fear in the hearts of those who block our road to progress," he said.

"Speaking for the CIO, we stand prepared to cooperate fully with such a committee and to make available our share of whatever means are required for its effective functioning," he went on.

Talking to reporters after the CIO vice-presidents' meeting, Murray said that the joint labor committee, as he pictures it, will be a "standing committee, not a perfunctory committee."

"It is a committee that will be possessed of power and clothed with authority to effectuate agreements on legislative, political and economic matters, and also to achieve organic unity," he said.

"It is not the sort of proposal that any group can throw idly aside," Murray said. "It is the most significant proposal of its kind offered by the CIO to these other organizations since the CIO was organized.

"Personally, I believe the proposal will be hailed with glee by members of all the organizations to whom the letter was addressed.

"It is a friendly offer, and one that I hope will not be lost in the mire of incrimination or recrimination."

Pension Pact Won By TWUA For 5200

Signing of a pension agreement for 5200 workers of Mohawk Carpet Co., Amsterdam, N. Y., has been announced by Jack Rubenstein, carpet and rug director of the CIO Textile Workers. Three other large carpet companies with 14,000 workers signed similar contracts with the union a few weeks ago.

The Mohawk pact, like the three others, grants $100 a month non-contributory pensions, including social security benefits, to workers with 30 years' service with the company. Workers become eligible at the age of 65, but retirement is not compulsory at that age. A worker may accumulate credit toward a pension until the age of 72.

The pension plan will be jointly administered by a committee equally representative of the union and management with a neutral third party serving as chairman.

Text of Murray's Letter Proposing Unity of Action

HERE IS the text of the letter proposing "unity of action" sent by CIO Pres. Philip Murray to Pres. William Green of the American Federation of Labor, Pres. W. P. Kennedy of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Chairman H. W. Frazer of the Railway Labor Executives Association, Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, Grand Chief Engineer Alvanley Johnston of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and Pres. A. J. Hayes of the Intl. Association of Machinists.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I am addressing this appeal to each of you, pursuant to authorization unanimously voted by the CIO Executive Officers and Vice Presidents at their meeting in Washington today, because of the imperative need for common action on the part of organized labor to meet the present critical situation facing labor and the nation.

Despite the people's victory at the 1948 national election, reactionary anti-labor forces are again in the ascendancy.

Our economy suffers from the unrestrained greed of the trusts and monopolists. Their program of too high prices, too high profits, and too low wages has already created widespread unemployment. Millions of Americans, willing and able to work, cannot find jobs. The number of unemployed has ominously increased approximately by one million during each of the post-war years.

It is the inescapable responsibility of organized labor, acting unitedly, to seek and obtain effective governmental action to cope with this alarming problem.

Unless this is done without delay, the economic policies being pursued by the small financial group that dominates American industry will inevitably result in a disastrous depression.

In our national legislature an unholy coalition of Dixiecrats and reactionary Republicans has frustrated all progress towards our common goal of social and economic justice for all Americans.

They have prevented the enactment of a genuine civil rights program. They are engaging themselves in interminable filibusters to block legislation urgently required for the general welfare.

This coalition of Dixiecrats and reactionary Republicans is deliberately stalling the enactment of long overdue improvements in the Social Security Act. They have tabled consideration of a national unified health insurance program. They have defeated a much-needed housing program for middle income families. They are now, at the behest of the real estate lobby, planning to eliminate rent control; such action will result in incalculable hardships to all working families.

Despite the growing menace of unemployment they have thwarted consideration of an economic program which will promote and maintain full employment, full production, and full purchasing power. Notwithstanding the desperate need, they have failed to improve the benefits of our antiquated unemployment compensation laws.

This same group blocked repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. The continued presence of this evil law on the statute books is in large measure responsible for the arrogance manifested by the corporate interests in rejecting labor's just demands. When their employes seek, through collective bargaining, to obtain a measure of economic justice, these economic overlords deliberately force prolonged and unnecessary strikes upon their workers.

Taft-Hartley was used as an employer weapon in the Typographical Union strike against the Chicago newspapers and in the miners' recent dispute with the coal operators. The steel barons sought to invoke its use in the great steel strike. Hundreds of other employers have taken advantage of its oppressive provisions since this law was enacted almost three years ago.

The powerful industrialists and their reactionary spokesmen in Congress dare to defeat the people's will because they sense, and take advantage of, the lack of unity which prevails in the councils of organized labor.

They believe that as a result of this lack of unity they will be returned to power in the 1950 Congressional elections.

Only one thing can defeat them—effective unity of action on the part of our great organizations which speak for millions of American families.

The economic situation, the legislative impasse, and political realities call for common action on our part—now.

The ideal way to meet the challenge would be organic unity of all of labor. This is the desirable goal to which, I am sure, we all aspire.

Pending organic unity, we must find the means, within the framework of our existing organizational structures, to marshal our resources, strength, and membership, in order to overcome the forces of reaction. In this way we can best preserve and advance the interests of our members and of the nation at large.

I therefore propose that we establish a joint committee consisting of duly accredited representatives of our various organizations with authority to embark upon and pursue a common program. This committee should be given a double mandate. Immediately, it should be empowered to coordinate our efforts in the economic, legislative, and political spheres. It should also seek to achieve the organic unity of all of American labor.

The establishment of such a standing joint committee would provide much-needed inspiration and leadership for the millions of liberal Americans who are now so much on the defensive. The activities of such a committee would be an assurance of a better day for all our people. A united committee of all American labor would strike fear in the hearts of those who block our road to progress. All that is needed, on our part, is the wisdom and courage to join together.

Speaking for the CIO, we stand prepared to cooperate fully with such a committee and to make available our share of whatever means are required for its effective functioning.

I solicit your early favorable reply so that we can jointly undertake to set up the necessary procedures for the establishment of such a united labor committee.

McCarthy Should Receive 'Irresponsibility' Award

Republican Senator from Wisconsin Has Done Great Harm to Individuals Accused And To Our Entire Foreign Policy

By ALLAN L. SWIM

SENATOR Joe McCarthy, the Wisconsin Senator who says the State Dept. is crawling with Communists and fellow travelers, should be awarded a tin medal for irresponsibility.

Few lawmakers have done so much harm in so short a time to so many people.

And nobody in recent years has done as much to sabotage the U. S. foreign policy at a time when our relations with the rest of the world are of the utmost importance.

Even if the Senator had proved his charges—which he hasn't—the methods he has been using still warrant condemnation.

And the lawmakers who have been supporting him must share responsibility for his misdeeds.

EVERY PERSON in the United States has a stake in the McCarthy Affair—although many of them have behaved as if they were witnessing merely another political brawl of little concern to them.

Here's how the situation stacks up:

At the end of the war there were two major world powers—the United States and Soviet Russia.

It soon became apparent that Russia was embarking on an expansionist program—a program designed to spread Communism throughout the world.

The U. S., strongest champion of democracy, squared off to do battle in the "cold war" which Russia instituted.

One of our chief weapons became the Marshall Plan, into which we have poured huge sums on the theory that economically healthy nations will not succomb to Communism.

Neither McCarthy nor anybody else has dared accuse the State Dept. of trying to hinder the Marshall Plan.

OUR NATION'S next major step in the "cold war" was to push the North Atlantic Pact until it became a reality.

And nobody dared accuse the State Dept. of trying to sabotage the Pact—because the Pact was largely the State Dept.'s "baby."

Then the Administration, of which the State Dept. is an important cog, began pushing for the "Point 4" program of aid to underdeveloped areas — areas which might swing to Communism unless the democracies paid more attention to them.

Up to this point the nation had been pursuing what was generally called a "bipartisan foreign policy."

Then Senator McCarthy hauled out his big bucket of "red paint" and began smearing away.

This gave some of our isolationists a chance to sound off—and sound off they did.

And imagine how people throughout the world must have reacted when they "learned" that our State Dept.—the agency leading the fight against Communism—was loaded down with Communists.

IT'S EASY TO argue, of course, that people in foreign countries don't believe the McCarthy charges.

But that's a weak argument.

Many people in the nation's capital—right on the scene of the action—seem inclined to believe them merely because they have read the accusations in bold headlines.

Although the charges have not been proved, victims of the McCarthy smear have been suffering reprisals from their neighbors.

And if you link the McCarthy Affair with some of the utterances of other members of Congress you might easily get the idea that the U. S. is trying to play on both sides of the ideological road and use its economic aid to meddle in the internal affairs of other countries.

There have been demands in Congress that we withhold ECA funds from Great Britain because she has a socialistic government. And the recent vote in the House to withhold British aid until the partition of Ireland is eliminated didn't help any—even if the vote was reversed later.

McCARTHY certainly should have known that you can't smear the State Dept. and Secy. Dean Acheson without smearing our foreign policy.

If he believed our foreign policy was wrong he could have said so and debated the matter on its merits. This he didn't do.

He made some sweeping charges, then some less sweeping, then tried to narrow his case to one man.

So far he hasn't proved his accusations against a single individual.

But he has proved that a Senator who acts like a bull in a China shop can do a lot of harm.

—From Charleston, W. Va., Gazette

Joe to Joe

Our Unity Move

The need for greater unity and cooperation among the various groups of organized labor in this country has become increasingly apparent since the end of the war.

The forces of reaction—or whatever else you may want to call the groups that brought about the enactment of the Taft-Hartley Act and are fighting the Fair Deal—have been working diligently to weaken labor.

Their campaign hasn't been aimed merely at the CIO, or the AFL, the railroad brotherhoods, the Mine Workers or the Machinists. It has been aimed at all of labor.

And although they disagree on a number of things, the anti-labor forces in Congress have demonstrated the value of unity and cooperation. The Dixiegop coalition has proved effective in blocking liberal legislation.

Various labor groups throughout the country have demonstrated they can work closely together, regardless of their affiliation, in seeking to solve mutual problems.

And the big national labor organizations have been working together effectively in the international field.

It was such things as these that the CIO executive officers and vice presidents had in mind last week when they approved what the press has termed "the CIO's unity move."

The CIO's invitation to other groups to join in the creation of a standing committee to tackle the problems of closer cooperation and eventual "organic" unity wasn't a grandstand play.

It was a sincere appeal to other labor groups to unify their efforts and to join in a common offensive against anti-labor forces.

The CIO did not attempt to spell out the details of how this might be accomplished. It merely called on other labor groups to join with the CIO in establishing a standing committee to tackle the job.

CIO officials were hopeful that those receiving the invitation would study it carefully, realize its importance and then give affirmative answers.

A Skillet Is A Skillet, Is A Skillet

A Steelco skillet, made by Steelco Steel Products Co. of Chicago, may be just the thing in which to cook up a batch of ham and eggs but the Federal Trade Commission says using one won't make your hair glossy or your teeth pearly, as the company's salesmen have been claiming.

FTC has ruled that Steelco utensils are just utensils and nothing more and that the company has "misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public."

The company has been ordered to stop misrepresenting its product and disparaging competing products.

C'mon And Vote, TWUA To UTW

THE CIO Textile Workers has challenged the AFL United Textile Workers to let the 2500 employes of the Dominion Textile Co.'s four mills in Montreal, Canada, pick their own bargaining representative in a vote supervised by the Quebec Labour Relations Board.

The challenge was issued to the UTW, which is Communist-dominated in Canada, by Samuel Baron, TWUA Canadian director, after a couple of stormy membership meetings of the former UTW Local 102. It went to R. Kent Rowley, UTW Canadian director, and an accompanying letter pointed out that the membership of the local "has been in revolt and has revolted against the leadership of the Canadian District and the UTW as such."

Baron in his letter recalled that on Jan. 22 the local members, after hearing Rowley and UTW Intl. Rep. Madeleine Parent, repudiated both of them in connection with charges against Axelus Beaucage, former UTW international representative who had led the revolt. On Feb. 19 the local executive board again rejected Rowley's report, upheld Beaucage and retained him as a business agent of the local.

On Mar. 12, he again recalled, the local reiterated its support of Beaucage, expelled Parent as an official of the local, disaffiliated from the UTW and voted to affiliate with the TWUA, which it described as "a progressive union."

The TWUA director told Rowley that the dispute is not over "what Rowley and Parent or . . . Baron and Beaucage want—it is what the workers involved want."

Baron's proposals provided that the union losing the election cease all activity at the four mills and that a formula for disposition of the Local 102 treasury, based on the result, be agreed upon in advance.

The CIO union is affiliated with the Canadian Congress of Labour.

Read This If You Wanna Get Sore

All that a lot of students in the nation's schools know about the history of the American labor movement may have come from a booklet issued by the National Association of Manufacturers.

NAM officials make claims along this line, according to a recent article by Gilbert Geis, "The NAM in the Schools." Geis says that during the first nine months of 1949, the NAM issued nearly 2 million booklets, sponsored 46 network and 47 local radio programs and conducted 98 workshops.

"A major target of the NAM propaganda barrage is the youth of the country," writes Geis. "NAM officials have claimed that their booklets are read by two out of every three American high school students; that many students are taught the history of the American labor movement from an NAM booklet; and that this material has become required reading for many students."

Reprints of this disturbing article from the March issue of "The Progressive," are available from the National CIO Dept. of Education & Research in bulk quantities: 100 to 999 copies, 3c each; 1000 or more, 2c each.

Transport Workers Try Former Officer

The CIO Transport Workers Union recently tried Maurice Forge, one-time international vice president, on 10 charges pressed by Intl. Pres. Michael Quill. Included were accusations of a campaign of deceit and treachery with hostile forces to divide and disrupt TWU and CIO. The decision will be announced later.

Forced from the international union in 1948, Forge appeared at the hearing dressed as a bus driver, protested the legality of the hearing, and walked out. Previously expelled were Austin Hogan, one-time president of Local 100; Douglas McMahon, formerly secretary-treasurer of the international; and John Santo, once director of organization, who has been deported.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President — James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer

Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher

Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb. 28, 1925.

Vol. XIII — April 10, 1950 — No. 15

They Attempted To Beat Wrong Man

IT WAS a simple but rough little plot designed to cast discredit on the CIO, break up a picnic and—perhaps—send a few unionists to the hospital.

The scheme, cooked up by some of the strongly anti-union elements of a fairly good sized city, appeared on the surface to be foolproof.

A group of men from out of town would arrive on the scene, start a fight, cause the cops to be called and then "disappear."

But the plot backfired when they tried to beat up the wrong man.

Here's what happened:

THE STATE CIO director, a big, husky fellow who would do credit to himself in a boxing ring, planned a Fourth of July picnic for union members of the area.

It was to be a big affair. Invitations were sent to all CIO locals in the district and to a number of prominent local citizens, including the mayor.

The CIO director wanted everything to be "just right" because organizers had been having trouble with city officials. Several of them had been arrested on charges of violating a city ordinance prohibiting the distribution of leaflets.

The picnic, the director thought, would provide an opportunity for some good public relations work.

So the affair had been planned carefully.

BECAUSE OF THE press of other business, the CIO director arrived late at the picnic grounds — and what he saw nearly made his eyes pop out.

Six men, none of whom he had ever seen before, were trying to "work over" another stranger—a man about the size and age of the director.

Without asking any questions, the CIO man jumped into the fray. He and the other big fellow were more than handling their end of the fight when the cops arrived.

He immediately thought of the harm that had been done and visualized headlines telling about the "brawl" at the CIO picnic.

And he wasn't so sure that he wouldn't land in jail and have to fight a case in court.

THEN A CURIOUS thing happened. The big stranger to whose rescue the director had gone, brushed the dirt off his clothing and then told the police to "lock up those thugs."

And the police, without arguing, hauled the six men off to jail.

Then the big stranger disappeared into the crowd. Nobody seemed to know exactly who he was—and the director could easily understand why he had made a quick exit.

The picnic was resumed and everybody seemed to have a good time.

But the director kept wondering about the big stranger—and he wondered, too, why the police had picked neither of them up.

ON THE FOLLOWING day the CIO director received a letter written on an "Official" city letterhead. It asked him to come to the mayor's office.

He complied with the request, strolled into the mayor's office a short time later and got one of the biggest surprises of his life.

"His Honor" was none other than the big stranger who had been his fighting partner at the picnic.

The mayor said he'd heard a rumor that a gang from out of town was going to cause trouble, and that he dropped in at the picnic just to check on whether there was any truth to it.

"And those fellows, who didn't know you by sight, were told they could spot you easily because you'd be the biggest man there," the mayor said. "But I was the biggest one there until you arrived."

A. L. S.

Coloring 'Em All Red This Easter

Anti-Red Italian Union Leader Still Good Spinner

THREE ITALIAN trade union leaders studying working conditions in the United States in 1949 walked into a spinning room of a New Jersey textile mill.

A woman tending one of the machines looked up just as one of the fast-running yarns broke. A short, stocky member of the Italian trio stepped into her place and with nimble fingers did her job for her, tying the yarn with the quick, deft motion which was her own special skill.

The others jeered good-naturedly.

"You were just lucky," they said. "You couldn't do it again if you tried."

Giulio Pastore turned back to the machine, sweeping his hand across a long row of spindles, breaking a dozen of the yarns. Then his sure fingers played across the wool, tying all the strands again.

GIULIO PASTORE

As in so many other European countries, the Marshall Plan was the hinge upon which the democratic Italian trade unionists turned away from the Communists. Pastore was the first Italian union leader to recognize the American effort for European recovery as a powerful force to save the Italian worker from ruin and enslavement to Russia.

Pa ore was born in Genoa in 1902. Within a few years after starting to work he was an organizer for his union. When he was 18 he was elected its secretary.

It was in the early 20's, when great social and political ferment was rising in the aftermath of World War I. The young Pastore soon faced the beginning of the Fascist violence that he was to fight for two decades.

BEFORE HE was 20, Pastore was a follower and student of the late Achille Grandi, labor leader whose memory is revered by Italian trade unionists. He became editor of an anti-Fascist Catholic newspaper. The paper, "Il Cittadino," was seized 16 times, and each time Pastore returned to fight again. In 1926, however, after an attempt on Mussolini's life, the Fascist police got tougher and Pastore, refusing to follow the Fascist line, was fired from the paper by government order.

Thrown out of work, he became a bank cashier—a job he held until 1935, although he continued clandestine resistance to Facism and established a humour publication, "The Giraffe," which so pricked the Facists that they closed it.

In 1935 Pastore was called to Rome to reorganize administratively the Catholic Youth Association. In 1942 he took part, under the leadership of Alcide de Gasperi, in the revival of the Catholic political movement which became the Christian Democratic Party.

In 1943 he was associated with Grandi in the under-cover Farm Workers Confederation, and by early fall was an active underground agent. The next spring he was caught by the Fascists and jailed. It was not until the liberation of Rome that he was released to resume his efforts for union unity.

PASTORE BECAME a member of the executive committee of the Christian-Democrat Party in 1944, and later a party director. In June, 1946, he was elected a deputy to a regional governmental body from Torina Novara and Vercelli. Two years later he became a member of Parliament.

In 1944 Pastore became a founder of the ACLI, the Christian Association of Italian Workers, for which he was the first general secretary. In March, 1947, he became a general secretary of the CGIL, the Italian General Confederation of Labor, in which he promptly engaged in the fight against Communist dictatorship of the labor movement which led Pastore and his followers to walk out on July 14, 1948.

He promptly organized the LCGIL, or Free Italian General Federation of Labor, which, under his leadership, grew to a million-member unit by the end of 1949.

Unity of non-Communist Italian workers is a goal Pastore has sought since the war ended. His trip to the U. S. in 1949 spurred his ambition. He was convinced of two facts: that the Communists were dead wrong in their charge that American workers are "slaves," and that the non-Communist Italian trade unions could and should unify.

Jobless To Tell Their Stories In Washington

State, Local Units Spur Employment

A WEAPON that has been used with some success to fight unemployment practically at the plant gate is the full employment program committee.

Such committees for areas hard hit by joblessness were originally proposed by Labor Secy. Maurice J. Tobin at the behest of the Dept. of Labor's Bureau of Employment Security. A number of them have been named by governors and mayors with public, labor and industry representation, and have gone to work with varying success. In several cases state and local CIO leaders are active in their work.

Basically the job of a committee either state or community-wide, is to find out what the area covered has and what it needs—and then get the latter. Both what it has and what it needs are culled from information already gathered, or sometimes specifically obtained at the committee's report, from one of a large number of federal, state or local agencies which work actively with it.

What a community has includes its available manpower and a breakdown of training and skills; its plant, its other physical and financial facilities, what raw or semi-processed materials flow naturally and readily into it. What it needs includes the jobs to utilize the skills of the workers available, operations that can fit into existing facilities, etc.

ONE PLACE where something constructive has been accomplished is Nashua, N. H., where the community's economy was completely disrupted when Royal Little blandly decided one day to close up the local operations of Textron, Inc., the city's largest employer.

A State Full Employment Program Committee—on which Harold Daoust, president of the New Hampshire Industrial Union Council, represents the shoe industry—and a local committee were formed and worked together.

First a non-profit trust, the Nashua-New Hampshire Foundation, was formed to rent and sell industrial property. The foundation surveyed local changes since the Textron announcement and found that 10 new firms, all small, had sprung into existence.

As of a couple of months ago they had between them nearly 800 employes. Textron yielded to pressure and continued operations sufficient to provide 1800 jobs. These with other employment expansion helped or inspired by the two committees yielded between 3000 and 3500 jobs—or about as many as Textron had employed in October, 1948.

AT PORT HURON, Mich., a local committee went out looking for new industries and captured three. The Blue Water District Industrial Fund was set up to hunt out still more and arranged to give local firms full information on government contracts in the hope of capturing awards and creating jobs. The committee also was instrumental in getting a local loan of $30,000 for one company to supplement an RFC loan.

Among the CIO representatives on full employment program committees are:

Clarence L. Palmer, president of the Utah Industrial Union Council, and George Wilde, district chairman of the Progressive Metalworkers Council of the CIO Shipbuilders, on the Utah committee; George Brown, secretary-treasurer of the Oregon Industrial Union Council, on the Oregon committee; Sigmund Grandy, president of the Jackson, Mich., Council and a member of the local committee, and Harold C. Davis, president of the St. Clair County (Mich.) CIO Council and a member of the local committee in Port Huron, Mich.

Signs Like This Appear When Unemployment Rises

CCL Warns Govt. Should Act To Avoid Permanent Unemployment

CANADA FACES a permanent unemployment problem of ever-increasing seriousness unless the government takes the lead in an aggressive, planned effort to boost consumption, the Canadian Congress of Labour has warned Prime Minister St. Laurent and his cabinet.

Unemployment is more serious at present than official figures indicate, the cabinet was told, and properly should be listed as 10.4% of the country's labor force instead of the 7.4% shown by official figures, the cabinet was advised.

The CCL position was made clear to the national leaders in briefs filed by a delegation headed by Pres. A. R. Mosher and Sec.-Treas. Pat Conroy. CIO unions in Canada belong to the CCL, which represents about 360,000 workers.

Production in Canada has been increasing faster than employment, which has been decreasing the CCL delegation said. The brief continued:

"IN SHORT, OUR labour force is constantly increasing, and our industry is becoming steadily more efficient, so that it needs fewer workers to produce a given quantity of goods. With a rising supply of labour, and a falling demand per unit of production, the result is bound to be more and more unemployment.

"Unless we can raise our standard of living far enough and fast enough to keep pace with the growth of the labour force and in productivity per man, unemployment will continue to grow, though of course, with seasonal fluctuations. Present indications are that this year's national income will be only very slightly higher than last year's. The Prime Minister, on Feb. 20, put the probable increase in gross national product a little over 1.5%.

"This is certainly not enough to prevent a further increase in unemployment over the levels prevailing last year and the year before. Something more is required: a planned effort to increase consumption and keep it increasing as fast as our productive power."

Proposals advanced by the CCL to meet this situation included:

- Use of the government's monetary and fiscal policy to maintain an effective demand for goods produced.
- Maintenance of consumer demand by a broad social security program.
- Encouragement of the mobility of labour by the diversification of industry.
- Action to curb seasonal fluctuations in employment.
- Public works projects.
- New methods of keeping and expanding foreign markets.
- Adoption of the 40-hour week.

Joblessness has increased by nearly 54,000 in the Quebec region in the last two years, the brief explained; more than 46,000 in Ontario, about 6,000 in Winnipeg, and almost 28,000 in the Pacific region. The delegation rejected the contention that seasonal unemployment is "normal," described its reappearance as "intolerable" and claimed that if it can be eliminated in wartime, it can be eliminated in peace.

"It may require some changes in our economic and social institutions," the CCL said bluntly. "But those institutions were made for man, not man for the institutions."

The Congress also dealt with such subjects as housing, rent controls, unemployment insurance, social security and immigration.

One of Eight Still Walking Streets in Some Sections

THE DANGEROUSLY lengthening roll of the nation's unemployed, which reached an eight-year high in February, was trimmed back by 561,000 persons in March, the Census Bureau reported on April 3.

At the same time the number of the employed increased by 598,000.

The drop in jobless cut the number of unemployed from 4,684,000 in February to 4,123,000 in March—still over the four-million mark and too close for comfort to the five-million mark in view of the heavy additions to the labor force, both permanent and temporary, due when schools close in June.

The number of people working increased during the month from 56,953,000 in February to 57,551,000 in March—so far below the goal of 60 million jobs that in many communities in different parts of the country one worker out of every eight is still walking the streets.

Most of the new jobs went to agricultural workers, for whom a seasonal increase in demand created 452,000 vacancies and raised the total employed to 6,675,000. Non-agricultural employment, most of it in industry and much of it in plants where the employment level had dropped but temporarily, rose by 147,000 to 50,877,000.

THE DROP in unemployment was to be expected at this time of the year but was greater than generally anticipated. One of the contributing factors was that new entrants into the labor market—people looking for work for the first time—bulked only 18,000 substantially less than usual in March.

Forecasters predicted that the downward trend in unemployment will continue in April and May, but rise again when the schools close in June. The school closings will create both temporary and long range problems — the former caused by students seeking work only for the summer vacation, the latter by an addition to the labor force swelled to larger size than normal by the greatest influx of GI college graduates yet.

CIO To Bring Groups From Dozen Areas

SOME of the men and women who are pounding the pavements of the country's industrial centers in search of jobs will tell their disheartening stories to members of Congress and government officials beginning this week.

With them will come some of the union officers who have been lying awake nights wrestling with the problem.

They are being brought to Washington by the Natl. CIO Full Employment Committee and are coming, in groups of four and five at a time, from about a dozen industrial areas where joblessness is widespread. They will describe conditions in cities in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York Pennsylvania, Michigan and other midwestern states, according to Everett Kassalow, director of the committee.

Accompained by CIO staff members, they will talk to their own congressmen and senators, and to cabinet members, the Council of Economic Advisers and with people in federal agencies having to do with the unemployed.

"We are concerned," said Kassalow, "about the failure of official Washington—both Congress and many administration leaders—to give sufficient attention to the unemployment problem that has been emerging for nearly a year and a half.

"The delegations we are bringing to Washington will be representative primarily of a few specific areas, and, in a few cases, of a few specific industries.

"The CIO and its members have become increasingly concerned about the growth of the unemployment problem, about lack of plans for dealing realistically with the needs of unemployed men and women, and about the necessity for devising governmental and industrial programs that will lead the nation back toward full employment."

U. S. Rubber Signs Pension Pact

The CIO Rubber Workers announced that the contract signed last week with U. S. Rubber Co. contains a number of provisions never before included in a URW agreement.

The pact, covering 33,000 workers in 19 plants of the company, provides for the payment of a $100-a-month minimum pension at the age of 65 after 25 years of service. The actual pension for each individual will amount to 1% of total earnings if more than the minimum.

The 1% will be based upon the worker's 10 highest consecutive years' earnings rather than on the final 10-year total as has been the case in similar URW contracts.

Only half of the federal social security payments will be included in the pension calculations. The contract permits an employe to retire with a minimum pension of $80 after 20 years service.

Disability payments begin immediately, and the company will pay the cost of a $2000 life insurance policy for all workers, who will have the option of purchasing another $1000.

Kerr Bill In HST's Lap As House Passes Measure

By GERVASE N. LOVE

PRESIDENT TRUMAN was on the spot last week.

He had a choice of lining up with the special interests he had always opposed—and incidentally giving the Republicans the kind of campaign material that has always been the exclusive property of the Democrats — or of staying lined up with the people but alienating some of the most generous contributors to his campaign fund.

He was the last remaining barrier to the natural gas monopoly's invasion of the consumer's pocketbook as authorized by Congress. And in his winter vacation retreat at Key West, Fla., he was being buried under a spate of letters and telegrams urging him either to approve or to veto the Kerr bill exempting independent natural gas producers from regulation by the Federal Power Commission.

ONE OF THE messages asking him to kill the bill came from the executive officers and vice presidents of the CIO, who met in Washington last week. They indorsed the request Pres. Philip Murray made on Mar. 31 that he veto the gas steal and added:

"This bill represents the worst type of special interest legislation.

"The Kerr bill goes contrary, in spirit and action, to the philosophy of the Fair Deal program. It would enrich small groups of wealthy corporations already enjoying some of the greatest profits in their history. It would cause another rise in the living costs of families dependent on natural gas for heating or cooking and compelled to pay whatever price is fixed for the product they use.

"The Kerr bill would undermine federal regulation of basic utilities by permitting oil companies to fix their own prices on the natural gas they sell to interstate pipelines.

"Through the destruction of this regulation, there can be no doubt that the oil corporations which control our natural gas reserves will exact huge additional tolls from the consuming public.

"There is simply no justification for the Kerr bill."

CIO Legislative Committee members urged that all unionists let the President know of their opposition to the bill by sending messages "immediately" to the White House. He has until April 17 to act.

The President decided to delay action on the measure, possibly until after his return to Washington, when he received a telegram from the mayors of 18 large cities asking a veto on the ground its approval will mean a boost of $200 million to $500 million a year in gas rates. The chief beneficiaries of the bill, they said, would be 35 big oil companies which control most of the production.

The wire bore the signatures of the mayors of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Denver, Toledo, Birmingham, Akron and St. Paul.

THE INDEPENDENT producers of gas do nothing but produce. They sell their product "at arm's length" to pipeline companies which distribute it and which are subject to FPC regulation. Producers who also distribute likewise are regulated by the FPC. The independents never have been regulated in the past, but a Supreme Court decision indicated the federal government has the authority to regulate if it deems it necessary.

The Kerr bill was introduced when the FPC started considering the possibility of doing something about the independents. It passed the House almost as a "sleeper" at the last session of Congress, and was approved by a 44 to 38 vote in the Senate on Mar. 29 after a bitter fight between senators representing the consumers of the northeast and middle west and those representing the producers of the southwest. Sen. Douglas (D. Ill.), who led the fight against it, predicted that if enacted into law it would cost natural gas consumers billions of dollars before present producing wells and the wells in sight are exhausted.

The measure had to go back to the House for concurrence in a face-saving amendment requiring the FPC to make a continuing study to determine if prices or supplies are affected by monopolistic lack of competition by producers.

It ran into another bitter fight from which it squeaked victorious by virtue of the personal intervention of Speaker Rayburn (D. Tex.) and the fact that four Representatives switched their votes from 'no' to 'yes' after a rollcall had been completed. The final tally, taken at a night session on Mar. 31, was 176 to 174.

Rayburn first intervened by using his influence with the Rules Committee to clear the way after action had been temporarily blocked. The committee obediently sent it to the floor for immediate action with a one-hour limit on debate.

Rep. Heselton (R. Mass.) promptly charged that is was being "rammed" through the House.

Rep. Madden (D. Ind.) predicted prices would rise $100 million a year and branded the bill "political dynamite." Rep. Biemiller (D. Wis.) warned it would be the "hottest issue" in the forthcoming campaign. Rep. Michener (R. Mich.) declared it would give the gas-producing states the power to fix the prices of gas consumed outside their borders.

Rep. Lyle (D. Tex.), speaking for the bill, asserted flatly that it will not increase prices. Rep. Halleck (R. Ind.) solemnly warned that if the federal government gets the right to regulate gas production it "might go on to control the price of coal, oil and other industries."

Then Rayburn fired the big gun. Walking into the well of the House, he denied that the measure favored "the big gas monopolists," and continued:

"I don't think, in view of my record in this House, I could be accused of having any great desire to serve the interests over the people."

How well it serves the "big gas monopolists" was demonstrated in the Senate when an amendment offered by Sen. Kefauver (D. Tenn.) was rejected. The amendment would have exempted from regulation the really small independents — those producing no more than two billion cubic feet a year, or having a gross income of no more than $250,000. This would have meant regulation of only the 37 largest of the 2300 to 2500 independent producers.

The four Congressmen who turned the House vote from victory to defeat by switching their votes were Reps. Shafer (Mich.), Wilson (Ind.) and Latham (N. Y.), all Republicans, and Rep. Moulder (D. Mo.).

More Democrats voted against the bill than for it, and more Republicans voted for it than against it—the reverse of the lineup in the Senate. Ninety-seven Democrats and 79 Republicans favored the measure, while 116 Democrats, 57 Republicans and one American Laborite were opposed.

Members of both houses who fought on the losing side called upon President Truman to veto it.

Rep. Keating (R. N. Y.) wired the President urging "a veto of this grab by a handful of Democrat campaign contributors."

If President Truman signs the measure, Keating said, "it will surely rise to haunt him at every whistle stop he makes on his forthcoming political tour." He sarcastically added he understood it was true that prices will not rise—"until after the election."

U.S. Control Of Local Gas Firms Opposed

Everybody wants to get out from under federal regulation of natural gas since Congress passed the Kerr bill exempting independent producers who do no distributing.

The National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners last week asked a House Interstate Commerce sub-committee to remove local gas distributors from regulation by the Federal Power Commission. The association wants state regulation of gas.

The line forms on the right. The extreme right.

How House Members Voted on Kerr Gas Measure

Here's the record by which the House voted, 176-174, on March 31, to pass the Kerr Natural Gas Bill in final form. The bill will cost consumers millions of dollars a year through slashing power of U. S. to regulate natural gas rates. Ninety-seven Democrats and 79 Republicans voted for the bill; 116 Democrats, 57 Republicans and one American Labor Party voted against. Votes for the bill are marked W; votes against, R. Pairs are indicated by PR and PW. A means absent or not voting.

ALA.—Andrews (D) .. W
Battle (D) .... PW
Boykin (D) .... W
deGraffenried (D) W
Elliott (D) .... W
Grant (D) .... PW
Hobbs (D) .... R
Jones (D) .... W
Rains (D) .... W
ARIZ.—Murdock (D) W
Patten (D) .... W
ARK.—Gathings (D) .. W
Harris (D) .... W
Hays (D) .... W
Mills (D) .... W
Norrell (D) .... W
Tackett (D) .... W
Trimble (D) .... W
CAL.—Allen (R) .... W
Anderson (R) .... W
Bramblett (R) .... W
Douglas (D) .... PR
Doyle (D) .... R
Engle (D) .... PR
Havenner (D) .... R
Hinshaw (R) .... W
Holifield (D) .... R
Jackson (R) .... PW
Johnson (R) .... R
King (D) .... R
McDonough (R) .. R
McKinnon (D) .... W
Miller (D) .... R
Nixon (R) .... A
Phillips (R) .... W
Poulson (R) .... W
Scudder (R) .... W
Sheppard (D) .... W
Shelley (D) .... R
Werdel (R) .... W
White (D) .... R
COLO.—Aspinall (D) R
Carroll (D) .... PR
Hill (R) .... W
Marsalis (D) .... R
CONN.—Lodge (R) .... R
McGuire (D) .... R
Patterson (R) .... R
Ribicoff (D) .... PR
Sadlak (R) .... R
Woodhouse (D) .... R
DEL.—Boggs (R) .... A
FLA.—Bennett (D) .... PW
Herlong (D) .... W
Peterson (D) .... W
Rogers (D) .... W
Sikes (D) .... W
Smathers (D) .... A
GA.—Brown (D) .... W
Camp (D) .... W
Cox (D) .... W
Davis (D) .... R
Lanham (D) .... R
Pace (D) .... W
Preston (D) .... W
Vinson (D) .... W
Wheeler (D) .... PW
Wood (D) .... A
IDA.—Sanborn (R) .... W
White (D) .... A
Ill.—Allen (R) .... W
Arends (R) .... W
Bishop (R) .... R
Buckley (D) .... PR
Chesney (D) .... PR
Chiperfield (R) .... A
Dawson (D) .... PR
Gordon (D) .... R
Hoffman (R) .... A
Jenison (R) .... W
Jonas (R) .... R
Linehan (D) .... R
Mack (D) .... R
Mason (R) .... PR
McMillen (R) .... W
O'Brien (D) .... R
O'Hara (D) .... R
Price (D) .... R
Reed (R) .... W
Sabath (D) .... A
Simpson (R) .... W
Velde (R) .... R
Vursell (R) .... W
Yates (D) .... R
IND.—Crook (D) .... R
Denton (D) .... R
Halleck (R) .... W
Harden (R) .... R
Harvey (R) .... R
Jacobs (D) .... R
Kruse (D) .... PR
Madden (D) .... R
Noland (D) .... R
Walsh (D) .... R
Wilson (R) .... W
IA.—Cunningham (R) R
Dolliver (R) .... W
Gross (R) .... R
Hoeven (R) .... R
Jensen (R) .... W
LeCompte (R) .... R
Martin (R) .... W
Talle (R) .... R
KAN.—Cole (R) .... W
Hope (R) .... W
Meyer (R) .... W
Rees (R) .... W
Scrivner (R) .... W
Smith (R) .... W
KY.—Bates (D) .... W
Chelf (D) .... R
Gregory (D) .... W
Golden (R) .... R
Morton R) .... R
Perkins (D) .... R
Spence (D) .... R
Underwood (D) .... W
Whitaker (D) .... PW
LA.—Allen (D) .... W
Boggs (D) .... W
Brooks (D) .... W
Hebert (D) .... PW
Larcade (D) .... W
Morrison (D) .... W
Passman (D) .... W
Willis (D) .... W
ME.—Fellows (R) .... A
Hale (R) .... A
Nelson (R) .... A
MD.—Beall (R) .... W
Bolton (D) .... R
Fallon (D) .... R
Garmatz (D) .... R
Miller (R) .... W
Sasscer (D) .... A
MASS.—Bates (R) .... R
Donohue (D) .... R
Furcolo (D) .... R
Goodwin (R) .... W
Herter (R) .... W
Heselton (R) .... R
Kennedy (D) .... R
Lane (D) .... R
Martin (R) .... W
McCormack (D) .... W
Nicholson (R) .... W
Philbin (D) .... R
Roggers (R) .... W
Wigglesworth (R) PR
MICH.—Bennett (R) .. R
Blackney (R) .... W
Crawford (R) .... A
Dingell (D) .... R
Dondero (R) .... R
Engel (R) .... R
Ford (R) .... R
Hoffman (R) .... W
Lesinski (D) .... R
Michener (R) .... R
O'Brien (D) .... R
Potter (R) .... R
Rabaut (D) .... R
Sadowski (D) .... A
Shafer (R) .... W
Wolcott (R) .... A
Woodruff (R) .... A
MINN.—Andersen (R) R
Andresen (R) .... A
Blatnik (D) .... R
Hagen (R) .... R
Judd (R) .... R
Marshall (D) .... A
McCarthy (D) .... R
O'Hara (R) .... W
Wier (D) .... R
MISS.—Abernethy (D) W
Colmer (D) .... W
Rankin (D) .... W
Whitten (D) .... W
Whittington (D) W
Williams (D) .... W
Winstead (D) .... W
MO.—Bolling (D) .... R
Cannon (D) .... R
Carnahan (D) .... R
Cristopher (D) .... R
Irving (D) .... R
Jones (D) .... W
Karst (D) .... R
Karsten (D) .... R
Magee (D) .... R
Moulder (D) .... W
Short (R) .... W
Sullivan (D) .... R
Welch (D) .... PR
MONT.—D'Ewart (R) W
Mansfield (D) .... R
NEB.—Curtis (R) .... W
Miller (R) .... W
O'Sullivan (D) .... R
Stefan (R) .... R
NEV.—Baring (D) .... A
N. H.—Cotton (R) .... W
Merrow (R) .... W
N. J.—Addonizio (D) R
Auchincloss (R) .. R
Canfield (R) .... R
Case (R) .... R
Eaton (R) .... A
Hand (R) .... R
Hart (D) .... R
Howell (D) .... R
Kean (R) .... R
Norton (D) .... A
Rodino (D) .... R
Thomas (R) .... W
Towe (R) .... A
Wolverton (R) .... A
N. M.—Fernandez (D) W
Miles (D) .... A
N. Y.—Buckley (D) .... R
Byrne (D) .... A
Celler (D) .... PR
Clemente (D) .... R
Cole (R) .... W
Coudert (R) .... A
Davies (D) .... R
Delaney (D) .... R
Dollinger (D) .... R
Gamble (R) .... W
Gorski (D) .... R
Gwinn (R) .... W
Hall, E. A. (R) .... A
Hall, L. W. (R) .. W
Heffernan (D) .... R
Heller (D) .... R
Javits (R) .... R
Kearney (R) .... R
Keating (R) .... R
Kelly (D) .... R
Keogh (D) .... R
Kilburn (R) .... W
Klein (D) .... R
Latham (R) .... W
LeFevre (R) .... W
Lynch (D) .... A
Macy (R) .... PW
Marcantonio (ALP) R
McGrath (D) .... R
Multer (D) .... R
Murphy (D) .... PR
O'Toole (D) .... R
Pfeifer, J. L. (D) R
Pfeiffer, W. L. (R) PR
Powell (D) .... A
Quinn (D) .... R
Reed (R) .... PW
Riehlman (R) .... A
Rooney (D) .... R
Roosevelt (D) .... R
St. George (R) .... R
Taylor (R) .... W
Taber (R) .... R
Tauriello (D) .... R
Wadsworth (R) .... W
N. C.—Barden (D) .... A
Bonner (D) .... W
Bulwinkle (D) .... A
Carlye (D) .... W
Chatham (D) .... W
Cooley (D) .... W
Deane (D) .... W
Doughton (D) .... A
Durham (D) .... PW
Jones (D) .... W
Kerr (D) .... W
Redden (D) .... PW
N. D.—Burdick (R) .... PR
Lemke (R) .... R
OHIO—Bolton (R) .... W
Breen (D) .... R
Brehm (R) .... W
Brown (R) .... W
Burke (D) .... R
Clevenger (R) .... W
Crosser (D) .... R
Elston (R) .... R
Feighan (D) .... R
Hays (D) .... R
Huber (D) .... R
Jenkins (R) .... W
Kirwan (D) .... R
McCulloch (R) .... W
McGregor (R) .... A
McSweeney (D) .... R
Polk (D) .... R
Secrest (D) .... W
Smith (R) .... A
Vorys (R) .... W
Wagner (D) .... R
Weichel (R) .... W
Young (D) .... R
OKLA.—Albert (D) .... W
Gilmer (D) .... PW
Monroney (D) .... W
Morris (D) .... W
Steed (D) .... W
Stigler (D) .... W
Wickersham (D) .. W
Wilson (D) .... W
ORE.—Angell (R) .... A
Ellsworth (R) .... W
Norblad (R) .... A
Stockman (R) .... W
PENN.—Barrett (D) .. R
Buchanan (D) .... R
Cavalcante (D) .... A
Chudoff (D) .... R
Corbett (R) .... R
Dague (R) .... W
Davenport (D) .... R
Eberharter (D) .... R
Fenton (D) .... R
Flood (D) .... R
Fulton (R) .... R
Gavin (R) .... W
Gillette (R) .... W
Graham (R) .... W
Granahan (D) .... R
Green (D) .... R
James (R) .... PW
Kearns (R) .... W
Kelley (D) .... PR
Kunkel (R) .... A
Lichtenwalter (R) A
Lind (D) .... R
McConnell (R) .... W
Morgan (D) .... R
O'Neill (D) .... R
Rhodes (D) .... R
Rich (R) .... W
Scott, Hardie (R) W
Scott, Hugh (R) .. W
Simpson (R) .... W
Van Zandt (R) .... R
Walter (D) .... PW
R. I.—Fogarty (D) .... R
Forand (D) .... R
S. C.—Bryson (D) .... R
Hare (D) .... W
McMillan (D) .... W
Richards (D) .... W
Rivers (D) .... PW
Sims (D) .... R
S. D.—Case (R) .... R
Lovre (R) .... A
TENN.—Cooper (D) .. W
Davis (D) .... W
Evins (D) .... PW
Frazier (D) .... W
Gore (D) .... W
Jennings (R) .... W
Murray (D) .... W
Phillips (R) .... R
Priest (D) .... W
Sutton (D) .... W
TEX.—Beckworth (D) W
Bentsen (D) .... W
Burleson (D) .... W
Combs (D) .... W
Fisher (D) .... W
Gossett (D) .... W
Kilday (D) .... W
Lucas (D) .... W
Lyle (D) .... W
Mahon (D) .... W
Patman (D) .... W
Pickett (D) .... W
Poage (D) .... W
Rayburn (D) Speaker
Regan (D) .... W
Teague (D) .... W
Thomas (D) .... W
Thompson (D) .... W
Thornberry (D) .. W
Wilson (D) .... W
Worley (D) .... W
UTAH—Bosone (D) .. R
Granger (D) .... R
VT.—Plumley (R) .... W
VA.—Abbitt (D) .... PW
Burton (D) .... R
Fugate (D) .... W
Gary (D) .... R
Hardy (D) .... W
Harrison (D) .... W
Smith (D) .... W
Stanley (D) .... PW
WASH.—Holmes (R) R
Horan (R) .... W
Jackson (D) .... R
Mack (R) .... R
Mitchell (D) .... R
Tollefson (R) .... R
W. VA.—Bailey (D) .. A
Burnside (D) .... R
Hedrick (D) .... A
Kee (D) .... A
Ramsay (D) .... R
Staggers (D) .... PR
WIS.—Biemiller (D) .. R
Byrnes (R) .... W
Davis (R) .... R
Hull (R) .... A
Keefe (R) .... R
Murray (R) .... R
O'Konski (R) .... PR
Smith (R) .... R
Withrow (R) .... R
Zablocki (D) .... R
WYO.—Barrett (R) .... W

ADA Set For Offensive Vs. Congress Conservatives

(This is the last column written by Nathan Robertson, who died April 4. His obituary appears elsewhere on this page.)

By NATHAN ROBERTSON
Labor Press Association

THE FIGHTING liberalism displayed at the national convention of Americans for Democratic Action came as a breath of fresh air to labor and liberal leaders in Washington who had just survived a series of depressing defeats and sorry performances in Congress.

The ADA convention came at the end of two weeks which had seen Congress:

1 Turn down the middle-income cooperative housing bill and the Administration's aid-to-education bill.

2 Approve legislation that would allow the natural gas companies to take billions of dollars in unjustified profits from consumers.

3 Let Senator McCarthy and other isolationist Republicans go almost unchallenged in one of the most vicious smear campaigns in American history.

At the ADA convention the bedraggled Congressional liberals found hundreds of men and women from all over the country, representing thousands of others at home, fighting mad at what had been happening in Congress, and anxious to work for the defeat of the McCarthys in Congress.

There was no sign of defeatism among the ADAers. They were ready and anxious for a new offensive against the conservatives in Congress. In a series of swift votes, with little division, the ADA laid out its program and prepared for the political battle just ahead—in this year's elections.

ON TOP OF everything else was a speech from Eleanor Roosevelt, which few who heard will ever forget. Calling for those with convictions to stand up and fight for them, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"There is a sense of insecurity, almost fear, among many people today. Some people fear the possibility of war. Others fear what the new weapons of war might mean. With others, it is a fear of what may happen to them personally if they offend in any way. . . . That is the fear that concerns me most—the fear to stand up for convictions. That fear can hurt our democracy more than any other.

"Today it takes the kind of courage it took in the early days of our history to stand up for our convictions. At present we need all the courage our forefathers had and maybe more—because we have a job to do at home. We have to be unafraid. Here is where we as individuals have to fulfill our faith in democracy.

"If we cannot have confidence in each other—that fundamentally we are all trying to retain the best in our democracy—if we cannot find some basic unity in time of peace, then we are never going to be able to actually lead the world—which is the job before us today.

"If we are not to lead the world, who is? It's what we do here that makes us fit to lead the world. . . . Our problem is to prove to the world that democracy has more to offer than communism. We have to face the fact that this is a struggle and a great struggle."

MRS. ROOSEVELT added that one of the most important things we must do to prove to the world that our system is best is to protect civil rights. She said our domestic civil rights program had become of great importance internationally. Nor can we ignore unemployment, or injustice of any kind, she said. One of the answers to the unemployment problem, Mrs. Roosevelt added, may be in backing up the United Nations through the Point Four program of President Truman.

"It seems to me," she said, "that ADA is an organization that has thinking people in it, and we must preserve the right to think and differ. We must be able to disagree with people and consider new ideas without being afraid. The day we are afraid to sit down in the same room with someone because five years from now someone may say we sat in the room with a Communist—that day will be a bad day."

WALTER REUTHER, CIO Auto Workers Pres., addressed the convention of Americans for Democratic Action and got a standing ovation from the delegates for his speech in which he said the U. S. must perfect democracy at home in order to sell it abroad. He also called for working unity of all U. S. labor unions. Left to right: Joseph L. Rauh, jr., chairman of the ADA Executive Committee; Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), retiring ADA national chairman; Reuther; and George Edwards, former member of the Detroit Common Council and of the ADA National Board. Reuther is also on the Board.

Nathan Robertson, LPA Columnist, Covers His Last Assignment

NATHAN Robertson, one of the best-known Washington correspondents, was found dead of carbon monoxide in his car, in the garage of his home, the morning of April 4. He had suffered for years from diabetes, and often experienced profound moods of depression. Robertson, who wrote the noted "Behind The Headlines" column for Labor Press Association, was 48.

A native of Washington, Robertson was graduated from the Univ. of Michigan in 1923 and went to work on the old Washington Times. He worked later for the United Press, the Associated Press, and the Washington bureau of the newspaper PM. He also worked for three years for the Farm Security Administration, and for a time, before joining the staff of LPA, worked for the Committee for the Nation's Health.

While a member of PM's staff Robertson won the American Newspaper Guild's Heywood Broun Award and a Nieman Fellowship to Harvard, both in 1944. He once headed the Senate staff for the AP, was a former officer of the Washington Newspaper Guild, and a former international vice president of the Guild.

He was for many years on the standing committee of correspondents for the House press gallery. He was an occasional contributor to Harper's, the Nation, New Republic, Progressive, as well as various labor papers. Until recently he did a weekly broadcast Monday nights for WCFM. He also had been active in Americans For Democratic Action.

NATHAN ROBERTSON

IN FACT, HIS last assignment for LPA was to help cover the ADA convention in Washington Mar. 31-April 1. He wrote his "Behind the Headlines" column the afternoon of Monday, April 3, and covered a press conference for LPA on his way home.

Robertson knew, and was known by, hundreds in Washington. He counted Cabinet heads, presidential advisers, members of Congress, heads of government agencies and labor leaders as his personal friends. He not only guided newcomer reporters in Washington, but was often of inestimable service to freshman members of Congress.

Tributes by the score poured into the office of LPA on the news of his death. Typical was this statement by Carroll Kilpatrick of the San Francisco Chronicle, who had known Robertson for 10 years: "There was never a more honest or more honorable newspaperman than Nathan Robertson. And there have been few who have worked so diligently in the public interest. He was completely selfless and tireless in his determination to uphold the highest standards of his profession."

VANCE Johnson, also of the San Francisco Chronicle, who worked with Robertson on many stories, said, "I always found him ahead of the crowd in getting underneath the surface and finding out what the score really was. His passing is a distinct loss not only to his friends but to his profession. Nate was one of the most conscientious, able, and energetic of the Washington correspondents."

Robertson was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson. His father was formerly Commissioner of Patents. He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth; a son, Donald, 18, who is a freshman at Oberlin College; and a daughter, Judith, 16, who attends a girls' school in Baltimore.

Funeral services were held this week.

Post for Edelman

John Edelman, legislative representative of the CIO Textile Workers union, has been appointed to the Research Committee of the government's Housing and Home Finance Agency. The committee is assembling information on ways and means of building higher-quality, lower-cost housing.

ADA To Back Liberals in Both Parties

THE AIMS and atmosphere of the three-day national convention of Americans for Democratic Action have been set forth in the accompanying feature by the late Nathan W. Robertson.

Specifically, the convention took the following actions:

1 It affirmed its "political and organizational independence" of established political parties, choosing this language in preference to its 1949 policy statement, which lined ADA up with "the Fair Deal elements of the Democratic party" and also pledged "cooperation with and support of progressive elements within the Republican party."

2 It elected former U. S. Attorney General Francis Biddle as its fourth national chairman, succeeding Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D. Minn.) and picked a 40-man National Board including eight from CIO.

3 The delegates cheered a series of eminent speakers who attacked Sen. McCarthy (R. Wis.) and his smear campaign against the State Department, and called on Pres. Truman to set up a commission to investigate the operation of the loyalty programs, Congressional investigations, and unlawful activities of investigative agencies which threaten civil liberties.

4 The convention noted the dangerous rise in unemployment and called on the White House to propose without delay a program for effectively dealing with unemployment.

5 It called for a Presidential veto of the Kerr Natural Gas Bill. (CIO Pres. Philip Murray and the CIO Executive Officers have made the same request.)

A host of other resolutions passed the convention, on numerous subjects having to do with domestic and foreign policy matters.

One proposal that failed of adoption was that made by Ben F. McLaurin of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who asked ADA to oppose housing, health and education bills in Congress unless they contained anti-discrimination provisions. The proposal was opposed by George Weaver, executive secretary of the CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination, who said:

"I, for one, am not prepared to say that I am against all progressive legislation in these fields unless it contains an anti-discrimination program, because I know that with the present make-up of Congress there is no better method of defeating every piece of progressive legislation than that here proposed."

Walter Reuther, President of the CIO Auto Workers and chairman of its Housing Committee, won a standing ovation from the delegates in a speech in which he declared:

"The H-Bomb has created a moral and political vacuum in the world. If we fail to fill that vacuum with positive democratic values, by default it will be filled by the apostles of hate, of fear and hysteria, who will create a situation in which war will be inevitable."

Harry Bridges Is Convicted Of Perjury

HARRY BRIDGES, president of the CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, was convicted of perjury by a jury in U. S. District Court at San Francisco on April 4.

Convicted with him were J. R. Robertson, first vice president of the union, and Henry Schmidt, an international representative.

Bridges was found guilty, after an 81-day trial, of perjuring himself by swearing he had never been a Communist when he was naturalized in 1945. Robertson and Schmidt were convicted of conspiracy to aid and abet him in his perjury as his naturalization sponsors.

All three face prison sentences up to seven years and fines up to $15,000. Bridges, a native of Australia, also faces deportation, as the government plans to institute a civil suit against him to revoke his naturalization. All sentences were stayed pending appeals.

The ILWU is one of the unions cited by the National CIO for a hearing and possible expulsion on charges of following the Communist party line and opposing CIO Policy. Bridges was removed from his former post as CIO regional director for Northern California in 1948 when he and the ILWU refused to comply with CIO policy and worked for the election of Pregressive Party candidates.

The perjury trial was the longest in California jurisprudence. More than 2 million words of testimony were taken, and the jury required 31 hours of actual discussion before coming up with its verdict. Pivot of the case was the credibiliy of witnesses. The government put on the stand 11 persons who testified they had known Bridges as a Communist or had seen him at Communist party meetings. The defense, which spent a week in its summation, presented witnesses of its own who contradicted the government witnesses.

The two attorneys who defended the trio also face jail. Found guilty of contempt of court by Judge George B. Harris because of their conduct during the trial, Vincent Hallinan was sentenced to six months in a U. S. penitentiary to be designated by the Attorney General, and James MacInnis to three months. Execution of their sentences was held up pending action on the appeal.

Benefit Dispute Closes 100 Plants

Members of two Paterson, N. J., CIO Textile Workers locals walked off the job last week in a dispute over company-paid hospitalization and sick benefits. The controversy involved some 3600 workers in over 100 Paterson plants.

The two TWUA locals on strike had proposed that the companies pay the hospitalization and surgical bills of their members beyond the $5-a-day hospitalization and $150 surgical benefits as provided in the contract which expired March 31.

Union and company officials held several meetings with representatives of the U. S. Conciliation Service in a fruitless effort to head off the walkout.

In addition to improve hospital and surgical benefits, TWUA negotiators had proposed that Election Day be made a holiday.

Wood Union Voting On Strike As Operators Keep Saying 'No'

FORTY thousand CIO lumberjacks and sawmill workers in the Pacific Northwest are taking a strike vote to back up their negotiating committee's efforts to win them the health and welfare program and the six paid holidays for which they voted in January.

The decision to take the walkout ballot was made at a CIO Woodworkers' Wage and Contract Conference in Portland, Ore., after the negotiators gave a detailed report of a long series of meetings with 700 lumber operators, including some of the largest in the world, which so far have won not a single concession. Negotiations started Feb. 20.

Delegates to the conference voted unanimously to send out the strike ballot. The ballots were being prepared last week by the Woodworkers' international headquarters in Portland. Voting is to be completed by April 30 and the deadline for strike action was set for May 15 unless before that time the negotiators have a management offer they feel they can submit to the members affected.

"We have met the operators, either as individual operators or as associations of operators, in every section of the Northwest," said E. J. Fadling, IWA president and chairman of the negotiating committee. "They have all said 'No,' playing the old record of opposition to anything the workers want over and over again."

Union researchers have determined that the industry can well afford the workers' requests in view of the continued heavy demand for lumber, present price levels and increased productivity, especially in logging.

The union health and welfare proposals call for employer-paid life insurance of $3000 with double indemnity in case of dismemberment or accidental death; $40 per week for sickness and accident off the job; $20 per week to supplement workmen's compensation, and the payment of hospital, surgical and medical care. The cost as estimated by the union is 7½ to 8½c per hour.

"This will actually cost less than what the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. (largest of the operators) says it is willing to pay for its so-called pension plan," said Virgil Burtz, IWA research director.

"That means that the whole package of social insurance and paid holidays will not total much more than what this operator said he is willing to pay for what he says he is willing to give the workers."

The negotiators rejected the Weyerhaeuser offer as inadequate.

Fate of Georgia's Weird 'Unit Voting' May Be Decided By Supreme Court

THE BATTLE for political democracy in Georgia, in which the odds up to now have been heavily against liberal elements, may be decided in the U. S. Supreme Court as the result of a suit filed by two Atlanta businessmen.

At stake is Georgia's unique "unit voting" system, under which one vote cast in the state Democratic primaries by a voter living outside Fulton County (Atlanta) averages 11.5 times the effect of a single vote cast by a Fulton County resident.

Liberal forces, backed by Georgia's two largest newspapers, are fighting to get the system outlawed, while Gov. "Hummon" Talmadge and a majority of the state Legislature are attempting to get it extended to the general elections. The battle is being watched carefully throughout the South in all those states where, like Georgia, nomination in the Democratic primaries amounts to election.

The unit system provides that the candidate getting the most votes in a given county receives the "unit vote" of the county. It is somewhat similar to the electoral vote system used in federal Presidential elections. For Georgia's 159 counties, the legislature fixed the number of unit votes in 1917, and the discrimination against voters living in cities and towns has grown year by year as the population of the urban areas increased and that of rural areas declined.

The eight most populous counties have six unit votes each; the next thirty have four; and the remaining 121, two each. Anyone who can add figures can see how political control of a handful of sparsely populated rural counties amounts to control of the state government and the Congressional delegation.

THE 500,000 residents of Fulton County carry no more weight at the polls, under this system, than the 45,000 people of Troup County, since both Fulton and Troup have six unit votes. In the most recent Democratic primaries, one vote cast in Chattahoochee County was as powerful as 122.2 votes cast in Fulton County.

Bernard South and Harold Fleming, two Atlanta businessmen, early this year asked the Federal Court of Appeals to enjoin the State Democratic Committee from further use of the unit system on the grounds that it violates the U. S. Constitution.

A special three-judge court, by a two-to-one vote, on March 15 refused to issue the injunction, and issued opposing opinions which clearly posed the essential problem involved. The two Atlantans are using the minority opinion as the basis for asking a Supreme Court ruling.

The state Legislature, fearing that the Supreme Court might rule the system out, has advanced the primary date from Sept. 13 to June 28, on the theory that if the primaries are held before the case gets on the court docket, the Supreme Court justices will rule, as they did two years ago, that the question is "moot" because the elections already have been held.

The majority opinion of the Court of Appeals held that while the system is "unjust and undemocratic," it is not unconstitutional because under the U. S. constitution, the states have the right to set up their own internal organizations and prescribe the manner of state elections.

Even the President of the U. S., the two judges said, "is not elected by the equal votes of the people, but by electors in each state, 'appointed in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct.'"

The minority opinion, written by Judge Neil Andrews, stated: "It is difficult to imagine a more obvious denial of the equal protection of the laws (guaranteed in the 14th amendment) than that imposed by the county unit system, or one with less foundation in experience, practicality or necessity . . . Denial of the right to vote in a Georgia primary is a violation of Federally protected right . . . The right to vote includes the right to have the ballot counted . . . The right to have the ballot counted includes the right to have it counted without dilution and in full value."

The Atlanta Journal commented drily: "The judges had equal votes in deciding the case before them, and a majority prevailed. They had a distinct advantage over the citizens of the larger counties in Georgia. These citizens are told their voting power depends on where they live."

The Atlanta Constitution commented on another aspect of the majority decision, in which the two judges declared that relief from the unit system lay in the state Legislature. This, said the Constitution, "is of course obviated by the fact that the Legislature itself is apportioned on—and prejudiced by—the same illogical basis."

In a recent decision, the Supreme Court ruled that a North Carolina voter may not be discriminated against because of his place of residence. Judge Andrews in his minority opinion cited this decision, and added that he believed the 17th amendment might also be involved. This provides for direct election of Senators by the people.

DPs Required To Scab, CIO Union Charges

ONE OF THE CIO's strangest strikes has been going on for more than a month now. It concerns some 150 workers who toil in dank caves along the west bank of the Hudson River from Kingston to Coxsackie, N. Y., and a charge that displaced persons are being used as strikebreakers.

The struck firm is the K-B Products Corp., Inc., one of the largest growers of mushrooms in the world. The company's main plant is at Hudson, N. Y., where 250 workers are employed. Another 150 work in the caves along the river banks.

Fed up with a series of unsettled grievances, the workers at the Hudson plant walked out on strike Jan. 31, and appealed for help to the CIO Textile Workers, a well-established union in the area. Subsequently an NLRB election resulted in a victory for the union.

On Mar. 9 workers in the caves struck after an employe was fired for union activity. The Hudson plant workers also walked out again when the company dismissed a worker who previously had been ordered reinstated by the State Mediation Board.

The union, through State Director Jack Rubenstein, has asked several government agencies to investigate the labor practices of K-B Products. In a letter to the U. S. Displaced Persons Commission, Rubenstein asked a probe of union charges that the company was attempting to break the TWU strike by employing as strikebreakers 40 DPs who were afraid to refuse for fear they would be shipped back abroad.

He also requested the Wage-Hour Administration to investigate alleged violations by the company of the 75c minimum wage law. Earlier an appeal was sent to Gov. Thomas Dewey asking removal of some county sheriffs charged by the union with transporting strikebreakers for the company.

NSRB Sets Up Group to Study Wartime Pre-fab Housing Use

THE FIRST TOP policy-level break that the pre-fabricated housing industry has had in a long time came last week when the National Security Resources Board revealed it had set up an inter-agency housing committee specifically charged with finding out, among other things, "what steps can be taken to encourage research and development and the strengthening of housing resources that would be needed in wartime."

The inter-agency, top-level committee is part of the NSRB's overall planning for civilian defense against atomic attack.

Ironically enough, production of portable, inexpensive, easily erected housing, which is advanced by liberals as essential to the success of the democratic way of life and hence to the preservation of peace, is also regarded by civilian defense planners as essential in wartime.

"With all our large housing resources and construction capacity," the NRSB report states, "the amount of mobile or portable housing in this country is negligible. There is a need for increasing the resources of housing and facilities which can be shifted in wartime to critical areas.

"Much can be accomplished in building up this resource if we give greater consideration to mobility, speed of construction, conservation of labor and materials, and economies of mass production in our peacetime housing and construction programs."

The plan was made public in the course of hearings being conducted by the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy. Members of the inter-agency housing committee are drawn from the Housing and Community Facilities Division of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, the Department of Defense, the General Service Administration and the Federal Security Agency.

Just a year ago Walter Reuther, chairman of the CIO Housing Committee, presented a report to Congress on behalf of the CIO in which the establishment of just such a committee was proposed. The CIO would have added to the committee the Senate and House Banking Committees and representatives of the major labor organizations.

VALUABLE TO LABOR

Jackie Robinson (above), star second baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers and winner of the 1949 National League's Most Valuable Player award, loves to cross home plate with the winning run in a ball game but last week he refused to cross a picket line in Mobile, Ala.

Jackie was scheduled to make a radio broadcast from a department store in that city but balked at crossing a line thrown around the store by the striking workers of Radio Station WABB. The broadcast was cancelled.

IUE-CIO Meet Adopts Fighting Program

THE IUE-CIO has adopted a fighting program designed to secure increased wage and pension benefits for workers throughout the electrical industry.

The program was adopted at the first joint conference of the General Electric, Westinghouse, General Motors and Sylvania Boards held in Pittsburgh. Delegates heard reports from James B. Carey, IUE-CIO Administrative Committee chairman; Louis J. Walinsky, of Nathan Associates, and each board.

Carey outlined the problems facing the members, touching on the United Electrical Workers' failure to "meet the needs of the workers." He also pointed out the huge profits being made by the industry. He outlined the progress being made by IUE-CIO and said:

"We now have 188 locals, with a coverage of nearly 300,000 workers. These locals vary from the huge Lynn GE Local 201, covering 17,000 workers, to a plant in Tell City, Ind., with 17 workers."

Robert Nathan, noted economist, outlined the economic condition of the industry.

CIO PRES. Philip Murray charged that the leaders of the Communist Party "are working for the destruction of the democratic trade union movement in this country."

"It is a source of inspiration and encouragement to me as the leader of the CIO," he said, "to find you here working hard and doing the job as it should be done. I know that you will attain your objectives—I know that your efforts will secure a better life for those you represent."

ECONOMIC proposals made by the boards included:

For GE workers, a substantial wage increase, a pension plan conforming with the CIO and IUE pattern, a complete security and health program paid by the company, nine paid holidays, automatic progression to the top job rate, union shop, elimination of inequities and discrimination, and a 15% night shift differential.

For Westinghouse, a non-contributory pension plan, substantial wage increase, shorter work week, nine paid holidays, three days off with pay in case of a death in the family, four hours off with pay on national and state election days, sick leave incorporated in the contract, equalization of hourly-rated and salary-paid employes, reducing the two existing key-sheets for the incentive and day worker to one company-wide key sheet.

For General Motors employes, a substantial wage increase, $125 minimum pension program, health security program, shorter work week, time and a half between seven and 10 hours with double time after 10 hours, time and a half for Saturdays, double time for Sundays, triple time for holidays.

FOR SYLVANIA, $125 a month minimum pension after 25 years, elimination of interplant inequities, wage increases, one additional paid holiday, three weeks vacation after 10 years.

IUE scored three important victories in recent NLRB elections. At the Sperry-Gyroscope Co., Lake Success, N. Y., the workers voted by better than six to one for IUE. The results: IUE—4017; UE—662; no union—80.

At the Formica plant in Cincinnati the vote was 914 for IUE; 244 for UE, and nine for no union. And at the Eagle Lock Co., Terryville, Conn., the results were IUE, 253; UE, 174; no union, three.

THE CONFERENCE BOARDS of the Intl. Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers meet to hear CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Economist Robert Nathan. The get-together was held during the meetings of the boards at Pittsburgh at which an economic program centered on wage increases and adequate pensions was adopted.

Cigaret Ads Mislead—FTC

IF YOU have suspected all along that the smoke from your favorite cigaret contains among other things carbon dioxide, carbon monoxide, nicotine, ammonia, formaldehyde, tars and tannic acid, the Federal Trade Commission says your suspicions are well founded.

Furthermore, the government agency says that regardless of what the tobacco companies claim in their advertisements, cigaret smoke, being an irritant, will "irritate disordered throats" and excessive smoking of any brand will irritate "even throats in normal healthy conditions."

The FTC has ordered the makers of Camel and Old Gold cigarets to stop "false and misleading advertising."

At the same time, a trial examiner recommended that the FTC decide if the American Tobacco Co. is misrepresenting Lucky Strikes, while in another instance an examiner was considering the issuance of a complaint against Phillip Morris & Co., Ltd., and the American Tobacco Co., makers of Pall Mall, for the same reason.

Examiner Orders Five Reinstated

A trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board has recommended that the Rubin Brothers Footwear, Inc., of Waycross, Ga., reinstate five workers who were discharged for union activities, Natl. Dir. George Baldanzi of the CIO Southern Organizing Committee, announced.

Trial Examiner Sidney Lindner also recommended that the company reimburse 73 other employes whose hours of work were reduced, and that it bargain collectively with the CIO Shoe Workers.

The Rubin workers chose the CIO union as their bargaining agent in an election last March. Following that, company officials refused to bargain with the union. The CIO Organizing Committee then filed charges against the company.

Amendments Would Improve Security Bill

AMENDMENTS to the Social Security reform bill, bringing it more nearly in line with CIO recommendations, have been introduced by three Fair Deal Senators and will be considered by the Senate Finance Committee sometime in the next two weeks.

The committee is considering HR 6000, a bill passed by the House last year, which brings an additional 11 million persons under the coverage of federal old-age insurance, and ups benefits an average of 70%. The proposals introduced last week by Sens. Lehman (D. N. Y.), Murray (D. Mont.) and Humphrey (D. Minn.) would increase benefits by $10 to $20 a month above the amounts provided in HR 6000.

Hearings on the proposals are finished, and committee Chairman George (D. Ga.) has announced he expects to report the measure by the end of April.

MOST important change sought by the three Senators is to raise the "wage ceiling" to $4800 a year from the $3600 established in the bill. Under HD 6000, no matter how much more than $3600 you earn in a year, your social security benefits are no higher than those of a man who averaged only $3600 a year.

Raising this limit to $4800 would help close the gap between benefits and budgetary needs of elderly couples in the higher earning brackets.

HR 6000 also provides that benefits be calculated by taking 50% of the first $100 of average monthly wage, plus 10% of the next $200, whereas the three Senators would ask for half of the first $100 plus 15% of the next $300. CIO's position is that the benefits should equal half of the first $100 plus 20% of the average amount above $100.

The Senators' amendments do not contemplate changing the coverage of HR 6000, which CIO considers inadequate. Nor do they seek to change the method of computing the "average wage" contemplated under HR 6000. While better than the method in the present law, this still allows the worker's average to be dragged down by periods of unemployment and temporary disability. CIO says it should be passed on the worker's "best five years."

Truman's Message Asks Boost in Aid to Idle

President Truman on April 6 sent a special message to Congress urging overhaul of the Federal-State unemployment compensation system, including extension of coverage to more than six million additional workers and establishment of minimum standard for duration and amount of benefits.

The message was immediately hailed by the CIO Legislative and Employment Committees as a "great step forward," and CIO Legislative Dir. Nathan Cowan promptly wired all international presidents, councils, and legislative representatives, urgently requesting them to "swing every resource" in immediate, all-out support of the President's request.

"Every Representative and Senator should be contacted as quickly as possible," Cowan said, and asked "to work actively for final House and Senate action before Congress ends its present session. The welfare of American workers and the American economy requires enactment of the President's proposals NOW."

Cowan urged CIO groups to arrange for delegations to wait upon the many members of both houses of Congress who would be spending some time at home during the Easter recess which has just started.

CIO has been pressing for such an overhaul for a long time, and while the President's proposals did not go as far as CIO economists believe necessary they would, if adopted, represent a major and badly needed improvement.

Action at this session of Congress is necessary because state legislation must follow the federal amendments to put the program into operation, and most state legislatures will meet early in 1951.

Under the present federal-state system, duration and amount of benefits are entirely up to the states, with the federal government deciding who is to be covered and serving as banker for the funds, which come from state-set payroll taxes.

There are no minimum standards for the states to meet, except that the percentage of payroll taxed for unemployment compensation may not exceed a certain figure.

Under the Truman proposal, the federal government would establish minimum standards on amount of coverage and duration of benefits, and would raise the permissive ceiling on the amount of income which could be taxed to provide the additional funds. The states would be called on to revise their legislation to meet the federal minimums, and beyond this the details would be settled by the states.

The minimum standards proposed are these: benefits for single persons should approximate 50% of normal earnings up to a maximum of $30 a week, with additional amounts for dependents up to a total minimum of $42 a week. These benefits should be available for at least 26 weeks a year.

Nearly two million workers in 1949 completely exhausted their benefits before finding another job. Millions more will exhaust their benefits in 1950.

U. S. Aid in Building Vital For Schools—CIO

THE 10½ million additional children who will enter school by 1960 will not have the proper classrooms to learn their ABCs in unless the federal government gets busy now and begins planning to spend $14½ billion on school construction.

That's what George T. Guernsey, associate director of education of the CIO Department of Education and Research, told the House Subcommittee on Federal Aid for School Plant Construction at a hearing on April 4.

On behalf of the CIO, Guernsey indorsed the Mitchell bill, HR 5718, which tackles the problem on a long-range basis.

The bill would authorize a survey to determine the needs, provide up to $300 million as emergency grants for schools which are overloaded because of a federal activity (for instance, for small communities in the West where schools have been swamped by an influx of the children of hundreds of employes of the Atomic Energy Commission), and would set up a basis on which a long-range program can be planned, with grants-in-aid to the states.

HIS ESTIMATE of 10½ million additional pupils by 1960 was based on the most recent Census Bureau figures.

"Various studies," he added, "have indicated that this increase in school population will require 480,000 classrooms over the 10-year period and 375,000 new teachers. The 480,000 classrooms include replacing obsolete classrooms which are now being used.

"They will cost approximately $14½ billion.

"Whatever the proportion of the expenses of the school building program that can be absorbed by the local school districts and by special aid programs for school construction, it is clear that 10½ million youngsters will not get even adequate classrooms with a teachable class size of 30 pupils or less without an adequate federal program."

THE CIO approves the Mitchell bill rather than the Lucas bill, he said, because "we prefer that a greater share of federal funds be allocated to those states least able to support the school building program." The CIO has favored federal aid for new buildings from its first convention in 1938, Guernsey reminded the representatives, and at the Cleveland convention last year asked for a school construction program of at least $3 billion a year for the next five years.

He also made it clear that the CIO "in supporting an adequate school construction program financed by federal grants, does not consider it a substitute for the general federal aid to education grants which we have been supporting and will continue to support."

McCarthy Called 'China Lobby' Dupe

THE FINAL decision in Sen. Joseph McCarthy's "stand or fall" charges against Owen Lattimore, one of the country's leading Far Eastern experts, now rests with the Senate and the top-rank Loyalty Review Board of the federal government.

"Jumpin' Joe" McCarthy — as he's called in Wisconsin—had accused Lattimore of being a Communist and the Soviet Union's top ranking espionage agent in this country.

Last Thursday, in a kleig-lighted Senate hearing room, Lattimore gave the lie to McCarthy's charges. He appeared before the Senate special investigating committee—headed by Sen. Tydings (D., Md.).

Tydings told Lattimore at the end of a day's testimony that a "complete summary" of Lattimore's FBI loyalty file showed him "completely in the clear" of McCarthy's charges. There's nothing in the file, Tydings said, to "show you were a Communist, or even had been a Communist, or in any way connected with espionage activities."

MCCARTHY last week refused to repeat the charge off the Senate floor, where he has Congressional immunity from libel suits.

And Lattimore, testifying from a 43-page statement, flatly denied the charges. He cited letters, statements, his own memos and books, to bolster his denial. Further, he denied any ties with the State Dept. except on three occasions.

One letter, written by Chiang Kai-Shek in 1943, said Lattimore's "absolute integrity" shows in everything he does.

Lattimore counter-attacked McCarthy with charges that the Wisconsin Republican is a dupe in the hands of a "China lobby" seeking to "secure all-out aid for Chiang Kai-Shek and accuse everybody who opposed it as a Communist."

Lattimore charged that the men behind the scenes in the campaign are William J. Goodwin, described as a $36,000-a-year lobbyist for Chiang's China, and Alfred Kohlberg, wealthy New York export-import man who has attacked many critics of Chiang's regime.

Chrysler Considers UAW's New Proposal on Pensions

THE CHRYSLER Corp., accused by the CIO Auto Workers of attempting to carry on contract negotiations by means of a nation-wide newspaper advertising campaign, last week "took under consideration" another proposal to end the two-and-a-half-month-old strike.

The new proposal which amends one submitted Mar. 24, sets no minimum figure for the pension fund. UAW insists, however, that the company pay enough into the fund to provide $100-a-month pensions, including social security, to workers at age 65 with 25 years service who retire within the next five years.

It would not require the company to set aside any fixed cents-per-hour sum. Instead Chrysler would be required to make sufficient contributions to finance all service credits for employes during the five-year contract period.

The union proposed that the company set aside funds for service credits of employes year by year as they accumulate in the future.

The amount Chrysler would pay into the fund would be determined by a qualified actuary. If social security payments are increased, the actuary would reexamine the company's payments to determine if they should be reduced.

A joint board of administration, including UAW representatives, would be set up to administer the fund.

The union last week gave the company a taste of its own medicine by running full-page newspaper ads in Washington and New York papers. The ads declared "Chrysler's blind selfishnes continues to block settlement of the strike" and said that "no amount of corporation propoganda can change the basic facts or cover up Chrysler's refusal to accept its responsibility."

MEANWHILE AT Saginaw, Mich., the Lufkin Rule Co. announced the signing of a UAW contract which met the pattern established in a large portion of the industry. The settlement provides a fully funded pension plan and an insurance program for 1000 workers.

The company will pay fixed sums into a trust fund which will guarantee pensions of $100 a month at the age 65 after 25 years' service. The fund, which will be entirely financed by the company, will be administered by a joint board.

The equivalent of 7½c an hour per worker will be paid into a trust fund for every hour worked, including holidays. The payments will continue for the five years of the agreement, even though social security benefits may be increased. Another 2½c per hour will be set aside for life insurance, disability and sickness, accident benefits.

$100,000 Given To UAW By CIO

CIO Pres. Philip Murray announced last week that the CIO vice presidents meeting in Washington had voted $100,000 to aid the striking CIO Auto Workers in their 2½ month strike against the Chrysler Corp. The money was in the form of an outright gift. Murray commended the UAW members for their struggle against the automotive giant.

Oil Workers Win $150 Pension At Panhandle, Strike Texaco

A TOP-NOTCH pension settlement and strike calls in two widely separated areas of the country were announced by the CIO Oil Workers last week.

The pension agreement covers 1000 employes of the Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. in plants from Texas to Michigan. It provides minimum pensions of $150 a month for any employe of 65 with 20 years' service.

Strikes and lockouts would not interrupt the plan's operation. In addition, the union won a 5c-an-hour general wage increase for most job classifications.

ON THE STRIKE front, 8000 OWIU members walked off the job at five Texas oil refineries in Texas, Illinois and Wyoming following months of fruitless negotiations.

In Pennsylvania and West Virginia, 400 employes of the Quaker State Refining Corp. struck in protest over company action in cutting the work week from 40 to 16 hours and refusing to move on pensions, wage increases and other issues.

OWIU Pres. O. A. Knight said Texaco had turned down union proposals for an improved pension plan, refused to discuss a reduction in the work week and rejected proposed job classifications. He said all the major Texaco refineries had been closed as a result of the strike, except one in California and one in New Jersey, at the latter of which the CIO union has not yet been certified.

THE QUAKER State refineries affected by the strike are located at Oil City and Emlenton, Pa., and St. Mary's, W. Va. The shutdown at these plants was termed 100% effective by OWIU Intl. Rep. R. T. Aylor.

Aylor said the company bypassed its contract by arbitrarily cutting the work week from 40 hours as provided by the contract to 16 hours.

Meanwhile in San Francisco, the Oil Workers announced that a petition had been filed for a representation election covering 25,000 workers at the giant Richmond refinery of Standard Oil of California—the biggest refinery in the state and the third largest in the world.

OWIU lost bargaining rights at the refinery in 1948 when NLRB General Counsel Robert Denham called an election during a statewide oil strike. The election order forced the union to call off the strike. When an election was held shortly afterward, the Independent Union of Petroleum Workers, a company union, was declared the bargaining agent.

Organizationally Speaking

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The National Labor Relation Board has ordered a representation election among all Westinghouse Corp. workers throughout the nation. The results of the elections will be determined on a plant basis. On behalf of the National CIO, the writer is calling upon every representative of international unions, all local and state CIO officers, officers of councils and regional directors to render every support to the CIO Intl. Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers in this vital campaign. Leave no stone unturned in helping to bring these workers into the CIO. There are basic issues involved in this fight, free trade unionism vs. a Communist-controlled set-up.

With every one teaming together now, the workers of Westinghouse can be brought into the CIO. The writer wants you all to prevail upon the workers to vote IUE-CIO, and get on the CIO team.

Russell J. Taylor, legislative representative, United Shoe Workers of America, reports the following election victories for USWA-CIO; Lunder Shoe Co., Dover, N. H., USWA 111, no union 100; union shop election at the Selby Shoe Co., Portsmouth, O., 1387 for, 284 against; union shop election at the Advance Counter Co., St. Louis, Mo., Local 85, USWA-CIO, 100% for union shop.

Reg. Dir. William Mayo reports that in a representation election at the Muskins Furniture Co., Walkerton, Ind., the United Furniture Workers-CIO was victorious by a vote of 16 to 0. This campaign was handled by Field Rep. John Suttle.

Adolph Germer, director of organization, International Woodworkers of America, reports that in a union shop election at the Associated Plywood Co., Williamina, Ore., the workers voted as follows: for 300; against 3; not voting 13. Business Agent Les Haenny was in charge of the union's campaign. In another union shop election at the Simpson Log Co. Olympic plywood plant, Shelton, Wash., the workers voted: for 106; against 6. Roy Longacres, financial secretary of IWA Local 9-317, was in charge of the campaign.

Reg. Dir. Michael Mann reports the results of two elections won by the United Steelworkers of America: Star Tubular Product Co., Chicago, 56 eligibles; 46 USA-CIO; 8 against, and Standard Lime & Stone Co., McCook, Ill., 56 eligibles; 44 USA-CIO; 2 against.

Reg. Dir. Lee Tucker reports that in a representation election at the Jones Furniture Co., Benton, Ark., the workers voted in favor of the United Furniture Workers by a vote of UFWA-CIO 51; no union 32; challenged 1. Intl. Rep. Walter L. Carson was in charge.

Reg. Dir. W. A. Copeland reports that in a representation election at the General Wiping Cloth Co., Memphis, Tenn., the Textile Workers Union-CIO was victorious by unanimous vote. Harold Marthenke of the Textile Workers was in charge of the campaign.

V. F. Coragliotti, secretary, OWIU-CIO Local 5, reports that in a representation election at the Shell Chemical Co., Martinez, Calif., Local 5 extended its jurisdiction by a 3 to 1 victory covering instrument repairmen.

CIO To House Unit:

'Mundt-Nixon Bill Threat To All Labor Unions'

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

THE CIO has joined with dozens of other organizations to seek defeat of the Mundt-Nixon bill on grounds that it will menace basic civil liberties.

The bill is now under consideration by the House Un-American Activities Committee, which will probably indorse it. The Dept. of Justice has opposed the measure.

The Mundt-Nixon measure is a 1950 edition of several previous bills ostensibly aimed at controlling subversion. It would call for the registration of organizations called Communist "political organizations" or "front organizations," and impose many restrictions on their activities.

At the House Un-American hearings, Thomas Harris, CIO assistant general counsel, warned last week that the bill is not necessary; that it would damage democratic rights; and that it carries a big-stick threat to all labor unions.

Harris complained that the bill "imposes penalties upon association and opinion, rather than upon overt, unlawful actions." And he warned that it "could impose a blacklist upon the civil rights of thousands of individuals who would be driven from progressive organizations out of fear that the vague provisions might be made applicable to them."

THE STANDARDS by which an organization might be labelled a Communist front are so vague, Harris said, that unions could be easily and falsely listed.

"If a few Communists are active in connection with a labor organization, even though they do not hold office, that fact alone could furnish the basis for a finding of the 'Subversive Activities Commission' that the organization is a 'Communist front organization,'" Harris predicted.

"The proposed bill could very easily condemn an organization as illegal solely because its policies happen to coincide with those of the Communist Party.

"Thus, support by a labor organization of objectives also supported by Communists—such as the abolition of the poll tax, enactment of an adequate housing program, and the protection of civil rights—could, under the standards proposed by the bill, furnish the basis for the conclusion that the organization is a 'Communist front'.

"Under these provisions, not only labor organizations but other progressive organizations could be branded as subversive and destroyed."

HARRIS CHARGED that the Mundt-Nixon bill "is not just another routine measure. This bill is in fundamental conflict with our Constitutional form of government and with the premises of a democratic society."

The CIO attorney also lashed out at another bill (HR 3903), sponsored by Rep. Wood (D. Ga.), who heads the Un-American committee. It would bar persons branded as Communists from jobs in plants working on war contracts.

"It's foolish, unconstitutional and there's no earthly reason for it," Harris commented about that bill. He took the position that existing measures are generally adequate to guard the nation against sabotage or spying.

The Mundt bill—a companion measure to the House bill—has already been approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee. Rep. Nixon, (R. Cal.) sponsor of the House version, has been a member of the Un-American Activities Committee for several years. With a shoddy voting record on Fair Deal measures, he will be opposed by California unions this fall when he seeks election to the Senate.

Harris pointed out that Communists strength and influence is slipping steadily in this country, without aid from a dangerous measure like the Mundt-Nixon bill. He said:

"This situation certainly does not seem to call for new sweeping anti-Communist legislation, which would not only deny civil rights to Communists but would put at hazard the civil rights of everyone else."

The Justice Dept.'s primary complaint against the bill is based on the almost certain guess that instead of regulating Communist activities, it would drive the party underground. That would make it that much more difficult for the FBI to keep track of party activities.

Prof. Zachariah Chaffee of Harvard—a leading expert on civil rights—said passing the Mundt-Nixon bill would be like "hitting a baby on the head with a hammer in order to swat a wasp."

A group of Negro organizations and the Federal Council of Churches said the bill "establishes a new basis for Americanism contrary to the Bill of Rights and the Constitution by attempting to control political thought."

ARTHUR G. HAYS, spokesman for the liberal American Civil Liberties Union, agreed that passage of the bill would drive the Communist Party underground. He appealed for cool thinking about the problem, and warned the nation against destroying its liberties in order to deal with the Communist question.

"It does one little good to attempt to crush his enemy by jumping out of a tall building in the hope he will score a direct hit," Hays commented.

Hays suggested that the bill's language, including a phrase making it illegal to "contribute to the establishment of a totalitarian dictatorship" might prove a boomerang against Americans' civil rights. If the Mundt-Nixon bill were passed, he said, action to seek its repeal might be considered as help to subversives and make every foe of the bill subject to its penalties.

The bill provides that Communist "political organizations" must register and provide lists of their members, and that "front organizations" must produce detailed financial records.

The CIO has pointed out that this registration feature in effect cuts out the right of any private citizen to belong to any organization he wants.

Same Difference

The Mundt-Nixon bill, under attack from CIO and liberal groups, would set up a new government commission to enforce decisions against organizations found to be subversive.

Testifying against the bill, the CIO recalled smear attacks against labor by the House Un-American Committee.

"There is no particular reason to suppose that the Subversive Activities Control Board set up in this bill would be any less reactionary than this Congressional Committee has been," the CIO said.

Coalition Blamed For Betrayal of People

THE CIO executive officers and vice presidents who met in Washington April 4 accused the Dixiecrat-Republican coalition of "betraying the trust of the American people" during the second session of the 81st Congress.

They called on the progressive Democrats and Republicans to "wage more effectively their battle against the reactionary coalition and for the people's interests."

In a strongly worded resolution, the officers told Congress that the record of the second session would be available to all CIO affiliates, "looking toward the November elections," and that the membership of CIO would be mobilized to "carry forward the unfinished task of winning truly progressive and representative government."

The resolution stated that the 81st Congress had been elected "with as clear a mandate as the voting public has ever given its representatives in Washington," and that the first session had made "some progress" toward attainment of the Fair Deal program.

"As the impact of the election wore off," the officers continued, "progress was virtually halted . . . Three months after it assembled, the accomplishments of the second session of the 81st Congress are almost non-existent."

The only contribution it has made so far to the welfare of the American people, the officers said, has been the passage of a bill to repeal taxes on oleomargarine.

On the other hand, and far outweighing this accomplishment, the resolution criticized the second session for the following:

- It passed the Kerr natural gas bill, "which would transfer scores of millions of dollars each year from the pocketbooks of consumers to the treasuries of the rich and powerful gas-and-oil companies."
- The Taft-Hartley Act remains unrepealed.
- The civil rights program "has been all but completely neglected—and the toothless FEPC bill finally passed by the House cannot begin to correct the problem of discrimination which it was originally designed to meet."
- The Senate is "moving at a snail's pace" on improving and modernizing the social security laws, although the House last year passed such a bill.
- The chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and many of his colleagues "sought in every way to sabotage" the passage of a liberalized Displaced Persons' bill.
- The middle-income housing bill has been stripped of its effective provisions — notably the co-op housing section—and "all that is left is a pork barrel for mortgage bankers, speculative builders and the real estate lobby."
- "The rent control agency of the federal government has been denied sufficient operating funds to permit decent protection of the rent control laws for millions of hard-pressed tenants, and continuation of rent control may be undermined."
- "A bloc in the House has sought to strip the Economic Cooperation Administration of 250 million dollars vitally necessary for the success of the European Recovery Program."
- Action on a number of other important matters has similarly been pigeonholed.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed.	Keep writing to Senators and Representatives to force action.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors' benefits, etc. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Sen. Finance Comm. will report shortly. CIO has asked further improvements.	Ask Senators to accept and strengthen HR 6000.
ECA Extension HR 7378	Renews Marshall Plan for another year; sets $2,950,000,000 ceiling on funds.	House cut $250 million from authorization; Senate to act soon.	Ask members of both Houses to restore cut, pass bill as drafted.
Federal Aid to Education S 426	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. House Labor Comm. deadlocked over religious quarrel involving school buses.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to approve Senate bill.
FEPC S 1728 HR 4453	Senate bill would bar job discrimination based on race, creed or color and provide penalties for violations.	House voted substitute bill without enforcement teeth. Senate debate, probably filibuster, due soon.	Ask Senators to vote for S 1728 without weakening amendments, and to fight filibuster.
Mundt-Nixon Bill S 2311 HR 7595	Endangers civil liberties, union rights, under guise of fighting subversive activities.	Reported by Senate Judiciary; House Un-American Comm. holding hearings. CIO testified last week.	Ask Senators, Representatives to oppose the bill.
Kerr Bill S 1498	Weakens Federal Power Commission authority to regulate price of natural gas; would raise gas prices to consumers.	Passed both Houses.	Ask President Truman to veto the bill.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S 2246 HR 7402	Among other things, provides long-term, low-interest loans to cooperatives.	Both Houses defeated co-op section, passed "landlord" bill.	Ask members of both Houses for new attempt to pass co-op section.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C. Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

$1.00 A YEAR

5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., APRIL 17, 1950 No. 16

Progress On CIO Labor Unity Plan . . .

CIO Pres. Philip Murray is getting encouraging response to his proposal for unified action by all American labor. Replies have been received from all but one of the union leaders to whom Pres. Murray addressed his April 4 letter. The answers:

AFL: Shows interest in need for unity. Will submit CIO proposal to Executive Council meeting May 8.

Machinists: "We stand ready to cooperate."

Miners: Executive Board meeting April 18 will get recommendation to OK plan.

Railway Labor Executives: Proposal is being transmitted to all affiliates, and it will be discussed "at first opportunity."

Locomotive Engineers: Proposal will be placed before brotherhood convention in June. For additional details, see Page 3.

TEXACO'S REJECTION of proposals for improved pensions and refusal to discuss an arbitrary reduction of the work week to 16 hours led to the strike of 8000 members of the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union. Pickets (above) are stationed on a road leading to a tanker at Port Arthur, Texas.

. . . and Toward Ending Hate Among Men

Grain by grain the barrier of hatred and discrimination that men of ill will and blindness have built between themselves and those they consider inferior is being whittled away by sanity and light. But sometimes, too, men turn their heads away from light and understanding—and democracy. Where unions are strong, the CIO Steelworkers have learned, no man suffers in his job because of his race, creed or color—but the Truman Administration's FEPC Bill, stalled in the Senate, is still "one of the vital needs" of the country. In Atlanta, representatives of 116 colleges and universities in southern and border states where segregation is compelled by law called for its end in education. The American Bowling Congress will re-examine its "white male" tournament restriction. See Page 9.

Permanent UNICEF Is Requested

Proposals for reorganizing the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund as a permanent agency should have the moral leadership of the United States, CIO Pres. Philip Murray wrote President Truman on April 12.

Pointing out the CIO belief that "the best hope for world peace is through a strengthened, active United Nations," Murray recalled the effective work UNICEF has done to provide food, medicine and other aid to 35 million children in war-damaged countries.

"While many of the acute needs have been met," he continued, "much still remains to be done. We believe, moreover, that the problems facing millions of children in war-devastated countries and others have not been created by the war alone but are the result of poor economic and social conditions over a longer period.

"These problems . . . cannot be solved on an emergency basis. A long range program is essential.

"We believe, therefore, that UNICEF should be reorganized into a permanent agency within the United Nations so that the children of the world may receive permanent attention. We believe, further, that this permanent UN agency for children should be given adequate authority and funds to enable it to undertake and prosecute, at the invitation of participating member nations, such projects and programs that may be found necessary.

"It should have the technical assistance of existing agencies. It should have also such usable surplus commodities as cooperating nations may want to make available to it."

Steel Union Choice Of Former MMSW Members In 2 Nations

THE CAMPAIGN of CIO's Steelworkers to bring genuine trade unionism to members and former members of the discredited Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers is winning members in the United States and Canada.

Three upper Michigan locals of the MMSW have voted to bolt the Communist-dominated union and join the USA in a body, according to Henry A. Burkhammer, director of USA District 33. They represent about half the MMSW membership in Michigan copper mines, lime and stone quarries and the dairy industry, he said.

Largest of those shifting was Local 584, with about 1800 members employed by the Calumet-Hecla Copper Co. at Houghton, Mich. Only six out of more than 500 members who attended the meeting voted against the change.

More than 300 of the 360 members of Local 377, at the Schoolcraft Lime Co., Manistique, Mich., voted unanimously to secede from the MMSW and have been chartered as Local 4302 in the USA.

The total membership — about 115—at the Quincy Copper Co., Calumet, Mich., voted unanimously to turn back their charter as MMSW Local 523 and affiliate with USA.

The MMSW was expelled from the CIO recently and part of its jurisdiction was given to the Steelworkers by the National CIO.

IN CANADA the Canadian Confederation of Labour, which went to the rescue of locals and workers ignored by the MMSW, took over the jurisdiction of the red-ruled international and later asked the Steelworkers to assume it. CIO unions in Canada belong to the CCL.

USA organizers promptly went to work. More than 50% of the workers at the Hollinger Mine at Timmins, Ont., Canada's largest gold mine, have signed up in Local 4305, and according to USA Rep. Leo Behie it won't be long before an application is filed for a certificate of representation.

Another drive is in full swing among metal miners in northwestern Quebec. Efforts are being concentrated on Noranda Mines, Ltd., which controls or owns many smaller mines and operates the only smelter in the area. USA organizers are working also at Malartic and Val D'Or.

Union activity at Noranda has resulted in the posting of a company notice announcing that in addition to two weeks' vacation for employes with five years' service, those with 20 years' henceforth will get three weeks.

Fur Union Hearing Is Postponed

HEARINGS on charges of Communist domination of the American Communications Association were held last week by a three-man CIO committee.

Eleven officers and members of the union, headed by Pres. Joseph Selly, took part in the two-day closed-door session at CIO headquarters in Washington.

A report and recommendation on the findings will be submitted to the next meeting of the CIO Executive Board. No date for that session has yet been selected.

Hearing the charges against ACA were a committee composed of Secy.-Treas. David J. McDonald of the Steelworkers, chairman; Pres. Harry Sayre of the Paper Workers; and Pres. Joseph Froesch of the Glass Workers.

No public statements were issued by either side during the hearings—the fifth in a series conducted by the CIO since last year's convention amended the constitution.

THE CONSTITUTION permits the Executive Board, acting on a two-thirds vote, to expel affiliates whose "policies and activities . . . are consistently directed toward the achievement of the program or the purposes of the Communist party, any fascist organization or other totalitarian movement, rather than the objectives and policies set forth in the constitution of the CIO."

Another hearing—on charges filed against the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union—has been postponed until June 1 at the request of Pres. Ben Gold.

Gold, in a letter to CIO Pres. Murray, said that "matters of policy and program for our union are usually decided by the convention delegates on the basis of their knowledge, experience and independent thinking. The convention will open May 2."

Gold is a member of the national committee of the Communist Party and is no longer eligible for membership on the CIO Board.

The hearing against the Fur & Leather Workers Union had originally been scheduled for April 18.

It is expected that three other hearings—involving the Longshoremen, the Marine Cooks and Stewards, and the Fishermen—will be scheduled during May.

UPWA Wins Contract For Alaska Salmon Workers Who Were Formerly In FTA

THERE'S COLD comfort in this story for the Food and Tobacco Workers.

The newly formed Local 77 of the CIO United Packinghouse Workers has been recognized as the bargaining agency for approximately 1500 non-resident employes of 75 salmon canneries in Alaska, and has signed a contract covering wages, hours, working conditions, fair crew dispatching and the preferential shop.

FTA Local 7 used to represent these workers, according to CIO Reg. Dir. Roy W. Atkinson in Seattle, Wash. It lost that right a year ago when the AFL Seafood Workers contested its position and the Natl. Labor Relations Board ordered an election. The FTA, since expelled from the CIO because of its pro-communism, had not complied with the Taft-Hartley act and campaigned, with success, for a "no" vote.

In November a group of Local 7 members broke with FTA international and local leadership over communism and through Atkinson obtained a charter as UPWA Local 77. They began a membership drive that by March 20 had brought more than 1500 signed applications to the regional CIO office.

THE NEW LOCAL petitioned for an election and the NLRB held a hearing on March 15. The AFL union contested its claim to a majority and the FTA, though it has now complied with T-H in accordance with the latest twist in the party line, sought to block any representation for the workers by claiming that last year's "no" vote still holds.

When no decision came from the NLRB by March 31, the industry recognized Local 77 as bargaining agent and signed the contract negotiated by Atkinson, Field Rep. Barney Engelking, of the regional CIO office, and Pres. V. O. Naves and Secy.-Treas. Prudencio Mori of Local 77.

Condenser Companies Fined as Monopolists

Three manufacturers, a patent holding company and four individuals have been fined $48,000 in federal court at Trenton, N. J., on anti-trust charges. They pleaded no defense to charges of a conspiracy to fix prices and monopolize production and sale of variable condensers.

The defendants are General Instrument Corp., Elizabeth, N. J., and two officers; Radio Condenser Co., Camden, N. J., and two officers; Condenser Development Corp., Newark, N. J., and Variable Condenser Corp., Brooklyn, N. Y.

CIO Government Workers Oppose Bill To Cut Vacations

A PROPOSAL to trim down the vacation rights of federal employes brought a strong protest last week from the CIO's new Government and Civic Employes Organizing Committee.

The proposal, authored by Sen. Douglas (D. Ill.), came in the form of two bills. One would cut annual leave with pay for government employes from 26 to 20 days a year. The other would limit annual leave to from 12 to 20 days, depending on length of service.

The new CIO government workers union pointed out that while federal vacation provisions appear "relatively generous", they are more than balanced by the fact that U. S. employes have no unemployment compensation.

"Many federal employes, therefore, do not actually take their full vacations, but accumulate their leave as a cushion in case they lose their jobs," the CIO affiliate pointed out.

While Douglas has said he will introduce bills to provide unemployment compensation or severance pay for federal workers, they will be separate from the reduced vacation proposed. There is no assurance that they will be passed.

The Government and Civic Employes Organizing Committee successfully led a fight against an earlier plan by Douglas to cut annual leave and sick leave as a rider to the government's general appropriations bill.

Douglas, though backed by labor and showing a liberal attitude on many problems, has joined with the economy bloc on many issues involving federal activities.

Regulate Union Votes, Bill Asks

A bill which would require union officers to be elected at least every two years, with every union member permitted to ballot either in person or by absentee vote, has been proposed by Rep. Werdel (R. Cal.).

The bill, which isn't expected to get very far, would also require an open count of the ballots in the presence of an impartial person designated by the Secretary of Labor. Federal district courts could enforce compliance, and any union in violation could be cut off from NLRB services.

"I think I'll have to ask you sign a loyalty pledge."

Credit Unions Plan Workshop

A workshop on credit unions for organized labor will be one of the features of the convention of the Michigan Credit Union League April 21-22 at the Statler Hotel, Detroit.

Al Rightley, director of the co-op division of the CIO Auto Workers, and officers of several UAW locals will take part in the workshop. About 150 UAW locals have credit unions in operation, the union states in a pamphlet, "How to Own Your Own Bank," issued by its education department. Some of them have lent more than a milion dollars to local members.

The Credit Union convention will be attended by 1500 delegates representing 180,000 credit union members from all kinds of groups in Michigan.

IUE Winner In 42 Out of 53 NLRB Polls

CIO'S fast-growing baby, the Intl. Union of Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, is bowling along at a furious clip in representation elections.

In 53 such contests to date, the IUE has emerged victor 42 times and the discredited United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, ousted from the CIO because of its Communist domination, has won but 11 times.

All of the elections were held by the Natl. Labor Relations Board except one, which was among employes of Copper Wire Products, Guelph, Ont., Canada, and was conducted by the Ontario Labour Relations Board. There IUE received 56 votes and UE 3.

The IUE-CIO romped home the winner in contests of all sizes ranging from that at Wire Products, Inc., Lynn, Mass., where all 12 votes cast were marked for IUE-CIO, to the Frigidaire unit of General Motors at Dayton, O., where IUE-CIO won by about a 10 to 1 margin with nearly 13,000 workers voting.

IN NOT A single plant with more than 900 employes has the UE won.

The debacle for UE is nearly complete in some sections. For instance, in Hartford, Conn., IUE-CIO won five of six elections held on the same day after UE, accurately foreseeing defeat, pulled itself off the ballot.

In western New York the red grip on electrical workers hit an all-time low when IUE won at the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., near Buffalo, by 555 to 317. The red grip is due to reach a new all-time low when a vote is held at the Westinghouse plant in Buffalo on April 27, IUE leaders predict.

Prestige of the UE suffered another severe blow on April 11 when it ran a poor third in an NLRB ballotting at Remington Rand, Inc., Ilion, N. Y. Before the election UE organizers and international representatives were predicting they would win by a margin of 450 votes, but the final tally compiled by the NLRB showed: IUE-CIO 911; no union 636; UE 474. A runoff will be held May 2 with UE not appearing on the ballot. On the same day an election will be held among Remington Rand employes at nearby Herkinmer, N. Y.

BENJAMIN SIGAL, IUE general counsel, has directed locals in Westinghouse plants to bring suit against the company wherever is has withheld check-off dues that belong to the CIO affiliate.

"We would be willing," he wrote IUE local attorneys, "to let the NLRB elections determine who should get this money, but we know from previous experience, particularly in General Electric, that the UE is afraid to make such an agreement for obvious reasons.

"Inasmuch as we would like to clear the decks as quickly as possible in anticipation of our negotiations with Westinghouse, which will take place after the elections, there should be no further delay in filing suit."

Every Branch of Labor Interested In Unity Plan

GROWING active interest in the CIO's proposal for labor unity is being shown in every branch of the American labor movement.

Pres. Philip Murray, in a letter approved by the CIO vice-presidents on April 4, called on other union groups to join with CIO in establishing a joint committee to:

1 "Coordinate our efforts in the economic, legislative and political spheres."

2 "Seek to achieve the organic unity of all American labor."

The Murray proposals was sent to the heads of the AFL, the railway brotherhoods, the machinists and the miners' unions. At CIO News press time almost all of them had replied.

Here's what they had to say:

AFL Pres. William Green: "The conclusions which you express in your letter make it clear that time and experience have shown that labor and labor's friends, united, can successfully deal with the forces of reaction through united action and united effort."

Green said that it becomes "imperatively necessary" to submit Pres. Murray's letter to the AFL Executive Council "for consideration and official action." The Council meets in Philadelphia May 8.

Machinists Pres. Al Hayes: "We have publicly expressed the opinion on many occasions within the past few years that a much more realistic and sincere type of cooperation among the trade unions was desirable and necessary, if we are to protect our membership from the reactionary anti-union forces . . .

"We stand ready to cooperate in any movement toward closer cooperative action. We also stand ready at all tines to help bring about a completely united labor movement . . ."

Miners Pres. John Lewis: Executive officers of the United Mine Workers will recommend to the UMW Board, meeting April 18, that it "authorize participation in your suggested Joint Committee."

H. W. Fraser of Railway Executive Association: "Copies of your letter are being transmitted to all Labor Executives of organizations affiliated with the Railway Labor Executives Association, and in my capacity as Chairman of the Association, it will be my purpose to discuss these matters with the members of the Association at the first opportunity."

Alvanley Johnston, Locomotive Engineers: "I have read your proposal with a great deal of interest, and believe it is a matter that affects the policy of our Brotherhood; and inasmuch as we have a convention in June, it is my intention to place your letter before that body."

No reply has yet been received from Pres. W. P. Kennedy of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

MURRAY'S letter to the labor groups urged that joint labor action is necessary to cope with the growing problem of unemployment, the stalemate in Congress and the forthcoming elections.

"The establishment of such a standing joint committee would provide much-needed inspiration and leadership for the millions of liberal Americans who are now so much on the defensive," he wrote.

Murray stressed the point that the committee should be comprised of "duly-accredited" representatives of the various groups, and that they should have "authority to embark upon and pursue a common program."

MISS FONTANA

Miss Dorothy "Kandy" Kahne, 17-year-old daughter of CIO Steelworker John Kahne, Fontana Local 2869, was named Miss Fontana. She will represent that California steel city at the annual National Orange Show.

P.R. Base Pay To Be Probed

SECY.-TREAS. Lewis J. Clark, of the CIO Packinghouse Workers, left last week for Puerto Rico to serve as a member of a special committee to re-examine wage rates in seven of the island's industries.

Clark was appointed to the committee by Wage and Hour Administrator McComb on the recommendation of CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

Other employe representatives on the committee are Prudencio Rivera-Martinez of the Accident Prevention Division, Puerto Rico Insurance Fund; Pres. Tomas Mendez-Mejias of the General Confederation of Workers of Puerto Rico (CGT) and Lewis G. Hines, Washington, D. C., legislative representative of the AFL. Employers and the public also are represented on the committee.

McComb is empowered to raise the minimum hourly wage rates to levels below the statutory 75c minimum of the United States. The present rates are sugar, 40c; artificial flowers, 33c; cement, 40c; hairnet, 27½c; hosiery, 25 and 33c; shade pull, 15 and 24c; and metal, plastics, machinery, instrument, transportation equipment and allied industries, 35 and 40c.

The CIO recently issued an industrial union charter to CGT.

Slap 'em Back With Bucks for PAC

"Big Glass" Pensions OKayed

Stockholders of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. and the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. have ratified the pension agreement between the company and the CIO's Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers.

The LOF contract covering some 8000 workers employed in four plants, goes into effect May 1. Under terms of the agreement, reached last January, workers with 25 years continuous service receive a $100 monthly pension (including social security benefits).

A similar plan covering some 10,000 Pittsburgh Plate Glass workers was agreed upon at the same time, at joint negotiations between the union and the two big glass concerns.

Libbey-Owens-Ford's sales and net profit reached an all-time high during the first quarter of 1950, LOF Pres. John D. Biggers told the annual meeting of shareholders in Toledo, O., at which the pension agreement was approved. Net earnings nearly doubled within a year, rising to $7,209,868 for the first quarter of 1950 from $3,895,761 for the first 1949 quarter.

Cost of the pension to the company was estimated at $2 million annually for current pensions and past service liability, it was reported at the meeting.

CIO Councils Urge Up-to-Date Government In 3 States

STATE CIO Councils in three Eastern states are swinging into fights for modernization of laws and governmental procedures that is long overdue.

In Connecticut, Daniel J. Gallagher, chairman of the State Council's Legislative Committee, called for favorable action on the reorganization plan proposed by the Commission on State Government Organization and urged those with objections to some parts to weigh them carefully in view of the merit of the program as a whole.

"Like other groups that have appeared before the committee," he said, "we have a particular interest to serve in representing many of the organized workers of this state, and on their behalf we believe there should be some modifications of some of the proposals.

"Be we would rather see the whole report adopted without modification than see a substantial portion or all of it wrecked by the accumulation of objections from people or groups whose jobs or interests the report puts in jeopardy.

"We urge the members of the Joint Committee on Reorganization to evaluate all of the special objections in the light of the tremendous good the adoption of a substantial part of this report would accomplish in terms of giving to Connecticut an efficient, economical and responsible government."

IN NEW JERSEY, Pres. Carl Holderman of the State CIO Council, in a letter to all members of the State Senate, accused the Republican majority caucus of "dilatory and undemocratic handling of bills of major economic and social importance." He demanded immediate passage of a dozen labor-supported measures—three commission bills to improve local government structure and nine others which have been passed by the Assembly—which "have not as yet seen the light of day in the Senate."

In his effort to blast the legislation from the clutches of the GOP caucus to the floor, Holderman flatly blamed "the system whereby four men, acting in secret and representing only 4% of the population of our state, can rule the entire state in conformity with the wishes of the New Jersey Manufacturers' Association." Among the CIO-supported measures blocked off from action is one requiring equal pay for equal work for women.

The letter paid off. A few days later the Senate unanimously passed a bill raising maximum unemployment compensation and off-the-job disability benefits from $22 to $26 a week.

IN NEW YORK, 20 members of the State CIO Political Action Committee are drawing up a CIO platform which will be submitted to both major parties before the fall election campaign gets under way. They will meet again next month to hear reports from subcommittees delegated to prepare specific sections and complete their work.

Completed sections of the proposed platform deal with unemployment and sickness insurance. State CIO Pres. Louis Hollander warned that the state's "Republican party and big business interests are teaming up to destroy" the unemployment insurance program, but the CIO stand is that payments must be increased "not undermined."

Only the Democratic and Republican parties will be offered the program, the committee decided, because the CIO has found no reason to change its belief that the American Labor party, once its political arm, is "completely Communist-dominated and no longer qualified to speak in the name of any responsible organization of American trade unionists."

"We are a non-partisan group not bound to any party," said Hollander. "However, knowing the legislative record of the Republican party at Albany, we have little hope that they will accept our program."

Not A Record To Brag About

Little Fair Deal Legislation Passed in Current Session; Labor Must Work Hard On 1950 Elections

By ALLAN L. SWIM

IT WAS IN THE BAG and there was no doubt about it—absolutely none. Or at least that's what the "experts" said.

Harry Truman was through as a political leader and Tom Dewey was going to be our next President.

And, furthermore, the Republicans were going to increase their majority in Congress.

It was a gloomy picture, indeed, for the Fair Dealers.

While the "experts" were predicting, Truman was taking his story to the people.

And on election day the people returned Harry Truman to office and gave him a Democratic majority in both houses.

They also gave Congress and the President as much of a mandate as a political party ever gets in this country.

CONGRESS went into session last year, spent a lot of time getting organized and then tackled some of the major problems confronting the people.

Before long a coalition of Republicans and Dixiecrats appeared on the scene and began fighting the Fair Deal. It was an effective coalition, but Congress made progress toward the enactment of the program on which the Democrats won the election.

The effort to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act—the one thing most sought by organized labor—failed, however.

The record of Congress for this year's session isn't one to excite the enthusiasm of anybody but the reactionaries.

The federal tax on oleo was repealed and the displaced persons program was improved.

But—

Proponents of FEPC legislation were slapped in the teeth. The middle-income housing bill was emasculated.

And no real move toward repeal of T-H was made.

MANY MEMBERS of Congress have done their best to carry out the mandate given by the voters in 1948.

They're been in there fighting in an effort to carry out campaign promises.

Labor and other liberal groups are proud of them—but they don't feel the same way about most of the Republicans and those who talk like Democrats but vote like the GOP Old Guard.

Fact of the matter is, the liberal groups are getting fed up with what's been going on.

Being fed up, however, won't do the job that needs to be done. Much more than that is required.

And now is the time for them to begin doing it.

THERE IS STILL time for Congress to pass important measures before its "political season" recess begins.

There's still time for President Truman to take his story to the people and arouse them to demand that Congress get off its hump.

And now is the time to start throwing real energy into the 1950 political campaigns.

The latter, in the long run, probably will be of greater importance than the former.

Conservative forces usually gain in the "off-year" elections—but it doesn't have to happen in 1950.

If it does happen, however, things are going to be a bit rougher for labor in the future.

THE REPUBLICANS have already made it clear that they're going to depend heavily on a "scare" campaign and use the slogan "Liberty vs. Socialism."

If so, it will be a campaign based on a phony issue—but it will have voter appeal.

Liberal forces can counteract it if they'll work hard. For CIO members this means more PAC work—more dollar contributions, more doorbell ringing, more speech-making, more block work.

Some of labor's friends in Congress are going to have a hard time winning re-election unless labor gets in there and pitches.

And it's going to be a lot harder to obtain successors for labor's enemies unless a lot of real work is done.

There will be much at stake in the 1950 elections. Let's start winning them right now!

No Jobs For Them

We don't intend to infer that there's a depression just around the corner or that the present unemployment stiuation is one which is rapidly pushing the nation toward a crisis.

But the situation is serious, despite the fact that many of our political leaders and newspapers seem inclined to shrug it off.

More than four million persons are totally unemployed and an additional six to eight million are working only part time.

The unemployment figure is about a million higher than it was a year ago and about two million higher than two years ago.

Let's look at it this way:

We're supposed to be in a period of prosperity—and indeed we are, if you can judge good times by corporation profits.

Yet we have between 10 and 12 million persons who have no jobs at all or work only part time.

And there's nothing at present to indicate that the situation will improve noticeably in the future.

There are those, of course, who will say that it's "normal" in a country as big as the U. S. for four to five million persons to be jobless.

We'll agree that it may be "normal" but that doesn't make it good. Not at all.

Unemployment is a doubtful "luxury" which we can ill afford—and full employment is a goal for which all of us should strive.

Frankly, we're not impressed by those who say that we've never had full employment in this country—except in time of war.

We've never really tried to achieve it.

It's time that we did.

And meantime we should do something drastic about the pitifully inadequate unemployment benefits received by those who are not able to find jobs.

Which Side Was He On?

Organizers on the Southern drive have learned that it pays to listen to suggestions—even when they come from the strangest sources.

One of them was recently talking to an office employe through an open window about the progress of the membership campaign the organizer was carrying on at the paper plant when the company superintendent suddenly apearred at the window.

"Say," he said, "I want to tell you that the leaflets the CIO is putting out here are really fine. Both style and content are swell but I have one criticism to make—why in the H--- don't you use our paper to print them on?"

Somewhat taken aback, the organizer, nevertheless, replied that it sounded like a good idea, whereupon the "super" told the employe to "get Mr. ——— a couple of reams of our best grade mimeograph paper from the stockroom."

When the leaflet appeared the next day printed on the company's paper it was the signal for a rush by the workers to sign CIO cards.

Seventy-five per cent of the plant is now signed up.

Sales Down, Profits Up --- Biz Paper

WHOLE GIANT segments of the American economy managed to increase profits last year, while at the same time their volume of sales dropped off. In addition, other industries reported increased profits all out of proportion to their rising sales volume.

The ability of the electrical, equipment and chemical industries to make record profits in the face of falling sales, and the sharp increase of profits ahead of sales in the auto industry, has been pointed out, not by union economists, but in a page-one story in the N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

Reporting on a survey of 250 leading industrial corporations, Journal of Commerce Reporter Victor Morris concedes:

"Greater labor productivity, made possible by modern equipment installed since the war, is the most significant offset to higher wage rates and pensions, according to many of the annual corporation reports."

"There was a marked bias in favor of the larger firm," Morris observes, with General Motors and duPont hitting the jackpot.

Fourteen iron and steel corporations reported sales down 8.5% in the year, and profits up 5%.

Ten chemical corporations reported sales down 17%, while profits rose 6% during the year.

Eleven electrical equipment manufacturers reported sales down 3.1%, at the same time that profits rose 2.9%.

The industry practice of maintaining high profits and high prices in the face of declining sales, some economists point out, is exactly the situation which President Truman and his Council of Economic Advisers warned against in January when they reported to Congress that "If there is any room for price change in some vital industrial areas, it is in a downward and not in an upward direction. Earnings are generally rewarding though not so high as a year ago, and they can best be protected and advanced by those policies which will maintain and expand volume." (LPA).

Carlsbad, N. M., Forum Hears Oliver

PLANNING for the nation's welfare is "a necessary democratic process," Robert Oliver, CIO regional director at Dallas, Tex., told the second annual Carlsbad (N.M.) Agriculture, Labor and Industry Forum at its recent meeting.

"We in the CIO do not believe that depressions are necessary," he told 300 representatives of the three branches of the economy.

"We do not believe that only through war can we achieve maximum production and full employment for our people. We believe that we have in this country the brains, the character and the ingenuity to plan effectively for prosperity in time of peace.

"We believe that we have the industrial capacity, the national wealth, the technical knowledge and the brains and spirit to create in this nation, under democracy, a prosperity, a high level of good living for all of our people, that would make this nation of ours and this ideal of government forever impregnable to any totalitarian threat."

OLIVER SAID the CIO is "proud" that its program for meeting social and economic problems "is a program for all America," not for any one group.

"Time and time again," he said, "the president of the CIO, Philip Murray, has called for the establishment of industry councils composed of representatives of labor, management, farmers, consumers and government to provide the basis for public planning for the public welfare, instead of private planning by powerful groups for their own private and selfish interests.

"There is no such thing as no planning in our economic life. All activity is planned.

"Those vocal and powerful interests who most loudly oppose and condemn planning are not opposed to planning as such, but only to public planning. They approve of private planning and practice it . . .

"It is easy to understand that in our democracy our people are opposed to a controlled economy. Perhaps those who fear planning do not understand that it is possible to have a planned economy without a controlled economy.

"The democratic way to plan is to have broad and vigorous participation by all citizens."

Eat It Up!

More than a half-billion well-balanced meals were served to nearly eight million school children under the National School Lunch program through 1949.

The CIO News

Congress of Industrial Organizations

Philip Murray, President James B. Carey, Secretary-Treasurer

Vice Presidents: Joseph A. Beirne, L. S. Buckmaster, Joseph Curran, John Green, Allan S. Haywood, O. A. Knight, Walter P. Reuther, Emil Rieve, Frank Rosenblum.

Allan L. Swim, Editor and Publicity Director

Assistant Publicity Director: Henry C. Fleisher

Assistant Editors: Hollace Ransdell, Fred Ross, Arthur Riordan, (On Leave), Dorothy Rockwell Clark, William Weiss, Gervase N. Love

Editorial Office, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington 6, D. C.

Entered as Second Class Matter, Post Office, Washington, D. C. Under the Act of Aug. 24, 1912 and Feb 28. 1925.

Vol. XIII April 17, 1950 No. 16

'Do You Want To Go To Jail?' He Asked

IT HAPPENED back during the depression — in a small town in a highly industrialized Northern state.

The principal characters were a woman who was placed in charge of the first picket line she ever saw, a sheriff who threatened to invoke a law that didn't exist, and a group of courageous mill workers.

There was violence—and there were threats. One man went to the hospital and another to jail.

But the story had a happy ending.

EARLY IN THE morning of the second day of her career as a union organizer Mary got a telephone call from the man under whom she was working.

There had been an unexpected walkout at a mill about 40 miles away and he'd be by in a few minutes to pick her up.

Soon they were speeding for the mill town—and—when they arrived there was considerable excitement.

A picket had just been stabbed by a scab. Both had been arrested. The unionist was taken to a hospital, the scab to jail.

A few hours later the green organizer's "boss" said he'd received a hurry-up call, that he was leaving for New York City.

And Mary was placed in charge of the picket line—the first one she'd ever seen.

WITHIN THE NEXT few hours Mary learned to sing "Solidarity" and "Hold the Fort"—and then the sheriff arrived.

"See here," he declared, "you can't do this!"

"Can't do what?" she asked.

He said the union could't engage in mass picketing—that it could have only two pickets at each mill entrance.

Mary asked him what law the pickets were violating.

"You know it's illegal," he blustered. "Ain't you been reading in the papers about allowing only two pickets at each door?" (He was referring to a local ordinance in a nearby city which sought to limit picketing.)

Mary pointed out that there was no state law prohibiting mass picketing and she declared there was no local ordinance limiting pickets (although she didn't know whether there was or not).

THE SHERIFF blustered and stormed. He said his "orders" were to halt mass picketing at once "or else."

"Black Maria" (the patrol wagon) was being sent down from the county seat, he declared, and he was going to lock up those who refused to obey his orders.

Women pickets gathered around them and he singled out one after the other. "Do you want to go to jail?" he asked.

Mary then told the sheriff she couldn't decide what should be done—that the matter was up to the strikers.

A hurried meeting was held near the plant. Mary explained that the sheriff had threatened to arrest them.

"What do you want to do?" she asked.

From all sides came shouts: "We'll continue to picket." "Let him arrest us." "We don't mind going to jail."

Mary turned to the sheriff and said, "There's your answer!"

HE MADE NO more threats and he made no arrests. He watched the pickets for several hours and then walked over to Mary, his hand extended, grinning.

"You've got a perfectly legal right to do what you're doing," he said. "You tell those people they're doing a swell job and I'm with them 100%. Any time they want to know about their legal rights, tell them to come to my office."

Mary still doesn't know what changed the sheriff's attitude "but he kept his word, we won the strike in a couple of weeks and signed up a good contract."

A.L.S.

IN A WORD!

ECA Labor Advisers Say:

Increased Imports Won't Hurt U. S., Will Help Europe

By BERT M. JEWELL
and CLINTON S. GOLDEN
ECA ECONOMIC ADVISERS

IN RECENT MONTHS we have grown increasingly aware of rumblings from some labor sources over the government's reinforced plan to boost imports from Europe into this country.

Some workers have become afraid that the proposal will lead to such a tremendous flood of European goods on the American market that similar U. S. made products will not sell. This, they reason, will cripple domestic industry and put them out of work.

This fear—of being thrown out of work—is a very strong one, particularly here in America in this generation. And we symathize with it most strongly. We have all of us suffered too many years because of unemployment, and the memory is still piercingly alive.

And so the fear is powerful—and, as often happens, it has translated itself into dissatisfaction. This dissatisfaction is directed at that agency which most informed people know is principally involved with carrying out this aspect of the government's program.

WE ARE SPEAKING, of course, of the Economic Cooperation Administration, with which we are associated as labor advisors to Administrator Paul Hoffman. Both of us have discussed this problem with Hoffman and we all felt that it should be clarified, for the good of the industries and workers who are now so uneasy—and ultimately for the well-being of the entire country.

In an attempt to do this, Hoffman recently wrote a detailed letter to Sen. H. Alexander Smith in which he described the position of ECA with respect to imports from Europe. It is our feeling that the trade unionists of America should know intimately many points which he clarifies and we shall set forth some of them. Hoffman said:

"I don't believe that anyone could argue that increased imports amounting to one-third of 1% of our total output (of goods) could have any appreciable effect on the total economy; nor, of course, is there anything to the argument that when we import goods we are importing unemployment.

"If we do not import, we cannot export; and if we do not export, we create unemployment in the export field."

Hoffman said that tariff concessions can be granted "only within the framework of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act." He emphasized that concessions can be and have been granted only after careful review. And then:

"I know of no instance in which tariff concessions have jeopardized the life of any American industry."

Hoffman revealed that experience with the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act has shown it is possible to reduce duties in many industries without doing serious harm to American businessmen. Actually, in the event of serious injury to American business because of a concession in reciprocal tariff negotiations, the Tariff Commission is required to increase rates.

Yet in all the years since the "escape" clause has been in operation, only a handful of industries have asked for relief. The majority were dismissed for lack of evidence of serious injury.

Hoffman expressed the view that there are only two sound ways to reduce Europe's dollar gap. One, he said, would be to reduce requirements for dollar imports "through building up economic sources of supply in Europe itself and in other non-dollar areas," the second, by "increasing Europe's dollar earnings through direct and triangular trade."

"This means, of course," he continued, "that we must sell less and buy more from Europe. There is little appeal in such a program but if we do not sell less and buy more, we must either continue our aid or see the European economy placed in grave danger."

HOFFMAN emphasized again and again that he does not believe "the apprehensions as to the effects of a slight increase in imports are well founded." He suggested, however, that should the new competition result in a loss of employment, it might be desirable to develop programs for retaining and relocation of workers, such as we had during the war.

"May I state that there are reasons other than economic why every effort should be made to bring the trade between the United States and Europe into balance at a reasonably high level," Hoffman said. "The relationships between Europe and the United States can be sound only if there is no element of charity in that relationship.

"Europe wants to pay her own way and we should help her to do so. We in ECA in administering this program have constantly kept in mind that the only charity of enduring value is that charity which lifts people above the need of charity."

Beware Of Toronto Stock Salesmen, SEC Warns

By WILLIAM WEISS

IF YOUR telephone rings one of these evenings, it may be a master of ceremonies on a radio quiz program calling from New York to tell you that you have hit the jackpot and have won a three years' supply of saddle soap—you lucky person you!

If the long distance call is from Toronto, Canada, perhaps the smartest thing you can do is to slam down the receiver before the persuasive individual on the other end of the line goes into his high pressure sales spiel as to how you can become a millionaire overnight simply by the purchase of a few shares of "Neversweat Limited Oil Wells or "Sloppy Joe Uranium Deposits, Inc."

The long distance telephone approach is a new technique designed to streamline the old phony Canadian mining and oil stock racket into an almost sure-fire scheme to swindle U. S. investors out of an estimated $1 million to $20 million a month.

The new boom in worthless stocks, based principally on gold and oil but given a terrific shot in the arm by the frenzied search for uranium used in the manufacture of atom bombs, began more than a year ago. Since that time some $360 million worth of stock shares have been offered for sale in the U. S.

IF A. E. DEPALMA RETURNS to the United States from Toronto, he is subject to arrest on charges of attempted fraud in the sale of stock. He is wanted by the federal government, Pennsylvania and New York for jumping bail aggregating $50,000 after being arrested in New York City two years ago.

Workers Victimized

How many people have actually bought stock is a question federal agents can't answer but Securities & Exchange Commission officials do point out that the usual victims are working men and women—people who can least afford to throw their money away on the worthless certificates.

Lately the names of an increasing number of trade union members in this country have found their way onto the mailing and long distance telephone lists of some of these concerns. Complaints pour into the SEC offices in Washington from all parts of the country at the rate of 150 a week. Many are pitiful letters from poor people who have invested $25 to $200 and have nothing to show for it except an imposingly printed piece of paper.

A group of promoters termed the "Dirty 60" by SEC maintains headquarters in Toronto, from where literature is mailed to individuals in every state in the union who are on "sucker lists" procured from various sources.

These promoters know, of course, that it is unlawful to sell unregistered stock in the U. S. But they also know that the extradition treaty between this country and Canada does not cover violation of SEC laws. They can be prosecuted by the U. S. only if they cross the border and get caught.

They are also aware that the Canadian Parliament has for eight years refused to ratify a proposed treaty which would outlaw their activities in Canada. (The U. S. Senate ratified this treaty in 1942.)

No. [redacted]

Palamino Gold Mines Limited

NOT SUBJECT TO CALL — AUTHORIZED CAPITAL $500,000.00 — NO PERSONAL LIABILITY

DIVIDED INTO 500,000 SHARES OF THE PAR VALUE OF $1.00 EACH.

This Certifies that [redacted] is the registered owner of EXACTLY 100 fully paid and non-assessable shares of the par value of One Dollar each of the Capital Stock of

PALAMINO GOLD MINES LIMITED

NO PERSONAL LIABILITY

transferable only on the books of the Company by the owner or by attorney upon surrender of this Certificate properly endorsed.

This Certificate is not valid until countersigned by the Transfer Agent and Registrar of the Company.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the said Company has caused this Certificate to be signed by its duly authorized officers this [illegible]

POSTMASTERS have been ordered not to accept any money orders for Palamino Gold Mines, Ltd., which issued the above stock certificate. This is but one of the many types of unregistered stock which the Securities and Exchange Commission says Toronto operators are selling to Americans, many of them workers. The Post Office Dept. also has prohibited postmasters from accepting money orders for A. E. DePalma and J. F. Wright, alleged mine operators.

$50,000 Bond Forfeited

An idea of how lucrative the racket has become was indicated when one of the more enterprising swindlers, A. E. DePalma, an ex-Brooklyn used car salesman, was arrested when he made a business trip to New York, in 1947. He had been indicted by a Cleveland grand jury on a charge of attempted fraud.

The federal government fixed his bond at $40,000, New York State indicted him on a similar charge and set bond at $7500 and Pennsylvania also came up with an indictment of attempted fraud and set bail at $2500. DePalma furnished bond for a total of $50,000. The bond was forfeited when DePalma disappeared. SEC agents say he is back in Toronto pushing the sale of his pet project, "Peg Tantalum Mines, Ltd."

The "Dirty 60" are careful to make token compliance with Ontario laws and register there as any reputable concern would do. From then on, however, any resemblance between their actions and a legitimate business operation is hard to find, according to SEC.

The first move usually is to lease "some old moose pastures" and stake out a few claims here and there. A company is set up and the sale of the usual three million shares of stock with a par value of $1 is authorized. The stock is then ready to be offered to U. S. investors at 25 or 30c a share.

The first indication an individual has that he has been placed on a "sucker list," usually comes with receipt of a brightly illustrated, Toronto postmarked, "Dear Friend" letter.

The letter is almost always accompanied by a descriptive folder giving authentic figures on the profits of legitimate companies and possibly quoting a reliable source as to the tremendous profits made by these companies.

How Racket Operates

Somewhere in the letter, the writer stops talking in terms of millions of dollars and reputable concerns and comes up with an offer to "reserve a block of 100 shares of Brimstone Oil at 35c a share" for the prospective victim.

Seldom is there a request for money in the first letter. The reader is asked to "study the proposition" and if it sounds good (and it always does!) to reserve 100 shares or so for the future. He is told that when the company is assured of "adequate financial backing," then and only then, will the opportunity to invest $35 or more in the "sure fire" scheme be presented.

Shortly after the "come on" letters have been dispatched, the next phase of "Operation Sucker" begins.

A long-distance telephone call from Toronto is put through to the client from a "boiler room"—a small room where as many as 20 high-pressure salesmen sit at desks and do nothing but place long-distance calls to likely customers.

When he answers the phone, the intended victim hears what must sound to him like a legitimate stock market trading post and he is apt to be properly impressed by the planned confusion. He is told by the fast-talking individual on the other end of the line that a new oil well has just been "spudded in." The stock is soaring but because he has had the foresight and intelligence to reserve 100 shares, he now has the opportunity to get in on the ground floor. He is warned he must act quickly—the money must be in the mail that day!

The "Boiler Room" boys are artists in their particular field, which happens to be fleecing gullible people. They are old hands at the game, know their stuff and the average honest person is simply no match for them.

The SEC, under the law, cannot tell any person whether a stock is a good or a bad investment . . . It is only a "disclosure agency." It can and will tell a prospective purchaser whether a Canadian stock or a Canadian broker is registered in Washington. If either is not registered properly in the files, the mere offering of the securities for sale is a violation of U. S. law.

Uncle Sam Will Not Forward Their Mail

U. S. Post Office fraud orders have been issued against the following individuals and firms trading out of Toronto, Ontario. Postmasters have been advised not to forward any mail to them.

A. Allison & Co. and Capewell Petroleum Corp. Ltd.

Cambridge Securities Corp. Ltd. and Marwood Minning Corp.

Frank Shea & Co., Frank Shea and Petromine Exploration & Finance Co. Ltd., Indigo Consolidated Gold Mines Ltd.

Waddell & Co., Victor H. Waddell and Petromine Exploration and Finance Co. Ltd., Melcot Securities Ltd., J. M. Scott, and Leberta-Redwater Oil Co. Ltd.

Kenneth Cameron Ltd. and Yellowstone Mines Ltd.

J. Cameron Mair Co. Ltd. and Spike Redwater Oil Co. Ltd., Leader Securities Ltd., Lionel Richmond, and Treasure Rouyn Mine Ltd.

Cardigan Securities Ltd., H. N. Switzer, and Mensilvo Mines Ltd.

N. A. Weir & Co. and Marvel Rouyn Mines Ltd.

H. H. Gillespie & Co. and Metoils Ltd.

Noel Stephen Jones and Alberta Leaseholds Ltd.

J. F. Wright, A. E. DePalma, and Palamino Gold Mines Ltd.

Donald F. Bryans & Co., William G. Chipp, and Maidstone Oils Ltd.

Swindlers Hampered

Last year, the Post Office Department and SEC officials came up with an idea which has seriously handicapped the operations of a number of the stock swindlers.

It was a fraud order sent to "all postmasters authorized to dispatch letter mail to Canada." It prohibits the sale of money orders for or the forwarding of mail to a number of phony concerns located in Toronto and listed as frauds.

Any letters addressed to these companies must be returned to the sender with the word "fraudulent" plainly written or stamped on the outside.

While this latest maneuver will cut down the scope of the groups activities, American citizens will continue to be taken for large sums of money each year by these unethical operators unless the public is constantly warned of the futility of purchases of stock unregistered with SEC.

PERPETUALLY ON the alert for unregistered stocks and bonds is the Securities and Exchange Commission. L. to r.: Richard B. McEntire, Donald C. Cook, Chairman Harry A. McDonald, Edward T. McCormick, Paul R. Rowan. Their biggest job is to protect U. S. citizens from unscrupulous promoters who peddle phony securities to the unwary.

Book on Unions' Legal Bouts Shows:

T-H Artfully Written 'With Malice Toward Labor'

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

EIGHT honest, hardworking shoe workers listened glumly as the jury's verdict was read aloud: "We find the defendants guilty of a combination to raise their wages." The judge fined the eight shoe makers, added on the costs of the trial and ordered them committed to jail until the money was paid.

Labor's first recorded court case in the United States was over. It was the year 1806 in Philadelphia.

It is with this case that Elias Lieberman starts his fascinating new book, "Unions Before the Bar," a study of 25 historic trials showing the evolution of labor rights in the United States. The final case deals with the U. S. Supreme Court's decision in October, 1948, upholding the constitutionality of state laws prohibiting union-security clauses in collective bargaining contracts.

IN THE 142 YEARS intervening between these two cases, unions fought bitterly in the courts to uphold simple human rights (as opposed to property rights) which were so essential if unions were to have any kind of fair chance to negotiate with powerful employers for improved wages, hours and working conditions.

A few times they won a small point, more often they lost a big issue in these court battles, many of which dragged on for years and cost the unions hundreds of thousands of dollars before they were finally decided by the U. S. Supreme Court. It was not until the Supreme Court declared the National Labor Relations Act constitutional in April, 1937, that unions really won "any positive rights," Lieberman writes.

> Like Their Bosses
>
> "The shoe makers were among the first groups of workers in the U. S. who sought to organize themselves. In this respect they followed in the footsteps of their employers, who were among the first employer group to form a trade association." Elias Lieberman in "Unions Before The Bar."

He calls it a "momentous decision, affecting the entire legal structure of employer-employe relations in the United States and having a profound effect on the development of the labor movement."

Although "Unions Before the Bar," as the title indicates, is a study of important labor cases, all of which, with the exception of the first case, reached the Supreme Court, one of the most valuable chapters in the book concerns not a court decision, but a law—the Taft-Hartley Act. The key provisions of this law have not as yet been fully tested in our courts, Lieberman explains.

His analysis of this law, standing as it does against the background of labor's struggle in the courts for more than a century, clearly reveals its rascality.

IT SEEMS TO BE hard, even for some well-meaning liberals, to understand why organized labor hates the T-H law so intensely. They think unionists are exaggerating when they call it a "slave-labor law." Actually, as Lieberman's analysis indicates, this is an understatement. The law is in effect an intricately devised set of traps and snares, hidden under a cover of mealy-mouthed hypocritical verbiage pretending to protect labor's rights to bargain collectively, Lieberman shows.

It is, says Lieberman, "the most complex and detailed labor legislation in the entire history of the country," and was artfully written "with malice toward labor." Nothing could make this plainer than the careful examination of the outstanding court decisions involving labor's rights recorded in this book.

For in these cases, beginning with the "Conspiracy of the Philadelphia Bootmakers" (1805-06), lie the germs of the same unjust and prejudiced attitude toward labor that gave birth to the Taft-Hartley law. This so-called "Labor-Management Relations Act" of 1947, is in effect an attempt of anti-labor elements to recapture the past. It strives to take back as many as possible of the gains painfully won by labor during more than a century of struggle.

Last Of A Long Line?

It should be stated at once that "Unions Before the Bar" is not hard to read. It is written in simple language, with a minimum of legal phraseology. When the language of the court is quoted, it is interpreted in words the average person can understand, with the real significance of the court action explained.

Another outstanding merit of the book is that the political and social trends of the period are interwoven into the story of each case. You can't really comprehend the meaning of the court cases without this background. A mere analysis of the main points in the judges' decision even if simply explained, is not enough for a thorough understanding of the evolution of labor's rights as interpreted by the courts.

ALSO, AS Lieberman points out, judges are human beings, influenced not only by the times in which they live, but also by their own personal heritage, economic status, training and prejudices. These things are bound to influence their decisions, especially if the judges themselves are not aware of them.

Lieberman indicates his recognition of this important element in court decisions by opening his book with a quotation from former Supreme Court Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo:

"There is in each of us a stream of tendency, whether you choose to call it philosophy or not, which gives coherence and direction to thought and action. Judges cannot escape that current any more than other mortals. All their lives, forces which they do not recognize and cannot name, have been tugging at them—inherited instincts, traditional beliefs, acquired convictions . . . which, when reasons are nicely balanced, must determine where choice shall fall. In this mental background every problem finds its setting."

> Weapon Against Labor
>
> "Ironically, the Clayton Act, which had been hailed by the leaders of labor as the panacea for prosecution under the Sherman Act, instead of extending protection to labor became an additional weapon against labor." Elias Lieberman in "Unions Before The Bar."

Labor's struggles throughout the years to establish its rights before the highest court in the land have had to contend not only with the organized hostility of employers, but also to reckon with the economic and political trends of the day and with the common fraility of judges.

The book does a nice job of showing how these influences weave through labor's never-ending battle to protect the rights of workers to organize unions and safeguard their power for effective collective bargaining—a battle that continually landed labor in the courts.

> Phony Property Rights
>
> "The whole legal concept of the employer's property rights under the yellow dog contract is highly artificial, unrealistic, and stems from an economic philosophy based on prejudice against organized labor." Elias Lieberman in "Unions Before The Bar."

There's also much rich illustrative material in Unions Before the Bar that makes it much more than just an analysis of important Supreme Court decisions affecting labor. Calmly and much more temperately than labor leaders, harried by the constant struggle, could describe such things, Lieberman tells some of the tricks used by anti-labor employers to discredit unions in the eyes of the public, while hiding their real designs under fine sounding slogans, such as "the right to work" and "the American way."

The general public is not always able to see the selfish interests of the employers and their heartless disregard of the welfare of workers concealed behind such slogans. This places labor on the defensive, Lieberman says.

Slogans with a noble sounding ring to them had a particular appeal during, and right after the war, drowning out union arguments, says Lieberman. "By June 1947, at least 14 states had laws prohibiting the union-security clause and curbing various other union activities."

Three of these cases, from the states of Arizona, Nebraska and North Carolina, finally reached the U. S. Supreme Court in October, 1948, and labor received a setback as bad as some of those of earlier years in the decision handed down. The court held that such state laws prohibiting union-security clauses in agreements were quite constitutional.

Lieberman says that what the court told labor indirectly in this decision, was "that any relief it desired against prohibition of union-security agreements must come not from the courts but from the legislatures."

This implied advice, extended to cover labor's over-all relations with the courts, could be applied to the 25 cases discussed in this book as well as to other of labor's experiences with decisions of judges. It points up a lesson which labor today has learned well, but which unions did not always know, or follow, as the cases discussed by Lieberman show. This is the importance of strong and unceasing activity on the legislative and political front.

In his concluding chapter, Lieberman summarizes the evolution of labor rights in the United States as illustrated by the cases studied into five stages:

1. Open Suppression of Labor, as typified by the case of the Philadelphia boot and shoe makers. In this first recorded labor case, Lieberman writes, the "presiding judge aligned himself with the aspirations of the then-dominant class in society."

2. Reluctant Tolerance, during which it became evident that the rapid industrial development of the U.S. made it necessary to tolerate unions, at least in theory. In this period arose the doctrine of the "Ends and Means," under which a union was judged by the ends it sought and by the means used to accomplish these. This doctrine underlays the decision in the case of the Commonwealth (Mass.) vs. Hunt handed down by the Supreme Court in 1842.

This case also involved charges of "criminal conspiracy" against a group of Boston boot makers, but this time the decision was favorable to the union, in a grudging sort of way. However Lieberman believes the case is one of the most important in the history of the evolution of union rights in the U.S. After it, he says, "labor was confronted less with the charges of the criminal conspiracy doctrine but became confronted more with the use of a new legal weapon against it—the injunction."

3. Judicial Prejudice. The enactment of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act in 1890 opens this third stage in which the courts, more than society, showed prejudice toward organized labor. Outstanding case of this period was the famous Danbury Hatters dispute which began in 1902 and was settled finally by a decision of the Supreme Court in 1914 holding that the Sherman Act was applicable to labor unions.

4. Social Recognition. This stage began with the New Deal, and marks the era when labor unions acquired positive rights for the first time. The courts began at last to recognize the social need of unions and the Supreme Court faced "the industrial facts of life," Lieberman says. The important case of this period, of course, was the Supreme Court's decision declaring the Wagner Labor Relations Act constitutional.

5. Social Responsibility. The power and prestige labor has now acquired, Lieberman believes, has brought unions to an incipient fifth stage, which puts upon them the burden of social responsibility. "Labor is out of its swaddling clothes," he writes. "It is now in a position seriously and effectively to resist inequities. The millions of members in the ranks of unions constitute a positive power of great economic force and ever greater political potential. Labor has matured and is a force to be reckoned with."

> History Repeats
>
> The Taft-Hartley law, like the first recorded labor case involving the Philadelphia shoe makers in 1806, Elias Lieberman states in his book "Unions Before The Bar," "reflects the clash between the social philosophies of the two dominant political parties of the day."

Labor unions, he says are today "part and parcel of an expanding economy in a democratic society. Big business begot big unions. As a democratic force within a democratic society unions are here to stay within the democratic system." He warns that attempts of big businessmen to "cut unions down to size," while they themselves "retain their own bigness will, viewed historically, prove a failure."

Lieberman's study of the important labor cases in the courts and his clear-out analysis of the Taft-Hartley law is a stimulating and interesting book—one which active unionists will find is an invaluable guide to an understanding of the social forces that control organized labor.

NLRB Orders Payment For Overtime Lost

AN EMPLOYER who takes revenge upon his employes by eliminating their overtime after they vote to join a union violates the Wagner Act, the Natl. Labor Relations Board has ruled.

Accordingly, a three - member panel unanimously ordered the Westinghouse Pacific Coast Brake Co., Emeryville, Calif., to reimburse its employes for the overtime they lost after they had voted, 21 to 18, to be represented by the unaffiliated Intl. Assn. of Machinists, and their hours were cut from 45 to 40 a week.

The firm is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Westinghouse Air Brake Co., Wilmerding, Pa. The NLRB directed it to pay the workers for the lost premium pay between the time the 45-hour week was cancelled—announcement was made an hour and a half after the election results became known—and the time it was restored, unless the firm can demonstrate during compliance that the longer week normally would have been cancelled sooner. The work force was increased from 44 to a peak of 57 after the hours were cut.

The board also found the company violated the act by increasing wages 12 to 25c an hour after cancelling an agreement to a consent election, insisting that union representatives bargain at Pittsburgh, Pa., with company officials, questioning employes about their union affiliation, and threatening to cut pay or close the plant if they voted for a union.

U. S. Union Influence Impressive to Dutch

Realization of the enormous influence of organized labor on social and economic life of the United States deeply impressed Dutch trade unionists who recently returned from a study tour of American productivity techniques, sponsored by the Dutch government and the Economic Cooperation Administration.

IF STREAMLINING WILL WIN a race, Seabee Reservist George J. Champagne, a member of Local 1176, CIO Steelworkers, Bay City, Mich. (right), will be the victor over Reservist Elmer J. Hollenberg of St. Louis, Mo. This picture was taken at Camp Hale, Colo., where more than 650 Seabee reservists west of the Mississippi, most of them union members, took two weeks' training. Champagne is on skis, Hollenberg on snow shoes. Starter is Lt. Commander J. Philips of St. Louis. Steelworkers are hardy!

What Some Folks (Red) Will Do For $50! Maybe They'll Even Fight For Legality Of T-H

THE CIO HAS launched an important test of the Taft-Hartley Act.

As things stand now, the constitutionality of a major section of T-H is being defended by the United Office and Professional Workers.

The union, expelled from the CIO as Communist-dominated, has been talking big and bold about how the CIO should be as strongly anti-Taft-Hartley as the UOPWA claims to be. But right now that union is faced with the problem of having to defend T-H itself. If it doesn't, it stands a good chance of losing a court suit.

At issue is $50 in checked-off dues. They were taken from the salaries of a group of life insurance agents in Trenton, N. J., by the John Hancock Insurance Co.

The UOPWA had represented the agents until they left it and moved over into a new CIO local industrial union. The agents said the dues should be paid to the new union. The UOPWA said the dues should be paid to it.

John Hancock went into a New Jersey state court for a ruling as to who should get the money. To meet legal formalities, the suit named both the UOPWA and the CIO local union.

THAT'S when UOPWA's attorneys began to get themselves in hot water.

For they demanded that the case be moved over to the federal district court. The attorneys said it should be handled by a federal judge—and here's the kicker—under provisions of Section 301 (a) of the Taft-Hartley Act.

That section allows suits for breach of contract to be filed against unions in the federal courts. It was attacked up and down the land by organized labor as an anti-union device aimed at injuring unions' ability to defend themselves.

So there were some raised eyebrows when the UOPWA invoked that section of Taft-Hartley and had the case moved into the U. S. courts.

About that time the CIO legal department moved in with a "friend of the court" brief.

In effect, the CIO lawyers said to the judges: We challenge the constitutionality of Section 301 (a) of the Taft-Hartley Act, under which the UOPWA has brought this case before you.

FURTHERMORE, said the CIO, this case had better be certified to the Attorney General right away—since under the law he must be notified of any case in which the government is not a party, when the constitutionality of a law is under challenge.

There's a feeling that their case may not stay in the federal courts, after all. On second thought, the UOPWA may not want to appear as an open defender of the constitutionality of any section of Taft-Hartley.

So the John Hancock case may move back in the New Jersey courts again.

On the other hand, UOPWA and its officers have done some silly things in the past. Maybe they'll run true to form and appear as defenders of Taft-Hartley to the bitter end.

P. S. The CIO News will keep you informed, either way.

Company Pays $50,000 On Anti-Trust Charge

The International Cellucotton Products Co., Chicago, has agreed to pay a $50,000 fine for violation of Missouri's anti-trust laws, and all costs of the state suit, heard at Jefferson City. The firm also agreed to cease attempting to set prices for its products in Missouri.

Bridges Gets Five Years For Perjury

HARRY BRIDGES, president of the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, was sentenced on April 10 to five years in prison following his conviction on a charge of perjuring himself at his naturalization hearing.

The following day U. S. Atty. Robert B. McMillan went into U. S. District Court in San Francisco and demanded that his citizenship be revoked. Judge George B. Harris, who had presided at the tumultuous 81-day trial and had sentenced him, continued consideration of the government's petition until May 9.

Bridges, a native of Australia, would be required to surrender his certificate of naturalization to the court if Judge Harris were to sign the order setting it aside. Deportation could follow. The action is based on a section of the naturalization law providing for cancellation of the citizenship of a person convicted of obtaining naturalization fraudulently.

J. H. Robertson, first vice president of the union, and Henry Schmidt, an international representative, who were Bridges' witnesses at his naturalization hearing and who were convicted with him, were sentenced to two years each.

Before passing sentence Judge Harris denied defense motions for a new trial. He sentenced Bridges to two years in prison for conspiracy and five years for perjury. The sentences are to run concurrently. Robertson and Schmidt were sentenced to two years each on charges of conspiracy and aiding and abetting perjury, the sentences likewise to run concurrently.

The court imposed no fines, declaring they would have to be paid by the "rank and file" of the union. The ILWU has been cited by the National CIO for a hearing on charges that it is Communist-dominated.

The defense plans to carry an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court if necessary. The three defendants were at liberty up to the time of sentencing on $5000 bail each. After passing sentence Judge Harris raised Bridges' bond to $25,000 and that of Robertson and Schmidt to $10,000 each.

Slap 'em Back With Bucks for PAC

"You can wear what you want, but I've been to their cocktail parties before."

"The work is hard, Thurston, but nobody ever called it a sweat shop."

Dixie Educators Flay Segregation As

Steel Union Presses Fight For Strong FEPC Bill

By GERVASE N. LOVE

THE APPARENTLY endless fight to bring light to the poor, blind eyes and hearts of those unfortunates who hate others because of their ancestry, how they worship, or the color of their skins is sometimes encouraging, sometimes disheartening.

Generally, though, it's refreshingly heartening to see a chip fly here and another there from the man-built Chinese Wall of bigotry and discrimination—whose shadow darkens our democracy—even though the wall still towers too high and too wide, and occasionally a chip is plastered back on by someone who has closed his mind as well as his eyes and his heart to the fact that all men are brothers.

In the forefront of those fighting hatred among men and its evil effects are the CIO unions. That they have accomplished something is attested by the recent report of Thomas Shane, director of the CIO Steelworkers' Civil Rights Committee, that discriminatory employment practices are "practically non-existent" in plants where the union is strong and active.

THE COMMITTEE recently sponsored a series of fair employment practices conferences—in Pittsburgh, Chicago, Los Angeles and Philadelphia, and is now planning another in a southern industrial center.

Nearly 2000 USA members represented their locals and about 600 people from other organizations sat in. All of them were alerted to the evils of discrimination, especially in employment where a man's religion or the color of his skin might (and often has) prevented him from earning a living.

ABC Convention To Discuss Bias

The American Bowling Congress, long a target of liberals because of its "lily white" tournaments, will "thoroughly" discuss and consider "in good faith" its white male restriction at its national convention in Columbus, O., on May 12.

This disclosure was made by Paul Windels, ABC attorney, in argument in New York State Supreme Court on a motion of Atty. Gen. Nathaniel L. Goldstein to bar the organization from operating in New York State because of its policy of discrimination. Windels explained that any change in the present policy would require a constitutional amendment subject to vote by representatives of 1500 affiliated organizations, and if made would eliminate the need for the injunction Goldstein seeks. Judge Benjamin J. Schreiber reserved decision until after the convention.

They went home and they looked around. They wrote back to Shane, telling him what they saw. The story was always the same: Where the union is strong, nobody suffers because of his race, religion or color.

HOPES THAT Congress would pass a Fair Employment Practices Commission bill at this session were high a few months ago when President Truman sent the legislators a strong message. But the House pulled the teeth of the administration measure and passed a bill that means nothing.

The Senate so far has ducked any action — perhaps because primary elections are coming up soon in the Southern states.

But passage of the original bill is "one of the vital needs" of the country, Shane feels. His committee prepared petitions with 500,000 spaces for signers calling upon Congress to pass an FEPC law "which will guarantee the American way of life." The signed petitions are pouring into USA headquarters and soon will be on their way to Washington.

DOWN IN THE heart of the south, in Atlanta, on the same day a couple of weeks ago on which Gov. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, the state's leading advocate of white supremacy, qualified as a candidate for renomination, 300 educators and students passed a resolution calling for the removal of all segregation laws in education.

The delegates, representing 116 colleges and universities in Southern and border states where separate schools are maintained by law, agreed that students and teachers in white schools were largely in favor of putting an end to segregation.

They also united in condemning the South's regional education for graduate and professional training "as long as it extends or perpetuates segregation." While favoring a regional plan as a method of improving educational facilities, many speakers declared that such a program in the hands of Southern governors and states "could only serve as a device to prepetuate segregation."

ON STILL another front the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, Jewish men's organization, reported that racial and religious bigotry declined in key areas in this country in 1949. The league makes an annual report on the progress of the campaign to end discrimination.

The greatest progress was made in the fields of sports and higher education, according to the report which was made public by Justice Meier Steinbrink, of the New York State Supreme Court, national chairman of the league.

Excellent progress also was reported from the South where, it was said, the Ku Klux Klan has become "fragmentized" into small units fighting each other for members; in Northern states which passed FEPC laws, and in housing.

On the other side, Steinbrink noted, is the "shocking" fact that more than $1 million "was collected by the leading professional bigots" during the year. The bulk of it, according to the report, went to Merwin K. Hart, Gerald L. K. Smith, Joseph P. Kamp, Gerald Winrod, Upton Close, Allen Zoll and the Rev. Wesley Swift—whose hate preaching is not confined to anti-Semitism but is broad enough to cover Negroes, Catholics and labor unions.

The league found 24 anti-Semitic groups operating in the Middle West, 18 in the Northeastern states, 16 in the South and eight in the Far West. Attendance at public anti-Jewish rallies was minor throughout the country except on the West Coast, where Gerald Smith often drew 2000 and more listeners, the league found.

The league found professional sports relatively free of discrimination except for the American Bowling Congress and the Professional Golfers Association, both of which bar Negroes. However, amateur sports "are burdened by snobbery," especially tennis, yachting and golf.

Steinbrink recommended education, law and community action, used together, as fundamental forces to combat bigotry.

Hospitality To Negroes Costs Teacher 2nd Job

Prof. Leo Lorch, a leader in the fight against barring Negoes from Stuyvesant Town, New York apartment development owned by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., is looking for a job—again.

Vice chairman of the Town and Village Tenants Committee to End Discrimination in Stuyvesant Town, he was dropped last year from City College of New York as a instructor in mathematics two months after his department's promotion committee had recommended him for advancement to assistant professor. His committee activities cost him that job.

Now he has been notified by A. C. Morse, assistant to the president of Pennsylvania State College, that his appointment as an assistant professor will not be renewed for the next academic year.

Lorch said Morse told him that his admission of a Negro family to his Stuyvesant Town apartment to live as guests was "extreme, illegal and immoral, and damaging to the public relations of the college."

Penn State College is tax supported. According to the New York Times, Morse admitted he had questioned Lorch about his Negro guests and had reported to the board of trustees, which made the re-appointment.

The American Association of University Presidents is investigating the discharge. It holds that reappointment to academic posts should be decided on a basis of qualifications and not on an incumbent's activities as a citizen.

French FO Beats Red Propaganda Guns with 'Cap Pistols'

STARTING A new national trade union movement is a difficult task. Starting without any financial backing is even more difficult. And starting out in direct opposition to a numerically strong and financially powerful organization well versed in the no-holds-barred school of infighting makes it just about as tough a job as one could find.

Yet that is the job the FO (Force Ouvriere or Workers' Force) undertook in France in 1948. After two years of struggling the FO is still very much alive and, its leaders say, growing. But it's still a tough battle.

The FO was organized by trade unionists who found it impossible to go along any further with the Communist-dominated CGT (General Federation of Labor), France's largest and most powerful trade union group. The decision to secede was a difficult one to make. It meant starting from scratch, for there was no hope of wresting from Commie control all the physical assets — the buildings and furniture and equipment and funds — that the CGT had built up over the years before the Commies seized it.

But the decision was made, and the fight was on. It's still going on.

IN STRASBOURG, where the situation is probably typical, the FO office is located on the second floor of a second-class apartment-office building. The staff consists of two stenographers, a pensioner who does some part-time bookkeeping, and Rene Kunkle—in U.S. trade union parlance, a combination executive secretary, organizer and walking delegate.

This is the entire staff not only for Strasbourg, a city of 200,000, but also for the surrounding department (or state) of Bas Rhin, a farming and industrial area in which another 700,000 live.

Kunkel says that the corresponding CGT office has four or five full-time male employes and has at its disposal eight or nine automobiles. The FO has no official transportation, but Kunkel uses his own car— which, he ruefully admits, has become a rolling wreck—to provide the union with a "fleet." At that he is better off than many of his FO counterparts in other areas who have no cars and must get around on bicycles.

KUNKEL IS AN interesting example of the type of leader found in the FO. He has been a union man since he went to work. Today, at 41, he looks older than he really is. Seeing one's country invaded, fighting in the resistance and losing one's wife and most of one's family during the war make a man look middle-aged at 41. So does being an FO official, constantly facing the problem of too much to do and too little with which to do it.

Recently, Kunkel pointed out to a visitor that he had been away from his family for nine consecutive Sundays. Between necessary trips to national headquarters at Paris and his other duties, Kunkel still finds time to be an active citizen of Strasbourg. He is an officer or member of the boards of several social and welfare organizations, and he has been decorated by the government for the educational work he has done with youngsters.

The problem of money is ever present in FO affairs. Each union sets its own dues scale, but the average is about 30c a month. That isn't much money on which to run a union, but with French workers earning as little as $40 a month and with prices extremely high, even that often calls for sacrifice. Most FO unions don't feel they can raise dues as they would like to do. On the other hand, they can't get along on less. The problem is not quite the same for the CGT. Some of its better-heeled unions, says Kunkel, have run "bargain sales" in which they have cut dues to practically nothing in order to bag new members.

Despite these obstacles, the FO has acquired over 10,000 members in Kunkel's department. Most of them are in Strasbourg; money and personnel haven't been available for any real organizing work outside the city. Membership still leaves the FO somewhat smaller than the CGT or the Christian CFTC, France's other big labor organization. But in Strasbourg, as in most other areas, the FO has definitely created a "Big Three."

ONE OF THE basic policy differences between the CGT and the FO is that the Communist-run organization violently opposes the Marshall Plan while the FO supports it. In fact, this was one of the issues that led to formation of FO.

Kunkel has no use for the arguments circulated against U. S. aid. He sometimes recalls that his most prized possession is a medal that has been handed down from father to son in his family for generations. The medal is a U. S. token of thanks to Lafayette, an ancestor of Kunkel's, for the important part he played in helping to create a United States of America.

When America desperately needed aid, Kunkel points out, it came from France. Now the situation is reversed and thousands of French union men are benefiting, he says, from U. S. aid. They know, he adds, that a lot of that aid is paid for by other thousands of U. S. union men.

The Marshall Plan is a focal point in the ceaseless on-the-job battle between the CGT and FO. Like all Communist-dominated organizations, the CGT has a well-oiled propaganda machine aimed at undermining the Marshall Plan. For the CGT there exists the added incentive that if it can discredit the plan in the eyes of the French worker it can discredit FO.

Who's winning this battle for the French worker's loyalty? As far as Strasbourg is concerned, Gustave Boulier, another old-timer in the labor movement, provides an important straw in the wind.

Boulier belongs to a union of state employes. A few weeks back a shop election was held among civilian employes of the army workshops at Strasbourg. The CGT polled 176 votes, the CFTC (which is anti-Communist and pro-Marshall Plan, but is not presently involved in such a struggle with the CGT as the FO is) polled 156, and Boulier's FO union collected 140.

It seems a little difficult to understand Boulier's evident enthusiasm at having finished a close third in a field of three until he explains that this particular shop has long been a Communist stronghold. A few months ago, he says, FO had hardly a member.

"Give us a few months more," he says confidently, "and we'll have a lot more than 140 in that shop. And they'll have a lot less than 176."

After two years, it's still a tough battle, or rather two battles. One is against Communism; the other is the fundamental one for improved conditions for French workers—and there is plenty of room for improvement.

Wash. State CIO Loses Charter

CIO COUNCILS Dir. John Brophy announced last week in Seattle that the charter of the Washington State CIO has been revoked and a new council set up to represent the locals in the state.

Announcement was made following a hearing on charges against the old council which had been filed by Washington CIO Regional Dir. Roy W. Atkinson.

Brophy indicated that the old council at the time of the hearing represented only one-fourth of the CIO membership in the state and less than one-third of the locals.

Several witnesses stated that one of the main reasons for the loss of confidence in the council on the part of the CIO members was the general conviction that the group had consistently followed the Communist Party line. No attempt was made to refute this testimony.

The expelled Council has the privilege of appealing the decision to the CIO executive board and to the next CIO convention.

C. Of C. Spots Pension Trend

THE MEN who speak for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States can spot a trend as quick as anyone. Now they've spotted pensions.

They say that one union contract out of eight being signed these days contains pension provisions, and that more than a million workers won pensions in 1949. Core of the trend is that most pensions won by collective bargaining are non-contributory as far as employes are concerned, they've found.

It's high time, the Chamber of Commerce boys believe, to give their members a little advice, so they've prepared a study of the pension problem. Theme is that management better go ahead and grant more pensions. If management doesn't, the study indicates, employes will turn to government for more retirement pay. Then the government will move in on business and the roof will fall in.

Moreover, the C. of C. says employers should recognize that the "needs of employes for security reflect basic driving forces that cannot be submerged." But it goes even deeper by declaring that "a workable welfare plan will contribute much to good labor relations." (LPA)

Michigan Prison Guards Join CIO

Local 383 of the United Government Workers of America has voted to seek affiliation with the Government and Civic Workers Organizing Committee and membership in the Michigan CIO Council.

The local is made up of employes of the Marquette, Mich., State Prison, and is the seventh UGWA local to seek CIO affiliation. The UGWA consists of local unions of state and government employes which bolted the United Public Workers before that group was ousted by CIO on charges of following Communist Party policy.

Changes CIO Urges In Social Security Bill

Here is a complete summary of improvements CIO would like to see the Senate Finance Committee make in HR 6000, the Social Security bill, before it is reported to the floor for Senate debate. CIO witnesses have given the committee detailed statements supporting these recommendations.

Age, Survivors, Disability Insurance

Universal coverage instead of the more limited extentions in HR 6000. Main additional groups: farmers, farm laborers and part-time domestic workers.

Agent laundry drivers, full-time insurance salesmen and similar groups excluded by the Gearhart Resolution should be specifically covered as employes, not as self-employed. Otherwise they pay higher taxes.

Increase average benefits by more than 100% instead of about 70% as in HR 6000. The increase should be achieved by:

Calculating the average monthly wage on earnings in the highest quarters of five consecutive years instead of annual earnings for all years; this will avoid cuts for periods of unemployment and illness;

Improving the formula for calculating the primary benefit amount by adding 20% (instead of 10%) after the first $100 of the average monthly wage; (HR 6000 grants 50% of the first $100);

Adding 1% (instead of one-half of 1%) for each year of coverage;

Crediting (and taxing) earnings up to $4800 a year (instead of $3600);

Increasing the minimum benefit to $50 a month (instead of $25), and making the maximum 80% of the average monthly wage without the flat maximum of $150;

Removing severe penalties for periods of non-coverage;

Raising widows' benefit to 100% of primary benefits.

Reduce the age of permissive retirement for women from 65 to 60, and liberalize provisions for fully insured status as recommended by the Advisory Council for the Senate Finance Committee.

Postpone any further increase above the present 1½% tax rate, and retain authorization for congressional appropriations of needed sums from general revenues.

Retain and strengthen the permanent and total disability insurance provisions of HR 6000. Add dependents' benefits and better rehabilitation provisions. (Also restore temporary disability insurance if possible.)

Public Assistance, Child Welfare, etc.

Make federal matching grants to the states available for all types of needy persons instead of merely adding certain groups, as in HR 6000.

Treat dependent children as liberally as the aged and the blind.

Remove the ceilings for individuals from federal grants, and aid poorer states to a greater degree.

Provide more money for maternal, child welfare and crippled children services.

Find Many Ineligible For 75c Pay

THOUSANDS of workers in low-pay industries who thought they would get the 75c minimum wage under the federal law which went into effect Jan. 25 are doomed to disappointment.

Under the pretext of employing "learners," many employers poured an avalanche of requests for exemptions down upon the Wage-Hour Administration, which has the authority to grant such exemptions.

Last week this U. S. Labor Dept. agency announced that interim learner regulations permitting pay under 75c an hour had been issued to 1144 establishments in six industries. These are in addition to 1650 certificates previously issued in various divisions of the apparel industry.

Largest number of learners' certificates announced last week were for the hosiery industry. The others were issued in a number of divisions of the apparel industry, knitted wear, gloves, independent telephones and cigars.

The subminimum wage rates authorized in these six industries range from 55c in four occupations in the cotton garment industry to 71c in certain occupations in the hosiery industry.

Protests against the granting of subminimum rates were made at public hearings by various CIO unions, including the Shoe, Textile, Clothing and Telephone Workers. Union spokesmen said widespread attempts were being made by both small and large concerns to chisel on the 75c legal minimum wage law by using the "learners" loophole unfairly.

The Shoe Workers, for example, testified that the shoe industry had never previously asked for "learners," but after the 75c minimum went into effect, the Natl. Shoe Manufacturing Association claimed that 20% of the workers in a shoe factory were learners. The industry requested a 57½c minimum.

The Wage-Hour Administration said that most of the certificates granted are effective for a six-month period ending July 24, 1950. Each certificate, it was stated, "was issued upon the employer's representation that employment of learners at subminimum rates is necessary in order to prevent curtailment of opportunities for employment and that experienced workers for the learner occupations are not available."

A review or reconsideration of any certificate issued may be obtained by "any person aggrieved," within 15 days after publication of formal notice of such certificate.

Dewey Vetoes Bill To Aid Migrant Workers

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York has vetoed a bill which would have provided for the licensing by the state labor department of contractors supplying farm labor and workers for food processing camps.

Supporters of legislation to protect migrant farm workers have insisted that such a licensing system is the most effective way of regulating agricultural labor. The contractors generally line up the workers, transport them from job to job, and negotiate pay.

The bill Dewey killed had been supported by State Industrial Commissioner Edward Corsi and the joint state legislative committee on labor and industries. Dewey said the state agriculture department could handle the situation.

CIO TRANSPORT WORKERS wave checks representing $78,000 in back pay distributed recently to 3900 employes of the Third Avenue Transit System, New York City. The money was a down payment on $1,527,000 awarded the union members by Arbitrator Emanuel Stein in February. A strike threat was necessary to get the back pay. The Third Avenue Line operates 76 surface routes in Manhattan, the Bronx and Queens.

ACW Label Demand Up 60% In Year

THE DEMAND for the union label of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers has jumped 60% in the last year as a result of the current campaign to popularize the tag, the organization's label department announced last week.

The success of union and consumer committee efforts in making the public aware of the union label and what it means, plus extensive newspaper and radio advertising has resulted in the increase, the department said.

More than 500,000 pieces of literature have been distributed in the drive, including the booklet, "Inside Story," which tells what every man should know about the clothes he wears and the people who make them. In addition, the union sponsors in the interests of the campaign the radio program, "America's Town Meeting of the Air," over Stations WJZ, New York, and WMAL, Washington.

ACW Pres. Jacob S. Potofsky said that indorsements of the label are coming from many sources. The national planning committee of the American Veterans Committee recently passed a resolution urging AVC members to demand the union label. The CIO Communications Workers, with 300,000 members, has undertaken nation-wide distribution of Amalgamated literature and in addition has prepared a two-color poster on the label which is being displayed on 7000 bulletin boards on telephone company property.

Locals Flock To New Cal. CIO

MORE THAN a dozen locals with over 25,000 members have affiliated with the newly-chartered CIO California Industrial Union Council, Administrator Richard T. Leonard announced.

The campaign for affiliations is just getting under way and will reach a climax during the week before the founding convention, which will be held June 3, 4 and 5 in the huge Municipal Auditorium in Long Beach.

Telephone workers lead in the number of locals affiliating. These include the mammoth Division 35, representing 11,000 Northern California operators, which was the first to sign up; Division 5, in the San Francisco Bay area, with 5000 members; Pacific Local 71 of Installation Division 6, in Northern California, and the Los Angeles local of Western Electric Sales Division 18.

Other large groups include Local 9, Shipbuilding Workers, at San Pedro; California District Council 13, Woodworkers; San Francisco Locals 71 and 158, Textile Workers; Utility Workers Local 13, in Los Angeles, with 1500 members, and Oil Workers Local 6, at Taft.

The Los Angeles Newspaper Guild, with 1500 members, voted to join at a membership meeting.

Court jockeying continued, meantime, as officers and spokesmen for the old Communist-dominated State Council, the charter of which was lifted by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in accordance with the CIO Constitution, fought to save it.

Steel Unionists To Study At 14 Colleges

Two thousand CIO Steelworkers will be wending their way across the campuses at 14 colleges throughout the nation this summer as students at the union's fifth Summer Institute program.

The first USA-CIO summer education program was launched in 1945 at Pennsylvania State College with 45 students in attendance. It clicked right from the start, says Steel Labor, the union's official monthly, and has grown by leaps and bounds every year since. Over the past five years, some 6000 USA-CIO members have taken advantage of the program.

Aim of the program—as it has been from the very beginning—is to help make better local union officers, more efficient grievance committeemen and better-informed members. To that end, a series of basic trade union courses has been built up by the trial-and-elimination process.

Each year new courses have been added and some dropped, while the more important courses have been expanded. Stress is placed upon such basic trade union subjects as "How to Handle Grievance Cases," "How to Conduct a Local Union Meeting," parliamentary law, public speaking, time and motion study, and job classification.

EACH GROUP of Steelworkers spends a week at the school. Classes are taught by professional educators at the university. The worker-students are given every opportunity to join in discussions. In most cases, they live on the campus in college dormitories and fraternity houses. All sport and recreational facilities are turned over to them.

The program dovetails with a number of evening courses operated in the winter, and with week-end institutes held in a number of areas.

This year's Summer Institutes will be held at Pennsylvania State College and the following universities: Wisconsin, Indiana, California, Illinois, Rutgers (New Jersey), Rhode Island, Ohio, Alabama, Kansas, Utah, Colorado, Michigan and Cornell (New York).

Insurance Agents Bolt UOPWA and Join CIO

Members of a former United Office & Professional Workers local in Philadelphia have voted to affiliate with the CIO.

They are agents of the Quaker State Life Insurance Co. and voted 89 to 1 to bolt the UOPWA, expelled from the CIO because of its Communist stand, and to join with the CIO. They received a charter as the Insurance Guild, LIU 1716. A new contract has been negotiated to replace the one that expired Jan. 1.

UOPWA had represented the agents for eight years previous to the disaffiliation vote.

Bronx Board Cheered

The latest gem from Robert Denham, general counsel of the Natl. Labor Relations Board:

"One thing that has impressed me about this whole (Taft-Hartley) Act, however, is its general fairness to all concerned and the breadth of its coverage."—from a speech before the Bronx Board of Trade.

AIDS CIO IN DIXIE: "Texas" Bill Strength, radio singer, is looking over his fan mail. With Natl. Dir. George Baldanzi of the CIO Southern Organizing Committee, Strength is heard over 126 radio stations in the South.

Senate Unit To Hear How T-H Hurts TWUA

THE CIO Textile Workers Union is prepared this week to tell a Senate sub-committee how Southern mill owners are using fear, intimidation and violence to prevent union organization and to smash established locals.

TWUA staff members and rank-and-filers also will tell how the Taft-Hartley act has encouraged the mill operators to adopt these methods.

The sub-committee on labor-management relations, which is composed of Sens. Murray (D. Mont.), Neely (D. W. Va.) and Morse (R. Ore.), is scheduled to begin hearing testimony April 20 at Rome, Ga.

The committee, set up to determine how well T-H is working, will be told how management eliminated the TWUA local at the Anchor Rome Mills in Rome, Ga.

Following is the "Rome story" as told by TWUA representatives:

TWUA had a contract with this mill when it was bought in November, 1947, by Alabama Mills, Inc. The union expected trouble with the company, which had previously broken TWUA contracts in Alabama, and it was not long in coming.

The company soon demanded that the union drop 12 contract clauses immediately. In March, 1948, a week before the contract expired, 41 permits were issued by local authorities for management personnel to carry guns.

The union struck the mill March 18. Mass picketing was prohibited by a temporary injunction March 20. Three days later, the personnel director of the company led a mob of 75 armed men in an attack on four pickets, three of them women. The secretary-treasurer of the mill was also secretary of the Floyd County Superior Court Grand Jury and no true bills were returned against the mob. On April 4 the injunction was made permanent.

The same month, Elmer Adams, a second hand in the mill, shot and critically wounded Hubert Wilkie, a striker, and also shot at but missed another striker, Herman Hyde. Adams was later freed in a court trial but two other scabs who had accidentally caused another scab to lose an eye were jailed for a year.

The union called off the strike on Jan. 14, 1949. The company refused to reinstate 300 workers and when an NLRB trial examiner ordered the reinstatements, spurned the verdict.

IN ANDERSON, S. C., the Senate committee later will hear how the formation of a "citizens committee" effectively discouraged organization at the Orr Cotton mill there. This group paid for advertisements in the Anderson Independent, which accused TWUA organizers of being "subversive influences" in the town. The "citizens committee" made constant appeals to race prejudices in leaflets and letters to the mill's employes, and the radio station in town (WAIM) refused to accept CIO programs, TWUA will report.

Another story TWUA will relate to the committee:

In Tallapoosa, Ga., a woman TWUA organizer was kidnapped. TWUA members attempting to make a leaflet distribution at the gates of the American Thread Co. plant were driven off at gun point. Local police refused to make arrests, although a number of officers were on the scene. An organizer and his wife were severely beaten by company stooges whom a grand jury later refused to indict.

During the course of the Southern hearings, which later will be moved to Washington, D. C., the textile union will attempt to show that T-H is being used as a club in the hand of unscrupulous southern employers to prevent organization of textile workers.

Evidence will be presented to show that the law has not met the situation and that NLRB relief, if any, has come to late. Particular emphasis will be put on the refusal of NLRB General Counsel Robert Denham to issue complaints against offending companies while using the injunction provision of the law against the union.

TWUA will point to the increased activities of vigilante groups throughout the South, the re-emergence of the "blacklist" as a weapon against union members and the general campaign of terror that has appeared in the wake of all union activities in the area.

The committee will have the power to subpena management officials as well as union representatives to testify during the hearings.

Organizationally Speaking

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

The writer on April 6 addressed a group of city workers in Milwaukee, Wis., who later agreed to participate and cooperate fully with the Government and Civic Employes Organizing Committee-CIO. Rep. Glenn Clark has been assigned to work with this group. President Murray has appointed Brother John Yancey, executive vice-president, United Transport Service Employes, as assistant chairman of the GCEOC. Yancey will be granted a leave of absence from his union, with which he has more than a dozen years' experience as a member and officer. He will be of great assistance to the committee in this campaign.

George DeNucci, CIO National Representative, received a grand reception upon his arrival in San Juan, Puerto Rico. DeNucci stated that the workers there are proud of their affiliation with the CIO, and appreciate the interest the CIO has expressed for their welfare.

The election date in the Westinghouse plants all over the country draws near. Every support should be given the IUE-CIO in its battle with both the company and the discredited Communist-controlled UE. Every CIO regional director, field representative, city and state council officer, international union representative can best serve in the coming election by activizing local officers and members in their respective areas to support fully the IUE in every way to achieve this important victory. We all should work unceasingly now and up through April 27, when the election will be held.

CIO Reg. Dir. Pete Mosele reports that in an NLRB representation election held at the Mono Plant of the Continental Can Co., Newark, N. J., the Steelworkers were victorious over District 50, United Mine Workers, by a vote of 208 to 148.

Adolph Germer, Director of Organization, Int. Woodworkers, reports that in an NLRB representation election held in the U. S. Plywood Corp. plant, Mapleton, Ore., the workers voted as follows: Eligible 164; IWA-CIO 148; AFL 14; void 2.

Reg. Dir. Edward McCrone reports the IUE-CIO victorious in the following representation elections: Eagle Lock Co., Terryville, Conn., eligible 455; IUE-CIO 253; UE 174; no union 2. This was formerly a UE local union.

Whitlock Co., Hartford, Conn., eligible 96, IUE-CIO 86, no union 3; Keeney Co., Hartford, Conn., eligible 87, IUE-CIO 84, no union 3; Hanson Co., Hartford, Conn., eligible 85, IUE-CIO 76, no union 2; Fenn Co., Hartford, Conn., eligible 56, IUE-CIO 44, no union 11; Hartford Electric, Hartford, Conn., eligible 71; IUE-CIO 65; no union 5. All the above campaigns were directed by IUE Rep. Henry Jean who was assisted by CIO Field Rep. Frank Avallone.

Reg. Dir. Hugh Thompson reports that in the first NLRB representation election held in the Buffalo area between IUE-CIO and the discredited UE, the IUE won by 555 to 317 for UE. The election was at the Wurlitzer Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Al Hartnett, Assistant to the IUE-CIO Administrative Chairman Carey and CIO Reg. Dir. Robert Davidson report that in a representation election held at the Standard Thomson Corp., Dayton, O., the IUE was victorious over the UE by a vote of IUE-CIO 58; UE 0; no union 5. Also at the Formica Co., Cincinnati, O., the workers voted in favor of the IUE by a vote of IUE 814; UE 244; no union 9; void 1.

Reg. Dir. Fullerton Fulton reports that in a representation election conducted by the Minnesota State Conciliation Service at the LaGrange Shoe Co., Red Wing, Minn., the workers cast 103 votes for the CIO Shoe Workers and 46 for no union.

Emerson T. Pence, National Representative, USWA-CIO, reports that in a union shop election at the Selby Shoe Co., Portsmouth, O., the workers voted as follows: 1387 yes; 284 no; 22 challenged; 2 void.

Reg. Dir. E. D. Hodson reports that in a representation election held at the American Shipbreakers Co., Wilmington, Del., the workers cast 40 votes for the CIO Shipbuilding Workers; 31 for the AFL Boilermakers and two for no union.

Reg. Dir. Robert Davidson reports that in a representation election at the Gray Planer Co., Cincinnati, O., the Steelworkers were victorious over the UE by a vote of 172 for USA-CIO to 13 for UE, no union received five votes.

Slap 'em Back With Bucks for PAC

Truman Is Expected To Sign Battered Housing Bill

THE once-brave Housing Bill, a patched and scarred wreck of its former self after passing through the none-too-gentle hands of Congress, went to Pres. Truman last week after Senate acceptance of a conference report.

Even though it doesn't bear much resemblance to the bill he recommended, the President is expected to sign it. Congress rejected his recommendation for a $2 billion corporation to help finance middle-income housing through cooperatives and other non-profit organizations, but took tender care of the speculators and real estate interests.

Interest in rent control perked up mildly after Sen. Maybank (D. S. C.), chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, announced April 12 that hearings on extension of the Rent Control Act will be held beginning April 24.

Meantime, Housing Expediter Tighe Woods began laying off members of his force in all parts of the country in accordance with instructions from Congress given through an insufficient deficiency appropriation with a large allocation for terminal leave payments.

IN GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., the City Commission went to work on a survey to determine the need for future rent control in that area with what some housing experts call an ideal program before it—if the commission chooses to use it.

It was prepared by the Area Rent Advisory Board and sent the commission by Chairman Don Stevens. The board proposed that the investigators turn up information in seven specific fields "to assure fairness to all tenants and landlords."

It urged that the whole of Kent County be covered in the probe "because hundreds of families with children, who work in the city of Grand Rapids, are forced to live in inadequate shelter, shacks and trailers, sometimes miles from town because no rental units whose owners will accept children are available at $40 or less a month in Grand Rapids." Many families averaged less than $35 a week in 1949, the board added.

It likewise asked that the investigation determine the number of families looking for places to rent with incomes of $1000, $2000, $3000 and $4000 or less in 1949, together with the number of children and other dependents in each income category.

"After it is determined how many families are in each wage bracket and the number of children and other dependents in each family," the board went on, "the survey should then show the number of rental units available that would accept children and other dependents, that these families could afford to pay, based on one week's pay equal to one month's rent."

The board also thinks the city fathers should know what the average landlord thinks he will charge if controls are removed; the effect of decontrol in other cities, as determined by federal records; how many families are living doubled up, and why; and the number of housing unit vacancies, why they are vacant, the number for rent and what the rentals are.

Housing May Be Issue In Two Congressional Contests

Two candidates for Congress from the opposite side of the housing tracks have announced their plans to capture their parties' nominations.

In Wisconsin's 2nd congressional district Horace W. Wilkie has resigned as chairman of the Madison Housing Authority to campaign for the Democratic nomination so he can oppose the GOP incumbent, Rep. Glenn R. Davis. Wilkie plans to make the middle income housing bill, against which Davis voted, one of the main issues of his campaign.

In the revised 12th congressional district of Missouri, George S. Stansell, of St. Louis, the lawyer who tried to have the Rent Control Act declared illegal but lost out in the U. S. Supreme Court, wants to be the Republican candidate against Rep. Edgar A. Jones (D). He is campaigning specifically against any extension of rent controls.

IT ALSO became known during the week that throughout the world a lot of American citizens are getting pretty angry at Congress for the bum housing deal it has given the armed forces. Many civilians at home got just as indignant as captains in Germany and corporals in Alaska.

Millions of dollars are required to relieve the deporable conditions not only abroad but in this country. The armed forces have been able to pry only a minor part of the money needed out of Congress—and a lot of that came as a result of the spectacular typhoon that struck Okinawa last September and destroyed or damaged virtually every bit of housing on the island.

Congress is being urged with increasing frequency to take adequate steps to meet the need, especially in Alaska where service families are living in hovels. Congress actually blocked construction there by failing to realize that construction in the Far North costs up to four times what comparable buildings cost in the United States proper, and limiting the amount that could be spent on each unit.

Realtors Admit 22% Rent Hike

The spearhead of the landlords' lobby fighting rent control has made public figures admitting that the largest number of rent boosts in cities that have been decontrolled resulted in 22% higher rents for the tenants affected.

The Natl. Association of Real Estate Boards, though it buried the facts in the second page of a lengthy press release, conceded that, in 100 cities where rent controls have been abandoned, on the units on which rents were boosted NAREB's own surveyors found the median increase was 22%. Figuring in all rental units in the cities, NAREB claims a 6% overall rent increase.

UAW-Chrysler Negotiations Deadlocked

NEGOTIATIONS for settlement of the strike of the CIO Auto Workers at the Chrysler Corp.—almost three months old—were stalemated as the CIO News went to press.

A series of night-long sessions by negotiators brought no comment from either side in the pension dispute which has shut down the nation's third largest auto manufacturer since Jan. 25, when 89,000 UAW members walked off the job.

Federal and state mediators were in constant attendance but had nothing to report in regard to the progress of the meetings.

The stumbling block continues to be the union's insistence upon company assurance that past service credits as well as future credits be fully funded for the payment of $100 monthly pensions. Originally the company had refused to agree to any form of funded pensions.

UAW PRES. Walter Reuther, speaking before a mass meeting of Dodge Truck Local 140 members in Detroit last Thursday, told the cheering workers that the UAW has the company "hanging on the ropes."

Two weeks ago the union modified its pension proposal in that the corporation would not be required to set aside any set fixed-per-hour sum to guarantee payment of the $100 pension to workers who retire at age 65 with 25 years' service.

The union insisted, however, that the corporation earmark funds for service credits of employes year by year as they accumulate in the future.

The amount the company would pay into the fund would be determined by a qualified actuary. If social security payments are increased, the actuary would reexamine the company's payments to determine if they should be reduced.

A joint board of administration, including UAW representatives, would be set up to administer the fund.

In Washington, six Congressmen and 15 other national figures called on the Chrysler Corp. to end the strike by accepting the proposals of the UAW. The group of 21 declared the union proposals "neither extravagant nor novel."

"As a tremendous economic power, the company has a commensurate responsibility to both the public and its stockholders," the group stated.

Members of Congress who signed the statement are Reps. Biemiller (D. Wis.), Mitchell (D. Wash.), Holifield (D. Cal.), McCarthy (D. Minn.), Multer (D. N. Y.), and Douglas (D. Cal.).

Other signers were Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, noted Protestant theologian; Prof. Alvin Hansen, Harvard economist; Francis Biddle, chairman, American for Democratic Action; Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr., Harvard historian and author; Roy Wilkins, acting secretary, Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored People; P. T. Ellsworth, U. of Wisconsin economics professor.

Charles M. LaFollette, National Director, ADA; Bryn J. Hovde, president, New School for Social Research; James M. Burns, professor of political science, Williams College; Elizabeth Christman, executive secretary, National Womens Trade Union League; Jonathan Bingham, New York attorney; David Ginsburg, Washington attorney; Mortimer Hays, New York lawyer; Alfred Baker Lewis, Connecticut businessman, and Dr. Liston Pope, Dean of Yale Divinity School.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	WHAT TO DO
Taft-Hartley Repeal	Would repeal most viciously anti-labor bill, reinstitute Wagner Act.	Pigeonholed.	Keep writing to Senators and Representatives to force action.
Social Security Improvements HR 6000	Extends, improves old age, survivors' benefits, etc. Lifts benefits, ups coverage by 11 million.	Passed House last session. Sen. Finance Comm. will report shortly. CIO has asked further improvements.	Ask Senators to accept and strengthen HR 6000.
ECA Extension HR 7378	Renews Marshall Plan for another year; sets $2,950,000,000 ceiling on funds.	House cut $250 million from authorization; Senate debate scheduled soon.	Ask members of both Houses to restore cut, pass bill as drafted.
Federal Aid to Education S 246	Provides over $300 million aid to states for schools; gives states broad power to supervise use of funds.	Bill, approved by CIO, has passed Senate. House Labor Comm. deadlocked over religious quarrel involving school buses.	Ask members of House Labor Comm. to approve Senate bill.
FEPC S 1728 HR 4453	Senate bill would bar job discrimination based on race, creed or color and provide penalties for violations.	House voted substitute bill without enforcement teeth. Senate debate, probably filibuster, due after ECA vote.	Ask Senators to vote for S 1728 without weakening amendments, and to fight filibuster.
Mundt-Nixon Bill S 2311 HR 7595	Endangers civil liberties, union rights, under guise of fighting subversive activities.	Reported by Senate Judiciary; House Un-American Comm. held hearings. CIO testified against.	Ask Senators, Representatives to oppose the bill.
Kerr Bill S 1498	Weakens Federal Power Commission authority to regulate price of natural gas; would raise gas prices to consumers.	Passed both Houses.	President Truman scheduled to act by April 17.
Middle-Income Housing Bill S 2246 HR 7402	Among other things, provides long-term, low-interest loans to cooperatives.	Both Houses defeated co-op section, passed "landlord" bill, sent it to Pres. Truman.	Ask members of both Houses for new attempt to pass co-op section.

(Address all Senators at Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Address all Representatives at House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.)

Child Law Violator Fined On Overtime, Too

The Meier and Pohlmann Furniture Co. was fined $2200 by U. S. Judge Roy W. Harper at St. Louis after the company pleaded no contest to 14 counts of violating the wage and hour laws.

The company was charged with failure to pay overtime at time and a half and with employing two boys under 16 years old.

WEEKLY PUBLICATION of the CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

$1.00 A YEAR

5c a Copy—$1.50 a Year in Canada

The CIO News

Vol. XIII WASHINGTON, D. C., APRIL 24, 1950 No. 17

CIO To Organize Panama Canal Zone Workers

(See Page 3)

A HUMAN STATISTIC: Philip Graceffa, 33, of Maynard, Mass., is one of the nation's 4,123,000 unemployed. He's "nobody," except to his wife and six children, his father and two brothers; he's a rank and file member of CIO Textile Workers Local 140. When he works, he's an experienced mule spinner, averaging $65 a week. He worked four months in 1949, two weeks in 1950. Wearing a borrowed suit, he made his first trip to Washington last week at TWUA's expense, to tell his story to government officials. (See pages 6 and 7 for Graceffa's story and details of the visit of other jobless workers to Washington in search of legislative relief.)

ECA Leader To Trade Union Advisers:

Marshall Plan Aim Prosperity of All Europeans

FREEDOM, security and a decent standard of living are the key objectives of the Marshall Plan and the free trade unions of Europe are in the forefront of the struggle to win them, Ambassador Milton Katz, deputy special representative of the Economic Co-operation Administration in Europe, told the Trade Union Advisory Conference at a meeting in Rome on April 18.

The burden of Katz's speech was that such things as increased production, economic integration and freedom of trade, upon which emphasis has been placed, are merely means to the end of attaining in every Marshall Plan country a prosperity in which all citizens—not just a favored few at the top—may share.

The TUAC represents the free trade unions of the Marshall Plan countries in the Office of European Economic Cooperation, the all-European group set up to make U. S. aid as effective as possible. Katz discussed two specific programs of OEEC and ECA—a greater measure of European unity and increased production—and how their work fits in with that of the TUAC.

"I want to keep constantly before us the goals which alone give meaning to all we try to do," he said, "peace with justice and freedom; steady jobs and a decent standard of living; the right and the opportunity for each man to realize to the full all of his capacity for growth as a human being."

ON INCREASED productivity Katz said:

"It is only through higher productivity that Europeans can live better and more securely and Europe can pay its own way in the world. By no other means can Europe hope to earn its imports of food and raw materials and improve the living standards of its workers. Productivity is affected by many things, and there is no single way and no simple way to improve it. The productivity drive is a program to get at the problem directly in the workshops.

"Let me try to tell you what this means to us. It means doing a better job of combining men, money, materials, machinery and time so as to produce and distribute more goods with the same amount of effort. In this way the full work force fully employed would produce more and distribute more. This extra margin of productivity could be used in a number of ways. In part, it could be used to make more goods available for current consumption at lower prices and raise the present standard of living in Europe."

Europe's needs are both permanent—importation of food and raw materials — and short-term —goods needed because of the ravages of the war, Katz explained. Both must be supplied if the people are to eat, the factories to operate and the workers to have jobs.

"But deeply as the workers will understand the need to guard the future," he added, "they will also want more food and clothing and housing today. These needs for increased exports, for new investment, for a better standard of living for the worker today must all be met. In the world as it is none can be met fully, but we must strive to meet them all in practical measure."

INCREASED production means increased income, he said, and in a democratic country the free trade unions will see that the workers get a just share of it. Likewise, he said, they will help obtain higher production.

"No one has more to gain than the workers from increased productivity," he said, "and no one has more to lose if the effort fails . . .

"You will see that in our thinking productivity is linked with high and stable employment and an expanding European economy. That is because we think of increasing productivity in its proper social context of general growth. In this context, it means more jobs, greater security, more opportunity, richer and more varied life."

Katz conceded frankly that where markets are restricted increased productivity may well lead to lower employment.

To get rid of this block to higher living standards, he said, European countries must trade more freely with each other, as well as the rest of the world, by getting rid of the "web of restrictionism and discrimination" that binds European trade today. The OEEC has made a beginning of slashing through the web and is working hard for further progress, Katz said.

He took note of an impression he said appears to exist in some quarters and said:

"This impression seems to be that our concern for broadening markets and closer association among the nations of Europe somehow implies an inadequate concern about existing or potential unemployment.

"LET ME SAY bluntly that this is nonsense.

